A crusade on "fads and frills" in the public schools of the city is to be started in New York, with more thoroughness and less experimentation as its slogan. Everywhere there seems stirring this revolt against the excessive system of experiment to which the schools have been subjected, with corresponding loss of thorough grounding in essentals. The educational theories of the present seem to share the prominant American craze for speed, more or less regardless of the risks involved in attaining it. The agitation, which appears to be general, will doubtless result in restoring the pendulum, which has swung too far in both directions of conservatism and progress, to its normal swaying.

It's well to be clean, but if you wash your rugs with gasoline, be careful. A Springfield, Mass., merchant, who is fastidious, had his office rugs scrubbed with gasoline and then gone over with a vacuum cleaner operated by electricity. The cleaner collected gasoline fumes which were ignited by an electric spark, whereupon there was an explosion and a blaze necessitating a call on the fire department.

That collision between a steamship in the merchant service and a United States armored cruiser in the harbor of Honolulu, in which the cruiser was so badly damaged as to necessitate immediate retirement for repairs, while the merchant ship steamed off apparently uninjured, might be cited as illustrating Kipling's assertion to the effect that the "weaker vessel" is the deadlier of the two.

Prof. Worthington told a London audience that in order to obtain pictures of what happened when a drop of water fell into a vessel containing water he had taken photographs by an electric spark of the duration of three-millionths of a second. Some day, perhaps, Prof. Worthington will be able to take a photograph of the drug store soda-fountain wink.

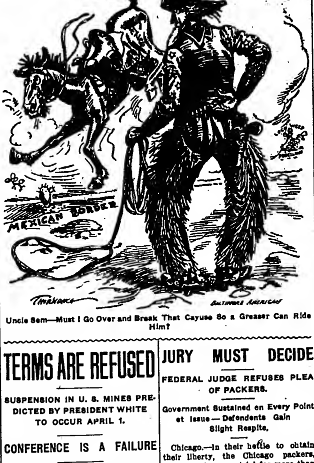
One of the baseball umpires announces that it is not wise to see too much while umpiring. It isn't what an umpire sees, but what he hears or feels that makes his task a heavy one.

It is proposed in Spokane to make no policeman out of applicants whose waists are greater than their chests. However, rotundity will come with police service, as of old.

A Chicago man says ragtime is as dangerous as whisky. And just as disagreeable to take.

The debt of New York is larger than that of the nation. But then New York has all our money.

BADLY LOCOED



Uncle Sam—Must I Go Over and Break That Cayuse So a Greaser Can Ride Him?

TERMS ARE REFUSED

SUSPENSION IN U. S. MINES PREDICTED BY PRESIDENT WHITE TO OCCUR APRIL 1.

CONFERENCE IS A FAILURE

Union Leader Declines to Say If a Strike Will Be Called, Meeting May Decide—British Workers in Deadlock—Asquith's Efforts.

New York.—"All negotiations with the anthracite coal operators are off," declared John P. White, president of the United Mine Workers of America, at the adjournment of the meeting between the miners and operators, in which the miners declined the operators' counter proposition. "I look for a general suspension of work April 1,' he added.

"Will there be a strike?" he was asked.

"I can't say as to that," he replied. "The miners' officials will discuss that matter this afternoon."

The meeting between the miners and the operators was brief. Mr. White read to the operators the miners' reply to their rejection of the miners' demands. It was received without comment and the meeting adjourned without delay. None of the operators was willing to talk.

London, England. — Another deadlock has been reached in the negotiations for a settlement of the coal strike that is paralyzing industry through the United Kingdom, but Premier Asquith is endeavoring strenuously to bring the parties together. Meantime conditions through Great Britain are producing inconvenience to the public and suffering to the miners and their families.

Representatives of both miners and mine owners were at the foreign office in the forenoon, but did not meet in conference. Premier Asquith and several of his cabinet colleagues consulted the miners, but at the luncheon hour nothing has been accomplished.

Sir Hugh Bell, a leading colliery owner and ironmaster, said: "We are not getting on."

The unemployed, who number more than 2,000,000 men, are receiving daily additions to their ranks and in many instances their families are without resources and others are limited to the small amount of strike pay allotted by the trade unions.

NEBRASKA CONVICTS KILL 3

Warden, One of His Deputies and a Guard Shot Dead and a Callhouse-keeper Wounded.

Lincoln, Neb.—Warden James Delahunty, Deputy Warden Charles Wagoner and Guard A. G. Heilman of the state penitentiary were killed by three convicts in a riot here. Three guards were wounded.

The Lincoln police and a company of the state militia were called in to aid in quelling the mutiny, but when they arrived at the prison found order restored and the three murderers at liberty, having escaped into the open country after their outbreak.

Guns and dynamite were smuggled into the penitentiary from the outside, according to information received here over the telephone. None of the dynamite was used, the imprisoned desperadoes resorting only to the firearms.

Rear Admiral Bowyer Dies.

Tampa, Fla.—Rear Admiral John M. Bowyer, retired, died in a hospital here. Admiral Bowyer was at one time superintendent of the naval academy at Annapolis. The body will be shipped to Erie, Pa., for interment.

Shot by Former Employe.

Eveleth, Minn.—Joseph S. Wilson, president of the city council, was shot here by Marinone Carmeno, who has been out of work several weeks, at the Spruce mine, of which he is captain. Wilson may die.

JURY MUST DECIDE

FEDERAL JUDGE REFUSES PLEA OF PACKERS.

Government Sustained on Every Point at Issue—Defendants Gain Slight Respite.

Chicago.—In their battle to obtain their liberty, the Chicago packers, who have been on trial for more than three months before Federal Judge Carpenter, lost an important point. The court in ruling on a motion of attorneys for the ten indicted men that the case be taken from the jury's hands, denied the plea and held that the trial must proceed. The court's action came after Attorney John S. Miller of counsel for the packers had made the final plea for his clients.

The packers gained a slight respite after the decision had been read when the hearing was continued. Attorney John S. Miller of counsel for the packers obtained the continuance by declaring that the defendants were not prepared to go ahead.

2,000 WOMEN STORM CAPITOL

Big Army of Suffragettes in Washington Seeking Aid From Congress—Speakers Are Eloquent.

Washington.—An army of two thousand women has taken the United States capitol by storm in the cause of woman suffrage. The weapons they used were eloquent words, still more eloquent smiles and the most captivating spring bonnets.

Heading this army were two generals, Rev. Anna Shaw, who took charge of the peaceful attack,, and Miss Jane Addams, the beloved apostle of Hull House, Chicago, who led the forceful advance on the house judiciary committee.

Associated with these were speakers, who in a most businesslike manner, laid before the committees their views on suffrage for women. The big committee room of the house was packed to the doors and many wom en stood on boxes during the entire session.

MAY ASK PATENT REHEARING

Strong Likelihood of Such Action, on Ground of Divided Bench, Says Wickersham.

Washington. — Attorney General Wickersham indicated that there was a strong likelihood of a rehearing being asked of the Supreme Court in the "patent monopoly" case decided by a divided bench, four to three.

It is said he has taken the matter up by letter with the parties at issue, asking if a rehearing was desired.

The government, not being a party to the suit, can act only through the defeated parties. The rehearing would be asked on the ground that a full bench had not passed on the case.

Sugar Workers Get Pension.

Jersey City, N. J.—Stockholders of the American Sugar Refining company, here, unanimously passed a resolution providing for the pensioning of all employes more than sixty-five years of age. They are to be retired on a pension equal to one per cent. of their annual income, multiplied by the number of years' service. In the case of women the age limit is fixed at sixty years.

Last Peace Council in England.

London.—The delegates of the coal owners and the striking miners assembled again at the foreign office with Premier Asquith and members of the cabinet for what must be the deciding joint conference.

Has Bathtub Trust Case.

Detroit, Mich.—The case of the government against the so-called bathtub trust, charged with criminal conspiracy in restraint of trade, has been placed in the hands of the jury in federal court here.

SHOOT SIDNA ALLEN

SLAYER OF JUDGE FALLS IN BATTLE—GIRL VICTIM DIES.

LEADER ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

Three Members of Virginia Outlaw Gang That Murdered Three County Officials Are Captured—Desperado's Wife Slain in Conflict.

Hillsville, Va.—A measure of vengeance was meted out to the Virginia outlaws in the mountain fastnesses near here.

Sidna and Floyd Allen, two of the chiefs of the band which rode to the Carroll county courthouse and assassinated Judge Massie, Prosecutor Foster and Sheriff Webb, are in custody, both wounded severely.

Sidna Allen's wife is dead. She was shot in a battle with a posse in the mountains while helping defend her outlaw husband.

The fifth death was that of Miss Nancy Ayres, nineteen years old. She was shot accidentally during the fusillade in the courthouse.

All the free members of the assassin band, probably eighteen, are up in the mountains toward the North Carolina line. They are well armed and determined not to be captured.

The storming of Sidna Allen's house late in the day was the next thing to a bombardment. The posse trailed through the bush four miles up the ridge and surrounded his cabin, which stood in a grove. Expecting the posse, Allen was barricaded and well supplied with rifles and ammunition, which he had brought from a store in which he was a partner.

From behind stumps, rocks, trees and other natural obstacles on the mountain side the posse fired at the house. Allen fired at the posse as fast as the women of his family could reload his rifles. In a lull the posse rushed the house, broke down the doors and found Allen's wife dead and Allen groaning with wounds.

'You got me because I couldn't fight any longer," he is reported to have said to the men, who brought him back to Hillsville later.

Attorney General Williams, who is here, declared that Sidna Allen's bullets killed Judge Massie.

Floyd Allen, the cause of the tragedy, was taken to the lockup under a heavy guard. He slashed his throat with a pocketknife, but his wound is not serious. His son Victor, Cebell Strickland and Byrd Marion were locked up as witnesses.

Juror Fowler, who was wounded in the courthouse firing, is not expected to live. The wounds of Kane and Wordell, other jurors, and of Goad, the court clerk, are not serious.

With the arrival of detectives and deputy sheriffs from outside towns confidence began to take the place of the terror which prevailed for twenty-four hours. Judge Staples, designated by Governor Mann to come here and hold court, took the bench and summoned a special grand jury to indict the murderers. This act had more to do with the restoration of quiet than any other.

A report came from Mount Airy that the Allen band had raided a hardware store and stocked up with guns and bullets. That probably was true. Sidna Allen was part owner of the store.

PUTS SUGAR ON FREE LIST

House Passes Bill by Vote of 198 to 103—Measure Makes Big Cut in Revenue.

Washington.—The Democratic bill removing the tariff entirely from sugar imported into this country was passed by the house of representatives by a vote of 198 to 103.

According to the Democratic leaders the measure, if it becomes a law, will reduce the price of sugar to consumers about 1½ cents a pound, an aggregate saving of $115,000,000 annually to the households of the nation. The loss of $53,000,000 revenue annually from sugar duties will be offset, under the Democratic plan, by the proposed tax on incomes over $5,000 a year.

DR. H. W. WILEY RESIGNS

Famous Chemist Says "Pure Food Act Paralyzed or Discredited"—Own Ideas Trampled Upon.

Washington.—Declaring that for the last six years he had seen grow up an environment in the department "inhospitable" to his own ideas or the administration of the pure food law and had seen "the fundamental principles of the food and drug act, as they appeared to he, one by one paralyzed or discredited," Dr. Harvey W. Wiley issued an explanation of his resignation as chief of the bureau of chemistry in the department of agriculture, which he had sent to Secretary Wilson.

German Aviator Killed.

Berlin, Germany.—Herr Witte, who took a prominent part in the last Berlin aviation meeting at Johannisthal, was killed here. He was making a flight in the vicinity of the suburb of Teltow when his Wright biplane collapsed and fell.

Pastor Lost in England.

Rochester, England.—A general alarm has been sent out by the police for Rev. H. T. Perkess, a Pennsylvania Methodist minister, who has mysteriously disappeared.

GREAT PANIC IN PEKIN

YUAN PRISONER, FEARS DEATH IF HE LEAVES PALACE.

Foreign Legations Guarded by Picked Men and New Uprising Is Threatened—Canton Is Sacked.

Pekin.—The fate of the great republic of China still hangs in the balance. President Yuan Shi Kai is a prisoner in his own palace, in mortal fear of the mob.

Three regiments of Manchu troops guard the entrances to the palace, where the newly installed head of the nation remains afraid to venture forth because of the danger of assassination.

Foreigners are virtual prisoners in the legation compounds. The outcome is impossible to forecast, but the final test must come before many days.

The streets of the city are full of headless bodies and the danger of plague is grave. The bodies are those of men punished for looting during the recent rioting. Not a single body was in uniform, which indicated all were civilians, the majority being coolies.

The legation quarter is closed and carefully guarded. Picked gun crews are on duty night and day. If trouble comes it will find the foreigners ready to defend themselves.

London.—The London Daily Mail received a dispatch from Pekin saying reports have reached there that nearly the entire eastern section of the city of Canton has been sacked and burned.

WILL TRY 54 MEN TOGETHER

Judge Anderson at Indianapolis Decides Against Separate Trials in Dynamite Conspiracy Case.

Indianapolis, Ind.—All the defendants indicted for violation of federal statutes governing transportation of explosives, 54 in number, must go to trial in one cause October 1, according to the final ruling of Judge A. B. Anderson after he had heard arguments of attorneys for the defense on a motion for separate trials.

In the consolidation of the cases the indictments against 54 men are merged in one with 128 counts, 28 of which charge conspiracy to violate the statutes forbidding carrying of dynamite and nitroglycerin on passenger trains and 100 charge direct violation by the defendants both as abettors of and principals with Ortie E. McManigal, John J. and James B. McNamara and Herbert S. Hockin.

SHOOTS AT KING OF ITALY

Anarchist Attempts Regicide as Ruler Leaves Palace for Humbert Memorial—Bullets Wound Officer.

Rome, Italy.—An attempt was made to assassinate King Victor Emmanuel here. Several shots were fired at the king, but all missed their target and his majesty escaped unhurt. His assailant was arrested. He gave his name as Antonio Dalbe.

The king was just leaving the palace on his way to the Pantheon to attend the annual memorial service in honor of his father, King Humbert, who was slain by an assassin at Monza July 20, 1900.

Dalba fired several shots from behind the crowd in the street. One of the officers of the king's body guard fell dangerously wounded.

TWO LIABILITY BILLS PASS

Conflict in Compensation Acts of Michigan House and Senate—Arrange for a Compromise.

Lansing, Mich.—Both houses of the legislature passed workingmen's compensation bills, as recommended by Governor Osborn in his call for the special session.

The thirteen senators who have been standing in the way of giving immediate effect to the presidential primary bill on the ground that such action would be unconstitutional, voted to give immediate effect to a law prohibiting the "carrying of ten-inch hatpins, slungshots, razors, and other weapons." The bill went through under suspension of the rules and the house took similar action when it reached that body.

TRAIN MESSENGER KILLS TWO

Mallet and Gun Used to Slay Bandits Who Held Up Southern Pacific in Texas.

San Antonio, Tex.—A San Antonio express messenger named David A. Truesdale is the hero of all Texas.

Starting unarmed and covered with two revolvers held by a masked train robber, he emerged from obscurity flanked on either side by the body of a dead bandit.

That, in brief, sums up the fatal error made by a pair of desperadoes when they attempted to hold up Southern Pacific train No. 9 at a lonely point in Texas.

Attell Sues Buckley for $20,000.

San Francisco.—Abe Attell, ex-featherweight champion, has filed suit for $20,000 damages against Jim Buckley, manager for Harlem Tommy Murphy, because Buckley charges the Hebrew fighter with having offered Murphy $4,000 if he would "lay down" in the recent Murphy-Attell fight.

For Rehearing of Patent Case.

Washington.—The Supreme court will be asked as soon as the necessary application can be drawn to rehear the patent monopoly case.

REGULATING THE STOMACH

That Important Organ Works According to the Quality of the Blood That Is Furnished to It.

There is the most intimate relation between the condition of the blood and the activity of the stomach. The blood depends upon the stomach for a large part of its nourishment; while every act of digestion, from the time the food enters the stomach until it is digested and assimilated by the blood, needs plenty of pure, well-oxidized blood. The stomach works only according to the quality of the blood.

The most common cause of indigestion is anemia, or lack of blood. Indeed there is not a single disturbance of the health of the body nor any form of exhaustion or lowered vitality, that may not lead to stomach trouble. Disordered blood is the one common cause of indigestion. Thin, impure blood weakens the muscles of the stomach and lessens the product of the glands which furnish the digestive fluids.

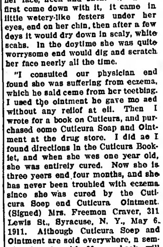
Nothing will more promptly cure indigestion than plenty of pure, well-oxidized blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People increase the red corpuscles, the oxygen-carriers of the blood, until the blood is rich and red. A thorough trial of these pills gives a hearty appetite, perfect digestion, strength and health.

Mrs. Emma M. Mayno, of No. 635 Second avenue, Clinton, Iowa, says: "I had just worked myself out bringing up a family of five children and, while in this run-down condition, I took sick with some kind of stomach trouble. I doctored with several physicians and saw a specialist in Chicago but received little help. I could not eat anything with relish and could not sleep. I would have deathly sick spells and would vomit. I had terrible headaches and dizzy spells. I got very thin and my friends thought I was going into consumption. I doctored for a year or so without help. While visiting a niece she told me that she took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, so I tried them. They soon helped me and a few boxes entirely cured me."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50c. per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

Send for free booklet, "What to Eat and How to Eat."

THE ONE GIRL FOR HIM.



The Girl (who has been suffering from sore throat)—The doctor told me that I must never talk for more than two minutes at a time.

The Man—How delightful! Darling, will you marry me?

PHYSICIAN SAID ECZEMA CAME FROM TEETHING

"When my little girl was about eight months old, she was taken with a very irritating breaking out, which came on her face, neck and back. When she first came down with it, it came in little watery-like festers under her eyes, and on her chin, then after a few days it would dry down in scaly, white scabs. In the daytime she was quite worrysome and would dig and scratch her face nearly all the time.

"I consulted our physician and found she was suffering from eczema, which he said came from her teething. I used the ointment he gave me and without any relief at all. Then I wrote for a book on Cuticura, and purchased some Cuticura Soap and Ointment at the drug store. I did as I found directions in the Cuticura Booklet, and when she was one year old, she was entirely cured. Now she is three years and four months, and she has never been troubled with eczema since she was cured by the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. (Signed) Mrs. Freemon Craver, 311 Lewis St., Syracuse, N. Y., May 6, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

They Should.

"My parents used to threaten to beat some sense into my head."

"Those idle threats that parents never carry out should be discouraged in every way possible."

Doing is the great thing. For if, resolutely, people do what is right, in time they come to like doing it.—Ruskin.

When the Millennium comes Garfield Tea and Holy Church will not be longer needed.

Love laughs at locksmiths, but it sometimes cries over spilled milk.

FARMS FOR RENT OR SALE ON CROP payments. J. MULHALL, Sioux City, Ia.

Some people love to tell the truth—when they think it will hurt.

BURNING DAYLIGHT
By JACK LONDON
AUTHOR OF "THE CALL OF THE WILD," "WHITE FANG," "MARTIN EDEN," ETC.

BURNING DAYLIGHT

By JACK LONDON

Author of "The Call of the Wild," "White Fang," "Martin Eden," Etc.

(Copyright, 1910, by the New York Herald Company.)
(Copyright, 1910, by the MacMillan Company.)

SYNOPSIS.

Elam Harnish, known all through Alaska as "Burning Daylight," celebrates his 30th birthday with a crowd of miners at the Circle City Tivoli. The dance leads to heavy gambling, in which over $100,000 is staked. Harnish loses his money and his mine but wins the mail contract. He starts on his mail trip with dogs and sledge, telling his friends that he will be in the big Yukon gold strike at the start. Burning Daylight makes a sensationally rapid run across country with the mail, appears at the Tivoli and is now ready to join his friends in a dash to the new gold fields. Deciding that gold will be found in the up-river district Harnish buys two tons of flour, which he declares will be worth its weight in gold, but when he arrives with his flour he finds the big flat desolate. A comrade discovers gold and Daylight reaps a rich harvest. He goes to Dawson, becomes the most prominent figure in the Klondike and defeats a combination of capitalists in a vast mining deal. He returns to civilization, and, amid the bewildering complications of high finance, Daylight finds that he has been led to invest his eleven millions in a manipulated scheme. He goes to New York.

CHAPTER VIII.—Continued.

Then the grin died away, and his face grew bleak and serious. Leaving out his interests in the several Western reclamation projects (which were still assessing heavily), he was a ruined man. But harder hit than this was his pride. He had been so easy. They had gold-bricked him, and he had nothing to show for it. The simplest farmer would have had documents, while he had nothing but a gentleman's agreement, and a verbal one at that. Gentleman's agreement! He snorted over it. John Dowsett's voice, just as he had heard it in the telephone receiver, sounded in his ears the words, "On my honor as a gentleman." They were sneak-thieves and swindlers, that was what they were, and they had given him the double-cross. The newspapers were right. He had come to New York to be trimmed, and Messrs. Dowsett, Letton and Guggenhammer had done it. He was a little fish, and they had played with him ten days—ample time in which to swallow him, along with his eleven millions. Of course, they had been unloading on him all the time, and now they were buying Ward Valley back for a song ere the market righted itself.

And Daylight sat and consumed cocktails and saw back in his life to Alaska, and lived over the grim years in which he had battled for his eleven millions. For awhile murder ate at his heart, and wild ideas and sketchy plans of killing his betrayers flashed through his mind. Daylight unlocked his grip and took out his automatic pistol—a big Colt's .44. He released the safety catch with his thumb, and, operating the sliding outer barrel, ran the contents of the clip through the mechanism. The eight cartridges slid out in a stream. He refilled the clip, threw a cartridge into the chamber, and with the trigger at full cock, thrust up the safety ratchet. He shoved the weapon into the side pocket of his coat, ordered another Martini, and resumed his seat.

At ten o'clock he arose and pored over the city directory. Then he put on his shoes, took a cab, and departed into the night. Twice he changed cabs, and finally fetched up at the night office of a detective agency. He superintended the thing himself, laid down money in advance in profuse quantities, selected the six men he needed, and gave them their instructions. Never, for so simple a task, had they been so well paid; for to each in addition to office charges, he gave a five-hundred-dollar bill, with the promise of another if he succeeded. Some time next day, he was convinced, if not sooner, his three silent partners would come together. To each one two of his detectives were to be attached. Time and place was all he wanted to learn.

"Now It's My Deal, and I'm Going to See if I Can Hold Them Four Aces."

"Stop at nothing, boys," were his final instructions. "I must have this information. Whatever you do, whatever happens, I'll see you through."

Returning to his hotel, he changed cabs as before, went up to his room, and with one more cocktail for a nightcap, went to bed and to sleep. In the morning he dressed and shaved, ordered breakfast and the newspapers sent up, and waited. But he did not drink. By nine o'clock his telephone began to ring and the reports to come in. Nathaniel Letton was taking the train at Tarrytown. John Dowsett was coming down by the subway. Leon Guggenhammer had not stirred out yet, though he was assuredly within. And in this fashion, with a map of the city spread out before him, Daylight followed the movements of his three men as they drew together. Nathaniel Letton was at his offices in the Mutual-Solander Building. Next arrived Guggenhammer. Dowsett was still in his own offices. But at eleven came the word that he also had arrived, and several minutes later Daylight was in a hired motor-car and speeding for the Mutual-Solander Building.

CHAPTER IX.

Nathaniel Letton was talking when the door opened; he ceased, and with his two companions gazed with controlled perturbation at Burning Daylight striding into the room. The free, swinging movements of the trail-traveler were unconsciously exaggerated in that stride of his. In truth, it seemed to him that he felt the trail beneath his feet.

"Howdy, gentlemen, howdy," he remarked, ignoring the unnatural calm with which they greeted his entrance. He shook hands with them in turn, striding from one to another and gripping their hands so heartily that Nathaniel Letton could not forbear to wince. Daylight flung himself into a massive chair and sprawled lazily, with an appearance of fatigue. The leather grip he had brought into the room he dropped carelessly beside him on the floor.

"I've sure been going some," he sighed. "We sure trimmed them beautifully. It was real slick. And the beauty of the play never dawned on me till the very end. It was pure and simple knock down and drag out. And the way they fell for it was amazin'."

Letton made a dry sound in his throat. Dowsett sat quietly and waited, while Leon Guggenhammer struggled into articulation.

"You certainly have raised Cain," he said.

Daylight's black eyes flashed in a pleasant way.

"Didn't I, though!" he proclaimed, jubilantly. "And didn't we fool 'em! I was teetotally surprised. I never dreamed they would be that easy.

"And now," he went on, not permitting the pause to grow awkward, "we-all might as well have an accounting. I'm pullin' West this afternoon on that blamed Twentieth Century." He tugged at his grip, got it open, and dipped into it with both his hands. "But don't forget, boys, when you-all want me to bornswoggle Wall Street another flutter, all you-all have to do is whisper the word. I'll sure be right there with the goods."

His hands emerged, clutching a great mass of stubs, check-books, and brokers' receipts. These he deposited in a heap on the big table, and dipping again, he fished out the stragglers and added them to the pile. He consulted a slip of paper, drawn from his coat pocket and read aloud:

"Ten million twenty-seven thousand and forty-two dollars and sixty-eight cents is my figurin' on my expense. Of course that-all's taken from the winnings before we-all get to figurin' on the whack-up. Where's your figures? It must a' been a mighty big clean-up."

The three men looked their bepuzzlement at one another. The man was a bigger fool than they had imagined, or else he was playing a game which they could not divine.

Nathaniel Letton moistened his lips and spoke up.

"It will take some hours yet, Mr. Harnish, before the full accounting can be made. Mr. Howison is at work upon it now. We—ah—as you say, it has been a gratifying clean-up. Suppose we have lunch together and talk it over. I'll have the clerks work through the noon hour so that you will have ample time to catch your train."

Dowsett and Guggenhammer manifested a relief that was almost obvious. The situation was clearing. It was disconcerting, under the circumstances, to be pent in the same room with this heavy-muscled, Indian-like man whom they had robbed. They remembered unpleasantly the many stories of his strength and recklessness. If Letton could only put him off long enough for them to escape into the policed world outside the office door, all would be well; and Daylight showed all the signs of being put off.

"I'm real glad to hear that," he said. "I don't want to miss that train, and you-all have done me proud, gentlemen, letting me in on this deal. I just do appreciate it without being able to express my feelings. But I am sure almighty curious, and I'd like terrible to know, Mr. Letton, what your figures of our winning is. Can you-all give me a rough estimate?"

For a While Murder Ate at His Heart.

Nathaniel Letton did not look appealingly at his two friends, but in the brief pause they felt that appeal pass out from him. Dowsett, of sterner mold than the others, began to divine that the Klondiker was playing. But the other two were still under the blandishment of his child-like innocence.

"It is extremely—er—difficult," Leon Guggenhammer began. "You see, Ward Valley has fluctuated so, er—"

"That no estimate can possibly be made in advance," Letton supplemented.

"Approximate it, approximate it," Daylight counselled, cheerfully. "It don't hurt if you-all are a million out one side or the other. The figures'll straighten that up. But I'm that curious I'm just itching all over. What d'ye say?"

"Why continue to play at cross purposes?" Dowsett demanded abruptly and coldly. "Let us have the explanation here and now. Mr. Harnish is laboring under a false impression, and he should be set straight."

By this time Letton was stiffened by the attitude Dowsett had taken, and his answer was prompt and definite.

"I fear you are under a misapprehension, Mr. Harnish. There are no winnings to be divided with you. Now don't get excited, I beg of you. I have but to press this button . . ."

Far from excited, Daylight had all the seeming of being stunned. He looked at Dowsett and murmured:

"It was your deal, all right, and you-all dole them right, too. Well, I ain't kicking. I'm like the player in that poker game. It was your deal, and you-all had a right to do your best. And you done it—cleaned me out slicker'n a whistle."

He gazed at the heap on the table with an air of stupefaction.

"And that-all ain't worth the paper it's written on. Gol dast it, you-all can sure deal 'em 'round when you get a chance. Oh, no, I ain't a-kicking. It was your deal, and you-all certainly done me, and a man ain't half a man that squeals on another man's deal. And now the hand is played out, and the cards are on the table, and the deal's over, but . . ."

His hand, dipping swiftly into his inside breast pocket, appeared with the big Colt's automatic.

"As I was saying, the old deal's finished. Now it's my deal, and I'm a-going to see if I can hold them four aces—

"Take your hand away, you whited sepulchre!" he cried sharply.

Nathaniel Letton's hand, creeping toward the push-button on the desk, was abruptly arrested.

"Change cars," Daylight commanded. "Take that chair over there, you gangrene-livered skunk. Jump, or I'll make you leak till folks'll think your father was a water hydrant and your mother a sprinkling-cart. You-all move your chair alongside, Guggenhammer; and you-all Dowsett, sit right there, while I just irrelevantly explain the virtues of this here automatic. She's loaded for big game and she goes off eight times. She's a sure hummer when she gets started.

"Preliminary remarks being over, I now proceed to deal. Remember, I ain't making no remarks about your deal. You done your darndest, and it was all right. But this is my deal, and it's up to me to do my darndest. In the first place, you-all know me. I'm Burning Daylight—savvee? Ain't afraid of God, devil, death, nor destruction. Them's my four aces, and they sure copper your bets. Look at that there living skeleton. Letton, you're sure afraid to die. Your bones is all rattling together you're that scared. And look at that fat Jew there. This little weapon's sure put the fear of God in his heart. He's yellow as a sick persimmon. Dowsett, you're a cool one. You-all ain't batted an eye nor turned a hair. That's because you're great on arithmetic. And that makes you-all dead easy in this deal of mine. You're sitting there and adding two and two together, and you-all know I sure got you skinned. You know me, and that I ain't afraid of nothing. And you-all adds up all your money and knows you ain't a-going to die if you can help it."

"I'll see you hanged," was Dowsett's retort.

"Not by a damned sight. When the fun starts, you're the first I plug. I'll hang all right, but you-all won't live to see it. You-all die here and now while I'll die subject to the law's delay—savvee? Being dead, with grass growing out of your carcasses, you won't know when I hang, but I'll sure have the pleasure a long time of knowing you-all beat me to it."

"You surely won't kill us?" Letton asked in a queer, thin voice.

Daylight shook his head.

"It's sure too expensive. You-all ain't worth it. I'd sooner have my chips back. And I guess you-all 'd sooner give my chips back than go to the dead-house."

A long silence followed.

"Well, I've done dealt. It's up to you-all to play. But while you're deliberating, I want to give you-all warning: if that door opens and any one of you cusses lets on there's anything unusual, right here and then I sure start plugging. They ain't a soul 'll get out of the room except feet first."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Original Suffragette.

Mrs. Johanne Meyer, the first Danish woman to speak from a platform in behalf of woman suffrage, attended the Universal Race congress recently held in London as the delegate to the Peace Society of Copenhagen. As soon as the congress closed Mrs. Meyer began an inquiry in behalf of the Danish government to ascertain the effect that social and political work in England has had on women. In 1870 Mrs. Meyer founded the first organization for the betterment of woman in Denmark.

A Drop of Blood

Or a little water from the human system when thoroughly tested by the chief chemist at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., tells the story of impoverished blood—nervous exhaustion or some kidney trouble. Such examinations are made without cost and is only a small part of the work of the staff of physicians and surgeons under the direction of Dr. R. V. Pierce giving the best medical advice possible without cost to those who wish to write and make a full statement of symptoms. An imitation of natures method of restoring waste of tissue and impoverishment of the blood and nervous force is used when you take an alterative and glyceric extract of roots, without the use of alcohol, such as

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

Which makes the stomach strong, promotes the flow of digestive juices, restores the lost appetite, makes assimilation perfect, invigorates the liver and purifies and enriches the blood. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder and restorative nerve tonic. It makes men strong in body, active in mind and cool in judgment. Get what you ask for!

SUBTLE HUMOR.

Cholly—What's the time, old chap? I've an invitation to dinner at seven, and my watch isn't going.

Gussie—Why, wasn't your watch invited, too, deah boy?

No Wonder She Blushed.

Two of the University of Pennsylvania track runners passed a learned and preoccupied professor showing a young woman visitor through the "Gardens."

With a dainty shiver, the girl remarked:

"It's dreadfully cold—isn't it—to be without stockings?"

The professor's mind turned for a moment from contemplation of the fourth dimension.

"Then why did you leave them off?" he asked.—Lippincott's Magazine.

Astonished Husband.

De Wolfe Hopper tells a good story about the domestic unhappiness of another actor. The hero of the joke was a man who had married because the woman had much money, although no beauty. Naturally, after the wedding ceremony and the acquisition of the bride's financial resources, the husband was never very attentive to her.

Another member of the company in which the couple were appearing was, however, far more appreciative of the lady's charms, and proceeded to make love to her in an ardent but stealthy manner. The grand finale came one evening when the actor discovered the other man kissing his wife. The fond lover stood petrified with fear, and expected to be shot down the next moment.

No such thing happened. The outraged husband only lifted his hands toward the ceiling with a gesture of intense surprise, and exclaimed:

"Merciful heavens! And he didn't even have to!"

HARD TO DROP
But Many Drop It.

A young Calif. wife talks about coffee:

"It was hard to drop Mocha and Java and give Postum a trial, but my nerves were so shattered that I was a nervous wreck and of course that means all kinds of ills.

"At first I thought bicycle riding caused it and I gave it up, but my condition remained unchanged. I did not want to acknowledge coffee caused the trouble for I was very fond of it.

"About that time a friend came to live with us, and I noticed that after he had been with us a week he would not drink his coffee any more. I asked him the reason. He replied, 'I have not had a headache since I left off drinking coffee, some months ago, till last week, when I began again, here at your table. I don't see how anyone can like coffee, anyway, after drinking Postum'!

"I said nothing, but at once ordered a package of Postum. That was five months ago, and we have drank no coffee since, except on two occasions when we had company, and the result each time was that my husband could not sleep, but lay awake and tossed and talked half the night. We were convinced that coffee caused his suffering, so we returned to Postum, convinced that the coffee was an enemy, instead of a friend, and he is troubled no more by insomnia.

"I, myself, have gained 8 pounds in weight, and my nerves have ceased to quiver. It seems so easy now to quit the old coffee that caused our aches and ills and take up Postum." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

The young man who marries an heiress may not have to wait 50 years in order to celebrate his golden wedding.

Stop the Pain.

The hurt of a burn or a cut stops when Cole's Carbolisalve is applied. It heals quickly and prevents scars. 25c and 50c by druggists. For free sample write to J. W. Cole & Co., Black River Falls, Wis.

Quite So.

"Pa, what is a 'tidy fortune?'"

"A clean, crisp, ten-dollar bill.

A very successful remedy for pelvic catarrh is hot douches of Paxtine Antiseptic, at druggists, 25c a box or sent postpaid on receipt of price by The Paxton Toilet, Co., Boston, Mass.

In every action, reflect upon the end, and in your undertaking it consider why you do it.—Jeremy Taylor.

A long life and a merry one may be expected by those who use Garfield Tea, the natural herb regulator. For sale at all drug stores.

Many a man can't afford to dress well because his wife does.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle.

Usually a man is a poor judge of his own importance.

PILES CURED IN 6 TO 14 DAYS
Your druggist will refund money if PAZO OINTMENT fails to cure any case of Itching, Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles in 6 to 14 days. 50c.

A sermon is either based on a text or a pretext.

FREE

MUNYON'S PAW-PAW PILLS

I want every person who is bilious, constipated or has any stomach or liver ailment to send for a free package of my Paw-Paw Pills. I want to prove that they positively cure Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Belching, Wind, Headache, Nervousness, Sleeplessness and are an infallible cure for Constipation. To do this I am willing to give millions of free packages. I take all the risk. Sold by druggists for 25 cents a vial. For free package address, Prof. Munyon, 53rd & Jefferson Sts., Philadelphia, Pa.

Needs No Paint
No After Trouble or Expense
First Cost — Last Cost

When you want a durable, attractive and inexpensive roofing that will protect your buildings from the sun, rain, snow, hail, wind, fire and lightning—something different from the ordinary prepared roofing that requires frequent painting and repairing,

ASK YOUR DEALER FOR GAL-VA-NITE ROOFING

"Triple Asphalt Coated" "Mica Plated"

Has stood the "Test of Time" under the most severe climatic conditions. Put up in rolls of 108 sq. ft. with zinc-coated, galvanized nails, cement and illustrated direction sheet. Get samples and our illustrated booklets, "Gal-va-nite Qualities" and "The Inside of An Outside Proposition."

FORD MFG. CO.
St. Paul. St. Louis.
Chicago. Omaha.
Kansas City

Don't Persecute Your Bowels

Cut out cathartics and purgatives. They are brutal, harsh, unnecessary. Try

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

Purely vegetable. Act gently on the liver, eliminate bile, and soothe the delicate membrane of the bowel. Cure Constipation, Biliousness, Sick Headache and Indigestion, as millions know.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.
Genuine must bear Signature
Brent Good

THE NEW FRENCH REMEDY. No.1, No.2, No.3.
THERAPION Used in French Hospitals with GREAT SUCCESS, CURES KIDNEY, BLADDER DISEASES, PILES, CHRONIC ULCERS, SKIN ERUPTIONS—EITHER SEX. Send address envelope for FREE booklet to DR. LE CLERC MED. CO., HAVERSTOCK RD., HAMPSTEAD, LONDON, ENG.

25 CTS. PISO'S REMEDY 25 CTS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by Druggists.
FOR COUGHS AND COLDS

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

To Norway belongs the honor of nailing their flag of discovery to the south pole.

State politicls have not began to warm up yet. Wait until the democrats trot out thei candidate, then look out for a thaw.

Polk county takes the lead in filing for county office, there being four candidates for sheriff in the field already. There has also two candidates filed for representintive on the republican ticket. Polk always did have a good supply of official timber.

If any candidate comes up for office this fall that you want to see defeated, just get the Thief River Falls Times to support him. Then send out a lot of free sample copys to farmers living along Red Lake River. Probaly, if you want to fix him proper, it might be a good idea to get Major Shunk to indorse him also.

Those who would urge Ole O. Sageng, of Otter Tail county to go up against Steenerson for congressman from this district, this year, are either not friends of Ole or a little light in their political upper story. There was never a time since the election of Halvor Steenerson to congress, when he was in such close touch with the people of his district as he is at this time, and the people will see to it that he is re-elected to continue the good work that he is doing.

The Duluth Herald says that one woolen mill paid for itself out of profits in two years. That's nothing. We have known men to pay for a farm in Marshall County, Minnesota, out of only one year's crop on said land—Warren Register.

And thet's nothing. In Red Lake county the farmer and his wife are moving into town to take life easy after having bought a farm for each of the boys with the profits of last year's crop.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

And that's nothing. We know a Pennington county farmer who with his family has just left for a vacation to Norway, and expects to visit two years on the profits of last year's crop.

We guess we touched a tender spot in the log jamers official, so much ter, organ Times, when we published the facts about the Canadian government ordering the Thief River Falls Lumber Company to get their log boom out of that river. And they were facts and they don't deny that they are facts. But the Times gives the following awful speal: "Bro. Hunt is right. It is different In Canada. Were The Sunbeam a Canadian publication It would have been barred from the mails long ago for being anarchistic and detrimental to the educational advancement of the youth of the country."

Well wouldn't the above "hog wash" jar you? The fact of the matter Is that the Times got badly did up in their fight of indorsement of the lumber companys shutting off this river and are resorting to mud throwing to try to square themselves with an outraged public. Any one to read their raillery at THE SUNBEAM, might think It was a new publication with a "kid" editor, but it has been strewing the way side for a number of years with the putrid political carcasses of people like the present Times publishers. A newspaper that will santion and uphold a rich lumber company in closing off this river are to low down to be worthy of notice, and it is no wonder that they have had to resort to giving away dishes and geting up contests to get subscribers. It don't take the people long to get "next" to a newspaper of the Tims stamp, and forget it was ever published.

WARNING!

Sign Nothing For Strangers.

Republished by request. Tell your neighbors about this fraud.

Recently there has been n gentlemen travling throu the country, especially throu eastern Red Lake and Pennington counties, claiming to be from McIntosh representing some supposed land firm in Grand Forks listing farms for sale and getting the owners of land to sign listing contracts and tyeing them up for a period of six or 8 months, and listing the lands regardless of the price asked by the owners as that part of it is entirely immeterial to them for the reason that it is not their intention at all to even attempt to sell these lands but merely to tie them up so that the owners themselves can not dispose of it, as while this party driving thro the country listing these lands may tell you that it is not their intention to record these contracts, but the facts are that they are being recorded at the Court house in Red Lake Falls and Thief River Falls, thus clouding the title which the farmer would not know anything about unless he should happen to sell himself, when getting out the abstract of title he would then see his contract on record which would prevent him from closing his deal and even prevent him from renewing his old loan on the same unless he first had settled with that land company paying whatever amount they would ask for relasing that contract of record.

It is an old game and has been worked by verious uncrupellious land firms in varions places throut his and other States and only works a haroship on the owner of the land. Quaters have been listed for $5000,00 that would not bring $2500, which conclusively goes to show that it is not the selling of the land they are after but simply tying it up and in that way, knowing that the farmer prehaps within a year or so would either sell it himself or have to make a new loan, and he would be obliged to come to them and pay them for getting it off the records. Even if a sale of that kind did not take place for the next ten years the contract would still be there so that sooner or later the settlement would necessarly have to be made.

Sign no contracts or agreements of any kind uless you are absolutly sure of what you are signing and if not go to your nearest bank or a person familiar with that kind of business and ask them about it, and in that way save yourself not only trouble but also money.

Two Ambitions.

"My ambition is to earn $5,000 a year."

"My ambition is to earn more money than my wife can spend."

Ready to Do Her Part.

Mother—May, that young man of yours is too forward. He must be sat upon. May—Leave that to me, mother. I'll see that he is.

As much of heaven is visible as we have eyes to see.—William Winter.

Judges' Wigs.

The wig is only worn by English barristers to give them a stern, judicial appearance, and no one can say that it fails in this respect. The custom was originated by a French judge in the seventeenth century when, happening to don a marquis' wig one day, he found it gave him such a stern and dignified appearance that he decided to get one for himself and wear it at all times in court. This he did, and the result was so satisfactory from a legal point of view that not only judges, but barristers also, took up the custom throughout Europe.—London Graphic.

FODDER CORN.

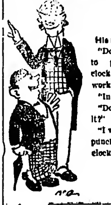
Owing to the fact that so much land has been sold during the past season in this county to actual settlers that are moving here this spring and the majority of these being un-improved land, the result will be that any hay land will be more scarse than ever as also more people during the past two years have gone into the dairy business thus requiring about twice the amount of hay that was used in former years so it will be well for the farmers to make arrangements for the feed as early as possible, and the writer having recently made a trip thru a certain dairy district in the southern part of the State, where there of course is no wild hay but an abundance of both clover and timothy we find that even there the farmers are prefeering fordder corn to fine tame grass and that about the same amount of feed can be gotten from 10 acres of well cultivated fodder corn as they would get from 160 acres of either clover or timothy besides being a great deal more nutrious and especially far better for milk cows for milk purposes. Even people now moving here that have no old fields on the land need not hesitate to put in fodder corn on the prairie sod broken this spring provided they will break it well and thourly disc it up and if given a good coat of old manure the result will still be better. We would advise the farmers figuring on planting fodder corn to make arrangements fo the seek in good season and see to it that they are geting th right kind best adapted to this country.

The Giraffe as it Feeds.

The singular shape of the giraffe is adapted to its habits of life. It feeds on the young branches and top shoots of the trees, and its long fore legs and neck enable it to browse at a far greater height than any other animal, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. In feeding it stretches up its neck and with its long prehensile tongue, which it can protrude to a surprising distance, hooks down the tender shoots and leaves into its mouth. But the creature's peculiar form, though enabling it to feed on what it likes best, is sometimes the cause of its destruction. The fore legs are so long that to reach the ground it has to stretch them wide apart and bend down its neck in a semicircle, and while drinking in this defenseless attitude the lion or leopard springs upon it and overpowers it before it can recover itself.

Splinters in the Fingers.

When you get a splinter in your finger it is sometimes possible to get at it by pressing the point of a needle under it, but unless you have deft fingers or a pair of tweezers you may not be able to pull it out even then. A new pen nib is a very good substitute for a pair of tweezers. Lay the nib over the splinter so as to hide it. Then press down hard enough to separate the nibs. If you now let the pen down level with the splinter and allow the nibs to close again they will take hold, and you can draw the splinter out. Remember that any metal thing that is to be applied to a wound, such as a needle, penknife or pen, should be passed lightly through a flame first, so as to disinfect it. A gas jet or a match will do.—New York Sun.



His Preference.

"Do you have to punch the clock where you work?"

"Indeed I do."

"Do you mind it?"

"I would rather punch an alarm clock."

Office Lawyers.

"Office practice is what the average lawyer seeks for now," remarked an attorney, "and that is the business that makes the largest returns for the least waste of tissue. More money is made nowadays by keeping clients out of litigation and free from the dangers of the law's delay than by defending them, even successfully, in court. It is safe to say that there are some 6,000 lawyers who are making a very good living in New York from law business that rarely or never takes them into court and that there are a large number of lawyers who from their counsel work and directing great enterprises and corporations, advising and guiding wealthy clients, take in each year princely—yes, even fabulous emoluments."—Lawyers' Diary.

SHRINES IN JAPAN.

Those Within the Guarded Gates of Asakusa Temple.

"Asakusa temple is dedicated to the goddess Kwannon, a tiny image of gold about two and a half inches high," writes a traveler in Japan. "At the entrance to the temple grounds on either side of the immense gate stand two large and fearful looking figures, guarding the sacred precincts. Hanging outside the wire grating are a number of sandals for their use if they wish to take a walk, and rice is sprinkled about. Each worshiper before entering the temple calls at a small building and, after contributing a small amount, washes his hands and rinses his mouth.

"In front of the main shrine is a large aperture in the floor covered with lattice work, into which the worshiper casts his gift. After clapping his hands to awaken or attract the attention of the god he kneels, but his prayer is only brief. While there is one chief shrine there are many others under the same roof.

"One shrine especially attracted my attention. It was made of wood and quite disfigured and worn through the constant rubbing of hands on the spot corresponding to the afflicted portions of the sufferers' bodies."—Chicago News.

Horseshoes in Turkey.

In many parts of Turkey horseshoes are simply a flat plate of iron with a hole in the middle. An extraordinary method still obtains in portions of the Ottoman empire of shoeing the horse.

The farrier doubles a long rope and knots a loop at the end to about the size of a large horse collar. This is put over the horse's head, after the manner of a horse collar, and the knot rests on the horse's chest. The next step is to bring the two ends of the rope between the animal's legs. Each rope then, taken by a man, is hitched on the fetlocks of the horse's legs and brought through the loop in front. Then by a hard, steady pull the hind legs are drawn up to the fore-legs, and the horse falls heavily on its side. All four feet are now tied together by the fetlocks, the horse is propped up on his back, and the farrier sits quietly down beside him, takes off the old shoes and puts on the new.—New York Herald.

What It Really Was.

The district inspector was visiting the school, and as this was an important event the pupils had been instructed to memorize a verse or two to recite for the entertainment of the visitor.

During the delivery of his verse one small boy was especially noticeable for the action with which he accompanied his lines, so noticeable that the teacher complimented him upon the ease with which he spoke and the practice which he must have devoted to the piece.

"It was fine, Johnnie," she exclaimed in closing, "and shows a large amount of rehearsal. But how did you learn the gestures?"

"'Tain't gestures," replied the young genius, with a twist; "it's the hives."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Alike, but Different.

The teacher had the letters c-a-t on the blackboard and was trying to teach little Pansy Peavish to pronounce the word, but Pansy couldn't come it. "Think," said the teacher. "What is it that has some whiskers and comes up on the porch late at night when it is cold and begs to come into the house?" "Oh, I know!" exclaimed little Pansy, a great light dawning. "It's papa!"—Galveston News.

The Trial Heat.

Ethel (engaged a week)—George and I have never had a quarrel. Maud—Oh, I think you ought to have one before you are married. Otherwise you can't be quite sure whether you are going to have your own way or not!—Exchange.

An Offset.

"You lost money on your charity bazaar, didn't you?"

"Yes; but did you ever see such lovely costumes?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer

Very Tired!

Johnnie—Auntie, my eyelids won't stand no any longer.—Journal Amusant.

A Reminder.

Dearborn—What have you got that string tied about your finger for? Wabash—Oh, I've been getting married, and my wife doesn't want me to forget it.—Boston Herald.

Its Sort.

"Did Jerry ever tell you the time when he made his opponents bottle up their wrath?"

"Yes; it's a corking story."—Baltimore American.

The Latest News,

From Ellingson Bros,

We have now just received our large and well selected stock of spring and summer dry goods, which we are selling cheap for cash. We won't be undersold by Sears Robeck, or anyone.

GIVE US A CALL,—AT ELLINGSON, BROS.

THE PIONEER MERCHANTS.

Highlanding Minn.

RHODA STORE

NEW GOODS, NEW PRICES,

A trial order will convince you, that this is the best Store to buy your goods.

I HAVE A FIN LINE OF GROCERIES.

BOOTS, SHOES, & COMPLETE STOCK OF SUMMER FOOT WARE.

give me a call and get prices

GEORGE SINGER, Prop. [illegible]

U. S. Mail,

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 10.00 a. m. on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 1.30 p. m

Wm. G. Hunt p. m.

FARM LOANS.

Made Without Delay, at reasonable rates of interest.

Be sure and see me before you lace your loan.

GEORGE ELDER.
McGinn Block,
Thief River Falls

CORN-SEEDS TREES

Our 29th Annual Catalog is now ready and free for the asking. It is a work of art and full of good things.

See King Corn on front cover.

WILL'S PIONEER SEED HOUSE and NURSERY
OSCAR H. WILL & CO.
BISMARCK, NO. DAKOTA

Remembered His Appearance.

"What in the world is the matter with you? You look as though you had been thrown out of a peace conference."

"Automobile ran over me."

"Can you identify the man who was driving?"

"Sure, I can! I'm looking for a man who looks like a speck of dust three miles down the road, and if I see him it will go hard with him."

Knew His Business.

Willie—Say, pa, you ought to see the men across the street raise a building on jacks. Pa (absently)—Impossible, Willie, you can open on jacks, but a man is a fool to try to raise on the—er—I mean it must have been quite a sight.—Puck.

Not Always.

"They say that a girl who acts three times as a bridesmaid will never be a bride."

"It isn't so unless the best man always happens to be a person who doesn't interest her."—Chicago Record-Herald.

McCall's Magazine and McCall Patterns

For Women

Have More Friends than any other magazine or patterns. McCall's is the reliable Fashion Guide monthly in one million one hundred thousand homes. Besides showing all the latest designs of McCall Patterns, each issue is brimful of sparkling short stories and helpful information for women.

Save Money and Keep in Style by subscribing for McCall's Magazine at once. Costs only 50 cents a year, including any one of the celebrated McCall Patterns free.

McCall Patterns Lead all others in style, fit, simplicity, economy and number sold. More dealers sell McCall Patterns than any other two makes combined. None higher than 15 cents. Buy from your dealer, or by mail from

McCALL'S MAGAZINE
236-246 W. 37th St., New York City

PATENT

TRADE MA
DESIGN
COPYRIGHTS

Anyone sending a sketch and descriptio quickly ascertain our opinion free wheth invention is probably patentable. Commu tions strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Pa sent free. Oldest agency for securing pate Patents taken through Munn & Co. re special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Large culation of any scientific journal. Term year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsd

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New Branch Office 625 F St. Washingt

MANY [illegible]
WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

[illegible]

STANDARD AUTHORITY

Should You Not Own Such a Book?

WEBSTER'S COLLEGIATE DICTIONARY.

[illegible]

G. & C. MERRIAM CO.
Springfield, Mass., U. S. A.

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Applications to make final proof written free at this office.

Call and see us, when you are ready to make your final proof.

Two fine fat steers for sale. Inquire at Sunbem post office.

Two hundred bushels of White Russion seed oats for sale. Inquire of Wm. Parno.

Spring Spring, where are you?

Local news are rather searse this week.

James O'Brino is hawling the gravel for a foundation for his barn this week.

County Commissioner Peter C. Wold made this office a plesent call yesterday.

Wm. Parno has returned home, and will farm on his homestead in the town of Star this summer.

Oscar Nesland passed by this way Sunday, taking Ed Singer to Kratka with his new driving team.

The Auction sale of Johnson Bros. last Saturday drew a big crowd and all their stock sold for first class prices.

Those from here who attended the party at M.E. Hylands on last Saturday evening report having a good time.

The weather has been very cold for this time of year latly, and there is no more sign of a thaw than there was in January.

We guess the ground hog has made a mistake and is going to stay in his hole six months, instead of six weeks.

Marshall Shedd has hired out as fireman on the steam dredge south from Ktatka, which they are moving over onto the Malone ditch this week.

We publish, in another colum a good article on Fodder Corn, for feed. Those that have tried it in this locality have found it to be a very profitable crop.

The long continued cold weather is likly to make hay a scarse article before the grass starts, as it requires as much hay now for stock as it did in January.

The Thief River Falls papers are adviseing people to clean up their back yards for spring, but spring is somthing we have not seen yet up in this neck of the woods.

The only way the farmers living along Red Lake River can get any water for their stock is to go to the deepest holes and cut a long trench so the catlle can get down on their knees and suck up the rotten fish soup.

A Certain Shot.

The aged, wrinkled gamekeeper whistled his dog and scratched his towsled head before turning to the company.

"Yes, sir," said he; "the rummiest master I ever had were old Parson Sharpe. As blind as a bat, he were."

"And did he go shooting?" exclaimed the audience in the village workingmen's club.

"Shooting!" replied the gamekeeper, with a snort of contempt at the question. "Ay, that he did. Yes, he shot reg'lar. When he was in the woods and anything rose I'd cry, 'Birds, sir!' and then I'd run behind the parson and the dogs 'd run behind me."

"And then?" asked the audience.

"Then the old gent'd blaze away with both bar'ls."

"And did he ever hit anything?"

"Oh, yes! Sometimes it wur a cow or a horse or a pig or a dog. Now and again it wur a man. But he always hit something. He were a certain shot, he were!"—London Answers.

Spiking the Guns.

The expression "spiking guns" is a survival from the day when all that was necessary to put a gun out of action (provided, of course, that you had access to it) was a large nail or spike and a hammer. You simply drove the nail into the touch-hole at the breech. If the nail was long enough to turn round at the end on the bottom of the bore so much the better. It is just as simple, perhaps simpler, to put a modern gun out of action. All you want is a hammer. The breech block of the modern gun is held closed by screw threads. After the breech block is shut on the shell a turn of two or three inches engages the threads. By knocking a bur on these threads you prevent them engaging. Any attempt to fire the gun without the breech block being perfectly closed would, of course, be of material assistance to the enemy.

LA FOLLETTE WINS IN N.D.

At the primary election in Dorth Dakota Tuesday LaFollett carried the state by about 20,000 majority which gives him 10 delegates to National convention, for the presidential nomination. Taft only got about 3000 votes in the state, which shows that the Northwestern farmers meant what they said about Reciprocity, and were there on election day to deliver the goods.

Announcement

Having been greatly handicapped for lack of power at our elevator at Thief River Falls the last two years, we are pleased to inform our many customers that the new City Light and Power Plant is so far completed as t furnish all day power and herafter there wil be no delay in unlouding.

To celebrate this occasion we will for a limited time give all who hawl,

Wheat
Flax
Oats
Barley & ect.

SPECIAL INDUCEMENTS.

This will also apply to all who get MASCOT FLOUR from us.

Mascot is made from Selected Northern Hard Wheat. Is not mixed with soft or winter wheat like other brands manufatured at big milling centers.

Come take advantage of this offer and make money.

RED LAKE FALLS
MILLING Co.
Joseph Johnson, Agent.

FARM FOR SALE.

The N. E. ¼ Section 14 Township 152 N. Range 40, Town of Deer Park. Price $16,00 per acre.

Henry Rovoold,
Alsask, Sask. Canada.

There is no use to pay such high prices for goods! Read this:

Dried apples	12 ½ cts lb.
Good coffee	22 cts. lb.

Nice dress goods 6 to 10 cents a yard, and all other goods at a lower price than you can buy them elswhare. At George Singers, the Rhoda Merchant

A Crank.

"What does your husband like for his breakfast?"

"Anything I haven't got in the house."—New York Mail.

Romance of a Statue.

The statue of Charles I. which now stands in London was sold to a brazier during the commonwealth with the understanding that it should be broken up. The buyer, however, saw a chance to make money and buried it instead. To cover his action he made a large number of bronze knives and forks, which were eagerly bought by both royalists and Puritans as souvenirs. When the monarchy was restored to power the statue was dug up again and bought by the government to be placed in its present position, where it has remained since 1674.

He Ought to Get It.

"On what grounds do you seek a divorce from your wife?" asked the lawyer.

"Simply because of a pun," replied the long suffering husband. "You see, she's a sculptress, and it gets on my nerves to hear her remark twenty times a day, 'Will you love me when I mold?'"—New York Times.

Control of Children.

Wife (reading)—After their separation he sent her a legal document giving her control of their child. Husband (with a sigh)—I wish I knew where we could get a document that would give us control of our child.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Teazel.

Those who have never seen a teasel can imagine a fir cone or "swamp cattail" set all over with little stiff hooks. It is the bur (or tassel or flower head or thistle top) of the plant dipsacus. However familiar to people who live in lands where the teazel is extensively grown, the fact may be that the prickly heads of that plant are universally used to raise the nap on cloth. A multitude of persons in this country probably never heard of it and would be astonished to learn in what enormous quantities the plant is cultivated. In France alone many thousands of acres of land are exclusively devoted to the cultivation of the teazel. French manufacturers use enormous numbers of the prickly heads, and from France there are exported many millions of them. They are also raised in Austria, England, Belgium, Poland and the Crimea. The prickles of the teazel have a small knob at the end, and this, mounted on an elastic stem and set with great precision on the central spindle, affords a little brush such as the utmost mechanical skill has never been able to rival, at all events at the same price.—Harper's Weekly.

Tea Testers In Formosa.

In the Formosan tea trade the most important man is the cha si, or taster. He inspects and tests samples of all teas offered to his firm, and his judgment determines the price to be paid. In a room admitting light only from the north the cha si does his work. He first examines the leaf, then its infusion in hot water and lastly its odor and taste. Practically all the faculties are exercised in making this test. It requires the services of an expert, and the tea tester receives a good salary, though relatively not so large as obtaining twenty years ago. A tea tester never uses any perfume which would destroy the tea odor. He must not allow the acuteness of his taste to become dull. He never drinks domestic tea. Constant tea testing, it is said, will injure the health. In Formosa the tea testers are Americans or Englishmen.

Black and White.

For many years a large department store has spent thousands of dollars on placards with which almost every article of merchandise is ticketed throughout the store, and only within a short time did they realize the amount of money that was wasted in using the white cardboard with black lettering. These white cards soon become soiled and shop worn if allowed to remain in place any length of time. The cards which are handled by customers in bins, trays, etc., are even more so. By substituting the black cardboard with white lettering this store has overcome this difficulty to a very great extent. The show cards are always clean, fresh and bright looking and they last many times as long, saving the firm several hundred dollars in the course of a year.—Business.

Wesley's "Narrow Neck of Land."

The actual first and last house in England is a shed where a woman sells specimens of rock. Just below this, as one goes down the zigzag path between the rocks, on the neck of the peninsula is a flat stone about two feet square and rising six inches above the ground. This, tradition asserts, is that upon which John Wesley sat when he composed the hymn—

> Lo, on a narrow neck of land
> 'Twixt two unbounded seas I stand
> Secure, insensible!

It is also stated that Wesley wrote other hymns there. Apparently he had at this time (July 20, 1743) experienced a bad spell of weather at Land's End, for he writes, "I saw a strange sight—the sun shining in Cornwall."—English Illustrated Magazine.

Pulling an Elephant's Tooth.

Perhaps the greatest dental operation on record was performed upon an elephant in the City of Mexico. The aching tooth was twelve inches long and measured fourteen inches round the root. After the animal had been securely fasten with chains his mouth was pried open and a quantity of cocaine applied to deaden the pain. When this was done a hole was bored through the tooth and an iron bar inserted. Then a rope was twisted around the bar, and four horses were attached thereto to drag the offending molar out.—London Tit-Bits.

Speak to the Horse.

The human voice has more or less marked influence on all animals. In managing horses especially the voice is of the greatest use. It should be quiet and, though confident and masterful, not loud and boisterous. No one should ever touch a horse without at the same time speaking to it.—Exchange.

An Accepted Story.

"Quills has really had a story accepted at last," remarked a journalist to a colleague.

"Surely not," was the rejoinder.

"Yes. He went home at 2 o'clock this morning with an awful yarn, and his wife believed it."

Golden Thought.

An irreverent and illiterate Englishman who has just returned from the United States was heard to describe the country the other day as "a hell dollarado."—London Punch.

Unlucky.

"The more I try to sing this child to sleep the louder it yells."

"Your voice, my dear, is a Jonah—it is being swallowed by a wail."—Baltimore American.

No one is useless in this world who lightens the burden of it for another.—Charles Dickens.

"Dr. Miles' Nervine Completely Cured Our Little Boy of Fits."

A family can suffer no greater affliction than to have a child subject to fits or epilepsy. Many a father or mother would give their all to restore such a child to health.

"I am heartily glad to tell you of our little boy who was completely cured of fits. He commenced having them at 10 years of age and had them for four years. I tried three doctors and one specialist but all of them said he could not be cured, but Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills made a complete cure. He is now hale, hearty and gay. It has been three years since he had the last spell. I shall give Dr. Miles' medicines praise wherever I go. You are at liberty to use this letter as you see fit and anyone writing to me I will gladly answer if they enclose stamp for reply."

F. M. BOGUE, Windfall, Ind.

Dr. Miles' Nervine

is just what it is represented to be, a medicine compounded especially for nervous diseases, such as fits, spasms, St. Vitus' dance, convulsions and epilepsy. These diseases frequently lead to insanity or cause weak minds. Dr. Miles' Nervine has proven most effective in relieving these dreaded maladies.

Sold by all druggists. If the first bottle fails to benefit your money is returned.

MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

Foiled.

"A man tried to pick my pockets in the street yesterday, but my wife prevented him."

"Did she grapple with him or just scream?"

"Neither. She wasn't there."

"Then how could she prevent him?"

"She had been through my pockets first."

A Help to Promptness.

Anxious Voice Over the Phone—Doctor, please hurry over to our house. One of the family has suddenly been stricken with a fainting fit. Is there anything you want ready when you get here, so that there will be no time lost? Doctor—Yes—er—you may have my fee ready.—Lippincott's.

Easy Enough.

"Maw, I've come across a word that I can't pronounce."

"Spell it, dear."

"G, e, o, m, o, r, p, h, y."

"Why, that's a proper noun—Geo. Morphy. Pay more attention to what you are reading and don't bother me again."—Chicago Tribune.

Bungled It.

Old Maid—You eat very little, Mr. Smith. Smith (flattered and wishing to be complimentary)—Ah, to sit next you is to lose one's appetite.—London Watch Dog.

To be seventy years young is sometimes far more cheerful and hopeful than to be forty years old.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

F. J. CHENEY, & CO., Toledo, Ohio.

Sold by Druggists, 75c.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

LUMBER FOR SALE.

I will have about 50,000 ft. of lumber for sale this winter at $15 00 per thousand. Will take cattle in exchange.

Andrew Nilson.

DRESS MAKING.

For plain and Fancy sewing apply to Mrs. Sam McMahon graduate of the America College of dress making.

Kuehnel, Minn.

FOR SALE; A Sharples cream seperator, in good condition. It has only been used one year.

A. Rolandson,
Roland Minn.

W.G.Hunt.

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate Court Work.

NEW BANK.

FIRST STATE BANK,

OF OKLEE Lambert Post Office Minn.

NEW STATION ON DULUTH SOO LINE.

Your Business Solicited.

Directors: A. P. Toupin, Pres. Samul Giteau Vic, Pre.
Larry O'Niel, Abrhom Parquize, T. L. Cruzen.
J. A. Duffy. Cashier. T. L. Cruzon, Assist. Cashier.

Let Us Tell You Something!

This Season we are offering the best line of Dry Goods that ever came into this Section of the Country.

Don't Buy Elswhare, Until You Have Seen What We Have To Offer.

No Matter What Price you pay, WE Will please YOU.

VAUGHAN BROS. & CO.

Highlanding Minn.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's $50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day

Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were piloting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory? We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.

Our New Home. Capacity 20,000 Safes Annually.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars, it will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Ask for Catalogue 16 T.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.

CINCINNATI, OHIO

PATENTS

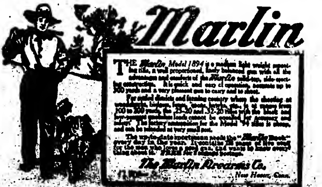
Prize Offers from Leading Manufacturers

Book on patents. "Hints to Inventors." "Inventions needed." "Why some inventors fail." Send rough sketch or model for search of Patent Office records. Our Mr. Greeley was formerly Acting Commissioner of Patents, and as such had full charge of the U. S. Patent Office.

GREELEY & McINTIRE

PATENT ATTORNEYS

WASHINGTON, D. C.



Marlin
The Marlin Firearms Co.
New Haven, Conn.

When The Sign Failed

* * *

By NELLIE T. ANDERSON

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

Miss Bah Ellerton sat down and wept.

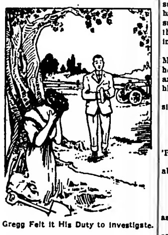
A healthy, good-looking girl of eighteen does not weep just for the fun of pulling her own nose as her tears fall. Miss Bah had cause—great cause. Her cat was dead.

There is no particular way to describe a dead cat except to say that she was loyal and faithful, a good mouser and her name was "Pink." She had been a cat for several years and had got used to it, and she knew that she was beloved by Miss Bah. That love was returned. Never had that cat given the girl an hour's uneasiness. She had occasionally taken an hour off to stroll among the hollyhocks or interview 'tater-bugs, but she had never failed to come running when her name was called in loving tones.

"Pink" was missed and called right after breakfast. The calling was in vain. She was hunted for under beds, in the garden, all around the pergola, under the currant bushes, and at length there was a find. Alas, it was only her dead body! She had climbed an apple tree after a sparrow, and in descending had slipped and caught her neck in a crotch and strangled to death.

There was no one else but the cook at home. She heard the girl's wild wails and ran out, but there was nothing to be done. While every cat has nine lives, if eight of them are choked out of her the ninth gives up in despair and after a kick or two follows the others.

It was when the cook reached up and lifted poor dead "Pink" down that the weeping took place. The cook also wept. She was a good cook, and her pumpkin pies had no rivals. As she had left her bread in the oven, however, she could not stay to weep o'er long. She therefore dashed away her tears to say:



Gregg Felt It His Duty to Investigate.

"Never mind, dearie—you shall have another."

"But she won't be 'Pink' to me!" was the wailing reply.

"You can call her 'Rose' or 'Violet,' then. You mustn't take on so. S'pose your dear mother had climbed that tree and got hung by the neck! Think how awfuller it would have been!"

"Yes, I know, but 'Pink' may have called to me when she found herself strangling."

"But she never did. Her first thought was that she had made a fool of herself getting up that tree. It's another cat we'll have inside of three days. Now be good and don't cry any more."

"I wouldn't feel so bad if—if—"

"If what, dearie?"

"If it wasn't for the sign."

"What sign?"

"Why, one day when I was at the gate with the cat an old woman came along and said if 'Pink' died within a year I must take it as a sign that I'd lose the love of my lover. The year isn't up yet."

"Nonsense on the old woman and her signs."

"Don't you believe it?"

"Of course not. You should have made up faces at her."

"Oh, but I did!"

"That's proper and right, honey. As you have no lover how can you lose his love?"

"But I'm going to have, you know, and I don't want any signs to come poking along."

"Don't you fear. Some signs are sure to come true, but this one is going to fail. If you bury 'Pink' that will surely make it fail. There's an old suit case in the woodshed. Put the body in that and take it away."

Forty rods down the highway was a grove of beeches. It was a quiet, restful spot. Now and then an auto went honking by, but as a dead cat is not too particular, "Pink" would sleep there without waking. With the spade in one hand and the suit case in the other, Miss Bah made her way to the grove. She did not have to look long for a spot. Where the violets bloomed and the green leaves cast their shade she dug the grave, or she had begun to when there came an interruption.

Gregg Fenlon was home from college on his vacation, and was tearing around the country in his racing machine in a way to set the bridges on fire. As the spade was turning up the soil he came scorching along looking for something to devour, and there was a sudden stop as he caught sight of the girl. She was only fifty feet from the road, and he could almost see the tears in her eyes! At least, he could see that her mouth was puckered up in a way that betokened grief, and he felt it his duty to investigate.

"I—I was just burying a cat," explained Miss Bah as the collegian approached and lifted his cap.

"Dead, eh?"

"Yes, got hung."

"Particular cat? That is, an extra lovable cat?"

"Just the nicest cat in all this world! Her name was 'Pink.' She was my pet."

"And you have been crying?" he asked as he took the spade from her hands and began to dig.

"Just—just a little. Her name was 'Pink,' you know, and her death was so very sudden."

"I lost a dog once."

"And you buried him?"

"Sure. Yes, he has a grave."

"And you felt bad?"

"Took me a month to get over it."

"I'm glad of that. It shows you have a heart. When I first saw you I thought you looked reckless. I guess the hole is deep enough now for poor 'Pink's' body. I thank you ever so much."

"Oh, but I'm not through yet. Body in the suitcase, eh? I see. Well, we'll drop it in gently—so. Now I'll pull down a lot of twigs and leaves to cover it in. Now for the dirt and our mournful task is done."

"But you don't think me silly?" she anxiously asked.

"Not a bit of it. Lord, miss, but if the collie dog I've got now should die I'd sure put up a headstone for him and sing a hymn over his grave. I suppose you live in the white house back there? I'll carry the spade and suitcase. Don't weep any more over the cat. You've done all you could in the case."

There was almost a smile on Miss Bah's face as she entered the house. The cook had been peeking, and she stood with her hands on her hips and demanded:

"And now about that old woman's sign?"

"Why—what?"

"That young man!"

"He just came along."

"And he dug the grave for poor 'Pink?'"

"And he was so kind and gentle about it."

"Yes, so kind and gentle!"

"And he lost a dog once."

"Yes, lost a dog once!"

"Why cook what have I done?" asked Miss Bah.

"Done! Done! Why, you've gone and knocked the old woman's cat-sign into a Continental cocked hat, just as I told you you would, and it won't be a year before your engagement will be announced."

"W-h-y, cook!"

"Lost a cat and gained a lover!"

"I—I—I—"

"Just as I said—just as I said. If you are chasing a rooster and fall over the fence that's a sign you won't have a bean for five years to come, but if you find your pet cat hanging dead in an apple tree all the doughnuts ever made can't keep you from marrying the nicest man in the state within two years, and the two years are to be spent in the sweetest courting ever written of in a ten-cent novel!"

Miss Bah is courting, and it was only the other day that she confessed to the cook:

"I'm not a hard-hearted girl, but really I'm almost glad the cat died!"

Satire's Definitions.

Call: Generally a larger salary offered by another church.

Public: A term used to designate pawns in the game who think themselves kings.

Producer: The man who takes most of the good things out of a dramatist's manuscript, claiming the glory in the event of success, and, in the event of failure, putting the blame on the author. . . . The members of the family who earns money for the others to spend.

Muckraker: A literary scavenger (it may be noted that scavengers are absolutely necessary to the public's welfare.)

Race Suicide: Failing to bring into the world children you would be unable to support or are unfit to have.—Exchange.

A Poor Hair Cut.

"Who was it who was sorely afflicted?" asked the Sunday school teacher.

"Samson," replied the boy promptly.

"Why, no; it was Job."

"Well, I know Job was, but so was Samson."

"Why, how was Samson afflicted, Tommie?"

"His wife cut his hair."

Has His Doubts.

"Is it really a pleasure for you to have me call?" inquired the young man.

"Why, yes," answered the girl in some confusion. "Why do you ask such a question?"

"Oh, nothing; only you seem to take your pleasures sadly."

FARM AND ROAD IMPROVEMENT

BIG STONE BOAT AND WAGON

Excellent and Convenient Arrangement of Montana Man for Clearing His Farm Land.

There are a good many stones on my farm, and it is often necessary in clearing the land to haul these stones a considerable distance, writes Geo. Parks of Montana in the Farm and Home. I have a large stone boat that is good for hauling stones a short distance, but it is rather clumsy and hard to get around when I take it from the buildings to the other side of the farm.

Roller on the Rear Bolster.

In order to save the dragging of this boat long distances I arranged my low-wheeled wagon so that I could put the stone boat on in place of the wagon box. This makes it convenient to transport the boat from one part of the farm to the other, and it also makes a good wagon for hauling stones long distances.

I am often required to load this boat alone, so I arranged a roller on the back bolster, so that when I lift the front end of the boat onto this it is easily pushed toward the front. This roller was made by setting a piece of gas pipe into two small pieces of 2x6. These pieces are represented in the drawing by a a. The roller is set into these pieces in such a way that part of it projects up over the pieces a a. By keeping the sockets of this roller greased it works easily.

The boat may be kept in place after it is loaded by two small cleats shown at b in the drawing. Sideboards, c, may be easily made for the stone boat, and this makes it possible to haul other material besides stone.

Stone Boat as Wagon Bed.

TONGS TO HOLD PLOWSHARE

Tools Required When Sharpening That Will Stick and at Same Time Be Light and Short.

When holding a plowshare for sharpening, some kind of tongs that will stick and at the same time be light and short so that one will have the weight of the share close to the hand are necessary. To get a good grip with ordinary tongs they must have long handles and then the smith must take hold out near the end. This places the weight of the share so far from the hand that it is difficult to manage, and then the share will slip and turn where it is not wanted, says a writer in the Blacksmith and Wheelwright.

Three-Point Contact on Jaws.

Benefits of Good Roads.

There is one side to the good road question which is a good thing and one which few farmers seem to think of and that is the market side. Why does the price of farm butter and eggs climb skyward in the towns every spring? Because of the short supply. These things pile up in the homes of farmers because they cannot get them to town. Good roads would make an even market all the year around and would add very largely to farm profits.

Two Plowings a Benefit.

Plow the garden as early as possible, then replow at planting time. The extra stirring destroys injurious weeds, eggs and insects, and renders the soil more pliable and productive.

Seeds of tomatoes and celery, cabbage and eggplant should be started in the house or in cold-frames. Onion, reddish, lettuce and the hardier seeds may be sown early in the open.

Improved Roads.

It is estimated that something in the neighborhood of $400,000,000 a year could be saved throughout the country by improving 20 per cent. of the roads in this country.

The fine country roads to be found in most parts of Europe are the delight of American tourists.

Good Roads.

There are 2,000,000 miles of unimproved roads in this country, and it costs an average of about two cents per bushel more to haul wheat nine miles to a station than it does to ship the same bushel from New York to Liverpool, 3,200 miles away.

JEW SCORED ON ARISTOCRAT

Ill-Bred Remark Brought Discomfiture on Duke of Westminster and His Companion.

A friend of mine who is in Cairo just now told me a good story in a recent letter of an old Jew of that city who scored off the young duke of Westminster and his inseparable companion, Lord Ricksavage, when they were there a few weeks ago. They were buying some jewelry in the bazar there, and the duke remarked audibly to his friend:

"The fool doesn't speak English, of course." But the fool understood well enough.

"Do you spik Italian?" he asked them, to which they replied in the negative.

"Do you spik Grik?"

"No."

"Do you spik Turk?"

"No."

"Do you Spik Russian?"

"No."

"Me one time fool," said the old man after a short but eloquent pause; "you five times fool!" And the duke and his friend retired discomfited.—Exchange.

When Your Eyes Need Care

Try Murine Eye Remedy. No Smarting—Feels Fine—Acts Quickly. Try it for Red, Weak, Watery Eyes and Granulated Eyelids. Illustrated Book in each Package. Murine is compounded by our Oculists—not a "Patent Medicine"—but used in successful Physicians' Practice for many years. Now dedicated to the Public and sold by Druggists at 25c and 50c per Bottle. Murine Eye Salve in Aseptic Tubes, 25c and 50c.

Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago

As It Sounded to Him.

Young Fred was on his way to his grandmother's home. The train reached a small station.

"Bunker Hill!" shouted the brakeman, putting his head in at the door. "Bunker Hill!"

"Mamma, mamma!" demanded Fred. "What has she done that they treat her that way?"

"What way, my child?" inquired his mother.

"Why," explained Fred, "didn't the conductor say 'Bump her heels?'"

A Quarter Century

Before the public. Over Five Million Free Samples given away each year. The constant and increasing sales from samples proves the genuine merit of Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder to be shaken into the shoes for Tired, Aching, Swollen Tender feet. Sample free. Address, Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

Its Nature.

"Does anybody ever win at a ten fight?"

"Of course not. It is a drawn battle."

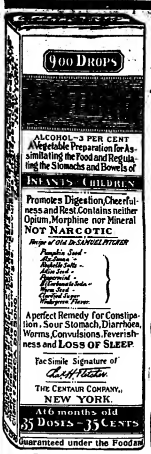
ONLY ONE "BROMO QUININE."

That is LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE. Look for the signature of E. W. GROVE. Used the World over to Cure a Cold in One Day. 25c.

The man who makes hay when the sun shines doesn't have to borrow his neighbor's umbrella when it rains.

Every one is liable to a bilious attack. Be forearmed with a package of Garfield Tea.

If you intend to do a mean thing, wait till tomorrow; but if you are going to a noble thing, do it now.



900 DROPS
ALCOHOL—3 PER CENT
A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of INFANTS CHILDREN
Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral
NOT NARCOTIC
Recipe of Old Dr SAMUEL PITCHER
Pumpkin Seed
Alx. Senna
Rochelle Salts
Anise Seed
Peppermint
Bi Carbonate Soda
Worm Seed
Clarified Sugar
Wintergreen Flavor
A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.
Fac Simile Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK.
At 6 months old
35 DOSES—35 CENTS
Guaranteed under the Food and

Exact Copy of Wrapper

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of

Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES

$2.25 $2.50 $3.00 $3.50 $400 & $5.00

For MEN, WOMEN and BOYS

THE STANDARD OF QUALITY FOR OVER 30 YEARS

THE NEXT TIME YOU NEED SHOES give W.L. Douglas shoes a trial. W. L. Douglas name stamped on a shoe guarantees superior quality and more value for the money than other makes. His name and price stamped on the bottom protects the wearer against high prices and inferior shoes. Insist upon having the genuine W.L. Douglas shoes. Take no substitute. If your dealer cannot supply W.L. Douglas shoes, write W.L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass., for catalog. Shoes sent everywhere delivery charges prepaid. Fast Color Eyelets used.

25 ASSORTED High Grade Souvenir Post Cards, post paid 10c. Address THE S. & D. CO., DEPT. 63; BRUNSWICK, ME.

PATENTS START FACTORIES. Send for free book how to get Patents. Patent secured or fee returned. Suos & Company, Attorneys, Washington, D. C.

Sow Salzer's, La Crosse, Wis. Seeds

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 12-1912.

Sick Women

When shown positive and reliable proof that a certain remedy had cured many cases of female ills, wouldn't any sensible woman conclude that the same remedy would also benefit her if suffering with the same trouble?

Here are five letters from southern women which prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

LETTER FROM VIRGINIA.

Elliston, Va.—"I feel it my duty to express my thanks to you and your great medicine. I was a sufferer from female troubles and had been confined in bed over one third of my time for ten months. I could not do my housework and had fainting spells so that my husband could not leave me alone for five minutes at a time.

"Now I owe my health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier. Whenever I see a suffering woman I want to tell her what these medicines have done for me and I will always speak a good word for them."—Mrs. ROBERT BLANKENSHIP, Elliston, Montgomery Co., Va.

LETTER FROM LOUISIANA

New Orleans, La.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was troubled with hot flashes, weak and dizzy feelings, backache and irregularities. I would get up in the morning feeling tired out and not fit to do anything.

"Since I have been taking your Compound and Blood Purifier I feel all right. Your medicines are worth their weight in gold."—Mrs. GASTON BLONDEAU, 1541 Polymnia St., New Orleans, La.

LETTER FROM FLORIDA.

Wauchula, Fla.—"Some time ago I wrote to you giving you my symptoms, headache, backache, bearing-down, and discomfort in walking, caused by female troubles.

"I got two bottles of Lydia E Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and a package of Sanative Wash and that was all I used to make me a well woman.

"I am satisfied that if I had done like a good many women, and had not taken your remedies, I would have been a great sufferer. But I started in time with the right medicine and got well. It did not cost very much either. I feel that you are a friend to all women and I would rather use your remedies than have a doctor."—Mrs. MATTIE HODNOT, Box 406, Wauchula, Florida.

LETTER FROM WEST VIRGINIA.

Martinsburg, W. Va.—"I am glad to say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done wonders for my mother, daughter and myself.

"I have told dozens of people about it and my daughter says that when she hears a girl complaining with cramps, she tells her to take your Compound."—Mrs. MARY A. HOCKENBERRY, 712 N. 3rd St., Martinsburg, W. Va.

ANOTHER LETTER FROM VIRGINIA.

Newport News, Va.—"About five years ago I was troubled with such pains and bloating every month that I would have to go to bed.

"A friend told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I soon found relief. The medicine strengthened me in every way and my doctor approved of my taking it.

"I will be glad if my testimony will help some one who is suffering from female weakness."—Mrs. W. J. BLAYTON, 1039 Hampton Ave., Newport News, Va.

Why don't you try this reliable remedy?

Splendid Crops

In Saskatchewan (Western Canada)

800 Bushels from 20 acres of wheat was the thresher's return from a Lloydminster farm in the season of 1910. Many fields in that as well as other districts yielded from 25 to 35 bushels of wheat to the acre. Other grains in proportion.

LARGE PROFITS are thus derived from the FREE HOMESTEAD LANDS of Western Canada.

This excellent showing causes prices to advance. Land values should double in two years' time. Grain growing, mixed farming, cattle raising and dairying are all profitable. Free Homesteads of 160 acres are to be had in the very best districts; 160 acre pre-emptions at $3.00 per acre within certain areas. Schools and churches in every settlement, climate unexcelled, soil the richest; wood, water and building material plentiful. 39

For particulars as to location, low settlers' railway rates and descriptive illustrated pamphlet, "Last Best West," and other information, write to Sup't of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or to Canadian Government Agent.

Chas. Pilling, Clifford Blk, Grand Forks, N.D.
J. M. MacLachlan, Box 197, Watertown, S.D.
E. T. Holmes, 315 Jackson St., St. Paul, Minn.
Geo. A. Hall, 125 2d St., Milwaukee, Wis.

REAL ESTATE

OPPORTUNITY IN OREGON is right now knocking at your door and if you are interested in land, we handle wheat, fruit, hop and stock ranches or diversified farms for owners not speculators. Prices range from $20.00 to $150.00 per acre according to size of tract, location and improvements. If interested write or call for information stating experience and amount of capital you wish to invest and we will do the rest: 25 years experience in Oregon and can furnish first class references on application. Johnston, Bothfur & Company, Suite 9?8 Chamber of Commerce Bldg., Portland, Oregon

READ THIS TODAY WILL NOT APPEAR AGAIN

A dollar invested in real estate in the great New West, earns more quicker than any other investment. Fifty and hundred dollar investments have jumped to thousand and two thousand realities time and time again in this great new country. A new townsite now opening, commencing with sale of lots very low prices. Live Agents, exclusive territory. Write now, particulars on request. Red River Valley Townsite & Development Co., Box 217, Shamrock, Tex.

WESTERN CANADA FARM LANDS for $13-$18 per acre in the finest mixed farming district in Canadian West. Close to Prince Albert, Sask., splendid market point. Free Government homesteads also within 25 miles of City, crops excellent, settlement coming in fast. For free literature and maps, write Julius S. Woodward, Sec. Board of Trade, Dept. L, Prince Albert, Sask.

WILL TRADE FOR TOWN PROPERTY OR sell—70 a. in Clark Co., Wis., 20 a. cult.; 6 r.h., barn, outbldgs.; 40 fruit trees, stock, machy., etc.; or. Neillsville. DEUTSCH, Box 319, Chicago.

FOR SALE—160 A. IN MOWER CO., MINN.; 120 a. cult.; 7 r. h., good barn, outbldgs., orchard, stock, machinery, etc.; may consider hardware stock in trade. RAHILLY, Box 319, Chicago.

FOR SALE—320 A. NEAR FORGET, SASK., Can.; 290 a. cult.; 5 r. h., barn, granaries, etc. Bound to sell. Bargain. IRVIN, Box 319, Chicago.

FOR SALE—320 A. IN SASK., CAN.; 250 A. cult.; 4 r. house, barn, 4 granaries, etc.; all conveniences. Will sac. WOOD, Box 319, Chicago.

FOR SALE—80 A. IN LANGLADE CO., WIS.; 20 a. cult.; 4 r. house, new barn, 8 apple trees, stock, machy., etc. PARKS, Box 319, Chicago.

FOR SALE—80 A. IN SIBLEY CO., MINN.; 58 a. cult.; 8 r. house, barn, orchard, stock, machy., etc.; or. Winthrop. SWANSON, Box 319, Chicago.

100 A. IN BECKHAM CO., OK.; 65 A. CULT.; plenty water, house, etc.; excellent stock farm, or. Erick. Will sac. PHILIPO, Box 319, Chicago.

80 A. IN LANGLADE CO., WIS.; 40 A. CULT.; all tillable; 5 r. house, stock, machy.; personal property; or. Deerbrook. Wagner, Box 319, Chicago.

FOR SALE—160 A. IN DAKOTA CO., MINN.; 140a. cult., 9r. h., new barn, orchard, stock, mach., 15 mi. Twin cities. DIFFLEY, Box 319, Chicago.

40 A. IN HILLSBORO CO., FLA.; 12 A CULT.; 6 r. house, 100 orange, 200 bananas, vines, stock, machinery, etc. DELPHIA, Box 319, Chicago.

FOR SALE—160 A. IN BILLINGS CO., N. D.; 135 a. cult.; house, barn, stock, machy.; bound to sell; bargain. SCHROM, Box 319, Chicago.

160 A. IN LOGAN CO., N. D.; 50 A. CULT.; house, machinery, etc.; near Burnstad; will sacrifice. FRISK, Box 319, Chicago.

MURDER AT BEMIDJI

PAUL FOURNIER FATALLY SHOT BY GEORGE CYR AT QUIRING, MINNESOTA.

ECHO OF DAHL MURDER.

Dead Man Attacked Latter and Wife With Dirk—Deceased Tried Three Times for Dual Homicide.

Bemidji, Minn.—Paul Fournier, noted as having been convicted of the charge of killing N. O. Dahl, near Quiring, in this county, in the spring of 1907, who began serving a life sentence for the crime and was afterwards found not guilty by a jury at a new trial, was shot and instantly killed at Quiring, by his cousin, George Cyr, who voluntarily surrendered to John Morrison, Jr., deputy sheriff at Red Lake agency.

Cyr was brought to Bemidji and his case will be at once taken before the grand jury now in session and should an indictment be returned, the trial will probably be held at this term of court. When he was found not guilty of the crime of killing Aagot Dahl, daughter of N. O. Dahl, and was released from custody, Fournier returned to the scene of the Dahl murders and has been residing with Cyr and his wife. Cyr claims that Fournier became enraged and rushed at Cyr's wife, flourishing a dirk and saying that he had killed two in the woods at Quiring and would kill two more.

Cyr grabbed a gun that was hanging on the wall and shot Fournier, killing him instantly. Cyr then walked to Redby, several miles distant, and gave himself up to the authorities.

The killing of N. O. Dahl, over two years ago, and his daughter, Aagot, were the most brutal and cold blooded crimes in the history of Beltrami county, and when Fournier and "Shorty" Wesley (now serving a life term in the Stillwater penitentiary) were tried for the crimes, sentiment ran high against both men. When their cases were given to the jury, a verdict of guilty was speedily reached in each case. Fournier and Wesley were sentenced to life imprisonment. Fournier was given a new trial on the grounds of admission of improper evidence, and alleged misconduct of the county attorney. Juries at Brainerd and Aitken returned verdicts of not guilty against Fournier.

No effort was ever made to get a new trial for Wesley, although the pardon board now has an application for paroling him. Cyr, who killed Fournier, was at once arrested in company with Fournier on the joint charge of having killed the Dahls but was subsequently released, there being lack of evidence connecting him directly with the murders.

Much interest is being taken in the tragedy, as it is believed that the killing of Fournier will result in clearing up some of the mysterious angles of the Dahl cases which have never been solved. No one has ever been found who could be directly connected with the actual slaying of the old man and his daughter.

SEEK AIR AND GET SPEAR

Fish Easily Taken in Many Lakes Owing to Weather Conditions.

St. Cloud.—Luther Blood, a farmer at Lake Julia, in less than two hours speared twenty-five pickerel, ranging in weight from five to nineteen and one-half pounds.

There is a spring creek running into the lake, and the fish swarm up this in so great numbers that they literally pack the small stream. It was an easy trick to pick out the big fish with a spear. Mr. Blood examined the edge of the lake and saw many dead fish under the ice. He said there must have been at least a ton of the dead ones in a space no larger than a city block. The cause of death is want of air. The long cold weather had formed ice of unusual thickness sealing up all the air holes.

DULUTH GETS A DAY

Wednesday Assigned by the State Fair Board.

The premium list of the state fair was increased by nearly $2,000 today by the board of managers who revised the entire list. The total premiums this year will be $83,600 against $81,710 last year. This amount includes the racing premiums which were increased $1,000, and will be $26,000. Duluth for the first time in the history of the fair will have a day. The days named as follows: Monday, Labor day; Tuesday, St. Paul day; Wednesday, Duluth day; Thursday, Old Soldiers' and Pioneers' day; Friday, Minneapolis day; Saturday, Automobile day.

Fail in Arithmetic.

St. Paul.—Arithmetic and composition are stumbling blocks in the paths of school teachers in Minnesota. According to figures compiled by G. M. Cesander, second state assistant of public instruction, out of 2,478 examination papers in arithmetic, 1,312 fell below passing grade. In composition, 1,151 failed. In agriculture, out of 663 papers submitted, 565 passed. A total of 4,849 persons were examined, and 22,280 papers submitted. There were 142 first grade certificates issued, 439 second grade, and 311 limited.

Drys Make Gains In Village Elections

If the returns from the village elections held throughout the state of Minnesota are any criterion, there are to be many thirsty souls in the state during the coming year. Ninety towns voted wet and ninety-one dry. Alexandria, with a record of sixteen years of continuous wetness behind it, voted to transform itself into an arid Sahara for the first time, and Spring Valley voted to cease selling liquor after an experience of nine continuous years of it. Excelsior in Hennepin county went "wet" after being "dry" five years.

Results in Minnesota towns follow:

Name of Town	This Year.	Last Year.
Adams	Wet	....
Adrian	Wet	....
Aitkin	Dry	....
Alden	Dry	Dry
Alexandria	Dry	Wet
Annandale	Wet	Wet
Ashby	Dry	Wet
Argyle	Wet	Wet
Afton	Wet	Wet
Bagley	Wet	Dry
Backus	Wet	....
Braham	Dry	Dry
Branden	Dry	Dry
Badger	Dry	Wet
Bronson	Wet	Wet
Browns Valley	Wet	....
Barrett	Dry	....
Bingham Lake	Dry	....
Boyd	Dry	....
Belgrade	Dry	....
Brownsville	Wet	....
Balaton	Dry	Dry
Bigelow	Wet	....
Beaver Creek	Wet	....
Buffalo	Wet	....
Blooming Prairie	Wet	....
Cambridge	Dry	Dry
Chatfield	Wet	....
Climax	Dry	Dry
Ceylon	Wet	Wet
Cottonwood	Dry	Wet
Columbia Heights	Dry	....
Campbell	Dry	....
Claremont	Dry	....
Cokato	Dry	....
Cyrus	Wet	....
Dassel	Wet	....
Delhi	Dry	Dry
Dennison	Dry	Dry
Dent	Wet	....
Dexter	Wet	....
Dilworth	Dry	....
Deerwood	Wet	Wet
Dodge Center	Wet	....
Dunnell	Dry	Dry
Evansville	Dry	Dry
Elizabeth	Dry	Dry
Elk River	Wet	Wet
Elbow Lake	Dry	....
Eagle Lake	Dry	....
Excelsior	Wet	....
Eyota	Wet	....
Echo	Dry	....
Elkton	Wet	....
Foxhome	Wet	Wet
Farwell	Dry	....
Fairmont	Dry	....
Farmington	Wet	....
Fisher	Wet	Wet
Forada	Dry	....
Foston	Dry	Wet
Fountain	Wet	....
Felton	Dry	Dry
Garfield	Wet	Wet
Glenville	Dry	....
Grove City	Dry	....
Glenwood	Wet	....
Greenbush	Dry	Wet
Goodhue	Wet	Wet
Grand Marais	Wet	Wet
Ghent	Wet	Wet
Halloway	Wet	....
Hanska	Dry	....
Hayfield	Dry	....
Hoffman	Dry	....
Henning	Dry	Wet
Hallock	Dry	Dry
Herman	Wet	....
Heron Lake	Dry	....
Houston	Dry	....
Howard Lake	Wet	....
Halstad	Dry	Dry
Hadley	Dry	....
Isanti	Wet	....
Jackson	Wet	....
Jasper	Dry	Dry
Jeffers	Wet	Wet
Karlstad	Dry	Wet
Kenyon	Dry	Dry
Kensington	Dry	....
Knife River	Dry	....
Kimball	Wet	....
Lindstrom	Dry	....
Le Roy	Dry	Dry
Lake Benton	Wet	....
Lake Wilson	Dry	....
Lakeville	Wet	....
Lamberton	Wet	....
Laporte	Wet	....
Lyle	Dry	....
Lanesboro	Dry	....
Long Lake	Dry	....
Longley	Dry	Wet
Long Prairie	Wet	....
Louisburg	Wet	....
Lowrey	Wet	....
McGregor	Wet	....
Mapleton	Wet	....
Menahga	Wet	....
Morton	Wet	Wet
Mountain Lake	Dry	Wet
Middle River	Wet	Dry
Madelia	Dry	....
Mentor	Dry	Dry
McIntosh	Dry	Dry
Motley	Dry	....
Milaca	Dry	....
Milroy	Wet	Wet
Minneota	Wet	Wet
Nerstrand	Wet	Dry
Mora	Dry	....
New Richland	Dry	....
New York Mills	Wet	....
North Branch	Dry	....
North St. Paul	Wet	Wet
Osakis	Wet	....
Oronoco	Wet	....
Oslo	Wet	....
Owatonna	Wet	....
Park Rapids	Wet	....
Pelican Rapids	Dry	Dry
Pemberton	Dry	....
Pine City	Wet	....
Pine River	Dry	....
Paynesville	Wet	....
Plainview	Wet	Wet
Renville	Wet	....
Richville	Wet	....
Robbinsdale	Wet	....
Rosecreek	Wet	....
Russell	Wet	....
Rush City	Wet	....
Roseau	Dry	Dry
Roscoe	Wet	....
Roosevelt	Dry	Wet
Randall	Dry	....
Russell	Dry	Wet
Starbuck	Dry	Dry
Stewartville	Wet	....
Stephens	Dry	Dry
Sanborn	Wet	Wet
Sacred Heart	Dry	Dry
Sargeant	Wet	....
Sebeka	Wet	....
Sedan	Wet	....
St. Louis Park	Wet	....
St. Paul Park	Dry	Dry
Spring Valley	Dry	Wet
Slayton	Wet	....
Storden	Dry	....
Sherburn	Wet	Wet
Taylor's Falls	Wet	....
Twin Valley	Dry	Dry
Truman	Dry	Wet
Tyler	Wet	....
Tintah	Wet	....
Taopi	Dry	....
Taunton	Wet	Wet
Villard	Wet	....
Vining	Wet	Dry
Vernon Center	Dry	....
West Concord	Dry	....
Wheaton	Dry	....
Woodstock	Dry	....
Wendell	Dry	....
Windom	Dry	Dry
Walnut Grove	Dry	Dry
Westbrook	Dry	Wet
Walt Park	Dry	....
Waltham	Wet	....
Warroad	Wet	Wet
Zumbrota	Wet	Wet

4 DISTRICTS COMBINE

Red River Valley Provides Fortieth Consolidated School.

Crookston.—The first school consolidation ever effected in Polk county was carried by a vote of 59 to 73 at Eldred when the voters in school districts 41 and 150 in Roome, 68 in Andover and 254 in Vineland held an election. The only opposition came from some residents who would have over five miles to send their children, and from some who thought it was a movement for the benefit of Eldred.

The combined enrollment is over 100 and it is proposed to erect a four-room modern school building, in which agriculture and domestic science will receive attention. The next step will be to hold an election to vote on a bond issue. The progressive farmers are in favor of the idea because of the additional educational facilities that will be afforded. This is the fortieth consolidated school in Minnesota since the enactment of the Holmberg act of 1911.

REPEAT SHORT COURSE

Farmers Near Northfield Meet Business Men and Talk Co-operation.

Northfield. — About seventy-five farmers and the same number of rural teachers attended the short course. The course has proved such a marked success that it undoubtedly will be repeated next year. A feature of the week was the corn course for farmers. The course was conducted by Professors Lamson and Neill of the State Agricultural college. One farmer who attended said he had learned more in two hours at the course than he had learned in many years' experience as a corn grower. Another important event was the dinner served for the farmers and business men at which the necessity of co-operation each with the other was emphasized.

Cowboys at Minneapolis.

Minneapolis. — Indians, Mexicans, cowboys, troopers, scouts and ponies galore, together with a strong company, is promised at the Bijou, Minneapolis, for the week of March 24, in the four-act sensational drama, "The Cowboy and the Squaw."

New Settlers At Crookston.

Crookston.—The first arrival of the newcomers in numbers for this section this spring, consisted of eighteen cars of Bohemians, who came to Ulen this week to locate on farms near that place. There have been many scattering arrivals for different sections of the Red river valley, but the main movement of immigrants has just started. During the last half of March and the first two weeks in April the greater proportion will arrive, the land men advising against coming too early.

CAMPAIGN FOR PARKS

Owatonna Will Vote on a Bond Issue for Improvements.

Owatonna.—According to plans of the park commission, Owatonna will have one of the finest park systems in Minnesota. A bond issue is to be voted upon Tuesday, and there is little doubt but it will carry. In Mineral Springs park Owatonna has a health resort, and it is to be improved and beautified. A driveway is to be constructed from Dartt's park to the springs and the former property is to be purchased by the city and converted into one of the most beautiful parks in the state. Central park and other smaller parks will be improved also.

New business concerns for Owatonna announced within a week include an ice cream factory, large dairy and cream plant, shoe store, acetylene lighting factory, implement and dairy products factory and a large implement house.

7 LICENSES REVOKED

Brainerd Council Cuts Out Saloons and Reorganizes Police Force.

Brainerd.—The council in an all-day session revoked the licenses of seven saloonkeepers. Policeman J. P. Barney, who was twice assaulted while on duty in the saloon district, was sworn but could not raise his right hand, as his collarbone had been broken. A large attendance at the council showed the interest the people take in the liquor problem. The vote of the council was practically unanimous on the revocation of the licenses presented.

DEDICATE NEW CHURCH

Archbishop Ireland Conducts Services At St. Peter on Sunday.

St. Peter.—The Catholic church, erected in this city last season at a cost of $40,000, was formally dedicated Sunday by Archbishop Ireland, who delivered a sermon at high mass in the forenoon and also spoke in the evening. Other church dignitaries were also present.

OIL BARRELS TAPPED

Minneapolis Agent of Consumers Company Robbed At Clitherall.

Fergus Falls.—A Minneapolis agent of the Consumer' Oil company, arrived in Clitherall with ten barrels of kerosene oil and had the consignment unloaded on the station platform. During the night, someone bored holes in each of the barrels and 500 gallons of oil poured out. The village has offered a reward of $50 for the arrest of the guilty person.

COLDS AND CHILLS BRING KIDNEY ILLS

Colds, chills and grip strain the kidneys and start backache, urinary disorders and uric acid troubles. Doan's Kidney Pills are very useful in the raw spring months. They stop backache and urinary disorders, keep the kidneys well and prevent colds from settling on the kidneys. Mrs. E. A. Bennett, Johnson Ave., Los Gatos, Cal., says: "If I took cold or overworked, I had such severe pains through my back, I could hardly move. My limbs ached until I scarcely knew what I was about, and headaches and dizziness distressed me. I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and was entirely relieved. It is over two years since I have had any kidney trouble to speak of."

"When Your Back Is Lame, Remember the Name—DOAN'S," 50c., all stores. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Guess What.

Tom—Yes, Miss Roxley and I are strangers now. I've been asked not to call there again.

Jack—I'll bet old Roxley had a hand in that.

Tom—Well-er not a hand exactly.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets first put up 40 years ago. They regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated tiny granules.

Nothing Hard About That.

"The woman I marry," he said, "must be able to blush." "Oh," she replied, "I can do that. I blush every time I am seen anywhere with you."—San Francisco Chronicle.

As a corrective for indigestion and a regulator of the system, no remedy can excel in purity and efficiency Garfield Tea.

Parlez-Vous Francais?

He—Does she speak French at all?

She—Well, yes; but only enough to make herself unintelligible.—Judge.

"Pink Eye" is Epidemic in the Spring. Try Murine Eye Remedy for Reliable Relief.

It often happens that when a man knows his duty he tries to stave it off by seeking advice.

Pleasant, Refreshing, Beneficial, Gentle and Effective,

NOTE THE NAME

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO. in the Circle, on every Package of the Genuine.

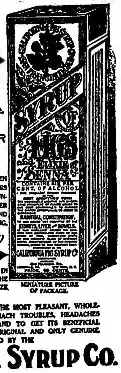
DO NOT LET ANY DEALER DECEIVE YOU.

SYRUP OF FIGS AND ELIXIR OF SENNA HAS GIVEN UNIVERSAL SATISFACTION FOR MORE THAN THIRTY YEARS PAST, AND ITS WONDERFUL SUCCESS HAS LED UNSCRUPULOUS MANUFACTURERS OF IMITATIONS TO OFFER INFERIOR PREPARATIONS UNDER SIMILAR NAMES AND COSTING THE DEALER LESS; THEREFORE, WHEN BUYING,

Note the Full Name of the Company

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.

PRINTED STRAIGHT ACROSS, NEAR THE BOTTOM, AND IN THE CIRCLE, NEAR THE TOP OF EVERY PACKAGE, OF THE GENUINE. REGULAR PRICE 50¢ PER BOTTLE; ONE SIZE ONLY. FOR SALE BY ALL LEADING DRUGGISTS.



MINIATURE PICTURE OF PACKAGE.

SYRUP OF FIGS AND ELIXIR OF SENNA IS THE MOST PLEASANT, WHOLESOME AND EFFECTIVE REMEDY FOR STOMACH TROUBLES, HEADACHES AND BILIOUSNESS DUE TO CONSTIPATION, AND TO GET ITS BENEFICIAL EFFECTS IT IS NECESSARY TO BUY THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE, WHICH IS MANUFACTURED BY THE CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.

"For Every Little Family Ailment" Vaseline

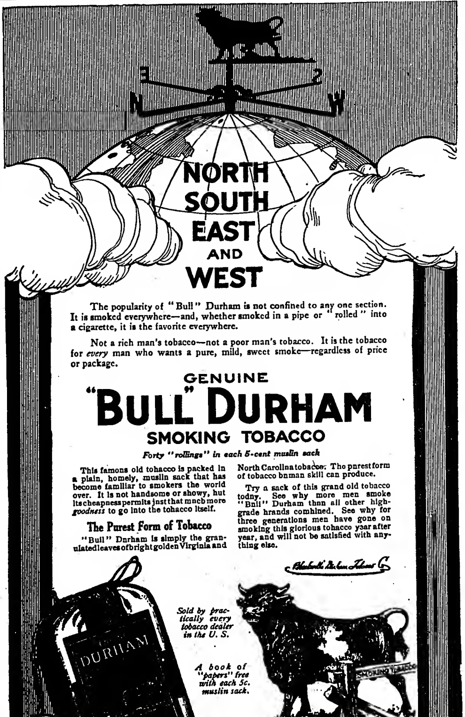
"Vaseline" is the purest, simplest, safest home remedy known. Physicians everywhere recommend it for its softening and healing qualities.

Nothing so good as "Vaseline" for all affections of the skin, scratches, sores, etc. Taken internally, relieves colds and coughs. For sale everywhere in attractive glass bottles.

Accept no substitute for "Vaseline"

Our free "Vaseline" Booklet tells you many ways in which "Vaseline" may be useful to you. Write for your copy today.

Chesebrough Manufacturing Company
17 State Street (Consolidated) New York



The popularity of "Bull" Durham is not confined to any one section. It is smoked everywhere—and, whether smoked in a pipe or "rolled" into a cigarette, it is the favorite everywhere.

Not a rich man's tobacco—not a poor man's tobacco. It is the tobacco for every man who wants a pure, mild, sweet smoke—regardless of price or package.

GENUINE "BULL" DURHAM SMOKING TOBACCO

Forty "rollings" in each 5-cent muslin sack

This famous old tobacco is packed in a plain, homely, muslin sack that has become familiar to smokers the world over. It is not handsome or showy, but its cheapness permits just that much more goodness to go into the tobacco itself.

The Purest Form of Tobacco

"Bull" Durham is simply the granulated leaves of bright golden Virginia and North Carolina tobacco. The purest form of tobacco human skill can produce.

Try a sack of this grand old tobacco today. See why more men smoke "Bull" Durham than all other high-grade brands combined. See why for three generations men have gone on smoking this glorious tobacco year after year, and will not be satisfied with anything else.

Blackwell's Durham Tobacco Co.

Sold by practically every tobacco dealer in the U. S.

A book of "papers" free with each 5c. muslin sack.

PUTNAM FADELESS DYES

Color more goods brighter and faster colors than any other dye. One 10c package colors all fibers. They dye in cold water better than any other dye. You can dye any garment without ripping apart. Write for free booklet—How to Dye, Bleach and Mix Colors. MONROE DRUG COMPANY, Quincy, Ill.

A BUNCH of DATES RIPENING IN THE DESERT REGION of SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

OUR PLANT IMMIGRANTS

By DAVID FAIRCHILD

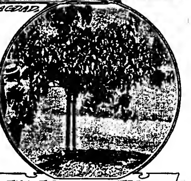
IN CHARGE OF FOREIGN SEED and PLANT INTRODUCTION, DEPARTMENT of AGRICULTURE

THE SANDERSHAW MANGO of INDIA FRUITING IN FLORIDA

TEVIS BAMBOO GROVE IN BAKERSFIELD CALIFORNIA

A 15-ACRE DATE OASIS of PALMS IN CALIFORNIA

PLANT IMMIGRANTS FROM BAGDAD



THE TUNG OIL TREE OF CHINA AT THE FOOT OF MOUNT RUBIDO, RIVERSIDE, CALIFORNIA

To the traveler who has wandered with men of many tastes all over the world, the thought must often have come, "Of what use are all the strange plants which make up the landscapes of the pictures?" The globe, with its kaleidoscopic panorama of people, animals, and plants, has been whirled before you, as it were, and you have in your minds the picture of a ball circling through space, covered with a film of plants, animals, and men in constant change. So varied is this film of plants that there are probably half a million distinct, specific forms in it, and yet man uses only a few hundreds for his own purposes.

To change, in a measure, the distribution of the really useful plants of the world is what the office of foreign seed and plant introduction of the Department of Agriculture is trying to do. The motive underlying this work might be called the ambition to make the world more habitable. If one is inclined to be pessimistic with regard to the food supply of the world, he has only to talk to any one of the enthusiasts of the Department of Agriculture to get a picture of the widening vista of agricultural possibilities which would make him realize that the food problems of the race are not hung in the balance of our great plains area, and that the food-producing power of the world is still practicaly unknown, because we have just begun to study in a modern way the relative performance of different plants.

We may not always grow the plants we do now. Some of them are expensive food producers, some produce foods that are difficult to digest, and some we may leave behind as we learn to like others better.

What to grow was not so serious a question to the early Phoenician peasant, who knew perhaps a dozen crops, as it is becoming to the American agriculturist, who can pick from the crops of all the world the one best suited to his land and climate. Changes come so rapidly nowadays that if a man today talks of "pears" he may mean what are ordinarily thought of as pears, or he may refer to alligator pears which he is growing in Florida, or prickly pears which he is cultivating in Texas. Both the alligator pear and the prickly pear have come in as crops to be reckoned with within the past fifteen years, and already the stock-raisers of the South are wondering if they should plant spiny or spineless forms of the prickly pear cactus, and the fruit-growers of Florida are inquiring as to which of the several varieties of alligator pear tree is going to be the most productive and profitable.

To help find the plant which will produce the best results of any that can be grown, on every acre of land in the United States, is, in general, the broad policy of the office of seed and plant introduction of the bureau of plant industry.

Although begun in a systematic way and as a distinct activity of the department in 1897, it has barely touched the fringe of its possibilities. The 31,000 different plant immigrants which have come in, and have either died or are now growing somewhere in this country, represent a small beginning only, and have merely helped to show the greatness of the possibilities which progress in agricultural research is creating.

"You will soon have all the crops in," is the remark of those who have given the matter little thought. Our own lives change with every moment of time, and so do the lives of plants. The strains of potato which our grandfathers grew are, with few exceptions, different from the strains in vogue today; and, fitting their lives into the various conditions of soil and climate, the original wild South American species of potato, Solanum tuberosum, assumes in the hands of men a thousand different forms.

In whatever parts of the world new forms may spring into existence it matters not; our potato-growers should be able to try every sort of importance and every wild, hardy species, whether it comes from the manse of a Scottish parson, is discovered as a wild species along the Paraguay river by an American railway bridge builder, is found among the mountains of Colombia by Jesuit priest, is gathered by a forest ranger in the dry regions of an Indian reservation in New Mexico, or is secured by a trained collector from the Chiloe Islands off the coast of Chile. It makes little difference; they must all come in as plant immigrants to show what they can do in the gardens of American experts. There is always the chance that they may be thrown out as unprofitable; but, if they have desirable characters, they can be blended with others, or exploited with others, if they are superior for any of the potato regions of this country.

It may be new to many that every day plant immigrants from different parts of the world arrive in Washington, and every day, through the mails, hundreds of these disinfected arrivals go out to find a new home in some part of the country.

It is a difficult matter to give an adequate impression of the magnitude and importance to the country of this stream of new plant immigrants which for 14 years has been pouring into the country, and has been directed by a great and growing body of research men and women into those regions where it was thought they might make their homes.

In the brief space of a short article, and to avoid what would be almost a bare enumeration of plant names, I prefer to treat only of a few of the many important problems with which the office is working, passing by, also, the introduction of the Durum wheat, the Japanese rice, and giving the Siberian alfalfas, which are earning for the farmers of the country many millions of dollars a year, a bare mention, for the reason that they have been so often described in the newspapers of the country.

The mango is one of the really great fruits of the world. India, with its hundreds of millions of people, has for centuries held it sacred, and celebrates annual ceremonies in its honor. The great Mogul Akbar, who reigned in the 16th century, planted the famous Lak Bag, an orchard of a hundred thousand mangoes, and some of these still remain alive. It is a fruit the importance of which Americans are at last beginning to recognize, notwithstanding the unfortunate discredit which the worthless seedling mangos of the West Indies have given it in the minds of Americans generally.

There are probably more varieties of mangoe than there are of peaches. I have heard of one collection of 500 different sorts in India. There are exquisitely flavored varieties no larger than a plum, and there are delicious sorts the fruits of which are six pounds in weight. In India, where the wage of a coolie is not over 10 cents a day, there are varieties which sell for $6.60 a hundred, and the commonest sorts bring over a cent apiece.

The great mango trees of India are said to reach a height of 70 feet, and are so loaded down with fruit that over $150 worth has been sold from a single tree.

These fine varieties, practically as free from fiber as a freestone peach, can be eaten with a spoon as easily as a cantaloupe. Trainloads of these are shipped from the mango-growing centers of India and distributed in the densely peopled cities of that great semi-tropical empire; and yet, notwithstanding the great importance of this fruit, the agricultural study of it from the new standpoint has scarcely been begun. I believe that it has never, for example, been tested on any but its own roots.

We have gathered together in Florida and Porto Rico and Hawaii more than a hundred varieties, and some which we have fruited have already attracted the attention of the fancy fruit-dealers, who agree that the demand for these will increase as fast as the supply can be created, and maintain that extravagant prices, such as 50 or even 75 cents apiece, will be paid for the large, showy, delicious fruits. Last year 300 dozen Mulgoba mangos were sold in Florida for $3 a dozen. The Governor of Porto Rico has committed himself to a policy which, if carried out, will cover the island with hundreds of thousands of mango trees of the better varieties.

One of the oldest cultivated plants in the world is the date palm. At least 4,000 years ago it was growing on the banks of the Euphrates, and it is this plant and the camel that together made it possible for the Arabs to populate the great deserts of northern Africa and Asia. The date palms would grow where the water was alkaline, and the camels were able to make long journeys across the desert to take the dates to the coast to market and sell them for wheat and olives.

In these deserts of the old world, millions of Arabs live on dates, for the date palm can be cultivated on land so salty as to prevent the culture of any other paying crop, and it will live in the hottest regions on the face of the globe; not even a temperature of 125 degrees F. will affect it. This obliging plant does not, however, insist on such temperatures, but will stand some frost, and has been known to live where the mercury falls to 12 degrees F.

It is also the only wood obtainable in the oases of the Sahara, and on the shores of Arabia boats are made of it.

The date palm has both male and female flowers and they occur on separate plants, and the Arabs have to plant one male for every plantation of a hundred females, making a harem as it were. The artificial pollination or fertilization of the female palms is one of the most interesting processes practiced with plants, a spray of flowers from a male palm being bound with a bit of palm-leaf fiber in each inflorescence of the female tree. Propagation of the date palm can be accomplished by means of seeds, or suckers, which are thrown up at the base of the palm. Suckers will start, however, on land so salty that the seeds refuse to grow on it.

Four years from seed, trees of some varieties begin to bear and in six years will have paying crops of dates. They live to a much greater age than almost any other of the fruit trees, and specimens a century old are said to be still a good investment.

The date is not a dry-land crop, but requires irrigation to grow and produce fruit. A plantation once established requires to be kept free of weeds, to be pollinated when the palms come into bloom, and to have the fruit harvested when ripe. Of insect pests we know too little as yet, though the prospective planter should count this in his estimate of expense; remembering, however, that modern scientific methods have overcome the greatest fruit pests, and that those on the palm are not different in general character from those which are now under complete control.

Very little pruning of the palms is necessary, and the harvesting is very simple, since the dates grow in great bunches, which often weigh from 20 to 40 pounds apiece.

There are over a hundred varieties of dates now growing in the government gardens in California and Arizona, from which are being distributed to prospective planters suckers as they grow. This accomplishment of the Department of Agriculture is not the result of any one man's effort, but the product of at least a dozen minds working over a period of 20 years and in seven different countries.

There are among these hundred varieties those which candy on the tree, others which are used mainly for cooking, and some which are hard and not sticky. There are early varieties and late-ripening ones, varieties short and long, and every sort can be told by the grooves on its seeds.

The date as a delicacy is known to every American child, but, as a food, remains to be discovered by the American public. When the date plantations of Arizona and California came into full bearing, as they should in about ten years, the hard, dry dates, for example, now quite unknown on our markets, are sure to come into prominence and find their way to the tables of the poor as well as of the rich. The heat of our American summers is forcing us to study the hot-weather diets of other countries, and dates are sure to become important items of food.

The persimmon of the South, on which the opossum fattens, is a very different fruit from its relative the kaki, or persimmon of the Orient, the growing of which is so great an industry in Japan as to nearly equal the Japanese orange-growing industry in importance. Our persimmon is a wild fruit, which will some day be domesticated, while the kaki has been cultivated so long that it is represented by different forms and colors. It is true that the Oriental persimmon has been grown in this country; in fact, the census records a production of 68 tons; but this is scarcely a beginning as compared with the 194,000 tons which is the output of Japan.

We have misunderstood the persimmon. Our own wild ones we can eat only after they have been touched by the frost, and the imported Japanese ones we have left until they become soft and mushy and almost on the verge of decay. We never thought until quite recently of wondering whether in a land where the persimmon had been cultivated for centuries they would not have worked out some artificial method for removing the objectionable pucker. In Japan we find this is done by packing the fruit in barrels saturated with sake, and Mr. H. C. Gore, of the Department of Agriculture, is now working out new methods of processing the Oriental persimmon, so that it can be eaten when hard as an apple, and there will no longer be any reason why it should not take its place among the great fruits of the country.

The whole question of the improvement of the persimmon has been opened up, and we are getting for this work the small-fruited species called "lotus," from Algeria; a tropical species with white, cheese-like pulp, from Manila, Mexico, Erithea, and Rhodesia; species from Bangalore, from Sydney, from Madras, from the Nankau Pass, in China, and from the Caucasus.

If the Oriental timber bamboo had produced seeds oftener than once in 40 years it would long ago have been introduced and be now growing in the South. The fact that it had to be brought over in the form of living plants, and that these plants required special treatment, has stood in the way of the quick distribution of this most important plant throughout those portions of America where it will grow. After several unsuccessful attempts, a beginning has at last been made, and the department has a grove of Oriental bamboos in northern Florida, and a search is being made in different parts of the world for all those species which are adapted to our climate.

In this country I predict it will be used earliest for barrel hoops, for cheap irrigating pipes, for vine-stakes and trellises, for light ladders and stays for overloaded fruit trees, for baskets and light fruit shipping crates, and for food. As wind-breaks and to hold canal banks and prevent the erosion of steep hillsides, there are species which excel all other plants, while for light furniture and jalousies it is sure to find a market whenever the green timber is available.

QUAINT OLD TOWNS

Rotherburg in Germany Still a Medieval Village.

Remarkable Trousseau of Bride at Schwalm Valley Wedding—Populace Are Happy and Contented With Their Lot.

London.—There are still corners of Europe that are not hackneyed—that are practically unvisited by tourists despite the revolution the motor car has wrought. These quaint places, of course, become fewer each year, but every now and then the illustrated newspapers of this and other countries print photographs of some strange ancient town or of some curious people that remain much as they were 300 or 400 years ago.

Such a place is Citta Vecchia, the ancient capital of Malta, which has remained almost untouched since the knights of Malta ruled the island. Another such town is Rothenburg, in Bavaria, which, although it is not quite unknown to tourists, contains no modern buildings, while its streets are still lighted by lanterns swung across them on chains.

The Sphere this week contains an account of a wedding in the Schwalm valley, another spot that has been allowed to remain as it was before modernity swept away the picturesqueness from the greater part of the civilized world. The valley is in western Germany, the Schwalm passing through the beautifully situated little town of Treysa, which is on the Main-Weser railway.

The people of the Schwalm valley belong to a very robust and tenacious race. They are very thrifty, extremely contented with their manner of life, and indefatigably industrious, always struggling to wrest a living by hard work from the soil. In time of war the Schwalmer proved themselves clever soldiers, capable of enduring great fatigue and hardship. The Schwalmer loves his home and if his business has taken him into other lands he always returns to his native place.

When a young man needs a wife he always chooses her from among the maidens of the valley.

The evening before the wedding the bridal pair go with some witnesses to the village council and the clergyman, the bride wearing for the last time her girlish red cap, red carnere, and red ornaments.

On the wedding morning the bride is awake early. At about a quarter to eight she is already dressed in her fullest wedding attire. She sits, looking very patient and dignified, putting on her head the bridal crown. It is trimmed with twenty-five rows of red, gray and silver ribbons, while the front is adorned with rosemary, glass balls and flowers. The bride also wears an elaborate stomacher embroidered in gold and silver. The bridal outfit includes fifteen petticoats, a cloth skirt, satin pinafore, ornaments, stockings, gold embroidered garters, silk handkerchief and long gloves. For two years of married life the bride is permitted to wear lilac and green, but after that she dresses entirely in black.

Old House at Rothenburg.

To the hard-working Schwalmer folk a wedding is the brightest and gayest event of their lives. The bridegroom in his long-skirted coat adorned with the wedding insignia has an imposing appearance.

The guests and relations having greeted the young pair with a speech, the wedding procession begins. The clergyman after addressing the bridal pair blesses them, and they seal their marriage by joining hands. No rings are exchanged.

On returning to the wedding house the husband drinks to his bride. Then she pledges him, throwing away the glass afterward so that the fortune of the house may be secure. Congratulations follow, and then the bridegroom leads his bride into his father's house. At the wedding feast the bridal pair eat from the same plate and drink from one glass. The food consists of soup, beef and roast sausage. When coffee is served the bride appears for the first time in her dress of green and lilac.

Furniture Stolen While They Slept.

Montreal.—Burglars, who have been unusually bold of late, entered the home of J. Sealey on Seaforth avenue, and while the family slept carted away the dining-room furniture and four trunksfull of property.

Passersby, who saw their sleigh in front of the door and men carrying out furniture, believed the family was moving and did not interfere.

MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. XII. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, MARCH 29, 1912. NO. 1.

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

Gets Hunter's License to Slay Men

CHICAGO.—Obsessed with a desire for revenge, but imbued with a spirit of refrain from breaking the law, Joseph Tesso, a Chicago Italian, armed himself with an Illinois hunting license before he started the other day to Hammond, Ind., to carve up three of his fellow countrymen with a razor in a vendetta of long standing.

When Tesso appeared at the window for a license he presented a bland smile and a large razor.

"You're in the wrong place," said the clerk. "You want a barber license."

"No wanta shave, wanta keel," replied Tesso, grinning.

"Want to kill, do you? Well, I guess you want a hunting license all right," and thinking that the razor merely comprised the man's effects the license was issued when the required amount was paid.

Armed with his license and his razor Tesso cut such a swath among his compatriots employed in the New York Central yards at Hammond that a riot call was turned in. When the tumult subsided three Italians were so severely carved that they had to be rushed to a hospital. Tesso, clutching his razor in one hand and the license in the other, was arrested.

When arraigned before Judge Prest Tesso proudly produced his license with a smile.

"I gotta da right to keel avera one is Indeeas," he explained. "I gotta whatcha call da license."

The judge smiled and the attaches and spectators laughed, but the Italian was so persistent in his plea that he had been told that a hunting license obtained in Illinois would give him the right to kill anybody he wished in Indiana that the charge was changed to assault and a small fine imposed.

Irate Father Fails to Thwart Cupid

PITTSBURG.—An irate father's sensational chase of nearly 150 miles in an automobile in his efforts to intercept his eloping daughter and her fiance, came to an abrupt end at 9:40 o'clock the other night when the big iron gates at Union station were banged in the face of C. Bilby Merckles, a retired coal operator of Cameron, W. Va. Merckles' daughter, Miss Anna Regina Merckles, aged twenty-one, a recent graduate of an eastern school, and Calvin A. Roecker, aged twenty-seven, a bond salesman of New York city, eluded the aged Merckles and boarded the New York Night Express just about to start.

The elder Merckles, missing his daughter, learned she had left for Wheeling. "No train for two hours," was the discouraging words of the station agent at Cameron when the excited Merckles asked him how soon he could get a train. Engaging an automobile he covered the distance between Cameron and Wheeling, 74 miles, in record time.

Arriving there he found that the couple had left only an hour before for Pittsburg. In his effort to head them off, the father drove the distance from Pittsburg, 66 miles. He traced the elopers to a hotel and learned that they were to leave for New York at 9:40. He went to Union station and found they had purchased tickets and had engaged staterooms on the New York night express.

Merckles took up his position at the gates. He was standing there looking at the New York night express, when suddenly Roecker and his intended bride shot past him. Before he could recover himself the gates were slammed. Finally he got out to the platform—but too late—the train carrying the elopers was moving out of the station.

Bride's Tears Win Officers' Hearts

PORTLAND, ORE.—A bride's tears softened the grim hearts of Detectives Litherland and Van Overn when the officers went to arrest M. B. Anderson, twenty-two years old, on a charge of decamping from a hotel without first settling his bill. Mrs. Anderson, a comely girl-wife of nineteen, declared when the officers came to arrest her husband, that she could not endure it to be separated from him, and asked if she might be locked up, too.

With tears glistening in her pretty eyes and sobbing softly in their room at the Rowland hotel, Mrs. Anderson was told by the detectives that she might go to the jail with her husband and was placed in the custody of the matron. Anderson was locked up in the men's ward on the same floor.

By tearing up the sheets in the room where they owed rent, to make ropes to lower their suitcases to the ground, Anderson, who is the son of a detective in the service of the Santa Fe railroad in San Francisco, and his pretty wife, who has kept her identity from the police, escaped from the Cody Apartments at No. 431 East Taylor street. The evil genius of a gas meter, which Anderson is charged with having robbed of five 25-cent pieces, followed them, and when they attempted the same method of escape from the Rowland hotel they were caught.

According to their story, told to Detectives Litherland and Van Overn after they had been arrested, they eloped from San Francisco and were married at Santa Cruz, Cal., a month ago. Then they started to Portland.

When a bill of $25 for rooms had been run up at the Cody apartments, they took the midnight method of escape.

Hearing that they were intending the sheet method of escape from the Rowland, the proprietor telephoned to detective headquarters.

What Blue Chalk Mark on Trunk Means

INDIANAPOLIS.—If you are a traveling salesman and you ever find a short, straight blue chalk mark on the end of your sample case you will know that you are looked upon by men who handle your baggage as a cheap-skate—a man who "won't come through."

The head porter of a local hotel one day recently carefully picked his way through a confusion of commercial trunks in the baggage room. The porter gave them all a keen glance and finally found the one he wanted. Drawing a stubby piece of blue chalk from his pocket he scratched it across the end of the piece of baggage, making a straight mark three inches in length.

"Guess that'll fix him," he growled, returning the chalk to his vest pocket.

"Why did you do that?" the head porter was asked.

"Oh," he replied, "that is just a little high-sign which we baggage busters give one another. You see we have to organize a little for self-protection. There is no man about a hotel that can be of more convenience to a drummer than the head porter—the man who has charge of the baggage. That chalk mark simply will indicate to the next porter who comes across that trunk that the man who owns it is cheap, that he won't come through with the tip. If he tips the next fellow the mark will be rubbed off. If he don't the mark will be made a little longer. Very few traveling men fail to come through with a liberal tip, but occasionally we find one with a marble heart and we don't forget him. Mind you we don't neglect the baggage of the man who don't tip, but we just forget to do a lot of little things that we might throw in extra."

WHO'S WHO—and Why

HEADS IMPORTANT CONVENTION

Rev. Herbert S. Bigelow, president of the Ohio Constitutional convention now in session at Columbus, is an ordained Congregational minister. A native of Indiana, Mr. Bigelow, who is forty-two years of age, has passed more than half his life in Ohio, the state of his adoption. He is a graduate of Western Reserve University at Cleveland (1894). Since 1896 he has been pastor of the Vine Street church of Cincinnati (now known as the People's Church and Town Meeting Society). For many years Mr. Bigelow has been active in social reform movements. He was a loyal follower of the late Tom L. Johnson of Cleveland, and ten years ago was the unsuccessful candidate of the Democratic party for secretary of state. Mr. Bigelow is an officer of the Ohio Direct Legislation league. He is a gifted platform speaker and has campaigned in the state repeatedly. That a man of Mr. Bigelow's type—undoubtedly representative of a large and growing section of public opinion in his state—should be chosen to preside over such a body as the Constitutional convention, indicates that the legal profession, with its conservative traditions, no longer dominates Ohio as it formerly did.—Review of Reviews.

RECORD HISTORY OF INDIANS

The American Indian is approaching, if indeed he has not already reached, the last stage of his native existence. Recent reports from Sitka, of the ravages of pulmonary disease among the Indians in Alaska, where they are leading the lives led by their fathers, indicate that the Indian will disappear from the continent unless he adopts the white man's civilization, and adapts himself to it. In either case the records of his own civilization will be lost unless the government takes immediate steps toward aiding the Modern Historic Records' association, or some other body engaged in a similar work in preserving some records of the culture, arts, industries and domestic and social organizations, the customs, games and pastimes, work and play of the primitive settlers of America.

Explorers, missionaries, settlers, Indian fighters, army officers and scientists are securing valuable volumes of information concerning the Red Men. The camera has been called into play. The series of photographs made by E. S. Curtis, for J. Pierpont Morgan, stand first in the museums of America. Now phonographic records are being made of the music and speech of the Indians, something never before attempted in an effort to preserve the records of a dying race.

It is predicted by Alexander Konte, chairman of the executive committee of the Modern Historic Records' association, that these records may prove of invaluable worth in tracing the origin of the Indian long after he may have been assimilated or ceases to exist.

PEDDLER WHO LEADS AN ARMY

Should the rebellion inaugurated by Emiliano Zapata result in the overthrow of the Madero government, there would be added to Mexico's history a chapter that is unique in this country.

Previous revolutions have received their impetus from men of high intelligence and usually of culture. Zapota's most advanced point in the social plane was that of an itinerant merchant, a peddler. Officially his name has been written on the records of his country, prior to the Madero revolution, as that of a private in the Mexican army. There is one more entry, that recording his desertion from the army.

Those unacquainted with Zapata frequently make the mistake of styling him an illiterate. That is not true. He can read and write, and has the rudiments of a common school education. Added to that, he possesses a shrewdness which, combined with a stubbornness, a personal magnetism and a bravery which no one denies, makes him a person truly formidable.

PREDICTS ONLY THREE NATIONS

Hudson Maxim, the inventor, declares that in a very short time there will be only three countries in the world.

"Some time ago, in talking with Lord Wolseley, he told me that in the future there would be only two countries in the world, and those would be China and the United States," says Mr. Maxim in an interview published recently.

"Now I want to say something stronger than that. In a very short time there will be only three countries in the world, and they will be the United States of Asia (including Europe), the United States of Africa and the United States of America.

"Look at the world's progress in the last 150 years. See what Japan has done in fifty years. Then imagine what is the future of the new Chinese republic, with its 400,000,000 people."

In the opinion of former Senator Charles A. Towne of Minnesota, the immediate future promises some big wars.

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

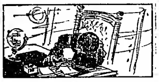
Deserters No Longer Branded Criminals

WASHINGTON.—The big annual loss of trained men to the army through desertion, is to be stopped in a large measure if a new plan, now being tried out at the United States Military Prison at Ft. Leavenworth, succeeds. Heretofore a man convicted of desertion has been sent to the prison, serves out his time, and is then turned loose, branded as a convict and deprived of all the rights of citizenship. Under the new plan the prison is to be made a reformatory where men convicted of desertion are to be placed until it is believed they have reformed, when they are to be released, restored to duty with the colors to serve out their enlistment and, if they so desire, to be reenlisted and serve as long as they like.

Army officers expect big results from this system. Of course there will be a certain percentage of incorrigibles without whom the army will be better off. The course with these men will be to get rid of them as soon as possible, so that they will not be a contaminating influence among the men for whom there is hope for reform. The great majority, however, are expected to reform and make good soldiers. The new military reform is an English idea, and the putting into effect of the plan in the United States is the result of a long investigation of the English system made by the judge advocate general of the army. The English system has been in effect several years and has resulted in a marked benefit to the army.

The first movement toward the adoption of the system in the United States army was the recent order for the transfer of all military prisoners convicted of felonies under the civil statutes to Alcatraz Island, Cal., and Fort Jay, N. Y., for confinement, and prisoners convicted of purely military offenses or civil offenses amounting only to a misdemeanor, to the Fort Leavenworth prison.

Last Report Penned at Sea's Bottom



A LETTER showing exceptional devotion to duty, written by Lieut. Tsuma Sakuma, commander of the Japanese submarine No. 6, after the boat had foundered during maneuvers in Hiroshima bay, April 15, 1910, has been photographed by the Japanese government, and one of the prints has just been presented to the Library of Congress by Commander Tokutaro Hiraga, naval attache of the Japanese embassy here. It has been placed on exhibition at the library, among other remarkable documents.

The letter was penned by Lieut. Sakuma while approaching death after the sinking of the boat. He began it about 10 a. m. and ended at 12:40 p. m., when he felt himself losing consciousness. The last few words show plainly the difficulty with which he was writing.

The letter in part follows:

"Words of apology fail me for having sunk his majesty's submarine No. 6. My subordinates are killed by my fault, but it is with pride that I inform you that the crew, to a man, have discharged their duties as sailors should, with the utmost coolness until their dying moments.

"We now sacrifice our lives for the sake of our country, but my fear is that the disaster will affect the future development of submarines. It is therefore my hope that nothing will daunt your determination to study the submarine until it is a perfect machine, absolutely reliable. We can then die without regret.

This letter was found in a pocket of Lieut. Sakuma's coat as he lay in the conning tower of the submarine after it had been raised.

Why Chief Moore Did Not Preside

WEATHER Chief Willis L. Moore sent out an order to all the weather stations over the country some time ago, forbidding messengers and other youngsters in the service to smoke cigarettes. It had been noted that boys who forgot to leave weather maps where they were directed to, were nearly all cigarette smokers; hence the order.

The newspaper paragraphers and jesters heard about the anti-cigarette order and promptly made merry over it. Whenever a weather prediction went wrong they suggested that Moore and his men smoke up—and so on. From this advertising of the anti-cigarette order, many got the impression that Moore wouldn't stand for smoking. An anti-tobacco society with headquarters in a western city, arranged to hold a big conclave in Washington and they proposed to have Moore preside. Two ministers, officers of the society, formed a committee that came on here to see Moore, ask him to preside, and have him assist in working out a program for the suppression of tobacco in every land and every clime.

Now, it happened that on the day this committee struck town Moore ran into Charles Dawes, then comptroller of the treasury, and Dawes made him a present of a pair of perfectly lovely Puerto Rican cigars, each as long as a flute and as black as a buggy curtain.

Moore had consumed about two inches off one of them, and was enveloped in a cloud of smoke like a fire department hero winning a Carnegie medal, when the committee from the anti-tobacco society was ushered into his office to ask him to co-operate with them in taking tobacco from every living creature. As soon as they could locate Moore through the smoke, they told him what they had come for—and then fled.

Everybody Wants to Know the Reason

SENATOR Reed Smoot, in consequence of his Mormon training, uses no stimulants—no tobacco, alcohol, coffee or tea. No one who has never undertaken to go through life without the use of coffee or tea has any idea of the petty annoyances that such abstinence entails. A man can quit drinking malt, vinous or spirituous liquors and his friends merely remark: "On the wagon, eh?" and let it go at that. They don't ask why he quit, and usually do not insist on him drinking, regardless of what may be the prevailing notion to the contrary. Anybody knows that when a man quits drinking he does so because he does not wish to take all the natural finish off his insides and die ahead of schedule, or have a befuddled, maroon brain, such as one can see on the charts in any doctor's office.

But with a man who does not drink coffee or tea it is different. Everbody desires to know why. Wherever Smoot goes to dine people ask: "Do you find that coffee makes you nervous?" "Don't you drink it for breakfast even?" "Did you ever try that Battle Creek substitute for coffee?" "Does it keep you awake?" And oh, a great many more. Then some woman is certain to say: "Mercy, I've taken a cup of coffee at every meal since I can remember, and I don't think it hurts me a bit."

Of late years, in order to avoid a scene, Smoot usually takes a cup of coffee when it is offered to him, but does not drink it. But this avails him little. Sooner or later his hostess inquires:

"Do you find your coffee strong?" or "Did you get cream and sugar?"

Then the truth leaks out and the questions begin.

THE SUNBEAM.

W. G. HUNT, Publisher.

SUNBEAM. - - MINN.

DOCTORS IN UNITED STATES.

To one who observes the considerable number of physicians' signs in the average city or large town the report of the last census that there are in the United states only 130,000 physicians, including osteopaths, psychopaths, hydropaths and doctors of every description, may come as a revelation and a surprise. The additional information, afforded by the census, that this country has only one doctor to every 650 of its population is not likely to relieve the observer's wonderment until he reflects that a physician to every 650 people is, after all, a fairly liberal safeguard to the public health, says the Manchester Union. The figures, of course, represent the average the country over, some sections of communities having fewer doctors in proportion to their population and some having more. Manchester, for instance, on the basis of the census figures, would have 107 or 108 physicians. The city directory gives 98. The census report on the matter is not incredible, yet a person traveling along the streets of almost any New England city and remarking the numerous doctors' "shingles" would have been almost certain to estimate the percentage of doctors higher than that given by the census.

Surprise is frequently expressed because there are so many school children who are bad spellers, but there is a substantial reason for it. In Kansas very few of a short list of words were spelled correctly by 112 school and college students. Now these pupils are not taught the way their fathers and mothers were, says the Boston Globe. Under the old public school system there were spelling bees in the schools and the pupils took pride in excelling. Under the spelling bee system children between the ages of eight and twelve can acquire quite a large vocabulary by the practice of spelling words of several syllables. The rising generation is full of poor spellers, but it is not their fault, for little attention is paid to that accomplishment. It would be well for all teachers to put their pupils through a course of spelling every few days, and also to teach them to read aloud. Reading, writing and spelling should go hand in hand. Those lacking these accomplishments are not far removed from the illiterate class.

George Wehler, director of physical education at the University of Wisconsin, has instituted rest classes for fidgety girls whose nervous systems "go to pieces" under the fatigue following undue exertion. In a report to the United States Bureau of Education he says: We do not go on the theory that the gymnasium is good for every one, and, therefore, every one must take gymnastics. The purpose of these classes in rest is to teach girls who are restless from the performance of tasks that ought not to produce fatigue how to acquire control over their own nervous systems. Putting every one—girls as well as boys—through a stiff regimen of gymnasium work has had bad results in many instances, and is a thing to be avoided. If the director of physical culture in the University of Wisconsin makes allowance for constitutional differences students not built to endure overstrain will have reason to thank the good fortune which made him arbiter of their physical destinies.

San Francisco custom house officials have just made the first arrest ever recorded at that port for the offense of smuggling diamonds—and the diamonds in the case were valued at only $477.50. When the New York custom house looks at the San Francisco custom house it will have to laugh.

The assertion that caviare has supplanted the oyster as the appetizing opening of banquet menus may be premature. Hotel managers may prefer the Russian delicacy, but it will be well to hear from "the general" before taking everything for granted. American blue points on the half shell are very good.

A poultry paper tells us that hens stop laying in cold weather because they cannot lay eggs and grow feathers at the same time. As yet no ingenious poultry raiser has tried the experiment of fitting out his hens in the fall with warm red flannel overcoats.

A New York woman called a policeman when a man proposed to her on the street. Perhaps she merely wanted him held until the Massachusetts spinsters could get out a requisition for him.

Instances are multiplying in which costly fatal fires have been traced to carelessness with lighted cigarettes or matches. It should be made a minor degree of arson for the careless tossing away of fire in this manner.

MAJORITY IS CUT TO 10,500

MARSHALL IS ELECTED G. O. P. COMMITTEEMAN.

Brugger Leading in Race for Corresponding Democratic Position.

Grand Forks, N. D., March 22.—Additional returns on the Republican political contest indicate that the 10,500 mark will be the limit of La Follette's plurality over Roosevelt and Taft. Twelve hundred and eighty precincts out of 1,743 in forty-seven counties give La Follette 26,917 and Roosevelt 18,212, while Taft has received 1,275.

Two missing counties have given La Follette about 800 majority, being Ward and Burke, and the returns of the latter county will not be available till after the county canvassing board meets, this situation being the result of a complication in the county two years ago when an election contest was based upon the fact that election return envelopes had been opened by the county auditor.

The counties actually heard from give La Follette a lead of 8,705 and with the 800 additional in Burke and Ward his lead is 9,505.

Barnes county's complete figures and that of Williams gave La Follette a decided boost. Barnes gave him a majority over Roosevelt of 824, while Williams county gave him a majority of 637. Williams, by the way, was one of the counties which the Roosevelt managers had expected to carry.

Thomas Marshall's victory over E. C. Cooper for Republican committeeman has been tremendous. His majority will be greater than La Follette's lead, as he carried many counties which went for Roosevelt. His majority will be between 15,000 and 18,000.

John Brugger's lead for the position of national committeeman for the Democratic party in North Dakota has been very materially reduced by George Duis of Grand Forks and the Grand Forks man may get the place on the committee as a result of the unexpected change in the situation.

THIS IS SOME COW

Twelve Hundred Dollars Paid for an International Champion.

Oconomowoc, March 22.—Twelve hundred dollars, a record price for Wisconsin cows, was paid by Charles D. Ettinger of Tinley Park, Ill., to M. H. Tichenor for Thelma Glenwood, a National Dairy Show champion, at the second sale of the Westmoreland Guernsey farm, which was attended by 150 buyers from the north central states. Thelma Glenwood has a record of 750 pounds of butter for one year.

POTASH DEPOSIT FOUND.

Valuable Discovery, Indicating Millions of Tons in California.

Washington, March 22.—A valuable discovery of soluble potash salts has been made in the Mohave desert, southern California, by field representatives of the bureau of soils and geological survey. The potash was found in a partially dried up lake. The government experts who found it declare there are indications of millions of tons of potash.

Convict to Relate Tragedy.

Lincoln, Neb., March 22.—Charles Morley, the one convict who lived through the desperate battle near Omaha will soon be called upon to answer for the part he took in the penitentiary tragedy. County Attorney Strode has sworn an information of justice court, charging Morley with murder. Governor Aldrich said he would recommend to the next legislature that an appropriation be made for the family of Roy Blunt, killed during the chase of the convicts Monday.

American Jailed in Error.

Winnipeg, March 22.—Through United States Vice Consul Jones here an appeal is being made of an American citizen, John Edwards, a land seeker, from Denver, Colo., who, it is said, was arrested at Saskatoon, on November 25, 1911, on the charge of receiving stolen goods, by order of Attorney General Turgeon of Saskatchewan. A speedy trial was ordered, but he remained four months in jail before being brought to trial when he promptly was acquitted. A demand for compensation is made.

Twenty-six Rescued from Mine.

McCurtain, Okla., March 22.—One hundred and seven of the 116 men at work in the Sans Bois mine No. 2 when the property was wrecked by an explosion, have been accounted for. Twenty-six of the number were rescued alive, one has since died, 52 bodies have been recovered and 29 bodies have been located.

Report of Big Turkish Victory.

London, March 22.—A Constantinople dispatch to the Exchange Telegram company says that the Turkish minister of war announces a great Turkish victory at Benghasi, in Tripoli. The casualties on the Italian side are given as 400 killed or wounded.

Hanna Resolution Passed.

Washington, March 22.—The house passed the Hanna resolution, authorizing the allotment of coal land to Indians on the Fort Berthold reservation in North Dakota.

THE MAN OF THE HOUR

HOUSE PASSES BILL

SEVENTY-NINE REPUBLICANS JOIN DEMOCRATS IN PUTTING INCOME TAX THROUGH.

SENATE MAY DEFEAT IT

Measure Extends Existing Corporation Tax Law to Include One Per Cent. on Yearly Net Incomes in Excess of $5,000.

Washington.—The Democratic income tax bill passed the house unamended by a vote of 249 to 41. The bill was supported by 170 Democrats and 79 Republicans, while the opponents of the measure were all Republicans.

The measure was framed by the majority leaders to make up for the loss of revenue to the government through the removal of the duty on sugar, as provided by a bill which already has been passed by the representatives.

The excise bill has been under discussion by the house for the last two days, the debate being marked by many speeches sharply criticizing the decision of the Supreme court of the United States by which a previous income tax measure was declared unconstitutional.

The present bill was prepared with a view to meeting objections raised by the highest court against it in the litigation of a few years ago. It exempts incomes of less than $5,000 a year.

The bill would extend the existing corporation tax law to include a tax of 1 per cent. on the yearly net incomes of all firms or individuals in excess of $5,000.

The Democrats declare the tax is one on "doing business," despite the fact that it would include salaried people, and claim it would bring in sufficient revenue to offset the estimated loss of $60,000,000 resulting from putting sugar on the free list.

The free sugar bill already has gone to the senate. The excise tax bill was sent to that body which may defeat it.

EIGHT ARE KILLED IN BLAST

Home of Pennsylvanian Is Blown to Atoms by Gas and His Family Annihilated.

Scranton, Pa.—In an explosion that blew the home of John Corello, Dunmore, into atoms, Corello's wife, six of his children and one of his grandchildren met instant death.

After the explosion, cries from the branches of a tree some distance from the scene of the explosion caused an investigation and Mamie Summa, aged seven, frightfully injured, was found among the branches. The force of the explosion wrecked several buildings in the vicinity.

The theory advanced by the authorities is that a quantity of gas had accumulated under the Corello dwelling.

FOR NATION-WIDE PRIMARY

Senator Cummins Introduces Measure Which Will Abolish All Conventions in Political Parties.

Washington.—Senator Cummins of Iowa introduced a nation-wide presidential primary bill, the effect of which would be to abolish local, state and national conventions of the political parties.

The plan of Senator Cummins is to have a national primary July 8, to be followed every four years with a national primary election on the second Monday of July. The candidate of each political party receiving the greatest number of votes would be certified by that board as the candidate in the November elections.

China Gives Woman Right to Vote.

San Francisco.—Equal Suffrage was granted to the women of China by the parliament at Nanking, according to a cablegram received here. The law will become effective immediately. Women voters will be subjected to the same restrictions as men, able to read and write and twenty years old.

Execute Fourteen Mexican Rebels.

Mexico City, Mexico.—Fourteen of the rural guard who mutinied last Tuesday at Tlalnepantla have been shot.

PURSUERS ARE DEFIED

COURT ASSASSINS DECIDE NOT TO YIELD TO AUTHORITIES.

Bandits Leave Note on Tree Declaring Many Will Die Before They Are Captured.

Roanoke, Va.—Thirty of the Allens and their followers held a two hour conference within three miles of Hillsville. At this conference it was decided to fight to the finish and not to yield either to the Virginia or federal authorities.

As a result the following notice scribbled in pencil on a sheet of coarse brown wrapping paper was posted on a tree a mile from Hillsville on the public road:

"To Those Who Has Made It Their Business to Concern: We have plenty of arms and bullets. We know how to use them. These hills is an unhealthy place for strangers to visit. Remember this. You kin git us in the end maybe, but we will get you first."

Hillsville, Va.—Messengers from the posses guarding the roads in the mountains have reported the Carroll county courthouse assassins at a point about five miles from Floyd Allen's home. Every available man in Hillsville has hurried up into the hills in the hope of surrounding them before they get away.

The case of the outlaws, who now have five deaths to their score, has settled down to a siege.

NEBRASKA POSSE KILLS 3

Two Escaped Convicts and Farmer Slain—Last Member of Gang Caught.

Omaha, Neb.—As the result of a battle between the bandits and law officers John Dowd and John Taylor, alias "Shorty" Gray, two of the convicts who escaped last Thursday from the state penitentiary at Lincoln, and Roy Blunt, an innocent victim of their murderous attempt to gain liberty, are dead.

Taylor was slain by a posse. It is believed Dowd also was killed by the posse, but his surviving companion says he committed suicide.

Charles Morley, the third of the trio, saved his life by surrendering to the officers, with whom he had fought a running battle for two and a half miles over country roads with horses on the gallop.

Armed with shotguns and revolvers, while their pursuers had repeating rifles, the convicts were within a few miles of Omaha, where they expected to find friends who would shield them, when the fatal battle took place.

Chief Briggs of South Omaha and his deputy, John C. Trouton, were leaders in the party which overtook and vanquished the three convicts and shot Blunt, the innocent victim.

SOUTH CHINA AGAIN QUIET

Republican Troops Receive Two Months' Wages in Full—Hope Powers Will Aid.

Nanking.—The Republican troops have been paid two months' wages, and everything is quiet south of the Yangtse.

Premier Tang Shao Yi is expected to arrive here soon, and announcement is made by the cabinet of the removal of the various departments and the assembly to Peking.

Prompt recognition by the powers is hoped for. The officials fear any delay in such recognition, which is being urged in some quarters with the object of preventing the establishment of an effective united government.

They point out that in such union lies the only hope of maintaining China's integrity.

Oldest U. S. Mason Dead.

Minneapolis, Minn.—William Holt, aged eighty-seven, thought to be the oldest Mason in the United States in the point of membership and a resident of Minneapolis since 1885, is dead at his home here. He was a member of the Portland lodge, No. 1, joining the organization in the '50s.

"Father of House" Critically Ill.

Philadelphia.—Congressman Henry H. Bingham of the First Pennsylvania district, "father of the house," is critically ill at his home here.

HEAR MINERS CRY

75 BURIED VICTIMS APPEAL THROUGH AIR PIPE FOR HELP.

TRY TO TELL LOCATION

Fifty-Five Bodies Have Been Recovered—Twenty-Five Men Brought Out Alive—Volunteers Aid in Rescue Work.

McCurtain, Okla.—Pitiful cries for help, conveyed to the surface through a small air pipe, were distinctly heard from the seventy-five miners still imprisoned in the shaft of the San Bois mine.

For several hours the imprisoned men, 200 feet below the shaft opening, could be heard as they attempted to tell their exact plight and location to the rescuers on the ground above. Every means was taken to understand the words, but nothing more than the cries and a murmured jumble of conversation was audible.

Tappings, the sound of which was conveyed along another air pipe, resulted in the rescue of fourteen more survivors of the terrible explosion. This makes just twenty-five miners brought to the surface since the rescuers started to work, and still leaves in the vicinity of seventy-five men battling for their lives against the poisonous gases and black damp in the crowded shafts. No way is known to tell the number who have already succumbed to the lack of oxygen.

Huge electric lights have been installed at the entrance of the shaft, and a flood of light penetrates the black hole where the victims of the explosion are imprisoned. But even the most powerful searchlight cannot penetrate the inky darkness more than fifty feet, and the rescuing party still depends upon the old-fashioned mine lamp in keeping up its work. Fifty-five bodies so far have been taken from the pit.

Eleven of the fourteen rescued were able to come out unassisted, but the other three had to be carried to the field hospital. They said that when the explosion occurred they were near the south thirteenth entry. They quickly made their way to the room, which is only 8 by 10 feet in size. There they found the air pump, about the top of which they crowded closely, changing positions frequently for the benefit of some weaker member of the isolated party. They built a curtain at the entrance to exclude foul air and gas, and in this way protected themselves until relief reached them.

Volunteers came from near-by mines and the rescue parties were more systematically organized under the direction of mining experts from the government station at McAlester.

The cause of the explosion has not been definitely determined. State Mine Inspector Boyle is of the opinion that gas was responsible. There was but little dust in the mine, he declares. An inspection of the property was planned for last Saturday, but was deferred because the mine was not being worked last week.

MEN REFUSED WAGE INCREASE

Coal Operators Will Not Grant Demands of Miners—200,000 in Four States Ready to Strike.

Cleveland, O.—All the demands of the 200,000 miners in the bituminous coal fields of western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois for a ten per cent. increase in pay and shorter working hours were voted down by the operators here.

As a final effort to prevent a prolonged shut-down of the mines after April 1, and possibly a strike, the whole dispute was then referred to a subcommittee. This subcommittee, composed of eight miners' delegates and eight operators, will convene to consider the possibility of a compromise to be recommended to the general conference.

Both operators and miners declared, after the union demands had been refused, that the coal situation throughout the country was grave. Intimations were made by John P. White, president of the United Mine Workers of America, that the negotiations here might continue a few days longer, until the union's policy committee will convene.

Besides the 200,000 miners in the four states directly concerned, 150,000 bituminous coal miners in other states are dependent upon the present deliberations for a basis of making their wage scale, and in addition the policy committee will consider the wage demands of about 170,000 anthracite miners. It was pointed out by President White that the wages of more than 500,000 union miners after April 1 were in dispute and that the coal output of the country, other than that mined by nonunion men, was involved.

C. R. Crisp Seeks Congress Seat.

Washington.—Charles R. Crisp, parliamentary clerk of the house, and son of former Speaker Crisp of Georgia, announced himself a candidate for congress from the new Third congressional district of Georgia, formed under the recent apportionment.

29,000 Olympic Tickets Sold.

Stockholm, Sweden.—Such a run has been made for tickets for the Olympic games from June 29 to July 22 that the 29,000 seats already have been disposed of.

BRIBE HEARING BEGUN

POLICEMAN TESTIFIES AGAINST NEW MEXICO LEGISLATORS.

Tells About Bathroom Incident—Accused Men Declare They Are Conspiracy Victims.

Santa Fe, N. M.—Mounted Policeman A. A. Sena, who testified before the house committee of fifteen at the investigation of bribery charges against Representatives Lucero, Montoya and Cordova, underwent a severe cross-examination, but his story was not shaken.

Sena told of having heard a conversation between Elfego Baca, the prosecuting witness, and the four defendants in a room at the Palace hotel, in which the defendants promised, he said, to vote for any candidate for the senate that Baca might designate.

He declared when the money was passed that Baca clapped his hands as a signal, and the witnesses, Venceslao, Jaramillo and Jose D. Sena, who had been awaiting in an adjoining bath room, stepped in. The witness said he took the money, relating how part of it had been thrust under a bed quilt.

He told of recovering a $20 gold piece half an hour after the arrests, from the defendant Lucero, who had it in his vest pocket.

Questions asked by the defense indicated that counsel for the accused will seek to show a conspiracy existed to get the four legislators out of the way because they would not vote in a certain way in the senatorial contest.

The men were arraigned before District Judge David J. Leahy. They waived preliminary examination and bail was fixed at $2,000 each.

ATTEMPT MADE TO KILL KNOX

Charged That Nicaragua Liberals Placed Bombs Under Road Secretary Was to Travel Over.

New Orleans, La.—As the result of the alleged discovery by the government of Nicaragua of a plot to assassinate Secretary of State Knox on the occasion of his recent visit to the capital of that country, it is not improbable that a number of prominent "liberals" will be put to death, according to advices received here from Bluefields.

Thirteen dynamite bombs placed beneath the roadbed over which Secretary Knox's special train traveled from Corinto to Managua, and connected with an electric battery, was discovered by government agents and will be used as evidence against the conspirators.

MRS. GRACE OUT ON BOND

Woman Charged With Shooting Husband Is Released and She Starts on Visit to Mother.

Atlanta, Ga.—Mrs. Daisy Opie-Grace, charged with the shooting of her husband, Eugene H. Grace, was released from jail on $7,500 bond here and a half hour later departed for Philadelphia, where, it is said, she will visit her mother.

Mrs. Grace's bond was signed by J. J. Falu, a former deputy sheriff, and I. C. Clark, both of Atlanta.

D. L. & W. IS FOUND GUILTY

Coal Carrier Fined $2,000 for Violation of Hepburn Act—First Prosecution of Kind.

Buffalo, N. Y.—The Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad was found guilty in the United States district court of violating the commodities clause of the Hepburn act and was fined $2,000.

The company was indicted on twenty counts, the charge being that it shipped free from Buffalo to Scranton, Pa., a quantity of hay to be used in feeding mules in the mines.

PRISON FOR SUFFRAGETTE

Helen Pittsfield Sentenced to Six Months at Hard Labor for Attempting Burn to Post Office.

London.—Helen Pittsfield, a leading militant suffragist, who admitted trying to burn up one of the branch post offices in London during the recent suffragette demonstration, was sentenced to six months' imprisonment with hard labor.

"I suffer for the freedom of the cause," she exclaimed as sentence was pronounced. She said she would repeat her offense when liberated.

Jury Finds Minister Guilty.

Pittsburg, Pa.—Rev. Dr. W. D. McFarland, minister and educator, former head of the Pittsburg Central High school, but later connected with United Presbyterian mission work at Greenville, Tenn., was convicted by a jury in the criminal court of causing the death of his former secretary, Elsie Dodds Coe, last January.

Passes Fortification Appropriation Bill.

Washington.—The senate has passed the fortifications appropriation bills, authorizing an expenditure of a little more than $4,000,000, which is substantially 20 per cent. lower than the similar appropriation last year.

Count Jailed for Fraud.

Berlin.—Count Wolff von Metternich was sentenced to one week's imprisonment on a charge of fraud regarding a loan from a waiter. The count, however, was acquitted of the charge of cardsharping.

CALUMET

BAKING POWDER

SEE how much better it makes the baking

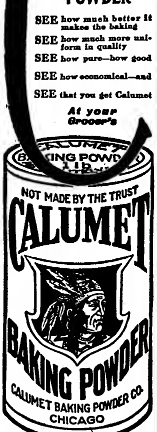
SEE how much more uniform in quality

SEE how pure—how good

SEE how economical—and

SEE that you get Calumet

At your Grocer's



Poverty does not destroy virtue, nor does wealth bestow it.—Yriarte.

PILES CURED IN 6 TO 14 DAYS
Your druggist will refund money if PAZO OINTMENT fails to cure any case of Itching, Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles in 6 to 14 days. 50c.

Nothing disappoints some women more than to not be disappointed in a new neighbor.

The Way to Win.

"The rain was coming down in sheets."

"I noticed it was in the bed of the streets.

He Shut the Shutters.

"Willie, didn't I tell you to shut that shutter?" said Mrs. Boggs.

"The shutter's shut," replied Willie, "and I can't shut it any shutter."

Pleasing Irregularities.

There are wild irregularities that are pleasing. In the north station a boy tripped while running toward his father and mother who were on the back platform of the car just starting.

The Mother—Little Johnny fell down.

The Father—Leave him lay.

This was wholly admirable.

Boy Had Noticed Things.

The dear little office boy had been detected in a lie. It was not one of the ordinary prevarications of the everyday world, and, moreover, to make the crime more grievous, he had persisted in adhering to his original mendacious statement.

"Do you know, my lad," asked a grizzled clerk, in a kindly fashion, "what becomes of young lads who trifle with the truth?"

"Aye," was the assured reply; "the boss often sends them out as travelers when they grow up!"

Something

Extra Good

For Breakfast,

Lunch or

Supper—

Post Toasties

Served direct from package with cream.

Surprises

Pleases

Satisfies

"The Memory Lingers"

Sold by Grocers.

Postum Cereal Company, Limited
Battle Creek, Michigan

BURNING DAYLIGHT
By JACK LONDON
AUTHOR OF "THE CALL OF THE WILD," "WHITE FANG," "MARTIN EDEN," ETC.

(Copyright, 1910, by the New York Herald Company.)
(Copyright, 1910, by the MacMillan Company.)

SYNOPSIS.

Elam Harnish, known all through Alaska as "Burning Daylight," celebrates his 30th birthday with a crowd of miners at the Circle City Tivoli. The dance leads to heavy gambling, in which over $100,000 is staked. Harnish loses his money and his mine but wins the mail contract. He starts on his mail trip with dogs and sledge, telling his friends that he will be in the big Yukon gold strike at the start. Burning Daylight makes a sensationally rapid run across country with the mail, appears at the Tivoli and is now ready to join his friends in a dash to the new gold fields. Deciding that gold will be found in the up-river district Harnish buys two tons of flour, which he declares will be worth its weight in gold, but when he arrives with his flour he finds the big flat desolate. A comrade discovers gold and Daylight reaps a rich harvest. He goes to Dawson, becomes the most prominent figure in the Klondike and defeats a combination of capitalists in a vast mining deal. He returns to civilization, and, amid the bewildering complications of high finance, Daylight finds that he has been led to invest his eleven millions in a manipulated scheme. He goes to New York, and confronting his disloyal partners with a revolver, he threatens to kill them if his money is not returned.

CHAPTER IX.—Continued.

A long session of three hours followed. The deciding factor was not the big automatic pistol, but the certitude that Daylight would use it. Not alone were the three men convinced of this, but Daylight himself was convinced. He was firmly resolved to kill the men if his money was not forthcoming. It was not an easy matter, on the spur of the moment, to raise ten millions in paper currency, and there were vexatious delays. A dozen times Mr. Howison and the head clerk were summoned into the room. On these occasions the pistol lay on Daylight's lap, covered carelessly by a newspaper, while he was usually engaged in rolling or lighting his brown-paper cigarette. But in the end, the thing was accomplished. A suit-case was brought up by one of the clerks from the waiting motor-car, and Daylight snapped it shut on the last package of bills. He paused at the door to make his final remarks.

"There's three several things I sure want to tell you-all. When I get outside this door, you-all'll be set free to act, and I just want to warn you-all about what to do. In the first place, no warrants for my arrest—savvee? This money's mine, and I ain't robbed you of it. If it gets out how you gave me the double cross and how I done you back again, the laugh 'll be on you, and it'll be sure an almighty big laugh. You-all can't afford that laugh. Besides, having got back my stake that you-all robbed me of, if you arrest me and try to rob me a second time I'll go gunning for you-all, and I'll sure get you. No little fraid-cat shrimps like you-all can skin Burning Daylight. If you win you lose, and there'll sure be some several unexpected funerals around this burg. Just look me in the eye, and you-all'll savvee I mean business. Them stubs and receipts on the table is all yourn. Good day."

As the door shut behind him, Nathaniel Letton sprang for the telephone, and Dowsett intercepted him.

"What are you going to do?" Dowsett demanded.

"The police. It's downright robbery. I won't stand it. I tell you I won't stand it."

Dowsett smiled grimly, but at the same time bore the slender financier back and down into his chair.

"We'll talk it over," he said; and in Leon Gnggenhammer he found an anxious ally.

And nothing ever came of it. The thing remained a secret with the three men. Nor did Daylight ever give the secret away, though that afternoon, leaning back in his stateroom on the Twentieth Century, his shoes off, and feet on a chair, he chuckled long and heartily. New York remained forever puzzled over the affair; nor could it hit upon a rational explanation. By all rights, Burning Daylight should have gone broke, yet it was known that he immediately reappeared in San Francisco possessing an apparently unimpaired capital. This was evidenced by the magnitude of the enterprises he engaged in, such as, for instance, Panama Mail, by sheer weight of money and fighting power wrestling the control away from Shaftly and selling out in two months to the Harriman interests at a rumored enormous advance.

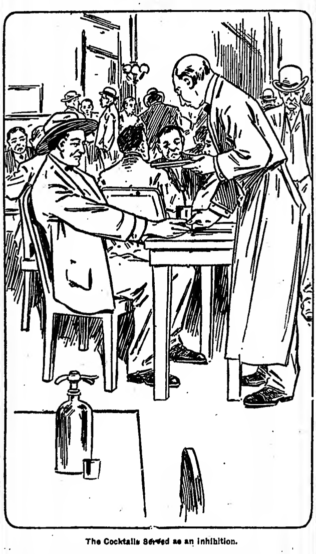
CHAPTER X.

Back in San Francisco, Daylight quickly added to his reputation. In ways it was not an enviable reputation. Men were afraid of him. He became known as a fighter, a fiend, a tiger. His play was a ripping and smashing one, and no one knew where or how his next blow would fall. The element of surprise was large. He balked on the unexpected, and, fresh from the wild North, his mind not operating in stereotyped channels, he was able in unusual degree to devise new tricks and stratagems. And once he won the advantage, he pressed it remorselessly. "As relentless as a Red Indian," was said of him, and it was said truly.

He was a free lance, and had no friendly business associations. Such alliances as were formed from time to time were purely affairs of expediency, and he regarded his allies as men who would give him the double-cross or ruin him if a profitable chance presented. In spite of this point of view, he was faithful to his allies. But he was faithful just as long as they were and no longer. The treason had to come from them, and then it was 'Ware Daylight.

The business men and financiers of the Pacific coast never forgot the lesson of Charles Klinkner and the California & Altamont Trust Company. Klinkner was the president. In partnership with Daylight, the pair raided the San Jose Interurban. The powerful Lake Power & Electric Lighting corporation came to the rescue, and Klinkner, seeing what he thought was the opportunity, went over to the enemy in the thick of the pitched battle. Daylight lost three millions before he was done with it, and before he was done with it he saw the California & Altamont Trust Company hopelessly wrecked, and Charles Klinkner a suicide in a felon's cell.

So it was that Daylight became a successful financier. He did not go in for swindling the workers. Not only did he not have the heart for it, but it did not strike him as a sporting proposition. The workers were so easy, so stupid. It was more like slaughtering fat, hand-reared pheasants on the English preserves he had read about. The sport, to him, was in waylaying the successful robbers and taking their spoils from them. The grim Yukon life had failed to make Daylight hard. It required civilization to produce this result. In the fierce, savage game he now played, his habitual geniality imperceptibly slipped away from him, as did his lazy Western drawl.



The Cocktails Served as an Inhibition.

He still had recrudescences of geniality, but they were largely periodical and forced, and they were usually due to the cocktails he took prior to mealtime. In the North he had drunk deeply and at irregular intervals; but now his drinking became systematic and disciplined. It was an unconscious development, but it was based upon physical and mental conditions. The cocktails served as an inhibition. Without reasoning or thinking about it, the strain of the office, which was essentially due to the daring and audacity of his ventures, required check or cessation; and he found, through the weeks and months, that the cocktails supplied this very thing. They constituted a stone wall. He never drank during the morning, nor in office hours; but the instant he left the office he proceeded to rear this wall of alcoholic inhibition athwart his consciousness. The office became immediately a closed affair. It ceased to exist. In the afternoon, after lunch, it lived again for one or two hours, when, leaving it, he rebuilt the wall of inhibition. Of course, there were exceptions to this; and, such was the rigor of his discipline, that if he had a dinner or a conference before him in which, in a business way, he encountered enemies or allies and planned or prosecuted campaigns, he abstained from drinking. But the instant the business was settled, his everlasting call went out for a Martini, and for a double-Martini at that, in a long glass so as not to excite comment.

Into Daylight's life came Dede Mason. She came rather imperceptibly. He had accepted her impersonally along with the office furnishing, the office boy, Morrison, the chief, confidential, and only clerk, and all the rest of the accessories of a superman's gambling place of business. Had he been asked any time during the first months she was in his employ, he would have been unable to tell the color of her eyes. From the fact that she was a demi-blonde, there resided dimly in his subconsciousness a conception that she was a brunette. Likewise he had an idea that she was not thin, while there was an absence in his mind of any idea that she was fat. And how she dressed, he had no idea at all. He had no trained eye in such matters, nor was he interested. He took it for granted, in the lack of any impression to the contrary, that she was dressed somehow. He knew her as "Miss Mason," and that was all, though he was aware that as a stenographer she was quick and accurate. He watched her leaving one afternoon, and was aware for the first time that she was well-formed, and that her manner of dress was satisfying. He knew none of the details of woman's dress, and he saw none of the details of her neat shirt waist and well-cut tailor suit. He saw only the effect in a general, sketchy way. She looked right. This was in the absence of anything wrong or out of the way.

"She's a trim little good-looker," was his verdict, when the outer office door closed on her.

The next morning, dictating, he concluded that he liked the way she did her hair, though for the life of him he could have given no description of it. The impression was pleasing, that was all. She sat between him and the window, and he noted that her hair was light brown, with hints of golden bronze. A pale sun, shining in, touched the golden bronze into smouldering fires that were very pleasing. He discovered that in the intervals, when she had nothing to do, she read books and magazines, or worked on some sort of feminine fancy work. Passing her desk, once, he picked up a volume of Kipling's poems and glanced bepuzzled through the pages.

"You like reading, Miss Mason?" he said, laying the book down.

"Oh, yes," was the answer; "very much."

Another time it was a book of Wells', "The Wheels of Chance."

"What's it all about?" Daylight asked.

"Oh, it's just a novel, a love-story."

She stopped, but he still stood waiting, and she felt it incumbent to go on.

"It's about a little Cockney draper's assistant, who takes a vacation on his bicycle, and falls in with a young girl very much above him. Her mother is a popular writer and all that. And the situation is very curious, and sad, too, and tragic. Would you care to read it?"

"Does he get her?" Daylight demanded.

"No; that's the point of it. He wasn't—"

"And he doesn't get her, and you've read all them pages, hundreds of them, to find that out?" Daylight muttered in amazement.

Miss Mason was nettled as well as amused.

"But you read the mining and financial news by the hour," she retorted.

"But I sure get something out of that. It's business, and it's different. I get money out of it. What do you get out of books?"

"Points of view, new ideas, life."

"Not worth a cent cash."

"But life's worth more than cash," she argued.

"Oh, well," he said, with easy masculine tolerance, "so long as you enjoy it. That's what counts, I suppose; and there's no accounting for taste."

Despite his own superior point of view, he had an idea that she knew a lot, and he experienced a fleeting feeling like that of a barbarian face to face with the evidence of some tremendous culture. To Daylight culture was a worthless thing, and yet, somehow, he was vaguely troubled by a sense that there was more in culture than he imagined.

Again, on her desk, in passing, he noticed a book with which he was familiar. This time he did not stop, for he had recognized the cover. It was a magazine correspondent's book on the Klondike, and he knew that he and his photograph figured in it, and he knew, also, of a certain sensational chapter concerned with a woman's suicide, and with one "To Much Daylight." After that he did not talk with her again about books. He imagined what erroneous conclusions she had drawn from that particular chapter, and it stung him the more in that they were undeserved. He pumped Morrison, the clerk, who had first to vent his personal grievance against Miss Mason before he could tell what little he knew of her.

"She comes from Siskiyou County. She's very nice to work with in the office, of course, but she's rather stuck on herself—exclusive, you know."

"How do you make that out?" Daylight queried.

"Well, she thinks too much of herself to associate with those she works with, in the office here, for instance. She won't have anything to do with a fellow, you see. I've asked her out repeatedly, to the theater and the chutes and such things. But nothing doing. Says she likes plenty of sleep, and can't stay up late, and has to go all the way to Berkeley—that's where she lives. But that's all hot air. She's running with the University boys, that's what she's doing. She needs lots of sleep, and can't go to the theater with me, but she can dance all hours with them. I've heard it pretty straight that she goes to all their hops and such things. Rather stylish and high-toned for a stenographer, I'd say. And she keeps a horse, too. She rides astride all over those hills out there. I saw her one Sunday myself. Oh, she's a high-flyer, and I wonder how she does it. Sixty-five a month don't go far. Then she has a sick brother, too."

"Live with her people?" Daylight asked.

"No; hasn't got any. They were well to do, I've heard. They must have been, or that brother or hers couldn't have gone to the University of California. Her father had a big cattle ranch, but he got to fooling with mines or something, and went broke before he died. Her mother died long before that. Her brother must cost a lot of money. He was a husky once, played football, was great on hunting and being out in the mountains and such things. He got his accident breaking horses, and then rheumatism or something got into him. One leg is shorter than the other, and withered up some. He has to walk on crutches. I saw her out with him once—crossing the ferry. The doctors have been experimenting on him for years, and he's in the French Hospital now, I think."

All of which side-lights on Miss Mason went to increase Daylight's interest in her. Yet, much as he desired, he failed to get acquainted with her. He had thoughts of asking her to luncheon, but his was the innate chivalry of the frontiersman, and the thoughts never came to anything. He knew a self-respecting, square-dealing man was not supposed to take his stenographer to luncheon. Such things did happen, he knew, for he heard the chaffing gossip of the club; but he did not think much of such men and felt sorry for the girls.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

FOR SCIATIC RHEUMATISM

Try the Treatment That Cured This Pronounced Case in Minneapolis After Other Treatments Failed.

Sciatica is neuralgia of the sciatic nerve. Its origin is generally rheumatic and is the direct result of taking cold. For this reason the disease is commonly known as "sciatic rheumatism." That Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure this disease is shown by numerous cases like that of Mrs. J. B. Hansen, of No. 221 Twentieth Ave., So., Minneapolis, Minn. She says:

"A few years ago following an attack of the grip I was taken with sciatica. For six years I suffered untold agony and thought it would be a blessing to me if I could only die. There were sharp, shooting pains in both of my limbs and my shoulders and arms were affected also but not so severely. If I moved about quickly, the pain would catch me so that I had to scream. My limbs would swell until I could hardly walk. I also had a terrible dull pain in my back which was often unbearable. I was confined to bed for a week or two at a time. While suffering from the sciatica I was further run-down by weakness common to women of my age.

"I received so little relief from the doctor's medicine that I became discouraged and quit it. My husband urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as he had read how they had cured cases like mine. I felt better after I had taken the pills a short time but took several boxes until I was certain I was cured. I give this statement of my cure thinking that other sufferers may be helped as I was through using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

The tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills succeeds where other treatments fail because it is based on the sound medical principle that the health of the nerves depends on pure, red blood.

Every person who is interested in the home treatment of nervous disorders should send for a new edition of our booklet entitled, "Diseases of the Nervous System, Their Nature, Symptoms and Treatment." Address the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are for sale at all druggists, or will be mailed to any address, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y

Keep your troubles to yourself and they will not expand.

CRITICAL TIME OF WOMAN'S LIFE

From 40 to 50 Years of Age. How It May Be Passed in Safety.

Odd, Va.:—"I am enjoying better health than I have for 20 years, and I believe I can safely say now that I am a well woman. I was reared on a farm and had all kinds of heavy work to do which caused the troubles that came on me later. For five years during the Change of Life I was not able to lift a pail of water. I had hemorrhages which would last for weeks and I was not able to sit up in bed. I suffered a great deal with my back and was so nervous I could scarcely sleep at night, and I did not do any housework for three years.

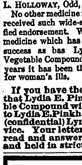
"Now I can do as much work as any woman of my age in the county, thanks to the benefit I have received from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I recommend your remedies to all suffering women."—Mrs. MARTHA L. HOLLOWAY, Odd, Va.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. We know of no other medicine which has such a record of success as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For more than 30 years it has been the standard remedy for woman's ills.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

F.P. 20TH CENTURY Corset

STYLE 370



Made of good quality steam shrunk coutil that will not stretch. Automatic Boning, warranted not to break for a year. Bones constructed with a patented automatic system that gives a sliding movement in bending, distributing the strain, and making them impossible to break.

AT DEALERS or sent direct $1.50

BIRDSEY-SOMERS CO.
233 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK

Veal Write for certificates for shipping to Chicago, tags, prices, full information, etc. Quick, sure money. Good prices, square deal. COYNE BROTHERS 160 W. So. Water St., Chicago Financial Responsibility, $100,000.00

25 CTS. PISO'S REMEDY 25 CTS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by Druggists.
FOR COUGHS AND COLDS

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3,1879.

About the worst kick some of the Replicans have against Roosevelt is for presenting them Taft

Bryan remarks,that should he be the Democratic candidate this year that he would prefer to run aginst Tuft. Of course he would, because he would be sure to win.

The Tuft campaign management aro kicking about straw votes, but straws tells which way the wind blows, and there is not much wind coming from the North West favoring Tait.

Did you notice that Knut Nelson and Steenerson are keeping out of the Minnesota political light? They understand that the fire is getting hot and that the man who gives it a poke on either side is likely to burn his fingers.

With Taft nominated for president and Eberhart for governor, it would not be necessary for the democrats to make any campaign in this state. They could just sit down and smoke, for the voters of Minnesota will put both of them over the dump in November, without any urging.

Well Taft has only got a little over eleven months more to stay in the white house. Of course he will have plenty of time to pack his "tussik" from November until March, but out he goes when his present tearm is out. It does not make any difference whether he gets the republican nomination or not, he will never get the votes to reelect him.

In all of this log jam controversy Congressman Steenerson has done all he could to assist the people to get that log jam out of this river, but the war department of this government is a hard proposition to go up against, with as slick a representative of the corporations as old Major Shunk to deal with.

The Wilmar Tibune has sent out the reault of their president straw votes taken in Kandlyohi county at the spring election. In the entire county Taft received only 88 votes. In 28 town meetings he only got 13 votes. This vote was just before Gov. Eberhat went to Chicago to assure the prsident of the overwhelming Taft sentiment in Minnesota, but that "foxey" governor of ours will be sent to keep Taft company in the "also ran" class as soon as the peopie get a crack at him. The trouble with Eberhart is; that he has got the big head so bad that he can hardly get a hat to fit him, but a 6 ½ will fit him all right before the close of next November.

We were a little surprised at the promptness of Senator Clapp to desert the LaFollette forces and starting in to boom Roosevelt. We do not wish to be understood as heing opposed to the candidacy of Roosevelt, and if he gets nominated he should have the support of the progressive Republicans. But it seems to us that they had ought to have waited until there was a litile louder call from the peopie in the rear ranks for him to step in and save the country, before placing prominent men like senator Clapp at the front and advising the peopie to desert the man who so nobly stood by them in the Reciprocity fight at the first fire. As for himself, Senator Clapp, will find in the future in this state that he has lost the confidence of a lot of loyal friends by his haste to jump onto the Roosevelt band wagon.

From Eastern Deer Park.

There is now no log jam in Red Lake River, according to Major Shunka report, and every body had ough to be satisfied, with this final desision, even if he knows better. If the lumber trust, sees fit to control the output of lumber as they did last year by closing most of their mills, to keep up the prices of lumber, then that log jam will stay in this navigable river the same as it did last year.

Furmers should only support such newspapers that stand by them for right and justice. "Remember the Maine." Sure Mike! And we will not forget that log jam, or the newspapers and individuals who opposed the farmers in their fight for right and justice, when we cast our ballots this fall.

If a farmer sells a bushel of No.1 wheat to the elevator for 95 cents, and buys back from that same elevator a sack of bran, the product of the flour maufactured from the wheat at $1,40 cents per hundred; who is the most prosperous one in this deal?

The Queer Elephant Shrew.

One kind of African mice we seldom see or read about is the little elephant shrew. It is barely four inches long, but the trunk and shortened tail combined gives it another four to five inches. The fur, though drab instead of gray, is otherwise like that of a chinchilla, as also are its large and delicate ears, while both in the formation and the manner of using its legs it reminds one of a new species of miniature kangaroo. Again, at times, when in a sitting posture, it looks not unlike a fluffy young chicken which is trying to put out of sight a worm that has proved almost too much for it. Indeed, at all times the elongated and highly sensitive nose or trunk is very much like a dark colored and uneasy worm—that organ, which during wakeful moments is always slightly on the wriggle. It has swift leaping powers. It will tuck up its appendages and, like a ball, roll over and over in a straight line, and, after a meal, which occurs at very short intervals and consists of several mouthfuls only, quite surprises one by standing stock still, apart only from a gentle quivering of the trunk.

An Eye Arrester.

In this day of catch words and slogans, once in a while a roving eye will chance upon a phrase that sticks. Going down in a Broadway car the other day two tired looking men sat side by side, glancing disinterestedly out of the window opposite as the car sped past the signs in the wholesale dry goods district. All at once the gaze of both men focused at a certain point and they turned their heads to read the sign in full. On the door of one of the wholesale millinery houses was this legend: "Come in without knowing, but don't go out the same way." The eyes of both men met as they finished reading it, whereupon each smiled a bit. "Not such bad advice, that," said one, and his neighbor grunted approvingly.—New York Press.

Friday Dickens' Lucky Day.

Charles Dickens was not one of those who are superstitious concerning Friday. It was on Friday that many of the good things came to him, and it was on that day that he entered upon, paid the price and took possession of Gadshill, the one thing he cherished more than all of his other possessions. It was Gadshill that he had gazed upon when a wee bit of a boy with a hope, then giving little signs of fruition, that he might live to own it some day, and it was Gadshill whose walls he covered with mirrors in almost oriental magnificence.—Boston Record.

Unbalanced.

"What's the charge against this man?" asked the judge.

"We desire, your honor," replied the lawyer in the case, "to have him tried for insanity. His family is greatly worried about him."

"What has he done?"

"He has sold his automobile for the purpose of raising money with which to pay an honest debt."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Fly in the Ointment.

"I don't think I'll go to any more of my wife's parties," said Mr. Cumrox.

"Don't you enjoy yourself?"

"Yes. Only some one always mistakes me for one of the guests and starts in making remarks about how I made my money."—Washington Star.

Comfort.

Mr. Finbdub—You women are mighty slow. During the time it took you to select that hat I went out and made $200. Mrs. Finbdub—I'm so glad, dear. You'll need it!—Puck.

Learning.

Learning maketh young men temperate, is the comfort of old age, standing for wealth with poverty and serving as an ornament to riches.—Cicero.

"Cut glass for company and chipped china for the family" is not the best of rules for making a home attractive.

FODDER CORN.

Owing to the fact that so much land has been sold during the past season in this county to actual settlers that are moving here this spring and the majority of these heing un-improved land, the result will be that hay land will be more scarse than ever as also more people during the past two years have gone into the dairy business thus requiring about twice the amount of hay that was used in former years so it will be well for the farmers to make arrangements for the feed as early as possiable, and the writer having recently made a trip thru a certain dairy district in the southern part of the State, where there of course is to wild hay but an abundance of both clover and timothy we find that even there the farmers are prefeeding fordder corn to fine tame grass and that about the same amount of feed can be gotten from 10 acres of well cultivated fodder corn as they would get from 160 acres of either clover or timothy besides being a great deal more nutrions and especially far better for milk cows for milk purposes. Even people now moving here that have no old fields on the land need not hesitate to put in fodder corn on the prairie sod broken this spring provided they will break it well and thourly disc it up and if given a good coat of old manure the result will still be better. We would advise the farmers figuring on planting fodder corn to make arrangements for the seed in good season and see to it that they are getting the right kind best adapted to this country.

Slow, but Sure.

"Why don't you get an automobile?"

"I prefer a horse."

"But isn't that too slow for you?"

"Well, I've been driving old Jim for fifteen years and he never got a puncture yet."

Costs Something.

"I see dressed chickens cost more than undressed."

"Naturally."

"But why should they?"

"Why shouldn't they? With the present price of eggs they could afford to dress in the latest Paris styles."

Offices Lawyers.

"Office practice is what the average lawyer seeks for now," remarked an attorney, "and that is the business that makes the largest returns for the least waste of tissue. More money is made nowadays by keeping clients out of litigation and free from the dangers of the law's delay than by defending them, even successfully, in court. It is safe to say that there are some 6,000 lawyers who are making a very good living in New York from law business that rarely or never takes them into court and that there are a large number of lawyers who from their counsel work and directing great enterprises and corporations, advising and guiding wealthy clients, take in each year princely—yes, even fabulous—amounts."—Lawyers' Diary.

Talked Too Much.

Wife (reproachfully)—You forget how you once breathed your love in my ear and promised that my every wish should be gratified. Hub—No, I don't, but I wish now I'd followed the hygienic rule of keeping my mouth shut while breathing.—Boston Transcript.

Billiards.

"Have you heard the billiard conundrum? Well, here it is:

"What made the red ball blush?

"Why, when it saw the two white kiss in the corner."

Thought Concentration.

Professor Elmer Gates performs a very interesting experiment by immersing his hands and arms to the elbows in separate vessels filled with water just to the point of overflowing. By withdrawing his thought absolutely from one hand and concentrating it on the other he so expands the blood vessels in the latter by sending an extra supply of blood to it that the water in the vessel in which it is overflows quite perceptibly. To further prove this power of thought concentration he transfers the thought from one hand to the other without changing their positions until the other vessel overflows.

Professor Bell, inventor of the telephone, said that when driving in the provinces in extremely cold weather, when he was in great danger of having his feet frozen, he was able to send an extra supply of blood to them by concentrating his mind upon them and thus saved himself from a very painful experience.—Nautilus.

Jamaica's Booby Eggs.

Trade in booby eggs is one of the sights of Kingston, Jamaica. Long ago the British seamen gave the name "booby" to several of the species of gannets, because these fowls are regarded as stupid. The eggs are gathered in vast quantities on the islets at certain seasons of the year and taken to Port Antonio by the boatload. The arrival of a boat with booby eggs is the occasion of no little excitement among the negro women, who buy them by the box and then sell them by retail chiefly in Kingston, though they are also sold in other towns on the island. Though sold mostly by the dozen to housekeepers, booby eggs are also peddled, hard boiled, on the streets of Kingston, salt and pepper being provided that the purchasers may eat the eggs at once. These eggs are about two-thirds the size of an ordinary hen's egg and are quite palatable.

The Part of Wisdom.

Everybody in Middle Bay knew that Mrs. Captain Liscomb was talking about making a visit to her married daughter in Cincinnati. She had been talking about it for two years, but age and the natural timidity of a woman unused to travel had postponed the great event from month to month until the neighbors began to wonder whether it would ever come to pass. So one morning, when Uncle Billy Evans met Captain Liscomb in Eccles' store, there was a twinkle in his eye as he asked:

"When's Mis' Liscomb going out to Ohio, Daniel?"

"Don't ask me!" returned the captain, a little peevishly. "I don't know nothin' about it. If I tell her to go she says I want to get rid of her. If I tell her to stay at home she says I'm mean! I ain't sayin' a single word!"—Youth's Companion.

Bulldogging a Steer.

Perhaps there is no contest that is a greater tax on human endurance than that demanded by "bulldogging" a steer, and the "bulldogger" must go it alone. The pony is as great a factor as the man, for when once the lasso rests over the horns of the range animal all depends on the rapid way in which the mustang wheels so that the trailing rope will trip the steer. When the steer is on the ground the plucky pony must keep the rope taut. The range rider leaps off and with a length of rope ties the steer's four feet together. Time is then called. Unless he has completed all these operations from the word go in less than three minutes he is not deemed fit to enter the finals. As a matter of fact, one contestant cut the time to 29 seconds, a world's record.—Sunset Magazine.

Begging the Question.

The phrase "begging the question," or in Latin "petitio principii," signifies the treating of a proposition as a fully demonstrated fact when it is actually only a premise or statement brought forward and not yet proved. In other words, to beg the question is to assume something to be true, in order to evade the task of bringing forward the necessary argument to show its truth.—Uncle Remus' Magazine.

Common Mistake.

"De man dat allers wants de biggest an' de most of everything," said Uncle Eben, "is liable to pick up an ostrich an' overlook de turkey bird."—Washington Star.

A Genius Who Works.

Robert W. Chambers, the novelist was called a genius the other day at the Century club in New York.

But Mr. Chambers, with his wonted charming modesty, denied that he was a genius.

"Unless, indeed," he added, "we accept the definition that genius is 1 per cent inspiration and 99 per cent perspiration."—New York Tribune.

The Landlubber.

They were enlightening the land lubber as to maritime matters. He was becoming more and more crestfallen as their explanations progressed.

"Why, I always thought," he sadly sighed, "that the port side of a ship was the one nearest port!"—Boston Herald.

Maddening.

"They really fear she will become insane. You see, she found a diary he kept before he married her."

"Ah, I see. And the awful revelations—" [illegible]

"Revelations! [illegible] it was all in cipher, and [illegible]

The Latest News,

From Ellingson BroS,

We have now just received our large and well selected stock of spring and summer dry goods, which we are selling cheap for cash. We won't be undersold by Sears Robeck, or anyone.

GIVE US A CALL,—AT ELLINGSON, BROS.

THE PIONEER MERCHANTS.

Highlanding Minn.

RHODA STORE

NEW GOODS, NEW PRICES .

A trial order will convince you, that this is the best Store to buy your goods.

I HAVE A FIN LIKE OF GROCERIES.

BOOTS, SHOES, & COMPLET STOCK OF SUMMER FOOT WARE.

give me a call and get prices.

GEORGE SINGER. Prop. Rhoda Minn.

U. S. Mail,

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 10.00 a. m. on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m

Wm. G. Hunt p. m.

FARM LOANS.

Made Without Delay, at reasonable rates of interest.

Be sure and see me before you close your loan.

GEORGE ELDER.
McGinn Block,
Thief River Falls

CORN-SEEDS TREES

Our 29th Annual Catalog is now ready and free for the asking. It is a work of art and full of good things.

See King Corn on front cover.

WILL'S PIONEER SEED HOUSE and NURSERY
OSCAR H. WILL & CO.
BISMARCK, NO. DAKOTA

Women on the Stage.

The earliest mention of actresses was in 1611, when Coryat in his "Crudities" gave this description of a production at the Theater of Venice, Italy: "I saw women act, a thing I never saw before. They performed with as good a grace, action, gesture, as ever I saw any masculine actor."

Why Pay Cash

WHEN YOU CAN BUY ON

Easy Credit Terms

PIANOS $124.75 UP.
ORGANS $19.00 UP.
SEWING MACHINES $7.65 UP.
STOVES and RANGES $6.10 UP.
HOUSEHOLD FURNITURE of all kinds at [illegible]
IRON and STEEL SAFES,
TYPEWRITERS and OFFICE FURNITURE From [illegible]

We are the largest [illegible] on EASY MONTHLY PAYMENTS to reliable people in all parts of the world. No other manufacturer will let you use the goods for years while slowly paying for them. [illegible]

THE [illegible] CO.
[illegible]

McCall's Magazine and McCall Patterns

For Women

Have More Friends than any other magazine or patterns. McCall's is the reliable Fashion Guide monthly in one million one hundred thousand homes. Besides showing all the latest designs of McCall Patterns, each issue is brimful of sparkling short stories and helpful information for women.

Save Money and Keep in Style by subscribing for McCall's Magazine at once. Costs only 50 cents a year, including any one of the celebrated McCall Patterns free.

McCall Patterns Lead all others in style, fit, simplicity, economy and number sold. More dealers sell McCall Patterns than any other two makes combined. None higher than 15 cents. Buy from your dealer, or by mail from

McCALL'S MAGAZINE
236-246 W. 37th St., New York City

Note—Sample Copy, Premium Catalogue and Pattern Catalogue free, on request.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

MANY BOOKS IN ONE
WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

[illegible]

Recognized by the Courts, the Schools and the Press as THE ONE GREAT STANDARD AUTHORITY.

Should You Not Own Such a Book?

WEBSTER'S COLLEGIATE DICTIONARY. [illegible]

[illegible]

G. & C. MERRIAM CO.
Springfield, Mass., U. S. A.

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Call and see us, when you are ready to make your final proof.

The mail carriers have a "soft" snap on the raads this week.

M,E. Hyland, of Rhoda was transacting business here yesterday.

Henry Boss is getting out the logs to build on his homestead this week.

C. L. Clark has been over in Mayfield helping to move a steam dredge this week.

Peat Hunstad is over from the county of Clearwater looking after his farming interests this week.

There was warm weather enogh Wenesday to melt snow enough for a good drink of water for the stock.

Mr. and Mrs. Gunder Asbjernson and Knut Tviet, of Malone made this office a plesent call Wednesday.

A good big handsom steer, that will make a good working ox, for sale cheap. Partly broken. Inquire at this office.

Knut Sansdahl came down from Star township on Sunday to consult horse dentist Chris Narveson about his horses teeth. Ho made this office a plesent call Monday morning.

Ignoce Kolski, of Rudell returned home last week from the coal mines at Green Ridge Ills., and will look after his farming interests in the town of Hickory this summer.

Pat Tyrle, who has been working for Walter McAndress this winter went to North Dakota last Wednesday. Mr. McAndress took him down as far as Thief River.

The next meeting of the young Peoples Society will be held at the residence of Tallak Dale on the 8th, day of April. The ladies aid society will have their auction at same place and date. All are welcome.

About one year ago we bought a small steer calf at an auction sale for $10, 50 cts. On last Saturday we sold the same steer to the butcher at Oklee for an even $30,. Who says it does not pay to keep stock in northern Minnesota?

There was a large attendence at the meeting of the young Peopels Society held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Sjur Stolaas last Sunday and the youngsters had a fine time, while some of the older ones enjoyed a plesent chat over a fine lunch and a cup of coffee.

Simon Solberg is hustling around this week to get cord wood choppers to get out wood for his steam plow, which he will start breaking with as soon as the frost is out of the ground. He only expects to raise about twice the cost price of the farm, of flax this season.

We have now placed the jaming of Red Lake River with logs before the state officials, and if the lumber companys succeed in keeping that log jam in this river we propose to make it very expensive for them to MAKE ARRANGEMENTS with those whose duty it is to order them to remove it.

Lurents and Welenty Wojnerowski, of south eastern Deer Park were up to Wm. Parnos after a load of seed oats Saturday. These two men came to Minnesota from Chicago, where they worked for wages and belonged to labor Unions. To day they are industrious and prosperous farmers, living on their own farms with no boss to order them around, or labor union to order them to strike.

The progressive Republican Committee will meet at Thief River Falls tomorrow to outline the campaign to be conducted in this county. The political parties down in the southern part of this big state do not seem to have heard of Pennington county yet, but they will find out before next November where it is located.

Mr. and Mrs. Gunder Stromme drove up from Oklee last Friday for an over Sunday visit with the parents of Mrs. Stomme, Mr. and Mrs. Tobias Olson, of this town.

Oscar Olson went down to Thief River Falls Wednesday to homestead 130 acres of swamp land in the town of Deer Park, which is proving to be the best land in the country, after it is drained.

Now is the time to get your farm machinery ready for spring work. Charles Enquist the Kratka blacksmith will fix your machinery in a workmanlike manner.

The official organ of the lumber company's, The Times, says that the saw mill at Thief River Falls may not start on this season. "Oh what would we do without our saw mill."

If the lumber companys do not open that log jam as soon as navigation opens a mass meeting will be called and money raised to hire competent engineers to take the levels and show how that log jam has closed up the outlet to Red Lake, then the true facts in the case will be placed before the war department at Washington.

Announcement

Having been greatly handicapped for lack of power at our elevator at Thief River Falls the last two years, we are pleased to inform our many customers that the new City Light and Power Plant is so far completed as to furnish all day power and herafter there wil be no delay in unloading.

To celebrate this occasion we will for a limited time give all who hawl,

Wheat
Flax
Oats
Barley & eet.

SPECIAL INDUCEMENTS.

This will also apply to all who get MASCOT FLOUR from us.

Mascot is made from Selected Northern Hard Wheat. Is not mixed with soft or winter wheat like other brands manufatared at big milling centers.

Come take advantage of this offer and make money.

RED LAKE FALLS
MILLING Co.
Joseph Johason, Agent.

FARM FOR SALE.

The N. E. ¼ Section 14 Township 152 N. Range 40, Town of Deer Park. Price $16,00 per acre.

Henry Rovoold,
Alsask, Sask. Canada.

Notice To Farmers.

I have an a No. Jack, nine years old which will stand for service during the season of 1912, at my farm on section 8 town of Deer Park. M.E. Hyland.

DRESS MAKING.

For plain and Farcy sewing apply to Mrs. Sam McMahn Student of the America College of dress making.

Knehnel, Minn.

Delicacy.

Tailor (calling out measurements to clerk—Chest thirty-nine; [illegible]—Punch.

The Westerner's Ideal.

The westerner's willingness to give up home, neighbors and old associations for the sake of a "claim" on the prairie seems sordid. His stern preoccupation with "getting ahead" is a part of his ingrained passion for personal independence. I have seen a gray hue steal over the face of the settler when speaking of some one who had "lost his farm" and "had to go out by the day." For the wage earner's lot the true born westerner feels a dread quite inconceivable to cities and to old communities. If he ruthlessly sacrifices comforts and culture, it is that he may win a footing of his own and so call no man master. Once he has cleared off the mortgage, improved his place and gained a soothing sense of financial security, he will provide books, piano, music lessons, travel and college education for his children, even if in the meantime his own capacity to enjoy has been atrophied.—Professor Edward Alsworth Ross in Century.

Women and the Violin.

"A distinguished violinist of this city," writes Philip Hale in the Boston Herald, "was talking recently about women who fiddled and now fiddle. He complained that nearly all of them classed as great erred in this—they tried to play like a man; they wished it said of them that they had a virile tone. He did not except Lady Halle, Maud Powell or Miss Parlow. 'The only great woman violinist I remember was Teresina Tua, and her greatness consisted in the fact that she always played like a woman. She was womanly and fascinating.' Saint-Saens once said apropos of Augusta Holmes that when a woman wrote for the orchestra she was noisier than any man because she wished to show that she was not a poor, weak thing on account of her sex."

Gambetta's Table.

There is a curious story told of the table at which Gambetta wrote. A previous owner, General Lahitte, minister for foreign affairs in 1849, dismissed his confidential servant because he believed he had stolen a large sum of money in 1,000 franc banknotes. Years afterward, when the table had to be repaired, the joiner employed for the work found the missing bundle of banknotes between the mahogany board of the table and the drawers below. They had lain there unnoticed for fourteen years. Unfortunately the story does not go on to say that the poor servant and his mistaken master were alive at the time of the discovery and that the one's character was cleared and the other's confidence restored.

The Japanese Hades.

The Japanese language has no equivalent for our word "hell," but has the word "Jigoku" instead. Jigoku consists of, first, eight immense hot hells, ranging one beneath the other in tiers. Each of these hells has sixteen additional hells outside its gates, like so many antechambers, so that there are in all 136 hot hells. Second, there are eight large cold hells, each with its sixteen ante-hells, making the same number of cold that there are of hot hells. Besides these 272 hot and cold hells for offenders of the common sort, the wily Japs have twenty mammoth "hells of utter darkness," into which will be consigned the spirits of children who take the name of Dai Butsu, or Great Buddha, in vain.

As to Papa's Wealth.

"Mamma, what is papa worth?"

"I don't know, dear, but it must be a great deal. I heard him say once that he had put $100,000 into a mining company's stock."

"What's the name of the mining company?"

"Wildcat, I think he said. I presume they named it that because it's in some unsettled country away out on the frontier."—Chicago Tribune.

Some English Names.

It is a difficult matter sometimes to spell an English name from hearing it pronounced. For instance, Farquharson is pronounced Fahrson. This, however, is "simple as A B C" compared with the weird renderings of some other names. Who, for instance, would dream of pronouncing Woolfardisworthy Oozry, Wrenfordsleigh Rensley or Wyrardisbury Raysbury?—Pearson's.

Papa Did Too.

"This is my son Frederick, Mr. Fosdick," said Mr. Glanders proudly, introducing his five-year-old boy to his caller.

"Well, Frederick," said the caller, "do you obey your mamma?"

"Yes, sir," replied Frederick promptly, "and so does papa."

Her Cultivated Taste.

"How is your daughter getting on with her music?"

"Very well," answered Mr. Cumrox. "She has got along so far that when I ask her to play anything I like she looks haughty and says, 'The idea!'"—Washington Star.

His Specialty.

"Do you speak several languages, father?"

"No, my son," replied Mr. Henpeck, gazing sadly at his wife, "but I do know the mother tongue."—Judge.

Aids to History.

Mrs. Brown—Haven't you found personally that history always repeats itself? Mrs. Bliss—Not always. The neighbors repeat most of my history.—New York Times.

Nature.

Nature never did betray the heart that loved her. 'Tis her privilege through all the years of this our life to lead from joy to joy.—Wordsworth.

"I Suffered Years With My Back."

Backache resulting from weak kidneys, a bad cold or other cause, usually renders the sufferer unfit for work and often results in permanent disability.

"I suffered for years with my back, or kidney trouble, and have tried a number of remedies from different physicians. More than a year ago, one of our local druggists induced me to try and after using them some three months I found a decided improvement in my kidneys, and I am glad to say that I hope soon to be fully restored to health." J. P. ALLEN, Ex-Judge City Court, Glasgow, Ky.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills

As long as pain is present in any part of the body rest is impossible and the system becoming weakened is exposed to any form of disease to which the sufferer may be inclined.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills

by steadying the irritated nerve centers, make refreshing sleep possible, thereby enabling the body to recover lost strength. As a remedy for pain of any description Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are unsurpassed.

Sold by all druggists under a guarantee assuring the return of the price of the first box if no benefit results.
MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

The Last Dueling Clergymen.

"When did clergymen cease to fight duels?" is a startling inquiry in London Notes and Queries. It will be news to many of us that they were ever fond of that exhilarating pastime. But, as a matter of fact, the Rev. Mr. Allan fought a duel with Lloyd Delany, Esq., and killed him in Hyde park in 1782. He was convicted of manslaughter and fined 1 shilling plus six months in Newgate.

In the Family.

She—Did you ever see a vanishing lady?

Grass Widower—Yes; I married one.—New York Mail.

State of Ohio, city of Toledo, }
Lucas County, } ss.

Frank J. Cheney makes oath that he is senior partner of the firm of F. J. Cheney & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by the use of HALL'S CATARRH CURE.
FRANK J. CHENEY.

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1886.
(Seal) A. W. GLEASON,
Notary Public.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials, free.
F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by all Druggists, 75c.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

LUMBER FOR SALE.

I will have about 50,000 ft. of lumber for sale this winter at $15.00 per thousand. Will take cattle in exchange.

Andrew Nilson.

W.G.Hunt.

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate Court Work.

Also With Gloves.

Assistant Editor—Here's a farmer writes to us asking how to treat sick bees. Editor—Tell him he'd better treat them with respect.—Exchange.

Two Versions.

A man says, if the shoe fits, put it on.

A woman says, if the shoe fits, get a size smaller.—Life.

Don't tell all you know. Keep a little [illegible]

NEW BANK.

FIRST STATE BANK,

OF OKLEE Lambert Post Office Minn.
NEW STATION ON DULUTH SCO LINE.

Your Business Solicited.

Directors: A. P. Toupin, Pres. Samuel Giteau Vic. Pts.
Larry O'Niel, Abrham Paquire, T. L. Cruzon.
J. A. DUFFY, Cashier. T. L. CRUZON, Assist. Cashier.

Let Us Tell You Something!

This Season we are offering the best line of Dry Goods that ever came into this Section of the Country.

Don't Buy Elswhare, Until You Have Seen What We Have To Offer.

No Matter What Price you pay, WE Will please YOU.

VAUGHAN BROS. & CO.
Highlanding Minn.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's $50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day

Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were piloting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory? We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars. It will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Ask for Catalogue 16 T.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.
CINCINNATI, OHIO

Our New Home. Capacity 20,000 Safes Annually.

PATENTS

Prize Offers from Leading Manufacturers

Book on patents. "Hints to inventors." "Inventions needed." "Why some inventors fail." Send rough sketch or model for search of Patent Office records. Our Mr. Greeley was formerly Acting Commissioner of Patents, and as such had full charge of the U. S. Patent Office.

GREELEY & McINTIRE,
PATENT ATTORNEYS
WASHINGTON, D. C.

Avoid the race course if you would keep on the right track.

Constipation can be cured without drugs. Nature's own remedy is Garfield Tea.

Regret for the mistakes of our youth doesn't always prevent us from making them in old old age.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle.

A man is apt to get so rattled when a leap year girl proposes to him that she can make him believe he did it.

For constipation use a natural remedy. Garfield Tea is composed of carefully selected herbs only. At all drugstores.

Political economy may be all right, but political liberty counts for more about election time.

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY
Take LAXATIVE BROMO Quinine Tablets. Druggists refund money if it fails to cure. E. W. GROVE'S signature is on each box. 25c.

It doesn't require much inventive genius for a man to make a fool of himself.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules. Easy to take as candy.

Memories.

"My lad, I was a newsboy once."

"Aw, what chu tryin' to do—git me downhearted?"

Use Allen's Foot-Ease

The antiseptic powder to be shaken into the shoes for tired, tender, smarting, aching, swollen feet. It makes your feet feel easy and makes walking a Delight. Sold everywhere, 25c. For free trial package, address Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

Most of 'Em Do.

"You certainly started out with fine prospects. Your credit was good everywhere in town."

"That's why I failed."

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

In Use For Over 30 Years.

Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

Also With Gloves.

Assistant Editor—Here's a farmer writes to us asking how to treat sick bees.

Editor—Tell him he'd better treat them with respect.

Instead of liquid antiseptics, tablets and peroxide, for toilet and medicinal uses, many people prefer Paxtine, which is cheaper and better. At druggists, 25c a box or sent postpaid on receipt of price by The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass.

Spendthrift.

Uncle Ezra—Do you think the money young Eph Hoskins made down in New York will last him long?

Uncle Eben—You bet it won't! He's going at an awful pace. I was down to the general store last night, and young Eph was writing $100 checks and lighting his cigars with them.—Puck.

His Coming Out.

A fond Chicago mother is to give a coming-out party for her son. Of course, we have no means of knowing the youth, but we fancy he must be exactly that kind of son—and we await with bated anxiety a full description of his coming-out costume.

What will be done with the gentle youth after this severe social ordeal isn't stated, but it can be believed that he is to be rushed around to all sorts of society functions—and, of course, carefully guarded against the matrimonial designs of fortune-hunting females.

Chilly.

A certain member of a Boston club habitually evinces such a frigid demeanor that many of his acquaintances have facetiously averred that "it gives one a cold to shake hands with him."

One evening a group at the club were discussing the disposition of the said member, when a newcomer ventured this:

"Why, gentlemen, I understand that it is the custom in this club when that chap attends a dinner here to ice the claret in order that it may be at the same temperature as the dining room."—Harper's Magazine.

NO WORDS WASTED

A Swift Transformation Briefly Described.

About food, the following brief but emphatic letter from a Georgia woman goes straight to the point and is convincing.

"My frequent attacks of indigestion and palpitation of the heart culminated in a sudden and desperate illness, from which I arose enfeebled in mind and body. The doctor advised me to live on cereals, but none of them agreed with me until I tried Grape-Nuts food and Postum.

"The more I used of them the more I felt convinced that they were just what I needed, and in a short time they made a different woman of me. My stomach and heart troubles disappeared as if by magic, and my mind was restored and is as clear as it ever was.

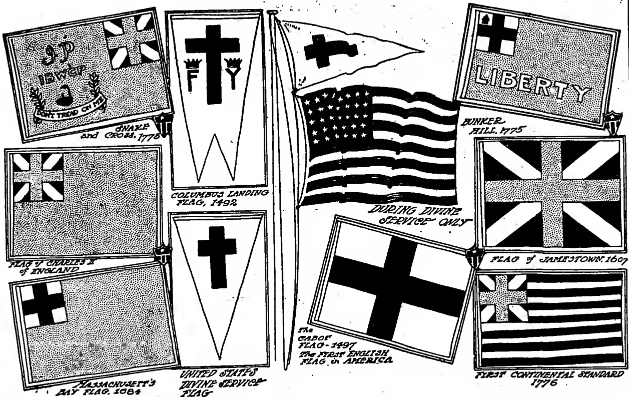
"I gained flesh and strength so rapidly that my friends were astonished. Postum and Grape-Nuts have benefited me so greatly that I am glad to bear this testimony." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in Pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

The Symbol of Christ on the Flag

By PROF. BERNARD J. CIGRAND



SNAKE and CROSS, 1775
DON'T TREAD ON ME
COLUMBUS LANDING FLAG, 1492
F Y LIBERTY
BUNKER HILL, 1775
DURING DIVINE SERVICE ONLY
FLAG of CHARLES II of ENGLAND
FLAG of JAMESTOWN 1607
The CABOT FLAG-1497 The FIRST ENGLISH FLAG in AMERICA
MASSACHUSETT'S BAY FLAG, 1684
UNITED STATES DIVINE SERVICE FLAG
FIRST CONTINENTAL STANDARD 1776

THE Sign of the Cross, or Christ symbol, so widely displayed on Easter day, is an emblem which holds a more prominent place in American heraldry than is generally known. It has been identified with our history as a nation from the beginning, and forms three of the prime elements in the flags of the United States navy. A red cross in saltire is typical of a guardian; a blue saltire cross means danger; while a blue Latin cross signifies the service, devotional or church flag. The last mentioned flag came into being immediately after peace was declared between north and south; and ever since 1866 it has been accorded precedence even over the national banner, on certain occasions. It is the only pennant which at special periods can and does float above the Stars and Stripes.

The flag is triangular in shape and white in color, upon which is blazoned in blue a Latin cross. Just before divine service commences on board a ship of war the Christ emblem is thrown to the breeze. Its white background is symbolic of purity; the blue, or azure, signifies virtue and godliness, and the cross is emblematic of the Savior of mankind.

Chaplain Evans of the United States steamship Minnesota writes as follows: "The flag (service) flies proudly above the national ensign during divine service, and proclaims to all in sight that the only true patriotism is that which has God as its author and which can be sealed with the stamp of approval by the incarnate God—His Son. To the chaplain whose heart is in his work, Sunday is his great day. There is always a celebration of Holy Communion at 7 a. m. By the courtesy of the admiral this is held in his after cabin, to which all officers and enlisted men have ready access. Communicants of all Christian bodies are invited to attend, and there is always a good attendance. At 10:30 a. m. the bugle sounds 'church call,' the church pennant is flown from the mast, and the ship's bell is tolled. Then the 'official divine service' is held. Of necessity the altar is a portable one, the pews consisting of the mess-benches, with chairs in front for the officers. The service never lasts longer than fifty minutes, and consists of prayer, song, and a short, plain talk. Sunday afternoon there is a Bible class, and every evening there is a prayer meeting. At 6:30 on the Sabbath the band gives a sacred concert for one hour, always closing with 'Onward Christian Soldiers' and 'Adeste Fideles.'"

From the foregoing extract from Chaplain Evan's letter it will be seen that the standard bearing the Cross of Christ is granted official recognition and pre-eminence by the federal government at stated intervals. This may seem a trifle inconsistent when it is remembered that our Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States do not recognize any religion. Yet it does not appear so strange when the evolution of our continent and republic is taken into consideration; and we are confronted with evidence of how numerous were the Christ tokens in the various flags which floated over land and sea ere the Stars and Stripes became the supreme emblem of the western world.

Even the alphabet of the navy department in which a peculiar heraldic emblem form a charge upon a single flag, the letter "M" is a white saltire cross in a blue field; a golden Latin cross is the letter "R," while a red saltire cross is the letter "V." This further indicates how the Christ symbol, the cross, has woven itself into the heraldic and patriotic essence of the history of the nation.

The cross of Jesus was indeed early and the same flag floated over the Pilgrims. It was unfurled in the new world, for the banner of Columbus had the symbol blazoned on his "voyage flag" which he displayed on reaching the land, August 12, 1492; and in the name of this emblem he took possession of the strange shores.

England's standard also bore the sacred token, and consequently when Sebastian Cabot landed in Labrador in 1497, at the end of his voyage of discovery, it was under the "Red Cross of St. George" that he took possession of the new domain. The planting of the red cross resulted in grim years of warfare and bloodshed, for many hard-fought battles took place between the French and English over the disputed territory. For one hundred and nine years this Christ emblem was the British symbol of American discovery and possession. But in 1606, one year before the settlement of Jamestown, Va., a new English flag was devised, which contained, besides the red cross of St. George, the white cross of St. Andrew in honor of the Scots who had joined the British nation. These crosses, of Saints George and Andrew, were placed on a blue square, while the remainder of the flag was red. Under this union banner began the labors of the Virginia settlers in 1607, grims at Plymouth, Mass., in 1620.

The East Indian company, which in 1644 intended to improve and settle America, displayed a flag of four stripes, two red and two white, and in a white union there was blazoned a red cross. In 1702 the same company devised a new banner, with the cross in the union still in evidence, but four more stripes added, making five white and five red stripes. Oddly enough in the light of subsequent events this company in 1704 ordered a change in their standard which resulted in the production of a flag with thirteen stripes, six white (argent) and seven red (gules). Now this banner may be said to have been practically the same as the present American flag as regards number and tincture of the stripes—more heraldically denominated "bars"—since "stripes" are perpendicular, while "bars" are longitudinal. The union of this remarkable flag was a red cross on a white field or union, and its thirteen stripes floated in American waters and over American lands seventy-three years before any such device was officially recognized as typically American. The writer saw this flag at the Louvre, Paris, in 1900, the exhibit being marked "East India Company's Ensign, London, 1704." In 1649, on February 22, just eighty-three years before Washington's birth, the English parliament decreed that "ships at sea shall display a new flag consisting of a red cross in union, and in a blue field a yellow (or) harp, representing Ireland."

As early as 1684 the colony of Massachusetts attempted to establish a distinctive colony flag. In a letter to Capt. Thomas Noyes of Newbury, Mass., N. Saltonstall writes:

"In ye major general's letter, I have ordered also to require you which I herein do, with all convenient speed, to provide a flight of colors for your foot company . . . to be green with a red cross, with a white field in the angle."

Two years later, under the rigid rule of the Colonel governor, Sir Edmund Andross, the green flag of Massachusetts was ordered hauled down, and the flag of King James I., with the British crosses, was re-established in New England. The green flag was, according to English heraldry, a "sign of hope," and this is the earliest and first reference regarding it. The flag was actually made and displayed, of which there is no doubt, as in an old English work on heraldry it is described as "Colors of Capt. Noye's Company, Massachusetts Bay, 1684."

The New England people did not like the idea of submitting tamely to the tyrannical orders of the governor, but their weakness impelled obedience to the czar-like attitude of the British officials. Moreover, the Puritans of New England were naturally averse to the worship and display of the cross, or emblem of Christ. Therefore, in the confederacy which was formed of the New England states in 1643, they voted to "Take off the cross, because it is an idolatrous symbol, and place instead a rose, a tree, or other natural object in place of the cross." Hence in many of the early Colonial flags which waved over our possessions under the rule of the Puritans, the cross was missing and its place taken by the pine-tree, a flower, or even an outline of the globe (intended to represent the new world) blazoned on backgrounds of various tints.

A flag owned by Mrs. Craig, a distant relative of General Craig of Revolutionary fame, has the crosses of Saints George and Andrew on a blue field. The remainder of the flag is red, and upon it a coiled rattlesnake in attitude to strike, and under it the significant words, "Don't tread on me." The date of this flag is important, as it would illustrate the first direct attempt to claim certain rights for the colonies. The dual crosses in the union betoken allegiance to England, yet the symbolic snake and the expressive motto plainly indicate a threat against too much interference by the mother country.

Another and later use of the serpent device and motto, "Don't tread on me" was that of the South Carolina troops of the Confederate army, who employed it on their flag during the Civil war.

At the battle of Bunker Hill, the first real clash of arms and initial display of independent colors, there were two decidedly colonial flags—one "a red cross on white union, with pine-tree in dexter quarter, field of flag red;" the other the "English union bearing the crosses of Saints George and Andrew with field red, containing the war cry, 'Liberty and Union.'"

On January 2, 1776, General Washington displayed over the troops at Cambridge the earliest effort to form a flag which would express that the colonies had united in defense of their homes, but still manifesting a love for English historical tradition. This flag was of thirteen stripes, seven red and six white. The union consisted of the Latin cross of St. George, and the saltire, or X cross of St. Andrew, on a blue field. This remained the Continental flag for just seventeen and one-half months. Then on June 14, 1777, the Continental congress adopted a device for a flag which has been universally pronounced a happy combination of ideas, namely the Stars and Stripes, which waves triumphantly as the emblem of American patriotism over a free country.

BEGIN TO DISCIPLINE EARLY

Better to Teach Child as a Baby Rather Than When His Habits Have Been Formed.

There is nothing more beautiful than a baby just learning to talk and beginning to run about. He has so many charming ways, and each new accomplishment is so absorbingly interesting. At the very worst his misdemeanors do not irritate us, and usually they are amusing. It is far pleasanter and easier to divert the child's attention than to take him seriously; and so, since there is no good stopping-place, he is coaxed and indulged until he is no longer a baby. But the habits that were amusing in the two-year-old cease to be funny at four and five, and at seven and eight they begin to be unendurable; and it is a sad fact that punishment usually begins at an age when there should be no further occasion for it, and when, to confess the truth, it often does more harm than good. As the baby faults grow more and more irritating the child himself grows less and less appealing. We can punish now, and we do. We are sure that a child of his age "ought to know better," though just why it might be hard to tell. It is certainly no fault of his that seven-year-old naughtiness is less attractive than the baby variety, and habit is a powerful antagonist.

It is perfectly safe to say that every child will require punishment at some time. It is absolutely certain that some time, from some source, in some way, he will receive his share of the world's discipline. In babyhood it is light; later it is severe. In babyhood there are no bad habits to combat; later the habits are a part of the child. In babyhood the grief is soon forgotten; later humiliation and resentment live in the heart and often embitter the dearest ties. In view of these perfectly obvious truths the fact that we do not wish to discipline the baby becomes the chief reason why we ought to discipline him. If we wait until we wish to punish him our own motives are degrading; what should be education becomes retaliation; and neither our judgment nor our justice is to be trusted.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Sacrifice Made By Husband

Remarkable Self-Abnegation That Proved His Love for Her Was True and Deep.

One of the most curious stories recently passing within view of the office window comes from the state of Georgia. It discloses an example of self-sacrifice quite out of the ordinary.

A young widow was married a year ago to the estimable man with whom she lived most happily for several months, their home life being described by neighbors as little short of ideal. Then all of a sudden the young wife became strangely despondent and distressed. After much pleading from her husband she finally declared that she was constantly haunted by the ghost of her former husband. During the latter's life, she explained, she had solemnly promised that in the event of his death she would never remarry, and that, having violated that pledge, she was tortured every hour with his ghostly reproaches.

The husband, after earnest but futile efforts to overcome his wife's strange melancholy, generously effaced himself from her life by consenting to a separation and turning over to her the charming home in which they had for a time been happy together.—New York Daily Mail.

The Trouble.

"By Jove, I left my purse under my pillow!"

"Oh, well, your servant is honest, isn't she?"

"That's just it. She'll take it to my wife."

20 Pretty Rooms in this FREE BOOK

Walls and how to decorate them
The Alabastine Book

—don't you want to see them?

Peep into other people's new homes and get the latest ideas for your own decorating. Our book tells about the FREE Color Plans our expert designers will send you for any rooms you wish to decorate. You will be glad to know more about

Alabastine

The Beautiful Wall Tint

so exquisite in color and quality it is used in the most expensive modern homes though it costs far less than wall paper or paint. Kalsomine colors appear harsh and crude beside the soft-hued Alabastine tints. Goes farthest on the walls and is easiest to use. Full directions on every package—simply mix with cold water and put on. Does not chip, peel or rub off. 16 Beautiful Colors and—

With our Color Plans you can easily have the most artistic home in your neighborhood.

Send for our FREE BOOK
Full 5 lb. pkg White 50c.
Regular Tints 55c.

Alabastine Company
52 Grandville Road, Grand Rapids, Mich.
New York City, Desk 2, 105 Water St.

FORD'S

A Pointed Argument

Gal-va-nite Roofing is the cheapest in the long run for it never needs painting or repairs. First Cost—Last Cost.

It is waterproofed with a "triple asphalt coating" and weatherproofed both sides with an "armor plating of mica." Gives protection against fire and lightning.

GAL-VA-NITE

The Ideal Roofing for any kind of a building in any kind of a climate. Has stood the "Test of Time."

It is put up in rolls of 108 sq. ft. with zinc-coated, galvanized nails, cement and illustrated direction sheet.

Ask your dealer for Gal-va-nite Roofing or send for samples and booklets, "Gal-va-nite Qualities" & "The Inside of an Outside Proposition"

Ford Mfg Co.
Chicago
St. Paul
St. Louis
Omaha
Kansas City

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

DEFIANCE Cold Water Starch makes laundry work a pleasure. 16 oz. pkg. 10c.

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 13–1912.

REAL ESTATE

WESTERN CANADA FARM LANDS for $12-$18 per acre in the finest mixed farming district in Canadian West. Close to Prince Albert, Sask., splendid market point. Free Government homesteads also within 25 miles of City, crops excellent, settlement coming in fast. For free literature and maps, write Julius S. Woodward, Sec. Board of Trade, Dept. L, Prince Albert, Sask.

HUMBOLDT, SASKATCHEWAN, HAS 4,000 FREE HOMESTEADS and improved farms $15 to $30 per acre. Best wheat and mixed-farming soil. Write, Commissioner, Board of Trade, Humboldt

WESTERN CANADA FARM LANDS One crop pays for your farm. Finest wheat land in the world $30 an acre and up on terms to suit purchaser. Write immediately for full particulars of choice farms in all parts of Western Canada. Willett, Affleck & McLennan, 365 Portage Ave., Winnipeg, Man.

FOR SALE—40 A. IN ASHLAND CO., WIS., near Butternut; 15 a. cult.; house, barn, outbldgs., stock, mach., etc. McNulty, Box 310, Chicago

FOR SALE—BEST 100 A. FARM IN BENTON Co., Minn.; 70 a. cult.; house, outbldgs., stock, machinery, etc.; ½ mile depot, in St. Cloud. Am a woman; must sell. TROYER, Box 319, Chicago.

FOR SALE—210½ A. IN KOSSUTH CO., IOWA; 140 a. cult.; 5 r. house, barn, outbuildings, etc. Will sacrifice. PERSIO, Box 619, Chicago.

FOR SALE—80 A. IN JACKSON CO., MINN.; 60 a. cult.; house, orch., etc.; with or without stock and mach. STRAND, Box 310, Chicago.

FOR SALE—800 A. IN FRANKLIN CO., WASH.; 600 a. cult.; house, barn, sheds, etc. Great chance for some one. Beckwith, Box 310, Chicago.

FOR SALE—160 A. IN N. W. SASK., CAN., 15 a. cult.; house, stable, etc.; excellent proposition; bargain price. SHAW, Box 310, Chicago.

FOR SALE—480 A. IN SASK., CAN., NEAR Grayson; 275 a. cult.; 8 r. h., barn, gran., stock, mach., etc. Addr. PALMER, Box 319, Chicago.

TO SETTLE ESTATE, 200 A. IN WASHARA Co., Wis., 140 a. cult.; 7 r. h., new barn, outbldgs., silo, orchard. HEANEY, Box 310, Chicago.

44 Bu. to the Acre

is a heavy yield, but that's what John Kennedy of Edmonton, Alberta, Western Canada, got from 40 acres of Spring Wheat in 1910. Reports from other districts in that province showed other excellent results—such as 4,000 bushels of wheat from 120 acres, or 33 1-3 bu. per acre. 25, 30 and 40 bushel yields were numerous. As high as 132 bushels of oats to the acre were threshed from Alberta fields in 1910.

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

The Silver Cup

at the recent Spokane Fair was awarded to the Alberta Government for its exhibit of grains, grasses and vegetables. Reports of excellent yields for 1910 come also from Saskatchewan and Manitoba in Western Canada.

Free homesteads of 160 acres, and adjoining pre-emptions of 160 acres (at $3 per acre) are to be had in the choicest districts.

Schools convenient, climate excellent, soil the very best, railways close at hand, building lumber cheap, fuel easy to get and reasonable in price, water easily procured, mixed farming a success.

Write as to best place for settlement, settlers' low railway rates, descriptive illustrated "Last Best West" (sent free on application) and other information, to Sup't of Immigration, Ottawa, Can., or to the Canadian Government Agent. (36)

Chas. Pilling, Clifford Blk. Grand Forks, N.D.
J. M. MacLachlan, Box 197, Watertown, S.D.
E. T. Holmes, 315 Jackson St., St. Paul, Minn.
Geo. A. Hall, 125 2d St., Milwaukee, Wis.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

APPORTIONMENT FOR REPUBLICANS

SECRETARY OF STATE FILES FIGURES OF REPUBLICAN VOTE IN 1910 AS BASIS OF COUNT.

1 FOR EVERY 250 VOTES

Convention of About 1,100 Delegates Expected—Democrats to Meet At Duluth. June 6.

St. Paul. — For the purpose of arranging the representation in the next Republican state convention Secretary of State Schmahl filed with E. E. Smith, chairman of the Republican state central committee, the total Republican vote cast at the last election in the several counties, together with its apportionment on a delegate basis.

Assuming that the representation will be five delegates at large for each county and one delegate for each 250 votes, or major fraction thereof, Mr. Schmahl furnishes the following compilation from the official returns in his office, the delegates as credited to each county being figured on the total vote cast for the six Republican candidates:

Apportionment by Counties.

Aitkin, 9; Anoka, 10; Becker, 12; Beltrami, 11; Benton, 9; Big Stone, 9; Blue Earth, 17; Brown, 12; Carlton, 10; Carver, 12; Cass, 8; Chippewa, 10; Chisago, 13; Clearwater, 8; Cook, 6; Cottonwood, 11; Crow Wing, 11; Dakota, 14; Dodge, 9; Douglas, 12; Faribault, 13; Fillmore, 15; Freeborn, 14; Goodhue, 19; Grant, 9; Hennepin, 84; Houston, 11; Hubbard, 9; Isanti, 9; Itasca, 11; Jackson, 10; Kennebec, 8; Kandiyohi, 13; Kittson, 8; Koochiching, 8; Lac Qui Parle, 11; Lake, 7; Le Sueur, 10; Lincoln, 9; Lyon, 11; McLeod, 10; Mahnomen, 6; Marshall, 12; Martin, 13; Meeker, 13; Mille Lacs, 8; Morrison, 12; Mower, 13; Murray, 10; Nicollet, 10; Noble, 10; Norman, 10; Olmsted, 14; Otter Tail, 18; Pennington, 5; Pine, 10; Pipestone, 9; Polk, 20; Pope, 7; Ramsey, 68; Red Lake, 13; Redwood, 12; Renville, 15; Rice, 15; Rock, 9; Roseau, 0; St. Louis, 39; Scott, 8; Sherburne, 8; Sibley, 10; Stearns, 9; Steele, 12; Stevens, 8; Swift, 11; Todd, 12; Traverse, 8; Wabasha, 13; Wadena, 8; Waseca, 11; Washington, 14; Watonwan, 10; Wilkin, 9; Winona, 16; Wright, 14; Yellow Medicine, 11.

The representation as provided in Mr. Schmahl's compilation will make a convention of about 1,100 delegates. Chairman Smith will take up the figures with the state central committee at its next meeting, the call for which will be issued shortly.

Democrats to Duluth.

The democratic state central committee declared against a presidential primary in Minnesota this spring. At the same time the committee passed a resolution urging the legislature to pass a law providing for presidential preference primaries.

The committee met in St. Paul and in addition to expressing its attitude on the presidential primary:

Decided to hold democratic convention in Duluth June 6.

Voted to grant representation in state convention on basis of one delegate for every 125 votes for Bryan in 1908, with two delegates at large from each county.

Passed a resolution declaring against the unit rule in state conventions, thus practically assuring a divided Minnesota delegation to the democratic national convention.

Elected D. D. Daly of Minneapolis chairman of the democratic state central committee to succeed Frank A. Day.

DANES HOLD CONVENTION

Minnesota District Lutherans Adjourn Meetings at Owatonna.

Owatonna. — Sunday marked the close of the convention of the Minnesota district of the Danish Lutheran church. Fifty additional delegates and visitors arrived for the final session which was the most interesting of the series. The church was packed at the closing address which was delivered by Rev. H. W. Bondo of Sleepy Eye. Addresses were delivered in the afternoon by Rev. O. R. Olson of Minneapolis and Rev. P. C. Paulsen of Nelson.

At the forenoon service special communion services were conducted by Rev. T. P. Beck of Hutchinson assisted by Rev. M. O. Block of Ellendale. Fifty young people took communion. Peter Clausen, missionary, told of the trials through which the missionaries of Christian churches passed in the far east and of the spread of the Gospel in foreign lands.

Rev. N. C. Carlsen of Superior delivered the address to the delegates at the closing session, counseling them to go forth and work for the improvement of conditions in every land.

WORK FOR GOOD ROADS.

St. Peter.—The Nicollet and Le Sueur counties Good Roads association was organized at a meeting held here. County Commissioner A. J. Potts was elected president, Oscar Swenson of New Sweden secretary, and E. O. Mork of Lake Prairie treasurer. It was decided that each township in the two counties be allowed three representatives on the board of directors, these to be appointed by the chairmen of the boards of supervisors.

WILL COLLECT DATA

Maxfield Selects Man in Each County to Make Monthly Reports.

St. Paul.—To aid in the collection of data on the resources of Minnesota to be disseminated throughout the country in advertising Minnesota to prospective settlers and immigrants, H. J. Maxfield, commissioner of immigration, has appointed one man in each county of the state, who will make monthly reports to him of crop conditions and other information pertaining to Minnesota's development. This is a part of the plan of Commissioner Maxfield to broaden and enlarge the work of the department. The men appointed in the various localities are:

Aitkin county, C. H. Warner, Aitkin.
Anoka, E. E. Guy, Cedar.
Becker, Theodore Beaulieu, White Earth.
Beltrami, J. J. Opsahl, Bemidji.
Benton, W. H. Hanscom, Foley.
Big Stone, A. B. Kaercher, Ortonville.
Blue Earth, George Atchison, Mankato.
Brown, W. R. Hodges, Sleepy Eye.
Carlton, C. F. Mahnke, Moose Lake.
Carver, C. T. Fenton, Chaska.
Cass, M. N. Koll, Cass Lake.
Chippewa, E. H. Crandall, Montevideo.
Chisago, Curtis Johnson, Rush City.
Clay, A. J. Wright, Moorhead.
Clearwater, F. B. Kalberg, Bagley.
Cook, Charles Johnson, Grand Marais.
Cottonwood, Ben H. Cone, Windom.
Crow Wing, A. R. Holman, Pequot.
Dakota, Robert Carmichael, Farmington.
Dodge, Peter Schwarke, Dodge Center.
Douglas, George L. Treat, Alexandria.
Faribault, Louis Petters, Elmore.
Fillmore, Henry Nupson, Preston.
Freeborn, H. P. Hanson, Albert Lea.
Goodhue, L. W. Williams, Zumbrota.
Grant, F. C. Anderson, Herman.
Hennepin, M. H. Hegerle, St. Bonifacius.
Houston, C. H. Murphy, Caledonia.
Hubbard, W. B. Nixon, Nevis.
Isanti, J. S. Stoneburg, Cambridge.
Itasca, A. J. McGuire, Grand Rapids.
Jackson, H. L. Strom, Jackson.
Kanabec, Charles F. Serline, Mora.
Kandiyohi, T. O. Gilbert, Willmar.
Kittson, T. M. George, Hallock.
Koochiching, George P. Watson, International Falls.
Lac qui Parle, O. R. Nelson, Madison.
Lake, John Dwan, Two Harbors.
Le Sueur, C. W. Glotfelter, Waterville.
Lincoln, J. H. Brown, Tyler.
Lyon, H. M. Clark, Marshall.
McLeod, I. S. Steenslund, Hutchinson.
Mahnomen, John W. Carl, Mahnomen.
Marshall, F. A. Green, Stephen.
Martin, Frank Wade, Fairmont.
Meeker, K. Johnson, Dassel.
Mille Lacs, J. G. Stanley, Princeton.
Morrison, Frank Logan, Royalton.
Mower, O. L. Dornberg, Austin.
Murray, Alfred Terry, Slayton.
Nicollet, E. E. Miller, St. Peter.
Nobles, W. E. Oliver, Worthington.
Norman, Sam Olson, Ada.
Olmsted, Charles Gray, Rochester.
Otter Tail, Charles R. Wright, Fergus Falls.
Pennington, D. P. O'Neill, Thief River Falls.
Pine, George W. Empey, Hinckley.
Pipestone, Ed Yucum, Edgerton.
Polk, H. C. Misner, Crookston.
Pope, T. T. Ofsthume, Glenwood.
Ramsey, G. L. Hubbell, St. Paul.
Red Lake, V. M. Higginbotham, Redwood Falls.
Redwood, James A. Larson.
Renville, C. A. Hines, Olivia.
Rice, L. F. Shandorf, Faribault.
Rock, C. E. Older, Luverne.
Roseau, George H. Matson, Roseau.
St. Louis, A. B. Hostetter, Duluth.
Scott, P. H. Schwartz, Shakopee.
Sherburne, C. D. Schwab, Clear Lake.
Sibley, C. A. Benson, Winthrop.
Stearns, Frank Minette, Sauk Center.
Steele, J. R. Morley, Owatonna.
Stevens, E. C. Higbie, Morris.
Swift, F. C. Thornton, Benson.
Todd, Rudolph Lee, Long Prairie.
Traverse, F. W. Murphy, Wheaton.
Wabasha, C. D. Burchard, Plainview.
Wadena, Asher Murray, Wadena.
Waseca, H. A. Panzram, Waseca.
Washington, Paul Burtsloff, Stillwater.
Watonwan, Otto Uhlhorn, St. James.
Wilkin, C. W. Burrow, Breckenridge.
Winona, J. H. Bierce, Winona.
Wright, J. W. Beckman, Cokato.
Yellow Medicine, C. W. Allen, Canby.

BRYAN IS NOMINATED.

For President Again—By a Mock Convention.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Hon. William Jennings Bryan was in a national, nonpartisan mock political convention nominated as the "people's" candidate for president of the United States, when delegates of University of Minnesota students, representing 5,000 students and "every state in the Union," assembled in the armory hall and conducted the most notable political convention in the history of the university. About 1,600 persons, including delegates, attended.

The convention was literally a "wild" one, with an almost continuous uproar from 7:30 until after midnight. It demonstrated the sudden changes of political fortune, when North Dakota presented a solid delegation of four in the convention which stood staunchly by Roosevelt and voted for him to the end.

Two ballots were taken with no majority on the first and Mr. Bryan far in the lead. On the second ballot he out-distanced all other Democratic candidates with 204 votes, and although 275 was the necessary majority to nominate, the morning hour was drawing near and the convention broke up with Bryanites declaring him the nominee, and opponents of all creeds yelling strenuously for another ballot.

The candidates presented and the vote for each follows: Bryan, 204; Taft, 69; La Follette, 62; Roosevelt, 42; Stewart (Prohibition), 3; Debs, 2; "Bob" Dunn, 1.

"Cowboy and the Squaw."

Following "The Cowboy and the Squaw" at the Bijou the attraction will be "The Convict's Daughter," a powerful melodrama abounding in startling sensations, which has been meeting with big success on the popular-priced circuit for a number of years.

T. R. IN MINNESOTA

Will Speak in Minneapolis and Duluth.

Minneapolis, March ".—Plans for the entertainment of Colonel Roosevelt when he comes to Minnesota next week were begun at the state headquarters in St. Paul. The information is that he will make two speeches in the state. It is planned to have him give one speech in Duluth and the other in Minneapolis, which will be a Twin City union meeting.

INDIANS ASK FOR AID

CHIPPEWAS OF THREE RESERVATIONS HOLD COUNCIL AT LEECH LAKE AGENCY.

WANT HOME FOR AGED

Refer to Uncle Sam's Efforts At Relief As "Red Ribbon Tactics" —Grateful to Congressman Miller.

Walker.—A big council of the Chippewa Indians was held at the Leech lake agency, there being delegates present from the Leech Lake, Cass Lake, and White Earth reservations. The meeting was one of the most enthusiastic councils ever held by the Indians in northern Minnesota, practically all the orators of the entire reservation being on hand to plead in favor of a government appropriation for an Old Indian's Home and hospital at the Old Agency. The following address to the Commissioner of Indian affairs was adopted; and is given here in part:

"The Chippewas of Minnesota have many million dollars to their credit, yet we can get no benefits from this. The $5.25 which we get each year is nothing, and it is not much more than the expense of going after it. When the white men wants buildings or government improvements they get it even if the government has to go in debt for them, but we Indians who have millions can get nothing. Every month we bury a number of our old people who have lived in sickness and want, waiting from year to year for some benefits from the Chippewa funds. If things go on as they have, we who are in council today will also be buried before we get any relief and maybe our children will suffer the same disappointments while the bankers are using our money and employes and investigators are eating it up. We are tired of this waiting.

Sick of Alleged Regulations.

We are sick of what you call Indian regulations. We want more benefits. You are too slow in Washington and there is too much of what you call red ribbon. These things we want:

"For our old men and women a home and hospital. One hundred thousand dollars is none too much. We want this building at the Old Agency. This is a good place near the lake as we do not like the prairies. The lakes give us fish and rice and we can travel around in our canoes, and the woods give us much game, fuel and lumber and good land for gardens.

For our young men we want help in breaking our land, and we want teachers to work with us and show us the best way to raise the potato and other garden things the same as white folks do. We want the seed so we can start farming and we will pay it back in the fall if you want us to. This is what we want and we will thank you when we get it." The report is signed by the committee, Ben King and Kay-hay-waince.

A copy of the address was also forwarded to Congressman Miller, along with a letter thanking him for the work he had done in behalf of the tribe, particularly for his bill appropriating $100,000 for an Indian hospital.

SETTLERS ARE COMING.

Two Thousand Families Have Come In This Year.

The biggest and most valuable influx of settlers that Minnesota has ever known is on. More than 2,000 families, principally farmers from states east and south of the state, have already entered since January 1. The movement is getting into full swing. As many settlers who are farmers with means came into the state last year as came in the entire three years preceding, and this year, if the present rate is maintained, twice as many will have settled here as came in last year. Railroad officials pronounce it the most important factor of the day in consideration of the future wealth and prominence of the state and although the far west movement is still on and thousands are going to the western states and Canada, the immigration stream is being tapped within the borders of this state and Minnesota is profiting as never before.

Boost Ladd For Wiley's Job.

Fargo. — North Dakotans are planning to inaugurate a movement in the interest of Pure Food Commissioner Ladd of this state to succeed Dr. Wiley. "The resignation of Dr. Wiley," said Commissioner Ladd, "will probably mean that the impure food and drug interests will control that department. It will also mean that the national pure food law will not be enforced as it has been or should be."

TO TEST LIQUOR LAW

Outcome of Death of a Man At Lamberton.

Lamberton.—A suit has been started in district court against several saloonkeepers who sold liquor to one John Choudek, who laid down in the road on his way home and was run over by an automobile and killed. The action is based on the law making the saloonkeeper liable for damages caused by the sale of liquor. The widow and minor daughters bring the action.

POULTRY

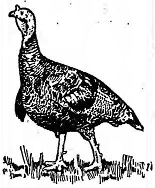
TO MANAGE TURKEY POULTS

Breeding of Youngsters Demands Strict Attention to Details, Although Simple Operation.

(By COOPER CURTICE.)

The artificial or natural brooding of poults, although a comparatively simple operation, demands strict attention to details and is the most important phase in turkey raising, inasmuch as the first month of the poult's life is the most precarious period. From that period onward, all other dangers, excepting that of blackhead disease, continue to grow less.

If a hen is confined in a roomy, covered pen, and the poults are carefully yarded during the first month, she will, barring the ravages of blackhead disease, raise 90 per cent. of them. If she is allowed to roam she may raise as many, but it will depend largely upon their fortuitous escape from water, cold and animal foes. Their survival may also depend upon the individual characteristics of the hen as a brooder, and upon the care which she receives.



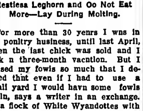
Excellent Type.

Poults improperly brooded during the first week begin to die in the second. They seem at this early age particularly subject to lung and abdominal troubles. Overheating and chilling, and rapid changes from hot to cool conditions, affect them fatally. The connection between the lungs and the abdominal air sacs is such that both are affected by colds. One of the most common results of these inflammations is a suspension of eating followed by the absence of ingesta in the intestine. The consequence of this is that the white material excreted by the kidneys becomes more apparent, and gives rise to the symptom called white diarrhea. While this inflammation may or may not be due to a specific germ, the disease is so readily prevented by proper temperature conditions during the first three weeks of the poult's life that it matters little whether it is a germ disease or not. The disease is on the same basis as pneumonia in human beings, since germs in that case may cause the disease, but they seem to get their first foothold by inflammations produced in the tissues as a result of changes of temperature.

WHITE WYANDOTTE IN FAVOR

Fowls Are Docile Compared With Restless Leghorn and Do Not Eat More—Lay During Molting.

For more than 30 years I was in the poultry business, until last April, when the last chick was sold and I took a three-month vacation. But I missed my fowls so much that I decided that even if I had to use a small yard I would have some fowls again, says a writer in an exchange. So a flock of White Wyandottes with 13 small chicks came into my possession. To say that I am delighted is to put it mildly. They are so docile compared with the restless Leghorn that it is much less work to keep them contented. The Leghorns never get over being frightened when schoolboys race along their park. They are in a panic much of the time, while these phlegmatic fowls are not easily ruffled. Even while molting they lay. I cannot see that they eat a bit more than their nervous friends, the Brown Leghorns.



White Wyandottes.

Eggs and Cold Weather.

Plenty of eggs and cold weather don't generally go together; but cold weather and high-priced eggs are warm companions.

Green Feed.

Don't forget the green feed, sprouted oats, cabbages, turnips, etc. All help keep biddy's singing voice in tune this time of year.

THE SAFE LAXATIVE FOR ELDERLY PEOPLE

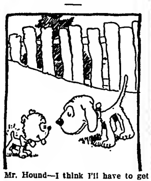
Most elderly people are more or less troubled with a chronic, persistent constipation, due largely to lack of sufficient exercise. They experience difficulty in digesting even light food, with a consequent belching of stomach gases, drowsiness after eating, headache and a feeling of lassitude and general discomfort.

Doctors advise against cathartics and violent purgatives of every kind, recommending a mild, gentle laxative tonic, like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, to effect relief without disturbing the entire system.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the perfect laxative, easy in action, certain in effect and, withal, pleasant to the taste. It possesses tonic properties that strengthen the stomach, liver and bowels and is a remedy that has been for years the great standby in thousands of families, and should be in every family medicine chest. It is equally as valuable for children as for older people.

Druggists everywhere sell Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in 50c and $1.00 bottles. If you have never tried it send your name and address to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., and he will be very glad to send a sample bottle for trial.

THE ETERNAL FEMININE.



Mr. Hound—I think I'll have to get a license—

Miss Kyoodle—Oh! this is so sudden!

HANDS BURNED LIKE FIRE

"I can truthfully say Cuticura Remedies have cured me of four long years of eczema. About four years ago I noticed some little pimples coming on my little finger, and not giving it any attention, it soon became worse and spread all over my hands. If I would have them in water for a long time, they would burn like fire and large cracks would come. I could lay a pin in them. After using all the salves I could think of, I went to three different doctors, but all did me no good. The only relief I got was scratching.

"So after hearing so much about the wonderful Cuticura Remedies, I purchased one complete set, and after using them three days my hands were much better. Today my hands are entirely well, one set being all I used." (Signed) Miss Etta Nerber, R. F. D. 2, Spring Lake, Mich., Sept. 26, 1910.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

A man is known by the company he keeps, and by the conversation he hands out.

Stop the Pain.
The hurt of a burn or a cut stops when Cole's Carbolisalve is applied. It heals quickly and prevents scars. 25c and 50c by druggists. For free sample write to J. W. Cole & Co., Black River Falls, Wis.

Some men haven't sense enough to stop borrowing when they strike oil.

A remedy that has stood the test of time is worth trying. Garfield Tea relieves liver, kidney and stomach troubles.

Measure the depth of the water before making your dive.

There is no excuse for the dyspeptic, with Garfield Tea accessible at every drugstore.

Even a wise man never gets over being a fool to a certain extent.

"Pink Eye" is Epidemic in the Spring.
Try Murine Eye Remedy for Reliable Relief.

The way to get a reputation for goodness is to be good.

Relieves Backache Instantly

Sloan's Liniment is a great remedy for backache It penetrates and relieves the pain instantly—no rubbing necessary—just lay it on lightly.

Here's Proof.

"I had my back hurt in the Boer War and in San Francisco two years ago I was hit by a street car in the same place. I tried all kinds of dope without success. Two weeks ago I saw your liniment in a drug store and got a bottle to try. The first application caused instant relief, and now except for a little stiffness, I am almost well."
FLETCHER NORMAN,
Whittier, Calif.

SLOAN'S LINIMENT

is the best remedy for rheumatism, neuralgia, sore throat and sprains.

Miss E. Rim of Brooklyn, N.Y., writes: "Sloan's Liniment is the best for rheumatism. I have used six bottles of it and it is grand."

Sold by all Dealers.
Price, 25c., 50c., and $1.00.

Sloan's Book on Horses, Cattle, Hogs and Poultry sent free. Address Dr. Earl S. Sloan Boston, Mass.

KOW-KURE

MAKES COWS PROLIFIC

Don't sell your barren cow to the butcher. Kow Kure, the great cow remedy, will make her productive and prolific. Kow Kure is a medicine for cows only—a positive cure for ABORTION, SCOURS, MILK FEVER, LOST APPETITE, and all other ailments that make cows sickly and unprofitable.

Send today for free book, "More Money From Your Cows."

DAIRY ASSOCIATION CO., MFRS.
Lyndonville, Vt., U. S. A.

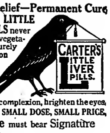
Constipation Vanishes Forever

Prompt Relief—Permanent Cure

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS never fail. Purely vegetable — act surely but gently on the liver. Stop after dinner distress—cure indigestion, improve the complexion, brighten the eyes. SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good



CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
Cleanses and beautifies the hair. Promotes a luxuriant growth. Never Fails to Restore Gray Hair to its Youthful Color. Prevents hair falling. 50c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

THE NEW FRENCH REMEDY. No. 1, No. 2, No. 3.
THERAPION Used in French Hospitals with GREAT SUCCESS, CURES KIDNEY, BLADDER DISEASES, PILES, CHRONIC ULCERS, SKIN ERUPTIONS—EITHER SEX. Send address envelope for FREE booklet to DR. LE CLERC MED. CO., HAVERSTOCK RD., HAMPSTEAD, LONDON, ENG.

Brown's Bronchial Troches
Nothing excels this Cough Remedy. No opiates. Sample free JOHN I. BROWN & SON, Boston, Mass.

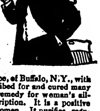
Readers of this paper desiring to buy anything advertised in its columns should insist upon having what they ask for, refusing all substitutes or imitations

Woman's Power Over Man

Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, no one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her special womanly organism soon loses the power to sway the heart of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman. Dr. R.V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N.Y., with the assistance of his staff of able physicians, has prescribed for and cured many thousands of women. He has devised a successful remedy for woman's ailments. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a positive specific for the weaknesses and disorders peculiar to women. It purifies, regulates, strengthens and heals. Medicine dealers sell it. No honest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute in order to make a little larger profit.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG, SICK WOMEN WELL.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and strengthen Stomach, Liver and Bowels.



FOR PINK EYE DISTEMPER CATARRHAL FEVER AND ALL NOSE AND THROAT DISEASES

Cures the sick and acts as a preventive for others. Liquid given on the tongue. Safe for brood mares and all others. Best kidney remedy; 50 cents and $1.00 a bottle; $5.00 and $10.00 the dozen. Sold by all druggists and horse goods houses, or sent express paid, by the manufacturers.

SPOHN MEDICAL CO., Chemists, GOSHEN, INDIANA

SPOHN'S DISTEMPER CURE

FASHION'S PARADE ON EASTER

THE GREAT FASHION (EASTER) PARADE AT ATLANTIC CITY
MARQUISE CONFALONIERI, ITALIAN AMBASSADOR AND DAUGHTER
SECRETARY OF THE NAVY AND MRS. MEYER IN THE EASTER PARADE
ATTORNEY GENERAL AND MRS. WICKERSHAM
MR. AND MRS. PERRY BELMONT IN THE EASTER PARADE

ALTHOUGH Easter, more than any other holiday of the year, may be said to be a worldwide festival and is celebrated in one way or another in scores of different countries, there is one phase of Easter observance which may be said to be strictly American—American in origin and American in development, inasmuch as few other countries have copied this phase of Yankee life. This unique feature of the joyous day is fashion's parade on Easter—on Easter morning we came pretty near saying, but that would be incorrect since the annual fashion parade is no longer restricted to the morning hours of the most significant holiday on the church calendar.

Fashion's parade on Easter merely means, of course, the ceremonial display of clothes, broad new clothes of course, and more important yet, new hats. Easter has attained a position of pre-eminence as the one occasion above all others in the whole year when it is incumbent upon all those who essay to be well dressed to make their appearance in new and distinctive styles. Insofar as Dame Fashion is concerned Easter Sunday, on whatever date it falls, is accounted the first day of spring—the occasion of the "spring opening" of the wearers of costumes calculated to cause comment. Therefore, even though the temperature, by some freak of nature, be close to zero, milady who desires to observe the conventions will appear on Easter morning in all the glory of the newest creations of milliners and dressmakers. She may be tempted to shiver in the chilly blasts of an early Easter, but her pride in her new finery can usually be relied upon to help her combat the icy winds.

A movement was started some years ago to induce the women of the United States to unite in robbing Easter Sunday of its significance as a "field day" for the new fashions. According to the new mandate it was not to be considered "good form" for a woman to appear on Easter resplendent in fresh editions to her wardrobe. She might display her new treasures—for, of what use would nice clothes be to a woman if she could not show them—on the Sunday preceding Easter or on the Sunday following Easter or at any other time, but the custom was to be decried of turning Easter into a grand review for marshaling the newest products of the dressmakers, the bootmakers and the milliners.

The new plan was all very well in theory, but the persons who suggested it evidently did not figure on the persistency with which the daughters of the republic can cling to a cherished prerogative. The American woman simply declined to abandon their Easter fashion parade and consequently the season's surprises in new raiment continue to be as indispensable adjuncts to a regulation Easter observance as are the Easter lilies and the Easter eggs. The credit for the preservation of the traditions of the Easter fashion parade is given to the women because it is the members of the fair sex who both as spectators and participants are the most numerous and most enthusiastic supporters of the function. At the same time it would be idle to insinuate that many of the opposite sex have not succumbed to the influence of the Easter dress parade. Among the male contingent there is a brave representation of spring overcoats and spring suits, that make their appearance for the first time, but the one pre-eminent touch which proclaims the occasion is the array of new collars and ties. Some men there may be, who, because of prejudice or pocketbook, will not indulge themselves in the new conceits of the tailors on Easter, but there are none who need forego the indispensable of a novelty in neckwear.

As has been said, fashion's parade on Easter marches up and down the entire land. There are some famous Easter fashion parades in the United States, notably the one on Fifth avenue, New York, and the one on the Boardwalk at Atlantic City, but there is scarce a city or town or village from Maine to California or from Michigan to Texas that does not enjoy its own Easter panorama—particularly if the community is not so small that there are no church services to act as an incentive to draw forth the birds of plumage. And just here, it may be noted in wonder, that such is the perfection of our modern system of fashion distribution that the Easter parade in the most remote town affords proof that her feminine residents are little behind New York and even Paris in the main essentials of the "new styles."

While on this phase of the subject it may be remarked that very few of the fashionable paraders in the Easter throngs realize how far-reaching have been the preparations for this display and how far back, in point of time, have extended the preliminaries for the burst of glory. Milady may not even realize that the milliners who "did" her hat have been working literally night and day for a fortnight before Easter and that the delivery boy who distributed the "confections" of lace and ribbons, had precious little sleep on Easter eve. But the trail of preparation goes yet farther back. It extends as far as fascinating Paris, where all the styles originate and where the ammunition for the Easter broadside was a matter of concern to hundreds of designers and seamstresses and bonnet makers and flower workers in the days when you and I were busy with Christmas preparations. There is usually at least three or four months between the inception of a costume idea in Paris and the realization of the "dream" in America and consequently American dressmakers and milliners were paying hundreds of dollars for advance information regarding the Easter styles and furtive peeps at the new Easter hats ere the prospective wearers in America had commenced to bother their heads on the subject.

The traditional hour for the Easter fashion parade is after the morning church service and this time continues the accepted interval in most communities. It is, for instance, in the interim from twelve to one o'clock that one sees the impressive procession of gorgeously-gowned women and correctly-attired men which renders Fifth avenue, New York, memorable on this occasion. So to in most of the smaller cities the church hour is accounted the logical time for fashion's review because there is nothing to call forth the population en masse at any other time in the day—unless it be, mayhap, to evening church service when, of course, it is too dark to have fanciful toilettes appear to the best advantage.

In some of our cities, however, notably in the national capital, it has come about that in recent years there are in effect two fashion parades on Easter. The first is held, as above mentioned, at the conclusion of the morning church service, but the newer and more popular promenade comes late in the afternoon, when well dressed people of all ages traverse the principal residential thoroughfares inspired by a frank interest in their fellow-beings and their raiment. The morning fashion parade finds almost everybody afoot if the weather be at all pleasant, but in the "moving picture" that is on view from 3:30 to 5 o'clock in the afternoon a considerable proportion of the paraders are in vehicles, open carriages and motor cars having the preference. Each mode of locomotion has its advantages from the standpoint of the Easter paraders. Those afoot have the best chance to be seen, whereas those in motors or carriages have the best opportunities to see, and since the aim and object of this fashion parade is that its devotees may see and be seen it will be realized that it is virtually a standoff between those who walk and those who ride.

In point of numbers participating, easily the greatest Easter fashion parade in America is that which takes place on this eventful day on the Boardwalk at Atlantic City. People flock from all sections of the country to the New Jersey resort. They come, many of them will tell you, because Atlantic City is supposed to have a mild and equable spring climate, but the real reason in most instances is a realization that the "natural study of mankind is man" and that here may be found a greater assemblage of representatives of the human race than at any other Easter mecca on this side of the Atlantic. There are sometimes as many as 100,000 people in the Easter parade at Atlantic City and they devote themselves to marching and countermarching on that five-mile elevated esplanade because there is little else to do at Atlantic City at Easter when it is, of course, too cold for sea bathing.

The Atlantic City parade of fashion starts in the morning, though it is not timed to accord with church services, for the simple reason that only a small proportion of the Easter visitors to Atlantic City take time to attend divine worship on this day of days. Instead they spend their time on the great wooden highway—walking or riding in those odd and lazy wheeled chairs pushed by porters or propelled by tricycles. At Atlantic City also there is another fashion parade in the afternoon, though to be strictly accurate we should not say "another." In reality it is a continuation of the same grand march of the gaudy dressers. How any of them manage to get lunch is a mystery, for the crowd on the Boardwalk never suffers any diminution from mid-morn to dusk, and indeed this spectacular continuous performance even goes on after the electric bulbs are aglow and Easter promenaders in other cities have long since sought their own firesides.

The Risen Christ's Easter Message

The message of Easter is identical with the truth that each Lord's day proclaims to men the resurrection of Jesus Christ. The central thought of the apostle's ministry was the resurrection of their Lord and Saviour. It has been the dominant theme of every gospel message. The risen Christ's first communication was sent to his discouraged disciples that they might rejoice because he was risen from the dead.

Does Easter find you discouraged? Have you made a bad investment of your life and labor? Are you disturbed as to the future? Has death terror for you? Then let us rejoice, for Christ has won a victory for us. Let us give thanks because he is risen. His resurrection contains the promise of our endless life. It is also prophetic of the Christian's resurrection when Jesus shall come again. The hopes of eternal life should inspire us with a dynamic force by which we can, through the presence and power of our risen Lord, rise above the difficulties, discouragements and defeats of this present age. His resurrection has solved our problem, removed sin and burdens that have filled us with despair, and turned our apparent defeats into one glorious triumph. The gospel of the resurrection proclaims a victory of regeneration over degeneration, of construction over deformation, of life over death, that Christ has secured for every creature that will believe on him as their risen Saviour.

To the disciple that denied him early on Easter morn Christ sent a message that recalled Peter to his service. Have you been following Christ afar off? Has your life been marred by sin? Have you denied your Lord? If so, Easter has a message for you. Repent, return to your Lord and then you will rejoice that he is risen and he will restore unto you the joy of your salvation.

The last message that the Master gave to his disciples was delivered near Bethany, while they were still in sight of the capital city of Jerusalem. On this Easter morn from Bethany's study overlooking the Capitol city of our nation I would call upon all the followers of the Christ to obey him and enter into the Master's work of winning the world for their Lord. As he commanded, so I would urge that you obey his call to evangelize the world with the gospel, enlist disciples for his service and educate all believers to be obedient to whatsoever our Lord has commanded. The Christian conquests of the centuries, the marvelous missionary awakening of Christendom preparing to conquer the world for the glory of Christ by the consecration of men and means and by the co-operation of the Christian forces under the leadership of the Holy Spirit is one of the many modern testimonies of the power of the risen Lord that is leading the hosts of God on to complete the triumph of Christ when he revealed on resurrection morn his power over life and death.

The religion of Jesus contains the only hope for the world. His is the only religion that meets the needs of all men. He is the only founder of a religion that has risen from the dead and offers everlasting life to all. Let us consecrate ourselves around his empty tomb this Easter morn to help him save the world by carrying the gospel of his resurrection to all that are lost.—Rev. Hugh T. Stevenson.

Man With Only Half a Brain

There is a man with only half a brain in the convalescent home of the Sabbatsberg sanitarium at Stockholm, Sweden. His name is Blomquist, and he is a young soldier who was hit by a stray bullet at firing practice last summer. The bullet went through the left temple and passed out again through the right side of the skull. It was a bad case, but the surgeons, finding that no motor centers of the brain were injured, proceeded to operate although they had little hope of saving the man's life. For two weeks the patient was unconscious, his breathing was feeble and he had to be artificially fed. Then by degrees consciousness returned. His speech and eyesight were badly affected, but both improved gradually. Today, apart from somewhat dimmed eyesight and general weakness, he is well on the road to recovery, but retains one conspicuous defect, he cannot read or write. He can distinguish letters, but is unable to connect them into words. The part of the brain he has lost, it appears, is the sense of memory of what he learned in his youth.

Party Feeling.

The Excited Spinster—Oh, Ethel, we're going to have such a time at the party. The new curate's coming, and he's color blind!

Ethel—Well, dear, what difference does that make?

The Excited Spinster—Why, he thinks all the hollyberries are mistletoe.—London Sketch.

MANY SEEK FLOWER

Edelweiss Grows Only on Sides of Mountain.

Blossom Is Responsible for Deaths of Many Climbers Every Year—Legend of the Coveted Posy Is Told.

Lucerne.—When the warm spring sun kisses the rugged slopes of the Alps the snow will gradually disappear. In the nooks and crannies of the rocks here and there will appear the shoots of a tiny plant. It will push its soft, velvety stems upward a few inches. Upon these fragile stalks later will appear dense clusters of white flowers—so white that they almost appear greenish in their purity of color. The heads of the flowers are covered with a fleecy substance, soft as down to the touch.

This modest little blossom is the edelweiss.

Every summer season intrepid mountaineers give up their lives to gather the edelweiss. It is precious because it is rare. It is desirable because it is difficult to obtain. For the edelweiss grows generally in the most inaccessible places. It nestles in the steep sides of the precipice and the chasm. Invigorated by the mountain air, intoxicated by the scenery, the climber beholds the blossom in its dangerous crevice. He determines to make his way to it and bear it away with him. Sometimes he succeeds in the quest, only to fall as he attempts to return. A loose stone that he has trusted as a foothold slips away. His hands are flung out to save himself. There is nothing secure to cling to. The end is deep down in the ravine below. The edelweiss has lured another to death because of his covetousness.

In a certain legend the edelweiss (noble white) is related to heaven, near which it grows. An angel, wearying of her celestial home, longed once more to taste the bitterness of earth. She received permission to appear in the flesh again, but she found herself unprepared to mingle again with a world where her eyes beheld crime, sickness, poverty, oppression, misfortune and discontent. So she chose a home for herself high up in the Swiss Alps. There she could look about upon the world and yet dwell apart from it. The angel soul of the visitor illumined her face and transfigured her form to one of slender, bewitching beauty.

The Coveted Edelweiss.

Comes one day a climber, more daring than others before him. The icy fastness where she hides her loveliness is invaded by him. Having been seen by him her retreat soon is invaded by many men eager to behold her and, from the thrill of beholding her, doomed to love her hopelessly. She is kind, but cold to all. Unable to endure the sight of one so beautiful and still not possess her, her admirers join in a prayer to heaven. They ask that since they may not claim her for their own they may at least be spared the sight of one so lovely. The prayer is answered. The angel is taken back to heaven. She leaves behind her human heart in the edelweiss as a memento of her earthly residence.

And so from an object of love itself, the edelweiss has come to be the symbol of love. The Swiss maiden to whom some swain has brought the edelweiss knows that he has risked his life to gather the tiny blossoms for her. Receiving them, she understands, because the mute appeal of the edelweiss is stronger than words.

Girls Steal a Bath.

Fort Worth, Tex.—Chief of Police Renfro and three policemen were called to a barber shop late at night to arrest burglars. With drawn revolvers they opened the door of a bath room where the "burglars" were hiding, and were amazed to find two pretty young women, nude, bathing in the tub. Feminine screams startled passersby. The two girls threw water into the chief's face and he beat a retreat. Later he arrested them for stealing a bath. They gave their names as Miss Kathryn Reid and Miss Jessie Hoover.

Deposits Savings of 20 Years.

Monticello, N. Y.—Miss Cynthia Pintler deposited in a local bank nearly $1,800 in old coins of small denominations, the savings of her brother during 70 years.

Was Disappointed in Wife.

Chicago.—Held for deserting his 17-year-old wife, Albert Kosticky declared he was disappointed in her, for American girls were far prettier.

THE SUNBEAM.

MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

VOL. XII. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, APRIL 5, 1912. NO. 2.

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

Crossing Policeman is Like a Crusoe

CHICAGO.—"Who is the loneliest person in Chicago?" asked a traffic policeman the other day, an officer who sometimes looks at things from a novel standpoint. "It is not the crib tender, the bridge tender nor the night watchman. It is not the elevated train operator in his secluded cage. It is not the scrubwoman who sweeps out the empty skyscraper between midnight and sunrise. It is not the milkman nor the man who puts the town to bed. All of these are lonely, but none of them so lonely as the traffic 'copper.'

"This desolate Robinson Crusoe marooned in a sea of traffic with thousands brushing his elbows, with the hoarse cries of coal wagon drivers and the honk of automobile horns ever in his ears, holds the palm as the loneliest man. Standing squarely in the heart of the city's uproar, his solitude is deeper than that of the hermit or the aviator near the altitude mark."

"I could stand this job better," continued the chaos dissipator at one of the busy downtown intersections several days ago, waving back a taxi with one hand and drawing forward a tiny girl in a polo coat with the other, "if it wasn't so lonesome. I used to get so tired standing on my feet all day that I didn't notice it at first, but lately that thought has been coming to me more and more. Why, sometimes I get so lonesome that I say 'Hello' to some wagon driver, and that's a dangerous thing to do. One morning while I was standing here and thinking what a terrible thing it is to be all alone in the world along comes a big wagon with a red headed fellow sittin' on the seat that looked like one I used to know, and I yells out 'Hello, Hank!' and the guy was so surprised he nearly fell off his seat.

"'Hello yourself, you big stiff!' he says. 'Don't try to kid me. I'm wise to you. I'm drivin' this team right and you can just let me alone.'

"After that there was nothin' I could do but pinch him—had to use my club some, too. That's just one instance.

Negress Lost Her Chinese Bridegroom

VANCOUVER, Wash.—A comic tragedy in which a Chinaman of Portland and a young negro woman, attired in an old rose colored suit, topped off with a red hat, were actors was staged on the lawn of the county courthouse, with the employes of the building and callers as the audience, when a vain attempt was made to obtain a marriage license. The super was another negro, at least six feet tall, who was to have been the witness had the Chinaman not fled from behind an evergreen tree, where he was left by the young woman in old rose.

The Chinaman, about forty years old and well dressed, wearing no queue, but American clothes, appeared at the courthouse at an early hour, accompanied by the young negress, who he said was twenty-four years old. She was togged out for the happy occasion with a huge bow of black ribbon to hold the front edges of the coat together, an immense red hat and a tremendous smile upon her face.

Finding the auditor's office all right, the Chinaman asked his all-important question, "Catchem license?" He was told that a witness was necessary before the paper would be issued. Turning to his partner, he said: "I know nobody; you catchem witness—me wait. You go downtown—catchem witness, come back, we get mallied."

Taking the native of the Orient to the front of the yard, the negro lassie hid him behind a tree, and admonishing him to remain under cover, she stalked down the street, the plumes in her hat fluttering in the breeze.

Witnesses must have been hard to find, for it was fully three hours before she returned with a tall man of her own race, who was willing to swear that he knew both persons who were desirous of being married. Going stealthily toward the tree, she peered behind it, but the celestial was not there. He had become tired and had lost faith in the negress, and said to the sheriff as he started down the street: "She no catchem witness, me catchem ferry—go home. I guess she no come back. Me go home."

Golden Wedding is Copy of Original

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—With the same menu that was spread before them fifty years ago, and with several of the same persons as guests who were present at their first wedding supper, Mr. and Mrs. Levi C. Bowser the other evening observed the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage by serving a wedding supper to their children and a few friends.

When Miss Caroline Dawson became the bride of Levi C. Bowser on March 6, 1862, the event was followed by a bounteous supper at the country home of the bride's father, John M. Dawson, then one of the prominent farmers of Marion county. Turkey was the piece de resistance of the happy feast, and turkey was served to the wedding guests again.

The guests who witnessed the wedding fifty years ago and were present on this occasion were Capt. Byron Dawson, retired army officer; Richeson Moore, and Mrs. Nancy Graham. There were about fifty persons at the original wedding, but these are the only ones now living in Marion county.

Mr. and Mrs. Bowser have lived for more than forty of the fifty years of their married life in their present home. In many respects theirs has been an ideal romance. Mr. Bowser's father also was a pioneer farmer of the county.

Smugglers Tried to Beat Uncle Sam

NEW ORLEANS.—One of the "oddest" cases that have puzzled the local customs department happened a few days ago, and, as in the great percentage of cases, the land agents of Uncle Sam guessed right and saved the old gentleman a few dollars in addition to knowing that they had saved him from being "bunkoed."

Under the parcels post and the customs regulations, provision is made for a certain class of "samples" which may be sent into this country. Although strict restrictions are drawn, there are many foreigners who try every year to use this little loophole as one through which to send goods without paying duty. Knowing this, all "samples" are subjected to close scrutiny by the government agents.

It seems that a gentleman in Asia Minor, in the City of Smyrna, sought information from friends in New Orleans with whom he desired to do a small business, learned of the loophole, and conceived the idea he could "put one over" the sharp-eyed agents.

He sent twenty-four "odd" slippers, of choice morocco leather, to his friends here. Of course, they were "samples." The agents looked at them carefully, saw the fine workmanship and valued them accordingly.

Then they calmly put the slippers on a shelf and waited—and waited. And in three weeks there came a second package of "samples" to the same party. They pulled "bundle one" from the shelf, and found that the two bundles made twenty-four pairs of fine slippers, all matched. The astonished recipient finally secured them by paying the duty, about one-half their value.

And the custom house men put it down as an "odd" case and waited for the next sharp foreigner.

WHO'S WHO—and Why

HELEN GOULD TO THE RESCUE

Miss Helen Gould, philanthropist, one of the best loved among American women and possessor of millions, has come forward to save the family fortunes from possible wreckage and restore the prestige of the family

At the very moment when the financial downfall of the family is impending she has offered to cast her personal fortune into the breach to stay the threatened calamity.

In so doing she has chosen to forget and to forgive all that has occurred to alienate one member of the family from the others. She is inspired by her own bounty of heart and by the deep reverence in which she holds her father's memory.

Miss Gould left New York the other day in her private car for San Francisco, for it is there that the arrangements will be made by which the family finances will be straightened out. She is going to look over things for herself, and is accompanied by some prominent financiers.

She will see and study for the first time the great Gould properties that have their center in San Francisco.

Until now Miss Gould has remained free of the financial enterprises in which her family has been involved.

RULER OF SMALLEST STATE

By the death of William Alexander, Grand Duke of Luxemburg, which occurred recently, a demure young woman not yet 18 becomes sovereign of that little principality. She is the late ruler's eldest daughter, the Grand Duchess Marie. Luxemburg is a state of 998 square miles in the angle where Germany, France and Belgium meet. It has about 250,000 people. From time immemorial it has been an appanage of the House of Nassau. It was therefore virtually part of Holland, though separated from it until the death of Queen Wilhelmina's father in 1890. Then it followed the male line to the father of the grand duke just dead. In 1907 the succession in the female line was instituted by a family statute.

At a time, some years ago, when it seemed likely that Queen Wilhelmina of Holland, would be childless, she designated this young grand duchess as heir to the throne of the Netherlands and was about to ask the Dutch states general to pass the necessary legislation to this end. Shortly afterward, however, the hopes of the Dutch people for a direct heir to the throne were gratified by the birth of the little Princess Juliana.

The grand duchess is described as an unusually pretty girl, impatient of advice, quick tempered and impulsive—characteristics which greatly displease the royal busy-bodies who are already occupied in selecting for her a suitable husband.

KING PETER IS IN TROUBLE

Is the bloody drama of 1903 about to be repeated in Belgrade? That is a question that all Europe, including Servian people themselves, are asking. For weeks reports have emanated from Belgrade that a conspiracy has been formed among the officers of the army having for its purpose the dethronement of King Peter, if necessary, by as violent means as those of the terrible night nine years ago, when King Alexander and Queen Draga were murdered in the palace.

King Peter is paying for whatever guilty knowledge he may have had of the regicide plot with uneasy days and sleepless nights. Now in his sixty-eighth year, he is wondering if it was worth while after all, to trade his peace of mind as a private citizen in Switzerland, for the bloody crown of Servia. Through the palace still stalks the restless ghost of Alexander and the king's ears must still resound the echo of the shrieks of Draga.

At the foreign office and in the war ministry all knowledge of plots and conspiracies are denied, of course.

HEAD OF VERY SMARTEST SET

Sadness and gloom have been the portion of a large section of the American Society (be careful of the large S!), since the publication of that remarkable book "The 469 Ultra-Fashionables of America," compiled by Charles Wilbur de Lyon Nichols, on whose shoulders has fallen the mantle of Ward McAllister, inventor of New York's "400." The cream of the cream of American society have now been segregated, corralled, reconcentrated or otherwise abstracted from the common herd and seated on high in the splendor and dazzling radiance of Mr. de Lyon Nichols, august approval. There appears to be, however, a remarkable lack of invention displayed in the New York list of 300 notables. It is confined practically to the guests who were invited to meet the Connaughts and Princess Patricia on their recent visit. Surely New York is going to the dogs when it can only muster a beggarly 300. Even Ward McAllister, in an earlier and less enlightened period, permitted the metropolis to have a sacred circle of 400. The reason may be that only the superfine ultra-fashionables are included in Beau Nichols' arbitrary selection.

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

Hen Makes a Nest in Big Office Safe

WASHINGTON.—Charles M. Wrenn, foreman of the car barn at Fifteenth and H streets northwest, has reached the conclusion that office safes do not make the best incubators for hatching chickens. He tried it and it almost failed.

The hen quietly but firmly established herself in Mr. Wrenn's office a few weeks ago because it was much warmer than the icy outside. Mr. Wrenn tried to remonstrate, but the hen was obdurate. There was nothing to do but let the hen have her way, and Mr. Wrenn made room for her beside a lot of dusty files and railway records in his big wooden safe. The hen was perfectly contented with its lot and offered no resistance.

"Cluck, cluck," issued noisily from the office early in the morning when Mr. Wrenn went to work and found the hen strutting proudly about cackling vigorously as though she owned the entire office.

It didn't take Mr. Wrenn long to size up the situation, and, opening the door of the safe, he found in the corner he had cleared for the bird a batch of eggs. "One, two, three," he counted them out, fifteen in all, and every one of them snowy white.

For three weeks the hen practically bossed the office, and, after deducting, it was discovered that the eggs ought to have been hatched on a recent Saturday, according to the office almanac.

Saturday morning Mr. Wrenn and the office force came to work a little ahead of time, and the door of the safe was thrown open, while every one expected to see 15 chicks run helter skelter. Instead, there was a series of cackles from the frightened hen, and not a single one of the 15 eggs had hatched. One of the men, who was something of a farmer, declared that the eggs would surely hatch the next day, but Sunday came, and they were as unhatched as china eggs. All that day there was a feeling of misapprehension, and Monday Mr. Wrenn went to the office to see if the expected had happened.

From the half-closed door of the safe there issued a half-hearted "cluck," and the silver hen, followed by two forlorn-looking chicks, hopped out upon the floor. Mr. Wrenn decided to throw the other 13 eggs away.

Strange Mammals Found in Canal Zone

IN the early part of the year 1911, while engaged in the Smithsonian biological survey of the canal zone and the adjacent parts of Panama, E. A. Goldman made a collection of 368 mammals. This collection, representing between 40 and 50 genera, includes 12 new species and subspecies, of which descriptions have just been published by Mr. Goldman (Smithsonian miscellaneous collection, No. 2073) in advance of the general report on mammals of this region.

Nine of the new forms are from the canal zone, and the others were collected by the author when he was on a trip to the mountains near the headwaters of the Chagres river, Panama, in March last.

The new animals include 2 opossums from near Gatun, 2 squirrels, of which 1 is known as a pigmy squirrel; 4 rice rats, a yoke-tooth rat, which was found to be one of the most abundants in the grassy clearings of the canal zone; three spiny rats, including one known as an octadont, and named after Col. George W. Goethals, chairman and chief engineer of the isthmian canal commission.

Among interesting birds collected by Mr. Goldman, while engaged on this survey, there are two new species of nun birds.

The nun birds, or genus Monasa, are so called from the somber black or slaty plumage, which, however, is somewhat relieved by the bright red or yellow bill, and in some cases white feathers at the bend of the wing and about the bill.

Peary Tells How to Cook Dog Meat

"DOG meat is delicious—sometimes," said Admiral Robert E. Peary, the discoverer of the north pole, recently, discussing the food eaten by Amundsen's party in their dash for the south pole. "For flavor and bouquet it doesn't compare with a tenderloin steak, but dog meat is fine when you're cold and hungry—and have nothing else to eat.

"A bite from the hind leg of a sledge dog rivals a chunk of gutta-percha. There's nothing tougher on earth. No, dog meat is not fried, as a rule; it is boiled, and then boiled. But it can be compared in flavor to bear meat or that of any carnivorous animal. Of course, it is nothing like the meat of grass eating animals.

"I've eaten dog meat repeatedly, on almost all my trips. And every other explorer has probably done the same thing. Meat can be carried on the hoof that way. The dogs are useful to draw the sledges until they are needed for food for the men and for the other dogs retained."

Peary ridiculed the idea that Amundsen's observations of the south pole were inaccurate because he used only a sextant and artificial horizon, and not a theodolite.

"The sextant and artificial horizon are the recognized instruments used by all explorers in such work," he said. "They are accurate enough. The theodolite is much heavier and too bulky for use except at a temporary base or headquarters. The lighter instruments were used by the British antarctic expedition. Nansen, myself and many other explorers."

Crow Blackbirds Safe in Washington

JOHN BURROUGHS once wrote a book which contained a chapter on the birds of Washington. It was 30 years ago that this book was written. In it he spoke about the crow blackbird, otherwise called the purple grackles, which "stalked" across the lawn of the treasury and The Mall in front of the Agricultural building.

The crow blackbirds have just come back to Washington from the south. In other places this bird is persecuted and in most of the states he is allowed to be shot because it is supposed that he is a pest, but in Washington he is protected and here he will pick up crumbs at your feet unafraid.

A landscape gardener of the government turned surgeon once and amputated the limb of a mulberry tree "which all the while ran to sap." The crow blackbirds watched the amputation from a distance almost too short to be safe had the gardener operator seen fit to turn his instrument from tree to bird. When the limb was lopped and the gardener had come down from his ladder the blackbirds fought for a place on the stump. Two at a [illegible] gained precarious foothold. The birds leaned over and drank sap, and a royal feast they had of it. It isn't at all probable that mulberry tree sap is poisonous, but about the time that several of the trees were giving up their life blood ten of the crow blackbirds gave up all of theirs. The ten were found dead on the grass of the lawn. Some soulless one who doesn't like blackbirds doubtless had spread a tempting but fatal poison feast, and, tempted and feasting, the birds paid the penalty.

Has No Bank Account.

The world owes every man a living, but it doesn't send out checks.

THE SUNBEAM.

W. G. HUNT, Publisher.

SUNBEAM. - - - MINN

FIGHTING MACHINES.

It is a half century since Ericsson's Monitor was launched. We have just passed the anniversary of that event. It was an evolution in the art of naval armament which at the time seemed to promise a permanent change in theory and practice. What the Monitor did for us in the crisis which it was designed to meet is matter of history, says the Boston Post. That low-lying, vicious craft was perhaps the salvation of our navy. But what a change in the years that have since elapsed! The Monitor type has gone to the scrap heap, and the massive, towering, stupendous dreadnought has taken its place. Torpedoboats have come in, followed by torpedo destroyers. And the range of naval operations has been extended. Every maritime nation has equipped itself with submarines, and the very latest is a submarine that can fight above the water and descend with safety after delivering the fire of its battery. Under the water and above the land in the air the power of destruction is extending. What is the end of this development of the means of devastation? Logically, is it not the establishment of universal peace as an international duty?

Wherever the Romans lived in the days of the empire they carried luxury and art. They occupied for centuries a large part of the northern coast of Africa. It is not surprising therefore to learn by a dispatch from Tripoli that a body of Italian troops digging trenches near the Oasis of Sciara, on the spot formerly occupied by Roman imperial gardens, has unearthed an ancient Greek Venus of remarkable beauty. The head and arms are missing, but the torso is in excellent preservation and reminds beholders of the famous Capitoline Venus. The statue has been sent to Rome, where it will be placed in the National museum. In nearly every spot where soldiers have tapped the ground to throw up defensive works they have uncovered traces of the ancient Roman occupation of Tripoli, including tombs, mosaics and ruins of splendid villas.

There is a New York statute against the revelation by physicians of the secrets of the consultation room; but a New York judge has decided that it does not prevent a doctor from describing the services which he has performed when he finds it necessary to sue for the collection of his fee. In that case, the judge rules, the physician may proceed with his action, alleging anything and everything that is necessary, without either directly or indirectly becoming liable for violation of the law. The decision would seem to be reasonable. It is a mean man who will refuse to pay a fair fee to his doctor.

A Greeley, Colorado, man claims to have perfected a seedless watermelon and is now experimenting with peanuts crossed with sweet peas. He expects to get blossoms and peanuts from the same vines, the peanuts growing above ground instead of in the earth. He has hopes of producing a succotash plant by crossing corn and beans, and looks forward to growing a breakfast food which will include the qualities of coffee. In the meantime, where's Luther Burbank?

A Dutch prisoner, who was taking walking exercise in the courtyard of the Conciergerie Prison at Paris, suddenly made a running jump at the wall, which is 14 feet high and topped with iron spikes, mounted it like a cat, to the amazement of the jailers, jumped down on the other side, climbed 20 feet up a wire ladder, dropped by accomplices from an open window, and got away. He must be a real flying Dutchman.

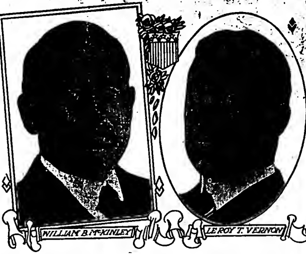
Girls in a Massachusetts college have rejected the cap and gown as graduation garb in favor of the white dress, on the ground that the latter is more becoming. This will be another proof to the skeptical that higher education for women is a rank failure.

A physician remarks of a prominent invalid that his days are numbered, though nobody can tell how many remain. That might be also said with perfect truth of the healthiest man in the land.

A boy who ran away from his home at New Haven, Conn., twenty years ago returned the other day with $2,000,000. It is understood that his father did not meet him at the gate with a strap.

By hurling a custard pie into the face of a would-be robber a waitress in a Denver restaurant half-blinded him and saved the money in the cash box. As a weapon of defense the custard pie deserves the highest encomiums.

GARNERING DELEGATES FOR TAFT



MR. TAFT'S campaign for renomination is being conducted by Congressman William B. McKinley of Illinois, with Leroy T. Vernon, a well-known Washington correspondent, as chief of publicity.

82 DEAD IN MINE

JED, W. VA., SHAFT SCENE OF GAS EXPLOSION AND INSTANT DEATH.

ELEVEN ESCAPE THE BLAST

Thirty-Three Bodies Recovered—Rescue Cars Rushed to Town—Five Men Killed When Sawmill Boiler Explodes.

Bluefield, W. Va.—Eighty-two men were killed by a gas explosion in the Jed Coal and Coke company's mine at Jed, W. Va., six miles from here.

Only eleven men escaped alive and one of these died within an hour after being brought to the surface.

Thirty-three bodies have been located and the rescuers will have them out shortly.

When the explosion took place probably only the eleven men working at the foot of the shaft had a chance for their lives. They readily made their way up the cages which were not damaged.

Though some of the blades of the fans were shattered, they continued to operate, with the fortunate result that enough air was present to admit searching parties immediately.

Less than half an hour after the news of the explosion had been communicated to this place relief measures were being taken. Oxygen helmets and other appliances were rushed from the plant of the United States Coal and Coke company, a United States Steel corporation mine near by; a government mine rescue car en route to Huntington, W. Va., was turned back on telegraphic orders from Washington and another car was started from Pittsburgh. The first car reached here shortly after noon. The experts immediately conceded that all in the mine were dead.

State mine inspectors promptly organized rescue parties and began the exploration of levels. As the gases were cleared out and they began searches of the lower levels they immediately began to come upon miners who had been killed almost instantly. Other mines near by sent experienced foremen to lead hundreds of volunteer rescuers who flocked to the scene as the news spread about the countryside.

PHILIP HICHBORN A SUICIDE

Despondency Over Wife's Elopement Supposed to Be Cause of Washington Millionaire's Act.

Washington.—Philip Hichborn, a millionaire in his own right and a member of one of the oldest and wealthiest families in Washington, was found dead in his bathroom, having shot himself with a 32-caliber revolver. Despondency caused by his wife running off with Horace Wylie, a prominent clubman, is presumed to have been the cause of the suicide.

Mrs. Hichborn is a beautiful woman, about thirty-five years old. Both Hichborn and Wylie were over forty years old. The eloping couple are supposed to be in Europe.

LOSES NATHAN ALLEN SUIT

Complaint of Mrs. Helen Fuld Dwelle Against Wisconsin Leather Manufacturer Dismissed.

New York.—Supreme Court Justice Garard dismissed a suit for damages brought by Mrs. Helen Fuld Dwelle, also known as Mrs. Jenkins, against Nathan Allen, the Wisconsin leather manufacturer, and the detective firm of Mooney & Boland arising out of the taking by Allen of securities, jewelry and other valuables which were in a safe deposit box and which Mrs. Jenkins said were hers.

Pass Arizona Recall Bill.

Phoenix, Ariz.—The bill submitting the judiciary recall amendment to the people at the next general election has passed the lower house of the Arizona legislature. An identical bill is in the hands of the senate committee on constitutional amendments.

Operate on Senator Taylor.

Washington. — Senator Taylor of Tennessee underwent an operation for gallstones and it was pronounced successful. Hopes now are entertained for his recovery.

IN DECISIVE BATTLE

REBELS AND FEDERALS CLASH NEAR JIMINEZ.

Madero Declares He Has Crushed Foes—One of His Generals Commits Suicide.

Mexico City, Mex. — A decisive battle between Mexican federal troops and rebels in the vicinity of Jiminez has ended. This is reported from many sources. These reports, however, are contradictory as to the result. The Mexican government has received an official dispatch to the effect that the rebels were routed and President Madero in an interview last night said it meant the breaking of the rebel cause. He said rebel losses in killed and wounded would reach 1,000 men.

A special dispatch originating at Torreon sent to El Imparcial at Mexico City and bearing evidence of being authentic, reported that the federals had been defeated and that retreating government soldiers were being mobilized there.

Both reports contain the fact that Gen. Gonzales Salas, former minister of war, committed suicide after his command had been routed. In bad repute, he resigned his portfolio to take the field, hoping to rehabilitate himself in the eyes of his countrymen.

"The government troops have scored a decisive victory," declared President Madero. "Our latest reports show a complete defeat of the rebels near Corralitos, their losses in dead, wounded and captured accounting for 1,000 of their men. It has been a hard won victory, but it means the breaking of the rebel power. For the rash act of General Salas we have only regret. It was not necessary."

ALLEN BOY IS CAPTURED

Claude, Son of Floyd, Caught Near Home—Three Other Outlaws Are Surrounded.

Hillsville, Va.—Claude Allen, the fifth of the Allen gang of Carroll county, was arrested in the mountains three miles from the home of his father, Floyd Allen, who is in jail at Roanoke recovering from wounds received during the shooting in the courtroom.

Detectives received a long-distance message from Mount Airy, N. C., stating that Sidna Allen, Wesley Edwards and Friel Allen are surrounded in the mountains, with no chance of escape.

Claude Allen when captured was armed with two pistols, but offered no resistance. He was taken to Roanoke for safe keeping.

ITALIANS LOSE TO TURKS

3,527 Men Fall in Fierce Battle in Tripoli—Location Not Given.

London.—The Turkish army in Tripoli has achieved a great victory over the Italian army, whose losses were twenty-seven officers and 3,500 men killed and wounded, according to the report of the Turkish commander at Bengazi, received here from a special correspondent at the Turkish headquarters.

The location of the battle is not given in the report, which says that the entire camp equipment of the Italians fell into the hands of the Turkish troops.

The Turkish commander says the casualties among the Turkish and Arab troops numbered only 150 killed and wounded.

Illinois Jurist Is Slain.

Greenville, Miss.—Judge Trogdon of Paris, Ill., was instantly killed by a revolver shot fired by Sumner Rhoades, also of Paris, but who had been on the Trogdon plantation several months.

Rochester Tailors May Strike.

Rochester, N. Y.—Max J. Sillinski, a national organizer of the United Journeymen Tailors of America, has presented a demand for recognition of union labor and a minimum wage scale to local manufacturers, and threatens a strike.

Banana Famine Seems Likely.

Puerto Cortes, Honduras.—The long drought along the north coast of Honduras has burned the banana crop almost to a crisp. Planters are disheartened.

LORIMER WINS OUT

SENATE COMMITTEE, BY 5 TO 3 VOTE, GIVES SEAT TO SENATOR.

HINES IS FREED FROM BLAME

Majority Holds That Case Has Already Been Decided—Lea, Kerns and Kenyon Oppose Ruling—Fight Expected on Floor.

Washington.—The special investigating committee has upheld the right of Senator Lorimer of Illinois to his seat in the United States senate. The committee, by a vote of 5 to 3, has decided that the senate's vote sustaining Mr. Lorimer in the last congress, on substantially the same charges, barred any further proceedings against him.

The committee's action was sweeping. It not only adopted the "res judicata" resolution prepared by Senator Jones of Washington, but other resolutions favoring the Lorimer contentions.

The Jones resolution declared that the pending case had already been covered by the previous trial of Lorimer in the senate, and that to again place the Illinois senator on trial would not be in accord with the principle of "res judicata."

Another resolution adopted exonerated Edward Hines, the Chicago lumberman, of any wrongdoing.

By a vote of 5 to 0 the committee adopted a resolution declaring that if there was any corrupt dealing in connection with Lorimer's election to the senate, Lorimer had no knowledge of it.

The committee also took action declaring that there was no conclusive evidence of a legislative "jack-pot."

On the resolution declaring that Lorimer had no knowledge of any corrupt dealings, Senators Kenyon, Kern and Lea, who opposed Lorimer, refrained from voting.

The committee vote on the Jones resolution follows:

For Lorimer—Dillingham, Gamble, Jones, Johnston and Fletcher.

Against Lorimer—Kern, Kenyon and Lea.

It is practically certain that a minority report also will be made from the committee and a notable debate is expected when the case reaches the floor of the senate.

It is expected that the case will be brought up in the senate next week.

Twelve propositions were voted on before the committee adjourned. The opposition to Lorimer offered a resolution declaring that money was paid out at St. Louis to influence the election. On this only three votes were cast in the affirmative, one was cast in the negative, and four did not vote, the resolution being lost.

Senators Kern, Kenyon and Lea offered a resolution that there was a fund distributed among members of the legislature at Springfield. The majority of the committee, however, declined to vote on this.

A resolution declaring in general terms that no evidence had been adduced showing corruption in connection with the Lorimer election was carried, 5 to 3.

Washington. — Senator Stephenson of Wisconsin was declared elected to his seat by the vote of 40 to 34. This ends a long fight in which there were three investigations, revelations of $107,793 spent by the senator in the primary campaign of 1908 and charges of the illegal use of money.

Senator Robert M. La Follette left a sick bed to cast his vote against his colleague.

The following senators did not vote: Martin and Swanson of Virginia; Taylor of Tennessee, and Tillman of South Carolina.

Not a single progressive Republican senator voted for Mr. Stephenson. On the other hand, three regular Republicans voted against him—Jones of Washington and Smith and Townsend of Michigan.

MAKE FIRST HEALTH TEST

Massachusetts Man Refused License to Wed Chicago Girl—His Parents Say Head Is Injured.

Boston.—A romantic exemplification of the "health marriage" furore started by Dean Sumner of Chicago and now discussed all over the country, was found in Lynn, where John Charles Thompson, son of wealthy parents, was refused a license to marry Miss Violet Wade, a talented soprano singer who had come from Chicago for the ceremony.

Thompson's parents protested the issuance of the license on the ground that their son, who is thirty years old, is in poor health owing to an injury to his head received six months ago He wears a metallic plate to replace a portion of his skull which was removed.

Rebels Capture Railroad.

Guatemala City, Guatemala.—The Pan-American railroad in Mexico, south of Tonola, in Chiapas state, is in the hands of the revolutionists. Refugees, both foreigners and natives, are crossing the border into Guatemala.

Arrest Teller at Bank.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—While working over his books in the bank, J Edward Johnson, teller of the Michigan Trust company of this city, was arrested, charged with embezzling $6,000.

STRIKERS IN A RIOT

BRITISH TROOPS ORDERED OUT TO QUELL DISTURBANCE.

House of Lords Passes Second Reading of Wage Bill—To Vote on Peace.

London.—Orders were issued at Aldershot for all the troops, numbering 10,000, to be prepared to move at any moment into the colliery districts. Troop trains are being held in readiness.

Five hundred troops left Lichfield for Cannock where a serious riot occurred, and a detachment of infantry is quartered at Bryekineit, where trouble is expected between union and

The most serious outbreak since the strike began occurred at Coeeuck, Staffordshire, where several thousand strikers, accompanied by hundreds of women, raided a colliery in which 80 men were working.

The house of lords passed the second reading of the minimum wage bill without division.

Reports from the mining centers point to the probability of a large majority, in the taking of the ballot of the men, in favor of resumption of work.

When it is remembered that 115,000 men voted against commencing the strike, little doubt is felt that a majority will now vote in favor of its termination, especially as the view is gathering force among the miners that the mine owners are trying to prolong the struggle in order to bleed the men's union, while they render them powerless to continue the struggle for a long time to come.

Wilkesbarre, Pa.—Miners throughout the anthracite belt have begun active preparations for a suspension. Hundreds of them removed their tools from the mines and await the force of the suspension order.

Cleveland, O.—The bituminous coal operators and miners have decided to again submit their differences over a wage scale to a sub-committee.

No one on either side believes an agreement will be reached.

TAFT SWEEPS NEW YORK

President Victorious at the Primaries—Two Sets of Delegates Chosen at Indianapolis Meeting.

New York.—In the primaries held in New York state, former President Roosevelt carried three districts—the first (his own), embracing the counties of Nassau and Suffolk, where there was no contest, and the Westchester and Rockland County districts, controlled by National Committeeman Ward. Roosevelt also has one delegate from Brooklyn, William A. Prendergast, who as a known Roosevelt man, was left on the regular ticket.

President Taft carried the Utica district, the home of Vice-President Sherman, where there was a fight. Roosevelt won only seven delegates out of ninety in the entire state.

The four delegates at large will be instructed for Taft.

Roosevelt men assert the primaries were improperly conducted, and will carry the matter to the national convention.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Two sets of delegates at large to the Republican national convention at Chicago were chosen here.

The Taft "big four" are ex-Vice-President Fairbanks, National Committeeman Harry S. New, ex-Congressman James E. Watson, and Joseph D. Oliver of South Bend.

The Roosevelt delegation, chosen in "rump" convention, includes ex-United States Senator Albert J. Beveridge, Edwin M. Lee of Lawrenceburg, chairman of the Roosevelt Indiana campaign committee; Charles F. Campbell of Shelbyville, and Frederick Landis of Logansport.

Phoenix, Ariz.—The Arizona legislature has unanimously selected Marcus A. Smith of Tucson and Henry F. Ashurst of Prescott as representatives of this state in the upper house of congress. Smith and Ashurst were elected by popular vote at last election.

Colorado Springs, Colo.—The Colorado Republican state convention here was solid for President Taft, the delegates being as follows:

Thirty-nine counties with 656 delegates being for Taft as against 22 counties and 242 delegates for Roosevelt.

MISSISSIPPI GORGE BREAKS

Brings Safety to Inhabitants in Missouri—Gregory Residents Return to Their Homes.

Keokuk, Ia.—The Mississippi river largest ice gorge at Warsaw, Ill., broke and brought relief to hundreds of land owners between Alexandria, Mo., and Canton, in which section the loss has been the greatest. The water is rapidly receding and residents of the flooded town of Gregory are returning to their homes. The small gorge above Montrose, Ia., also has broken.

Senator Taylor Worse.

Washington.—Senator Taylor of Tennessee, who has been ill for some days with an aggravated gall stone trouble, is much worse. His case so far has failed to yield to treatment and his condition is regarded as precarious.

Fire Sweeps New Y. M. C. A.

Peoria, Ill.—Fire originating from spontaneous combustion in painters' supplies in the gymnasium practically ruined Peoria's new Young Men's Christian association building here. The loss is estimated at $45,000.

BACKACHE A SIGNAL OF DISTRESS

Pain in the back is the kidneys' signal of distress. If this timely warning is ignored, there is grave danger of dropsy, gravel, uric poisoning, or Bright's disease.

When you have reason to suspect your kidneys, use a special kidney medicine.

Doan's Kidney Pills relieve weak, congested kidneys—cure backache—regulate the urine. Good proof in the following statement.

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

A DOCTOR'S TESTIMONY

Dr. H. Green, 215 N. 9th Street, North Yakima, Wash. says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills in my practice for years and they have given satisfaction. I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills personally and pronounce them the best remedy I have prescribed in my long career as a physician and surgeon."

AT ALL DEALERS 50c. a Box

DOAN'S Kidney Pills

Some of the charity that begins at home isn't up to the standard.

Garfield Tea, the natural remedy for Constipation, can always be relied on.

Theory alone never accomplished anything worth while.

When a man is completely wrapped up in himself the package is apt to be small.

The Reason.

"You mark all your compositions forte," said the friend.

"Yes," replied the composer. "They wouldn't have any vogue among people who live in flats if I had them played softly."

Sad Case.

"I hear your husband has lost his public job."

"Yes."

"What does he expect to do now?"

"Well, he told me this morning that unless he could get reinstated pretty soon he would have to go to work somewhere."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Facetious Operator.

"I say, mister," said the cadaverous man, entering the telegraph office, "could you trust me for a telegram I want to send my wife? I'll pay you tomorrow."

"Sorry, sir," said the operator, "but we are terribly rushed these days and there isn't a tick in the office that isn't working overtime as it is."—Harper's Weekly.

Troubles Laid to "In-Law."

"The cause of more than half the family scraps that are scrapped to a finish," says an exchange, "is the 'in-law.' A man or a woman marries some one absolutely antagonistic to all the other members of the family, and then, putting this person on a pedestal, demands that all shall do her or his will. For the sake of courtesy, often a whole family will yield many points, and gradually the 'in-law' becomes more and more insistent, and so things drift along, always the one side giving in, until some straw, some trifle, will prove the drop too much, and after that the fracas. With the air cleared, a beginning can be made over again on a basis of equal rights, or else all intercourse can cease. Either way much has been gained."

SHE QUIT COFFEE
And Much Good Came From It.

It is hard to believe that coffee will put a person in such a condition as it did a woman of Apple Creek, O. She tells her own story:

"I did not believe coffee caused my trouble, and frequently said I liked it so well I would not quit drinking it, even if it took my life, but I was a miserable sufferer from heart trouble and nervous prostration for four years.

"I was scarcely able to go around at all. Had no energy, and did not care for anything. Was emaciated and had a constant pain around my heart until I thought I could not endure it. I felt as though I was liable to die any time.

"Frequently I had nervous chills and the least excitement would drive sleep away, and any little noise would upset me terribly. I was gradually getting worse until finally one day, it came over me, and I asked myself what is the use of being sick all the time and buying medicine so that I can indulge myself in coffee?

"So I thought I would see if I could quit drinking coffee, and got some Postum to help me quit. I made it strictly according to directions, and I want to tell you that change was the greatest step in my life. It was easy to quit coffee because I had the Postum which I like better than I liked the old coffee. One by one the old troubles left, until now I am in splendid health, nerves steady, heart all right, and the pain all gone. Never have any more nervous chills, don't take any medicine, can do all my housework, and have done a great deal besides.

"My sister-in-law, who visited me this summer had been an invalid for some time, much as I was. I got her to quit coffee and drink Postum. She gained five pounds in three weeks, and I never saw such a change in anyone's health."

"There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

LOOK AFTER YOUR HEALTH

If Your System Is Kept Toned Up You Will Escape Many Diseases That Find Easy Victims Among Pale People.

Enough disease germs enter the average human body every day to cause death if the healthful organism did not combat these germs and render them harmless.

Let the human system become run down, or debilitated, and this power of resistance to disease is weakened. Soon the disease germs get the upper hand, an acute sickness follows or the patient becomes a chronic invalid.

It is in the blood that the battle to maintain the health is fought. Keep the blood toned up, the bowels open and observe ordinary care as regards food and rest and you will avoid much sickness.

Debility is not a recognized disease but is a condition in which the sufferer cannot get a good night's sleep, wakes up all tired out, has no strength or ambition, is nervous, has a poor appetite, has trouble with the stomach, and is subject to headaches and backaches. It is most commonly met with in people who have to work hard, are confined indoors, eat improper food or have worries and grief.

The case of Mrs. M. V. McCaslin, of No. 202 South 27th Street, Lincoln, Neb., shows the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a tonic for all run-down conditions of health. She says:

"I gave Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People a trial for general debility from which I had been suffering about three years. I was thoroughly tired and worn out and had no ambition for anything. I became very weak and kept losing strength. My appetite was poor and I was nervous and had severe headaches.

"I needed a tonic treatment and tried several tonic remedies but none seemed to help me until I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I was soon much improved in health and able to get around and do my work. I took the pills until cured and am pleased to recommend them to anyone who is run down in health."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are for sale by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50 by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

Send today for a copy of our free booklet "Diseases of the Blood."

Bathetic.

General Marion Maus has a keen and delicate taste in literature, and at a recent dinner at Vancouver Barracks, discussing a popular novel of little worth, General Maus said:

"The pathos of the book is really bathos. It reminds me of a private's widow. The good woman was about to sell her household furniture, her rugs, plated ware and what not. As she was going over these articles her eyes filled with tears, a host of memories rose in her mind, and, laying aside a half-dozen knives, she said:

"'Oh, dear! I can't let these go! They've been in poor George's mouth too often!'"

Baking Economy.

By the use of perfect baking powder the housewife can derive as much economy as from any other article used in baking and cooking. In selecting a baking powder, therefore, care should be exercised to purchase one that retains its original strength and always remains the same, thus making the food sweet and wholesome and producing sufficient leavening gas to make the baking light.

Very little of this leavening gas is produced by the cheap baking powders, making it necessary to use double the quantity ordinarily required to secure good results.

You cannot experiment every time you make a cake or biscuits, or test the strength of your baking powder to find out how much of it you should use: yet with most baking powders you should do this, for they are put together so carelessly they are never uniform, the quality and strength varying with each can purchased.

Calumet Baking Powder is made of chemically pure ingredients of tested strength. Experienced chemists put it up. The proportions of the different materials remain always the same. Sealed in airtight cans Calumet Baking Powder does not alter in strength and is not affected by atmospheric changes.

In using Calumet you are bound to have uniform bread, cake or biscuits, as Calumet does not contain any cheap, useless or adulterating ingredients so commonly used to increase the weight. Further, it produces pure, wholesome food and is a baking powder of rare merit; therefore is recommended by leading physicians and chemists. It complies with all the pure food laws, both STATE and NATIONAL. The goods are moderate in price, and any lady purchasing Calumet from her grocer, if not satisfied with it can return it and have her money refunded.

Idle Fund.

"That man has a vast fund of information."

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum; "but he can't put a dollar mark in front of it and use it for a campaign fund."

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

In Use For Over 30 Years.

Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

In Chicago.

Ella—What do you think of him?

Stella—He's too mean to pay alimony—even a dollar down and a dollar a month.

An optimist is a man who knows that his troubles might be worse.

Cole's Carbolisalve quickly relieves and cures burning, itching and torturing skin diseases. It instantly stops the pain of burns. Cures without scars. 25c and 50c by druggists. For free sample write to J. W. Cole & Co., Black River Falls, Wis.

For people to live happily together the real secret is that they should not live too much together.—Sir Arthur Helps.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle.

There are a few things that even a young man doesn't know.

BURNING DAYLIGHT

By JACK LONDON

AUTHOR OF "THE CALL OF THE WILD," "WHITE FANG," "MARTIN EDEN," ETC.

(Copyright, 1910, by the New York Herald Company.)
(Copyright, 1910, by the MacMillan Company.)

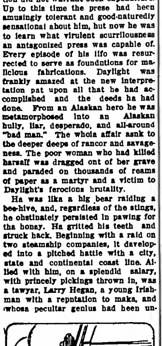
SYNOPSIS.

Elam Harnish, known all through Alaska as "Burning Daylight," celebrates his 30th birthday with a crowd of miners at the Circle City Tivoli. The dance leads to heavy gambling, in which over $100,000 is staked. Harnish loses his money and his mine but wins the mail contract. He starts on his mail trip with dogs and sledge, telling his friends that he will be in the big Yukon gold strike at the start. Burning Daylight makes a sensationally rapid run across country with the mail, appears at the Tivoli and is now ready to join his friends in a dash to the new gold fields. Deciding that gold will be found in the up-river district Harnish buys two tons of flour, which he declares will be worth its weight in gold, but when he arrives with his flour he finds the big flat desolate. A comrade discovers gold and Daylight reaps a rich harvest. He goes to Dawson, becomes the most prominent figure in the Klondike and defeats a combination of capitalists in a vast mining deal. He returns to civilization, and, amid the bewildering complications of high finance, Daylight finds that he has been led to invest his eleven millions in a manipulated scheme. He goes to New York, and confronting his disloyal partners with a revolver, he threatens to kill them if his money is not returned. They are cowed, return their stealings and Harnish goes back to San Francisco, where he meets his fate in Dede Mason, a pretty stenographer.

CHAPTER XI.

Daylight was in the thick of his spectacular and intensely bitter fight with the Coastwise Steam Navigation Company, and the Hawaiian, Nicaraguan, and Pacific-Mexican Steamship Company. He stirred up a bigger muss than he had anticipated, and even he was astounded at the wide ramifications of the struggle and at the unexpected and incongruous interests that were drawn into it. Every newspaper in San Francisco turned upon him. It was true, one or two of them had first intimated that they were open to subsidization, but Daylight's judgment was that the situation did not warrant such expenditure. Up to this time the press had been amusingly tolerant and good-naturedly sensational about him, but now he was to learn what virulent scurrilousness an antagonized press was capable of. Every episode of his life was resurrected to serve as foundations for malicious fabrications. Daylight was frankly amazed at the new interpretation put upon all that he had accomplished and the deeds he had done. From an Alaskan hero he was metamorphosed into an Alaskan bully, liar, desperado, and all-around "bad man." The whole affair sank to the deeper deeps of rancor and savageness. The poor woman who had killed herself was dragged out of her grave and paraded on thousands of reams of paper as a martyr and a victim to Daylight's ferocious brutality.

He was like a big bear raiding a bee-hive, and, regardless of the stings, he obstinately persisted in pawing for the honey. He gritted his teeth and struck back. Beginning with a raid on two steamship companies, it developed into a pitched battle with a city, state and continental coast line. Allied with him, on a splendid salary, with princely pickings thrown in, was a lawyer, Larry Hegan, a young Irishman with a reputation to make, and whose peculiar genius had been unrecognised until Daylight had picked up with him. It was Hegan who guided Daylight through the intricacies of modern politics, labor organization, and commercial and corporation law. It was Hegan, prolific of resource and suggestion, who opened Daylight's eyes to undreamed-of possibilities in twentieth-century warfare; and it was Daylight, rejecting, accepting, and elaborating, who planned the campaigns and prosecuted them. With the Pacific coast, from Puget Sound to Panama, buzzing and humming, and with San Francisco furiously about his ears, the two big steamship companies had all the appearance of winning. It looked as if Burning Daylight was being beaten slowly to his knees. And then he struck—at the steamship companies, at San Francisco, at the whole Pacific coast.



A Sudden Envy of This Young Fellow Came Over Daylight.

It was not much of a blow at first. A Christian Endeavor convention was being held in San Francisco, a row was started by Express Drivers' Union No. 927 over the handling of a small heap of baggage at Ferry Building. A few heads were broken, a score of arrests made, and the baggage was delivered. No one would have guessed that behind this petty wrangle was the fine Irish hand of Hegan, made potent by the Klondike gold of Burning Daylight. It was an insignificant affair at best—or so it seemed. But the Teamsters' Union took up the quarrel, backed by the whole Water Front Federation. Step by step, the strike became involved. A refusal of cooks and waiters to serve scab teamsters or teamsters' employers brought out the cooks and waiters. The butchers and meat cutters refused to handle meat destined for unfair restaurants. The combined Employers' Associations put up a solid front, and found facing them the 40,000 organized laborers of San Francisco. The restaurant bakers and the bakery wagon drivers struck, followed by the milkers, milk drivers and chicken pickers. The building trades asserted its position in unambiguous terms, and all San Francisco was in turmoil.

But still, it was only San Francisco. Hegan's intrigues were masterly, and Daylight's campaign steadily developed. The powerful fighting organization known as the Pacific Slope Seaman's Union refused to work vessels the cargoes of which were to be handled by scab longshoremen and freight handlers. The union presented its ultimatum, and then called a strike. This had been Daylight's objective all the time. Every incoming coastwise vessel was boarded by the union officials and its crew sent ashore. And with the seamen went the firemen, the engineers and the sea cooks and waiters. Daily the number of idle steamers increased. It was impossible to get scab crews, for the men of the Seamen's Union were fighters trained in the hard school of the sea, and when they went out it meant blood and death to scabs. This phase of the strike spread up and down the entire Pacific coast, until all the ports were filled with idle ships, and sea transportation was at a standstill. The days and weeks dragged out, and the strike held. The Coastwise Steam Navigation Company and the Hawaiian, Nicaraguan, and Pacific-Mexican Steamship Company were tied up completely. The expenses of combating the strike were tremendous, and they were earning nothing, while daily the situation went from bad to worse, until "peace at any price" became the cry. And still there was no peace, until Daylight and his allies played out their hand, raked in the winnings, and allowed a goodly portion of a continent to resume business.

Daylight's coming to civilization had not improved him. True, he wore better clothes, had learned slightly better manners, and spoke better English. But he had hardened, and at the expense of his old-time, whole-souled geniality. Even his human affiliations were descending. Playing a loose hand, contemptuous of most of the men with whom he played, lacking in sympathy or understanding of them, and certainly independent of them, he found little in common with those to be encountered, say at the Alta-Pacific. In point of fact, when the battle with the steamship companies was at its height and his raid was inflicting incalculable damage on all business interests, he had been asked to resign from the Alta-Pacific. The idea had been rather to his liking, and he had found new quarters in clubs like the Riverside, organized and practically maintained by the city bosses.

One week-end, feeling heavy and depressed and tired of the city and its ways, he obeyed the impulse of a whim that was later to play an important part in his life. The desire to get out of the city for a whiff of country air and for a change of scene was the cause. Yet, to himself, he made the excuse of going to Glen Ellen for the purpose of inspecting a brickyard which Holdsworthy had sold him. He spent the night in the little country hotel, and on Sunday morning, astride a saddle horse rented from the Glen Ellen butcher, rode out of the village. The brickyard was close at hand on the flat beside the Sonoma Creek.

Resolving to have his fun first, and to look over the brickyard afterward, he rode up the hill, prospecting for a way cross country to get to the knolls. He left the country road at the first gate he came to and cantered through a hayfield. The grain was waist-high on either side the wagon-road, and he sniffed the warm aroma of it with delighted nostrils. At the base of the knolls he encountered a tumble-down stake-and-rider fence.

He tethered the horse and wandered on foot among the knolls. Their tops were crowned with century-old spruce trees, and their sides clothed with oaks and madronos and native holly. But to the perfect redwoods belonged the small but deep canyon that threaded its way among the knolls. Here he found no passage out for his horse, and leading the animal, he forced his way up the hillside. On the crest he came through an amazing thicket of velvet-trunked young madronos, and emerged on an open hillside that led down into a tiny valley. The sunshine was at first dazzling in its brightness, and he paused and rested, for he was panting from the exertion. Not of old had he known shortness of breath such as this, and muscles that so easily tired at a stiff climb. A tiny stream ran down the tiny valley through a tiny meadow that was carpeted knee-high with grass and blue and white nemophila.

Crossing the stream, Daylight followed a faint cattle trail over a low, rocky hill and through a wine-wooded forest of manzanita, and emerged upon another tiny valley, down which filtered another spring-fed, meadow-bordered streamlet.

"It sure beats country places and bungalows at Menlo Park," he communed aloud; "and if ever I get the hankering for country life, it's me for this every time."

An old wood-road led him to a clearing, where a dozen acres of grapes grew on wine-red soil. A cow-path, more trees and thickets, and he dropped down a hillside to the southeast exposure. Here, poised above a big forested canyon, and looking out upon Sonoma Valley, was a small farmhouse. With its barn and outhouses it snuggled into a nook in the hillside, which protected it from the west and north. It was the erosion from this hillside, he judged, that had formed the little level stretch of vegetable garden. The soil was fat and black, and there was water in plenty, for he saw several faucets running wide open. Forgotten was the brickyard. Nobody was at home, but Daylight dismounted and ranged the vegetable garden, eating strawberries and green peas, inspecting the old adobe barn and rusty plow and harrow, and rolling and smoking cigarettes while he watched the antics of several broods of young chicks and the mother hens.

Nothing could satisfy his holiday spirit now but the ascent of Sonoma Mountain. And here on the crest, three hours afterward, he emerged, tired and sweaty, garments torn and face and hands scratched, but with sparkling eyes and an unwonted zestfulness of expression. He felt the illicit pleasure of a schoolboy playing truant. The big gaming table of San Francisco seemed very far away. But there was more than illicit pleasure in his mood. It was as though he were going through a sort of cleansing bath. No room here for all the sordidness, meanness and viciousness that filled the dirty pool of city existence. He was loath to depart, and it was not for an hour that he was able to tear himself away and take the descent of the mountain. Working out a new route just for the fun of it, late afternoon was upon him when he arrived back at the wooded knolls.

"It Sure Beats Country Places and Bungalows at Menlo Park," He Communed Aloud.

Daylight cast about for a trail, and found one leading down the side opposite to his ascent. Circling the base of the knoll, he picked up with his horse and rode on to the farmhouse. Smoke was rising from the chimney, and he was quickly in conversation with a nervous, slender young man, who, he learned, was only a tenant on the ranch. How large was it? A matter of one hundred and eighty acres, though it seemed much larger. This was because it was so irregularly shaped. Yes, it included the clay-pit and all the knolls, and its boundary that ran along the big canyon was over a mile long. Oh, yes, he and his wife managed to scratch a living without working too hard. They didn't have to pay much rent. Hillard, the owner, depended on the income from the clay-pit. Hillard was well off and had big ranches and vineyards down on the flat of the valley. The brickyard paid ten cents a cubic yard for the clay. As for the rest of the ranch, the land was good in patches, where it was cleared, like the vegetable garden and the vineyard, but the rest of it was too much up-and-down.

"You're not a farmer," Daylight said.

The young man laughed and shook his head.

"No; I'm a telegraph operator. But the wife and I decided to take a two-years' vacation, and . . . here we are. But the time's about up. I'm going back into the office this fall after I get the grapes off."

As Daylight listened, there came to him a sudden envy of this young fellow living right in the midst of all this which Daylight had traveled through the last few hours.

"What in thunder are you going back to the telegraph office for?" he demanded.

The young man smiled with a certain wistfulness.

"Because we can't get ahead here. . . ." (he hesitated an instant), "and because there are added expenses coming. The rent, small as it is, counts; and besides, I'm not strong enough to effectually farm the place. If I owned it, or if I were a real husky like you, I'd ask nothing better. Nor would the wife." Again the wistful smile hovered on his face. "You see, we're country born, and after bucking with cities for a few years, we kind of feel we like the country best. We've planned to get ahead, though, and then some day we'll buy a patch of land and stay with it."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Customer's Opinion.

Seymour—What do you think of the novel that Beaner, the restaurant keeper, has written?

Ashley—It's too much like his sandwiches—nothing between the covers.

Decided.

Knicker—Yes, my dear, I shall be glad to go with you; I long to see the beauties of the country.

Mrs. Knicker—We will stay in town.—Judge.

OPTIMISM A NATURAL TRAIT

Prospector Can Not Help but See Millions in Lode Which Necessity Makes Him Sell.

Mark Twain once defined a mine as "a hole in the ground owned by a liar." The genial humorist was for once guilty of a harsh judgment. The owner of a promising prospect, who is willing to sell it only because he lacks the capital requisite for its development, is not necessarily a liar. He is only an optimist. He does not mean to deceive anybody. He believes in the value of his property and describes it as he sees it. "Is that copper lode permanent?" said the representative of an eastern syndicate to the grizzled prospector who was trying to sell his claim. "Permanent?" was the reply; "well I should smile. If you had Niagara for a water power, and the state of Arizona for a dumping ground, and hell for a smelter, you couldn't work that ledge out in a million years."

"ECZEMA ITCHED SO BADLY I COULDN'T STAND IT."

"I suffered with eczema on my neck for about six months, beginning by little pimples breaking out. I kept scratching till the blood came. It kept getting worse, I couldn't sleep nights any more. It kept itching for about a month, then I went to a doctor and got some liquid to take. It seemed as if I was going to get better. The itching stopped for about three days, but when it started again, was even worse than before. The eczema itched so badly I couldn't stand it any more.

"I went to a doctor and he gave me some medicine, but didn't do any good. We have been having Cuticura Remedies in the house, so I decided to try them. I had been using Cuticura Soap, so I got me a box of Cuticura Ointment, and washed off the affected part with Cuticura Soap three times a day, and then put the Cuticura Ointment on. The first day I put it on, it relieved me of itching so I could sleep all that night. It took about a week, then I could see the scab come off. I kept the treatment up for three weeks, and my eczema was cured.

"My brother got his face burned with gun-powder, and he used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. The people all thought he would have scars, but you can't see that he ever had his face burned. It was simply awful to look at before the Cuticura Remedies (Soap and Ointment) cured it." (Signed) Miss Elizabeth Gehrki, Forrest City, Ark., Oct. 16, 1910. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Cursory.

A huntsman called on Hodge to settle for damages done by a run to hounds, and found only Mrs. Hodge at home.

"Has your husband," he inquired "made an examination yet?"

"That he have, sir," replied Mrs. Hodge with a courtesy.

"Rather a cursory examination, I suspect."

"Oh, dreadful, sir! Such language I never heard—never!" And the good woman held up her hands at the bare recollection.—Judge.

Such is Life.

Dugan—Oh, my, oh, my! Isn't Casey put'n on g-rand airs wid his new nutymobile? An' over in the ould counthry I dare say he went barefutted.

Rynn—Faith, not he his own accounts. He says he had a turnout over there thot atthracted great attintion.

Dugan—Av coorse; an eviction always does.

ONLY ONE "BROMO QUININE." That is LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE. Look for the signature of E. W. GROVE. Used the World over to Cure a Cold in One Day. 25c

A woman thinks a man is extravagant because he would as soon pay $1 for anything he wants as 98 cents.

There is nothing heavenly about war,—or Dyspepsia. The world is outgrowing the first, and Garfield Tea will conquer Dyspepsia.

When a young widow makes up her mind to marry a bachelor he may possibly escape by dying.

TWO WEEKS' TREATMENT AND MEDICINE FREE

no matter what your disease. If you suffer from Rheumatism, write. If you suffer from Kidney Trouble, write. No matter what you suffer from, write to

MUNYON'S DOCTORS

53d and Jefferson Sts., Philadelphia, Pa.

NOT A PENNY TO PAY

Offer Is Good for the Next Thirty Days

Your Liver Is Clogged Up

That's Why You're Tired—Out of Sorts —Have No Appetite.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS will put you right in a few days.

They do their duty.

Cure Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion and Sick Headache

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1906, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

About every week some one of the Thief River Falls papers are hunting up some popular opponent to congressman Steenerson, which looks queer to us, in view of the fact that he now has a bill before congress for an appropriation for a fedral building at that place, something that they are entitled to, and we hope to see them get.

The state is getting their fire patrolmen ready to take the field this month. If they can do as good work protecting the loss by fire as our Minnesota Game and Fish Commission did on Red Lake River last year they had ought to be of great benefit to the state. That "gamey" fish Commission had men roosting around here for years watching the game and fish, at public expense, but last year when the lumber compunys closed off this river and killed every living fish in it our Game and Fish Commission stood idly by and allowed them to do it, because they were a rich CORPORATION. To day there is not a living fish or animal in the Red Lake River, from a mink down to a bull frog from the outlet of the Red Lake to Red Lake Falls. Is not that a fine Game and Fish Commission, for the protection of game and fish, that we have in this state?

SPARE TIME TO LAUGH.

Brooding Over Your Worries Won't Lighten the Burden.

It is the duty of mankind, even in depressing circumstances, to strive to be cheerful. It is the general belief that if a man is not naturally light hearted he cannot make himself so.

Yet this is far from being the case, and there is many a man who is, at present a weary burden to his relatives, miserable through the carking care of some bodily ailment perhaps or some worldly misfortune, who, if he had grown up with the idea that to be cheerful in all circumstances was one of the first duties of life, might still see a pleasant enough world round him.

The worries of a morose person will shorten his days, and the general justice of nature's arrangement provides that his early departure should entail no long regrets.

On the other hand, the man who can laugh keeps his health. To the perfectly healthy laughter comes often. Too commonly, though, as childhood is left behind, the habit fails, and a half smile is the most that visits the thought lined mouth of a modern man or woman. People become more and more burdened with the accumulations of knowledge and with the weighty responsibilities of life, but they should still spare time to laugh.—Detroit Free Press.

SEED GERMINATION.

In Some Cases the Development is Remarkably Rapid.

It has been said that the seed of the globe turnip when growing increases its own weight fifteen times within a minute. The seed of this turnip is exceedingly minute, being not larger than the twentieth part of an inch in diameter, and yet in the course of a few months the seed will be developed by the soil into twenty-seven millions of times the bulk of the original, and this in addition to a considerable bunch of leaves.

On peat ground turnips have been found to increase by growth 15,000 times the weight of their seed each day they stood.

The funguses offer an instance of remarkably rapid growth. The great puff ball will attain the size of a pumpkin in a single night, and Lindley calculated that the cells whereof it is composed will multiply at the rate of 60,000,000 a minute.

Many seeds germinate in a very short period—the cress in two days; spinach, turnips and kidney beans in three days, lettuce in four, melons and gourds in five, most of the grain seed in a week and hyssop at the end of a month. But others remain for a very long period without showing signs of germination.—New York Herald.

His Part.

"Who is the responsible person in this firm?" asked the brusque caller of the office boy.

"Can't tell you, sir," replied the pert lad, "but I'm the one who gets all the blame."

The Danger After Grip

lies often in a run down system, Weakness, nervousness, lack of appetite, energy and ambition, with disordered liver and kidneys often follows an attact of this wretched disease. The greatest need then is Electric Bitter, the glourious tonic, blood purifier and regulator of stomach, liver and kidneys. Thousands have proved that they wonderfully strengthen the nerves, build up the system and restore to health and good spirits after an attact of Grip. If suffering try them. Only 50 cents. Sold and perfect satisfaction guarenteed by All Druggists.

FODDER CORN.

Owing to the fact that so much land has been sold during the past season in this county to actual settlers that are moving here this spring and the majority of these being un-improved land, the result will be that hay land will be more scarse than ever as also more people during the past two years have gone into the dairy business thus requiring about twice the amount of hay that was used in former years so it will be well for the farmers to make arrangements for the feed as early as possiable, and the writer having recently made a trip thru a certain dairy district in the southern part of the State, where there of course is no wild hay but an abundance of both clover and timothy we find that even there the farmers are preferring fodder corn to fine tame grass and that about the same amount of feed can be gotten from 10 acres of wel cultivated fodder corn as they would get from 160 acres of either clover or timothy besides being a great deal more nutrious and especially far better for milk cows for milk purposes. Even people now moving here that have no old fields on the land need not hesitate to put in fodder corn on the prairie sod broken this spring provided they will break it well and thourly disc it up and if given a good coat of old manure the result will still be better. We would advise the farmers figuring on planting fodder corn to make arrangements for the seed in good season and see to it that they are getting the right kind best adapted to this country.

It Looks Like A Crime

to separate a boy from a box of Bucklen's Arnica Salve. His pimples, boils, scratches, knocks, sprains, and bruises demand it, and its quick relief for burns, scalds, or cuts is his right Keep it handy for boys, also girls. Heals every thing healeble and does it quick. Unequaled for piles. Only 25 cent at All Druggists.

FARM LOANS.

Made Without Deley, at reasonble rates of interest.

Be sure and see me before you place your loan.

GEORGE ELDER
McGinn Block,
Thief River Falls

* * *

Not Posted.

"Did you know Peterson a year ago?"

"I should say not."

"You didn't?"

"If I had he'd never have sold me that chicken farm."

* * *

Worse Than Hard Words.

"Why did you kill your parrot? The poor bird meant nothing by its profanity."

"I could stand its profanity, but it learned to imitate the lawn mower last summer."—Washington Herald.

Prayer carries us halfway to God, fasting brings us to the door of his palace, and almsgiving procures us admission.—Koran.

EXPLAINS POSITION OF PROGRESSIVES

Col. Roosevelt Talks of the Aims of Campaign in Which He Is Engaged.

APPEALS TO ALL THE PEOPLE

Object Is to Restore and Secure Control of the Government to Those to Whom It Rightly Belongs —The Welfare of the Farmer.

St. Paul, Minn., March 29.—Colonel Roosevelt addressed a large audience here today, taking for his subject "The Welfare of the Farmer." He spoke as follows:

"The purpose of the progressives in this campaign is to restore and secure to the plain people that position of control in the government of their own country which in the working of our institutions is being insidiously wrested from them. We make our appeal alike to business man and professional man, to wage-worker and farmer. In this speech I propose to deal chiefly with the needs of the farmer; for there is nobody of whose economic liberties and opportunities we progressives more earnestly desire to conserve and enlarge. Speaking to the farmers, and to all others who have insight to grasp the essential dependence of the nation on the producers of its food, I shall briefly discuss two great public questions of vital and far-reaching importance; the conservation of natural resources and the betterment of country life.

"It is one of the chief duties—and it is the highest privilege—of a President of the United States to be the active leader and exponent of policies which will help the people to obtain such legislative and administrative reforms as are required to meet any reasonable popular demand which makes for the common good. While I was president I had found that in the first matter—the conservation of the nation's resources—the national conscience had been moved, and that in the second—the condition and outlook of rural population—there was a widespread feeling that things were wrong. Consequently I took definite action in the hope and belief that adequate remedies would be provided, and I now stand for the revival and development of the policies thus initiated.

"Upon conservation I can be brief, for, in its broad outlines at least, the subject is generally understood. What first called attention to the gravity of the question was the destruction of the national forests. It happened fortunately that this important asset of the national wealth came, during my administration, under the charge of Gifford Pinchot, to whom, more than to any other man, is due the credit for having this national peril brought prominently to public notice. He was the first man to realize that the waste of the nation's supply of timber (with the incidental injury alike to irrigation, water power and navigation in our big rivers) was only typical of a wrong attitude of mind in the nation at large towards our heritage and our duty to the generations which are to come after us.

Policy of Conservation.

"The conservation idea caught the popular imagination and the conservation policy rapidly took shape. In the spring of 1908 I called the governors of all the states and territories to meet at a conference in the national capitol. There it was unanimously resolved "that the great prosperity of our country rests upon the abundant resources of the land chosen by our forefathers for their homes," that these resources are "a heritage to be made use of in establishing and promoting the comfort, prosperity and happiness of the American people, but not to be wasted, deteriorated, or needlessly destroyed, and that this material basis is threatened with exhaustion;" that "conservation of our natural resources is a subject of transcendent importance, which should engage unremittingly the attention of the nation, the states and the people in earnest co-operation; and that this co-operation should find expression in suitable action by congress and by the legislatures of the several states."

"I followed this up by the appointment of the National Conservation commission which made the first inventory of natural resources ever prepared for any country. It had begun investigations as the necessary first steps to enable congress and the legislatures of the several states to make intelligent and effective application of the unanimous pronouncement by the chief executives of the states and territories. With this unanimous pronouncement by the chief executives of the states and territories in support of the conservation idea, it was clearly a case where the President of the United States should formulate and lead a conservation policy. This was done. Unfortunately the policy thus begun was completely reversed, by the appointment of Mr. Ballinger and the dismissal of Gifford Pinchot.

Object of Forest Protection.

"The long fight to protect the forests of the United States has not been to keep them out of use, but on the contrary to encourage the utilization of them to the fullest extent consistent with preserving their power of service to the people for all time. Conservation is not keeping out of use, but is putting things to the best use without waste and where possible preserving their perennial usefulness unimpaired. Where public rights exist conservation is to insure to the public the full enjoyment and benefit of these rights and at the same time to protect and encourage private enterprise engaged in development work.

"The same principle applies to all natural resources. The fertility of the lands must be protected while the annual toll of crops is taken off. No citizen has a right to despoil the land and leave it so impoverished as to imperil the future prosperity and stability of the nation. This nation must not allow its future to be endangered by the reckless exhaustion of the natural resources which are essential means to its existence and greatness and also the sources out of which labor can obtain legitimate satisfaction. The way to defend private property is to obey what is now the settled national resolve as to the proper use and conservation of public property. We progressives declare that this generation shall not pass away without having wiped out of its record the charge of unconcern for the country's future, the failure to follow the instinct which is implanted even in the lower animals—that of the preservation of the race. It behooves us to preserve the means essential to the perpetual welfare of the nation. To accomplish the task effectively two things are of prime importance. In the first place there must be a sound moral standard on public matters; our public men must represent and respond to the aroused conscience of the people. In the next place all the great natural resources which are vital to the welfare of the whole people should either be kept in the hands of or under the full control of the whole people. This applies to coal, oil, timber, water power, natural gas. Either natural resources of the land should be kept in the hands of the people and their development and use allowed under leasing arrangements (or otherwise); or where this is not possible there should be strict governmental control over their use. All the remaining water power in our country—and probably there are in streams that the government owns or controls 400 millions of man power—should be retained in full by the people, and should be developed and used so as to pay a good fair profit to the developers, but with the prime aim of keeping the ultimate ownership in the people and making its beneficial use by the people the first consideration.

The People and the Soil.

"I pass now to the equally important, but far less understood policy of country life. In a sense you may regard this policy as one part of conservation. Of all possible husbanding of physical national resources none is comparable in its value to the nation with the conservation of the natural fertility of the soil; and even more important is it to keep the right type of men and women on the soil. Moreover the public opinion to which we must look to make conservation an effective national policy will not come from the cities where big business is in power. It will come from the farmers who alive to their duty in regard to the resources at their command will see that they get their due share of those other resources which belong to the people at large and to no privileged class.

"Thought upon the betterment of country life idea, as we know it today, had not reached a point where action could be taken until very near the end of my term of office. Obviously the first thing to do was to ascertain the facts, and especially to find out whether a real demand for action and effective support for action were likely to come from the rural communities directly concerned. I, therefore, appointed an unpaid commission of experts who held public inquiries all over the United States and also circulated through the mail a large number of printed questions. I believe in drawing upon volunteers for great public service as much in civil as in military matters and I did it in other connections. The only expense that the public was put to in this case was the free return through the mail of these forms which brought invaluable information and opinions from tens of thousands of representative people in rural communities. All the other expenditure, even the traveling expenses of the commissioners, and the publication of their report, was provided for out of private funds. The commissioners say in their report, from which I would like to quote a great deal more. 'We have found by the testimony, not only of the farmers themselves, but of all persons in touch with farm life, more or less serious unrest in every part of the United States, even in the most prosperous regions.'

Farmers "Used" by Politicians.

"Commenting on this passage a foreign observer has written: 'The truth is that, when judged by the standard of living in European peasantries, the farmers of the United States are prosperous, but in comparison with the other citizens of the most progressive country in the world they are not well off. Their accumulation of material wealth is unnaturally and unnecessarily restricted; their social life is relatively barren; their political influence is relatively small. American farmers have been used by politicians, but have still to learn how to use them.'

"Here, both in the general conclusion of the country life commission and in the foreign writer's pregnant criticism of it, we are brought face to face with the fact that the farmers of the United States have not enjoyed their due share of the progress and prosperity of this God-prospered country. I want to say to you that there is no more urgent problem before the people of the United States today than that of endowing the country side of our civilization with economic opportunities, educational facilities, social advantages and political recognition, more nearly approximating to those to which our city population has attained. And I shall show that the cities are just as much concerned as is the country population for the wellbeing of the farmer.

"That something is wrong with rural communities, as the country life commission insists, is only too well known. There is not in this country, as in the older settled parts of Europe, the same rural depopulation and agricultural depression which widely prevails in the old world. Our happier condition in this regard is, however, due to the circumstance that we are blessed by Providence with an abundance of fertile land upon whose resources our population does not yet press. But even now we have in one sense a serious rural exodus. There is a growing tendency for all the brightest and most enterprising youth of the country to prefer the chances of a town career; and also a tendency for the owners of agricultural land to move into cities and leave their farms to be worked by tenants. Both these tendencies are to be deplored and should engage careful thought where they are most marked. Our city populations have been physically and morally sustained by the constant inflow of the best country blood. This cannot go on indefinitely. If this human reservoir from which the cities have drawn and must continue to draw so much of their best citizenship becomes depleted and deteriorated, the cities themselves will be the greatest sufferers from the evils which always threaten a nation which as a whole abandons the country for the town. National degeneracy will then proceed apace. Here we open up a vista of social speculation which I cannot today pursue. For I want to emphasize an aspect of the rural life problem which concerns every worker for his living in the United States.

Reason for High Cost of Living.

"Beyond question the growing cost of the necessaries of life is in no small measure due to two economic facts. Firstly, the farm lands of the United States do not produce nearly

(continued on page 5)

An Old Saw, With A New Set.

We have now a large and complete stock of new goods at our Kratka store, and would be pleased to have all our old customers call and see us at the new store and post Office.

A FINE LINE OF BOTH HEAVY AND LIGHT SHOES.

Ask to look at our stock of Shoes. No trouble to show GOODS.

Higest market price paid for butter and eggs.

Singer Bros Kratka Minn.

RHODA STORE

NEW GOODS, NEW PRICES.

A trial order will convince you, that this is the best Store to buy your goods.

I HAVE A FINE LINE OF GROCERIES.

BOOTS, SHOES, & COMPLET STOCK OF SUMMER FOOT WARE.

give me a call and get prices.

GEORGE SINGER. Prop. Rhoda Minn.

McCall's Magazine and McCall Patterns For Women

Have More Friends than any other magazine or patterns. McCall's is the reliable Fashion Guide monthly in one million one hundred thousand homes. Besides showing all the latest designs of McCall Patterns, each issue is brimful of sparkling short stories and helpful information for women.

Save Money and Keep in Style by subscribing for McCall's Magazine at once. Costs only 50 cents a year, including any one of the celebrated McCall Patterns free.

McCall Patterns Lead all others in style, fit, simplicity, economy and number sold. More dealers sell McCall Patterns than any other two makes combined. None higher than 15 cents. Buy from your dealer, or by mail from

McCALL'S MAGAZINE
236-246 W. 37th St., New York City

Note—Sample Copy, Premium Catalogue and Pattern Catalogue free, on request.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

CORN-SEEDS TREES

Our 29th Annual Catalog is now ready and free for the asking. It is a work of art and full of good things.

-See King Corn on front cover.

WILL'S PIONEER SEED HOUSE and NURSERY
OSCAR H. WILL & CO.
BISMARCK, NO. DAKOTA

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Call and see us, when you are ready to make your final proof.

Winter held its job petty well, but when spring did come it holds its job.

Steffen Jordsbl and Ole Narveson are around this week, dehorning cattle.

Read the new add of Singer Singer Bros. publishe in another colum and give them a call.

C. L. Clark drove down to T.R. F. Wednesday to meet his sister Mrs. A. Weaver, from Wisconsin.

Andrew Lssds, who has the new homestead farm on section 22 town of Kratka came up from Minneapolis last Saturday, and will make his home on the farm. He will do a lot of breaking this season.

A good big handsom steer, that will make a good working ox, for sale cheap. Partly broken. Inquire at this office.

James O'Brien is moving his farm residence this week and will put a new addition and a cement foundation to it.

The sudden arrivel of spring has compelled us to devote some time to our farming interests this week, as the country editor must make a living you know,

The next meeting of the young Peoples Society will be held at the residence of Tallak Dale on the 8th, day of April. The ladies aid society will have their auction at same place and date. All are welcome.

Pete Hedeen came up from Nelson last Saturday to look after his Kratka farm. Althou his family are at Nelson Mr. Hadeen will be here a large portion of the time looking after his farming and County Commissioner work.

Edward Singer sold his farm in section 20 town of Deer Park this week, for $2000, and 55.00. Althou this is considered a fair price for a quater of uninproved land at this time, we believe the buyer got the best of the deal in the long run.

We don't hear any talk about fishing this spring, as the lumber caught them all this winter. But work under the seal of approvel of our government engineers at St. Paul and the protection of our Minnesota Game and fish Commission, at so much per.

Our snow has all left us and the land will be ready for seeding by Monday, and some of the farmers are starting the harrows this week. Don't wait for spring, for it is here, and the early sown grain is always the best. Rush your wheat into the ground as soon as possiable.

With this issue we publish No. 2 of Vol. XII of THE SUNBEAM, under its present mananngemen, and ownership, of which fact the Thief River Falls Times had better take notice, and that this paper and its publisher are abundently able to take care of themselves in a controvorsy with a "mushroom" publication that grew up in a night to do dirty work for a Corporation. In fact your publication has justly earned the reputation that has been given it, which is the Scavenger publication, of Thief River Falls.

The farmers Institute meeting held at the Highlanding school house Wednesday evening was not as well attended as it should have been, owing to lack of advertiseing. Professor Hess gave a lecture on the rotation of Crops, and Mr. Carlson, of Erskin talked on dairy cows and how to feed them. He talked from practical experience rather than from books, and as Carlson Bros. have made a success of dairying and raising stock on their Polk county farm, his advice should be considerd good. He told the farmers how to stack corn for winter feed for cows, which instructions we shall publish later, but we must grow the corn before stacking it.

Almost A Mirical.

One of the most startling chages changes ever seen in any man, according to W. B. Holsclaw, Claredon, Tex., was affected years ago in his brother. "He had such a dreadful caugh," he writes, "that all our family thought he was geing into consumption, but he began to use Dr. Kings New Discovery, and was copletly cured by ten bottels. Now he is sound and well and weighs 218 pounds. For many years our family has used this wonderful remedy for Coughs and Colds with excelent results." It's quick, safe, reliable and guarenteed. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottle free, at All Druggists.

Puts End to Bad Habits.

Things never look bright to one with "the blues." Ten to one the trouble is a slugish liver, filling the system with billions poison, that Dr. King's New Life Pills would expel. Try them. Let the joy of better feelings end "the blues." Best for stomach, liver and kidneys. 25 cents, at All Druggists.

FARM FOR SALE.

The N. E. ¼ Section 14 Township 152 N. Range 40, Town of Deer Park. Price $16,00 per acre.

Henry Rovoold,
Alsask, Sask. Canada.

EXPLAINS POSITION.

(Continued From 4th page.)

as much food as they might produce under conditions more favorable to the farmer. Secondly, owing to the lack of organization among farmers the marketing of their products is controlled by middle interests which lower the price to the producer and at the same time increase the cost to the consumer.

"Now this is a serious state of facts. It arises out of a wrong attitude of public opinion towards the most important body of wealth producers in the country and a general tendency to subordinate the interests of the rural to those of the urban populations. This tendency was first manifested in England. It has since prevailed throughout the English-speaking world. It has to be corrected; and it is worth while to pause for a moment to tell you how this fatal mistake arose.

"It all began with the industrial revolution which began in the latter part of the eighteenth century. This, as you know, arose out of a succession of inventions mostly connected with the great development of machinery and the utilization of steam, and subsequently of electricity, to manufacture. The chief social result was the concentration of industries and of their workers in great cities. Those who continued to live upon the land were thus deprived of all profitable occupation except agriculture. The farmers were regarded as feeders of the cities and the markets which were thus made for them were considered to give them all they required at the hands of the nation. But when rapid and cheap transportation, together with processes for preserving produce in transit, brought the farmers of the old world into competition with those who were developing the newly-opened farm lands of this continent, agricultural depression set in, not only in England, but throughout Europe. In those countries which were forced to remain under a military regime the importance of the agricultural population to the nation was recognized, but in the English-speaking countries there was a general tendency to concentrate all national thought and power upon industrial development and commercial expansion, and to regard the farmers as an inferior order of citizens. That is not consciously our attitude to the farmers of this country, but in many respects we have acted as if it was. It behooves us, therefore, to consider how the farmers in the most progressive European countries have dealt with this modern problem of rural life and see how far foreign experience will show us how best to help the farmers of the United States.

Lesson From Foreign Countries.

"It is strange but true that we can at the moment best learn our lesson in this matter of rural progress from the farmers of Ireland and of certain countries on the European mainland. For instance, Ireland depends, as Denmark does, upon agriculture. During recent years the government has been fundamentally changing the whole agricultural economy of the island by helping the tenants to become owners. A body of Irish reformers, who have done fine work in the rural problem, saw over twenty years ago that this boon to the Irish farmers would not help them to survive the world-wide competition in the British markets unless they revolutionized their husbandry and their business and also recognized their social life. They found, as many a depressed European peasantry has found, that the co-operative system was the surest way to the all-round improvement in rural conditions they were seeking to effect. The problem of rural life is engaging the serious thought of the British nation and parliament. Much is being done by legislation with the aim of settling a larger number of people upon the land. Recently a development commission has been created and liberally provided with funds for the purpose of aiding and developing agriculture in the United Kingdom. Among the means to this end is specified the organization of co-operation. The reason for this provision was that the Irish farmers had learned the value of co-operative methods from their continental rivals in supplying the British market with agricultural products.

"As I have often stated, I believe that it is essential to the welfare of the American farmers that they should adopt generally the co-operative system, which already has proved highly advantageous in a few instances. In many of the states of the Union there are gratifying examples of associated effort by communities of farmers to improve their economic conditions and to increase the opportunities and means for social satisfaction. I heartily welcome the fact that several of the large railway companies are directly associating themselves with the rural communities in their movements towards making farming more profitable to the pockets and country life more satisfying to the social instincts of the people. The good points of the systems and methods as revealed by experience in different localities could become helpfully known to all by systematic assistance in the initial stages of organization. An immense impulse to the movement would result from the extension of recognized leadership and sympathy from the chief executive of the government.

Work for Agricultural Department.

"I see no reason why the department of agriculture should not stand at the head of and foster the movement for these great and far-reaching agricultural reforms. In that department we have one of the largest, if not the largest, civil administrative branches of government in the world. The progressives demand that its utilities should be far more widely extended, and one of their first objects when they come into power will be to see that the department sets itself to work out a broader scheme than has yet been attempted for the uplifting, technically, commercially, socially and politically of the American farmer.

"A word must be added on the social and political aspects of the country life question. I have always insisted that the social life of the country folk must be brightened. This is largely to be done by education and social organization. Far too often in the past the education of the rural youth has failed to interest them either in the science of agriculture or the beauty of nature—in the country. It has rather prepared their minds for the attractions and opportunities of the cities. These are matters in which the rural church, whose helpful influence upon the business organization and social life—especially in helping to introduce co-operation for business and social reasons—could be an invaluable service to the nation, as well as to the religious bodies themselves. I very earnestly hope that all our church bodies will act along the lines of this suggestion, offered in all sympathy with their difficulties, to enter more largely upon the field of social service in the open country. The Y. M. C. A. has already begun such work. The churches can supply a great need by giving to the country a counterpart of the social service which enriches the urban life of our civilization. It is their function to teach us not only our duty towards our God, but our duty towards our neighbors. The federal councils of churches through its commission in the church and social service is taking up this question.

"Lastly, in advocating the co-operative system—and still more, the co-operative spirit among farmers—I have in view the strengthening of their political influence. It is as true as it is forgotten that the influence of any interest upon legislation and administration is strictly proportional to the extent to which the interest is organized—not, mark you, for political, but for business purposes. It is to the failure of the farmers to act together in the business of their lives that I attribute their lack of political influence. I say, too, no country can realize its mission where the opinion of those who live and work upon the land does not find adequate expression through political action.

"We progressives stand for the two policies of conservation and the betterment of country life. We regard them both as urgent and claiment for action. For the last three years there has been, as regards both of them, first reaction; and second, when under a storm of public disapprovel the policy of open reaction was abandoned, weak and halting action without the forceful central leadership which can only come from deep and abiding conviction. We demand such leadership and we demand in the leaders the deep conviction which alone can give such leadership; for thus only will there be response to the appeal which comes direct from the heart and conscience of the people to the mind and will of the statesman."

What He Married.

When Lafcadio Hearn married his Japanese wife, all his wife's family accompanied him to his new quarters. He mentions that he had nine lives dependent upon him—wife's, wife's mother, wife's father, wife's adopted mother, wife's father's father, three servants and a Buddhist student. This wouldn't do in England, but it is nothing in Japan.—From "Lafcadio Hearn—His Life and Work," by Nina H. Kennard.

"I Suffered Intense Pains in My Left Side."

Do you realize it is better to be safe than sorry, that it is the best policy to lock the stable door before the horse is stolen?

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy

cured Mrs. C. C. Gokey, of a stubborn case of heart disease, such as thousands are now suffering with. Read what she says:

"Before I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy I had been suffering from heart trouble for over five years. I had grown so weak that it was impossible for me to do thirty minutes work in a whole day. I suffered intense pains in my left side and under the left shoulder blade, I could not sleep on the left side, and was so short of breath that I thought I should never be able to take a full breath again. The least excitement would bring on the most distressing palpitation. I had scarcely taken a half-bottle of the Heart Remedy before I could see a marked change in my condition. I began to sleep well, had a good appetite, and improved so rapidly that when I had taken six bottles I was completely cured.
MRS. C. C. GOKEY, Northfield, Vt.

If you have any of the symptoms Mrs. Gokey mentions, it is your duty to protect yourself.

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy

is what you need. If the first bottle fails to benefit, your money is returned. Ask your druggist.

MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

Feminine Amenities.

"I am engaged to a struggling young lawyer."

"Dear me! Is he trying that hard to get away?"—Boston Globe.

State of Ohio, city of Toledo, } ss.
Lucas County,

Frank J. Cheney makes oath that he is senior partner of the firm of F. J. Cheney & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by the use of HALL'S CATARRH CURE.
FRANK J. CHENEY.

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1886.
(Seal) A. W. GLEASON, Notary Public.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials, free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by all Druggists, 75c.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

LUNG DISEASE

"After four in our family had died of consumption I was taken with a frightful cough and lung trouble, but my life was saved and I gained 87 pounds through using

DR. KING'S NEW DISCOVERY

W. R. Patterson, Wellington, Tex.
PRICE 50c and $1.00 AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

LUMBER FOR SALE.

I will have about 50,000 ft. of lumber for sale this winter at $15.00 per thousand Will take cattle in exchange.

Andrew Nilson.

W. G. Hunt.

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate Court Work.

The Last Dueling Clergymen.

"When did clergymen cease to fight duels?" is a startling inquiry in London Notes and Queries. It will be news to many of us that they were ever fond of that exhilarating pastime. But, as a matter of fact, the Rev. Mr. Allan fought a duel with Lloyd Delany, Esq., and killed him in Hyde park in 1752. He was convicted of manslaughter and fined 1 shilling plus six months in Newgate.

NEW BANK.

FIRST STATE BANK,

OF OKLEE Lambert Post Office Minn.
NEW STATION ON DULUTH SCO LINE.

Your Business Solicited.

Directors: A. P. Toupin, Pres. Samul Gilean Vic. Prs.
Larry O'Niel, Abrham Purquire, T. L. Cruzon.
J. A. DUFFY, Cashier. T. L. CRUZON, Assist. Cashier.

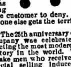
Let Us Tell You Something!

This Season we are offering the best line of Dry Goods that ever came into this Section of the Country.

Don't Buy Elswhare, Until You Have Seen What We Have To Offer.

No Matter What Price you pay, WE Will please YOU.

VAUGHAN BROS. & CO.
Highlanding Minn.



WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's $50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day

Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how cosy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were piloting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory? We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars it will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Our New Home. Capacity 20,000 Safes Annually.

Ask for Catalogue 16 T.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.
CINCINNATI, OHIO

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT

IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the regular retail prices.

$10.00 Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof Self-healing Tires A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. A hundred thousand pairs sold last year.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D" also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at our expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

J. L. MEAD CYCLE COMPANY, CHICAGO, ILL.

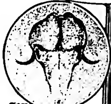
SKULL OF ADULT COW

The MUSKOX

By FRANK C. HENNESSEY

SKULL OF LARGE BULL

SURVIVING throughout the extremely cold and blizzard-smitten arctic night, the muskox, common only to arctic America, is the sole representative of its genus. This curious beast, more closely resembling in many respects the sheep than the ox, is the typical animal of the frozen regions that it inhabits. Its range extends as far south as latitude 60 degrees and as far west as the Mackenzie river. It abounds on the east and west coasts of Greenland, and on almost all the islands of the Arctic archipelago. The finding at different points of fossilized remains of the muskox proves that many centuries ago the range of this animal was much vaster than it is at the present day. It is indeed interesting to know that this same muskox, or an animal differing only slightly from it, inhabited country as far south as Kansas and Kentucky. Although at that time the climate of America was undoubtedly much colder than it is now, science regards this as an extinct species. Fossilized bones of the muskox have also been found about the Obi river in Siberia and at many other points in Asia and in Europe. The great zoological authority, Lydekker, calls our attention to the curious way in which the muskox became extinct in the Eastern Hemisphere and yet flourished in the Western, whilst the other cold lover, the reindeer, still survives in both.



SKULL OF ADULT BULL

MUSKOX BULL, COW and CALF

SKULL OF COW

FIRST INDICATION OF HORNS

SKULL OF YOUNG ANIMAL

YOUNG MUSKOX CALF

Although the muskox appears to be considerably larger than it really is, on account of the abundance of its coat, yet it may be roughly reckoned at about two-thirds the size of the American bison. The coat of the muskox is dark umber in color, and in places even black, but that of the leg and "saddle," however, is so much lighter as to appear in contrast with the rest of its fur as almost buff. The hair of the mane and back is decidedly woolly, but the rest of its coat falls in thick folds of hair, sometimes almost completely obscuring its legs, and reaching to the ground. So heavy is this coat that the ears and tail, and often the base of the horns, are completely hidden by it. Beneath this hairlike coat is one of wool, somewhat of a light chocolate color. The greater development of the fore quarters particularly in the bull is so marked that when one of these fully grown beasts advances towards the hunter, it may readily be mistaken for two animals walking in close proximity. The muskox is quite short limbed, massive and stubby in build, and in the spring the grotesqueness of its appearance is more greatly enhanced by the masses of wool that cling to the hair, and which it is at that time shedding.

One of the characteristic features of this animal is the development of its horns. In the matured animal these are joined to the skull on top and almost at the rear. They are wide and peculiarly rough at the base, the uneven roughness gradually forming regular, uniform ridges where the horns curve in towards the skull, finally assuming an almost polished smoothness as they taper to a point and turn upward. If a line were drawn from the point of one horn to that of the other, it would be found to pass just before the eyes. The horns are generally about 25 inches in length, but there are many cases where they have measured as much as 27. Those of the bull are much more heavy and massive than those of the cow and are almost joined at the base. The horns are a yellowish white in color with the exception of the tips which are black. The hoofs of the muskox are quite small when compared with those of the caribou, relatively considering the weights of the animals. They are admirably adapted to assist the animal in crossing icy surfaces, having a considerable growth of hair between the hoofs which undoubtedly has the same function as that on the under part of the paw of the polar bear.

During the long Arctic winter the muskox roams at large over the snow-covered barren wastes that it inhabits, frequenting those parts where it can best obtain the few lichens and scanty mosses that form its sustenance and which it recovers by removing the great depth of snow with its hoofs. At this time of the year, the muskoxen assemble in herds, much that they might huddle together for protection during the great blizzards, and better to repel the attacks of the then almost starving Arctic wolves, practically their sole enemy, from which by this and other tactics they are able to ward off the attacks of wild beasts. As was the case with the American bison and the buffalo wolf, the young and inexperienced, the aged outcast and the diseased, however, fall an easy prey to the hungry lurkers. The muskox runs swiftly, but can maintain a gallop for but a short time, when, turning about, it faces its pursuer, forming into a long line if attacked from but one point, and into a circle if from several. With glaring eyes and pawing hoofs it awaits the approach of the intruder, when apparently having sufficiently recuperated from the exertion, it again gallops off, only to make another stand farther on. But an ordinary man can soon exhaust them by repeatedly putting them to flight. However, the muskox does not always fly at the approach of man, and in mute stupidity, a whole herd will stand in line and allow themselves to be shot down by a single hunter who will have no difficulty in securing every one of them provided he keeps low and kills outright each animal he shoots. Scenting the hunter invariably puts them to flight, but if you prevent them from doing this, you can approach them without difficulty. When alarmed, they resort to the nearest elevation on which to stand at bay, and so closely do they huddle together on these occasions that they may be seen treading upon one another's feet. In ascending and descending steep slopes, the muskox shows its likeness to the sheep by the agility and the speed with which it traverses these. The vitality of the muskox is considerable and it is only a very well placed single bullet, of large caliber, that will bring down an adult beast. The muskox has a slightly musky smell, which is sometimes said to be so prevalent in the flesh as to render it decidedly objectionable. This musky taint is entirely eliminated by dressing the animal as soon as it has been killed, for any carcass, if not so treated, will assume an objectionable flavor, which is caused chiefly by the presence of gases in the stomach which should have been removed. Personally, I always managed to do justice to muskox flesh, which I consider in flavor and tenderness far superior to beef. The call of the young muskox calf to its mother is much like that of the young domesticated calf, but it is decidedly more pleasing in tone. The bellow of the adult is of much shorter duration than that of the domesticated cow and is seldom uttered by the animal. Like all other wild mothers the mother muskox is a devout mother, and when a herd stands at bay, you may look in vain to find a calf, for they have been huddled from sight in the long, hanging fur of the ones that will stand to the last to protect them.

Towards the coming of summer, the large herds generally break up and the bulls in particular wander singly along the sea coast, relishing the luxury and abundance of the short season which so soon and so abruptly shall come to an end. Their maneuvers are slow and their ways docile, during this season in particular. By grazing during the day and traveling principally in the evening, they slowly continue their uncertain wandering of no destination.

It has been my good and rare fortune to have helped to capture alive a young muskox. It was in the month of May that when hunting for these animals I happened to wound a cow in a herd we were chasing. She left the others, but soon came to a standstill, when with my companion I came up to her and was surprised to find that a little calf was standing by her side. I felt sorry for the poor beast that had so successfully hidden and protected its offspring and for the obedient little calf itself that had so faithfully followed its mother. After despatching the mother I expected that we would have no little trouble in capturing the calf, but to our surprise the stricken little beast stood still and allowed us to come right up to it. But when we picked it from the ground it struggled so violently that we could hardly hold it. My companion took upon himself the task of carrying our capture and it was really amusing to observe how, when Joe least expected, the calf, without warning, would summon all its strength of limb and tongue in an effort to free itself, almost bringing him to the ground.

By the time we had arrived at the ship the sun was no longer a midnight sun, for it was seven in the morning. A number of our friends came out to meet us, one of them relieving Joe of his burden, which he gave up with little reluctance. After having a bite and a cup of coffee, I soon found my bunk, for I was well exhausted, the hunt having lasted more than twelve hours, much of which time we were running through deep snow.

Some hours later I awoke to find that the little muskox had been christened "Melville," after that vast island which only a few hours ago was her home. From that time on, "Melville" was our little mascot. She was fed with condensed milk (out of the ship's ration, too), with crackers or oatmeal. She rejected all the improvised apparatus that I contrived to facilitate feeding her, preferring an ordinary dish as a receptacle for her food. None of us forgot to reserve for "Melville" any choice morsel that we thought she might relish.

I remember one day one of the sailors took from its cage his pet snowy owl, to allow it some freedom. He had no sooner laid it on the deck than a pattering of tiny hoofs was heard and little "Melville" bore down upon the bird, which sat in mute stupidity watching the onrusher until its fat, feathery form went sprawling and floundering along the deck. With lowered head "Melville" stopped to view the vanquished from the spot where it had been, the bird only being rescued to evade another onrush. In many such ways "Melville" furnished us with rare amusement, which was more than welcome to us. But her bad habit of going about the deck and eating scraps of canvas, paper, oakum, or almost anything, was the cause of our losing her, for one day she discovered some red paint which must have pleased her taste, as we found her little nose covered with the same. Three days later poor little "Melville" passed away and the extent to which we missed her can hardly be expressed in words. It was much as though one of the ship's company had left us, for this was truly what had happened.

(Copyright, by Outdoor Life.)

BIRD WITH HANDS

The hoatzin, a native of British Guiana, is described as a bird with hands. And the peculiarity of its structure which leads to this description is the possession of two free claws on the wings of the young.

The nest of the hoatzin is placed in a tree overhanging the water and the young, unlike most birds hatched in such a position, are active from the first. And the claws at the ends of the wings are used to assist it in climbing the trees, which it does with great dexterity in its early days.

The growth of the outermost quill feathers of the wing, which might hamper the free use of the claws, is retarded till the rest of the wing is developed sufficiently to render climbing less necessary. Then they grow, and the claws are absorbed and disappear. The adult bird does not require them. Should a young hoatzin fall into the water it makes for the shore and seizes a branch, up which it quickly climbs.

It has been pointed out that the young of game birds show evidence of having formerly possessed similar structures on the wings. It is therefore inferred that they had a similar habit, and that in former times they built and reared their young in trees.

In this group—including the barn door fowl—the quill feathers of the wing are still developed in the same order as in the hoatzin, that is, the outer ones are delayed until the others have reached a certain stage. Traces of the free claws, moreover, can still be found in the embryo. And it is interesting in this connection to remember that even now the pheasant occasionally builds and hatches its young in a tree.

The most interesting point, perhaps, in connection with the free claws of the hoatzin is that they recall the remarkable structure of the earliest birds yet known to geology. Archaeopteryx, literally the ancient wing, was a bird about the size of a rook.

Although the earliest known bird, archaeopteryx, was probably not the earliest wearer of feathers to appear on earth. Future discovery may reveal yet earlier members of the feathered tribe. This most ancient bird resembled hoatzin in having free claws to its wings, and perhaps, like it, used them in climbing. But while the hoatzin discarded its claws in adult life, archaeopteryx seems to have retained them.—London Globe.

Crusade Against the Waltz

The crusade against "the new dancing" is a reminder of the fact that the now well established waltz was fiercely assailed on its introduction into this country.

In 1814, when it was slowly coming into fashion, Miss Mitford declaimed against this "detestable dance." "In addition," she wrote, "to the obvious reasons which all women ought to have for disliking it I cannot perceive its much vaunted graces. What beauty can there be in a series of dizzying evolutions, of which the wearisome monotony banishes all the tricksy fancies of the poetry of motion, and conveys to the eyes of the spectators the idea of a parcel of teetotums set a-spinning for their amusement?"—London Chronicle.

WHAT INSURANCE COMMISSIONERS SAY

Insurance Commissioner Wm. H. Hotchkiss of New York, chairman of the executive committee of the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners, prior to the last Head Camp of the Modern Woodmen of America, gave the following official notice to that society:

"Pursuant to action of the national convention of state insurance commissioners, at its adjourned session in December last, I write you this expression of views as to the necessity of your order—as well as all other fraternal benefit societies—placing itself on a firm foundation as to rates. An insurance society which in these days does not recognize that the cost of insurance is fixed by laws other than man's laws—namely, the laws of nature—or prescribes for its members either a flat rate, irrespective of the age of its members, or any other rate that is not scientifically safe, is deceiving both itself and its members and approaching the time—perhaps slowly, but not the less surely—when it must fail and its contracts be repudiated. The fraternal spirit is a good thing; but the rates and management of fraternal societies must also be such that the beneficiaries of the last member to die will receive every dollar that such member's certificate calls for."

State Insurance Commissioner Ekern of Wisconsin has issued an official interview in which he says: "Fraternal societies generally have come to recognize that their business must be conducted on a sound basis. This means a re-rating for nearly every society, and members who do not fully understand the situation are often inclined to complain of increases in their rates. They should understand that with a re-rating on a sound basis they have a much more valuable insurance than before. All are benefited by getting a permanent insurance for what was uncertain before. The Modern Woodmen of America, by reason of its long experience with a large membership, is permitted to make a rate upon its own experience, which is even lower than that based on the National Fraternal Congress table, which new societies must adopt. The cost of this insurance is not a matter of mortality tables or rates charged, but depends upon the actual deaths in the society. A re-rating merely means that each member shall pay his real share of the cost. Members who think of dropping their insurance will do well to take enough time to study the question before doing anything which may bring regret to both themselves and their families."

The Chicago Inter Ocean says:

"It is unpleasant for the members of the Modern Woodmen Society to have to pay more for their insurance, but let them think how much more unpleasant it would be for those 5,000,000 women and children, or any of them, to be deprived of that protection because their husbands or fathers got angry. That is what all Woodmen should think about."

Sunshine.

Surround the children with every possible cheer. . . . Smiles and laughter cost nothing. . . . Let the children have music, let them have pictures, let them have laughter, let them have a good time; not an idle time, but one full of cheerful occupation. Surround them with all the beautiful things you can. Plants should be given sun and air and the blue sky. Give them to your boys and girls. I do not mean for a day or a month, but for all the years. We cannot treat a plant tenderly one day and harshly the next day; they cannot stand it.—Luther Burbank, in "The Training of the Human Plant."

Sure Does.

"The peo le mightier than the sword."

"But the typewriter puts it all over the pen."

At the Aviation Meet.

Mme. Vanite—Well, it certainly was not worth putting on my nice new pair of boots!—Pele Mele.

When Your Eyes Need Care

Try Murine Eye Remedy. No Smarting—Feels Fine—Acts Quickly. Try it for Red, Weak, Watery Eyes and Granulated Eyelids. Illustrated Book in each Package. Murine is compounded by our Oculists—not a "Patent Medicine"—but used in successful Physicians' Practice for many years. Now dedicated to the Public and sold by Druggists at 25c and 50c per Bottle. Murine Eye Salve in Aseptic Tubes, 25c and 50c.

Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago

Gallant Blind Man.

"Ah, you're a pretty lady."

"What's that? I thought you were blind."

"In a sense only. I never see the ugly women."—Journal Amusant.

If You Are a Trifle Sensitive

About the size of your shoes, you can wear a size smaller by shaking Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder, into them. Just the thing for Dancing Parties and for Breaking in New Shoes. Sample Free. Address Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

There are two things calculated to make a man's head swim—a merry-go-round and a merry widow.

For Constipation, Biliousness, Liver and Kidney Troubles, take Garfield Tea.

Many a brave man has lost his nerve in a dentist's chair.

NERVOUS DESPONDENT WOMEN

Find Relief in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound —Their Own Statements So Testify.

Platea, Pa.—"When I wrote to you first I was troubled with female weakness and backache, and was so nervous that I would cry at the least noise, it would startle me so. I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies, and I don't have any more crying spells. I sleep sound and my nervousness is better. I will recommend your medicines to all suffering women."—Mrs. MARY HALSTEAD, Platea, Pa., Box 98.

Here is the report of another genuine case, which still further shows that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound may be relied upon.

Walcott, N. Dakota.—"I had inflammation which caused pain in my side, and my back ached all the time. I was so blue that I felt like crying if any one even spoke to me. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I began to gain right away. I continued its use and now I am a well woman."—Mrs. AMELIA DAHL, Walcott, N. Dakota.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

The Farmer's Son's Great Opportunity

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Why wait for the old farm to become your inheritance? Begin now to prepare for your future prosperity and independence. A great opportunity awaits you in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, where you can secure a Free Homestead or buy land at reasonable prices.

Now's the Time

—not a year from now, when land will be higher. The profits secured from the abundant crops of Wheat, Oats and Barley, as well as cattle raising, are causing a steady advance in price. Government returns show that the number of settlers in Western Canada from the U. S. was 50 per cent larger in 1910 than the previous year.

Many farmers have paid for their land out of the proceeds of one crop.

Free Homesteads of 160 acres and pre-emptions of 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. Fine climate, good schools, excellent railway facilities, low freight rates; wood, water and lumber easily obtained.

For pamphlet "Last Best West," particulars as to suitable location and low settlers' rate, apply to Sup't of Immigration, Ottawa, Can., or to Canadian Gov't Agent.

Chas. Pilling, Clifford Blk, Grand Forks, N. D.
J. S. MacLachlan, Box 197, Watertown, S. D.
E. T. Holmes, 315 Jackson St., St. Paul, Minn.
Geo. A. Hall, 125 2d St., Milwaukee, Wis.

THE NEW FRENCH REMEDY. No.1. No.2. No.3.
THERAPION Used in French Hospitals with GREAT SUCCESS, CURES KIDNEY, BLADDER DISEASES, PILES, CHRONIC ULCERS, SKIN ERUPTIONS—EITHER SEX. Send address envelope for FREE booklet to DR. LE CLERC MED. CO., HAVERSTOCK RD., HAMPSTEAD, LONDON, ENG.

PATENTS START FACTORIES. Send for free book how to get Patents. Patent secured or fee returned. Sues & Company, Attorneys, Washington, D. C.

THOMPSON'S EYE WATER Quickly relieves eye irritation caused by dust, sun or wind. Booklet free. JOHN L. THOMPSON SONS & CO., Troy, N. Y.

Readers of this paper desiring to buy anything advertised in its columns should insist upon having what they ask for, refusing all substitutes or imitations.

DEFIANCE Cold Water Starch makes laundry work a pleasure. 16 oz. pkg. 10c.

REAL ESTATE

WESTERN CANADA FARM LANDS for $12-$18 per acre in the finest mixed farming district in Canadian West. Close to Prince Albert, Sask., splendid market point. Free Government homesteads also within 25 miles of City, crops excellent, settlement coming in fast. For free literature and maps, write Julius S. Woodward, Sec. Board of Trade, Dept. L, Prince Albert, Sask.

WESTERN CANADA FARM LANDS One crop pays for your farm. Finest wheat land in the world $20 an acre and up on terms to suit purchaser. Write immediately for full particulars of choice farms in all parts of Western Canada. Willett, Affleck & McLennan, 265 Portage Ave., Winnipeg, Man.

FOR SALE—320 A. NEAR HALBRITE, SASK., Can.; 270 a. broken; all tillable; 6 r. h., 2 cellars, outbldgs., gran., etc. ANDE, Box 310, Chicago.

FOR SALE—320 A. IN LINCOLN CO., WASH.; 100 a. cult.; 5 r. h., complete outbldgs., orch., etc. 1 m. from R. R. depot. MECK, Box 310, Chicago.

FOR SALE—640 A. IN SASK., CAN.; NEAR Dalesboro; 130 a. cult.; shanty, stable, 2 portable gran., etc.; will sac. JONES, Box 310, Chicago.

200 A. IN PINE CO., MINN., NR. FINLAYSON; best land in Co.; 40 a. fenced; no other imp; plenty water; will sac. HUIB, Box 310, Chicago.

BARGAIN—300 A. IN ALTA, CAN.; ONE OF choicest tracts of land in province; 50 a. cult.; all tillable; well located. LEZERT, Box 310, Chicago.

MUST BE SOLD AT ONCE; 240 A. IN EMMONS Co., N. D.; 60 a. cult.; complete outbldgs., stock, mech., etc.; bargain. BALES, Box 310, Chicago.

FOR SALE—160 A., ALL CULT.; BEST PRODucing land in Walsh Co., N. D.; barn, etc. Cannot attend to it personally. Theri, Bx. 310, Chicago.

Carbolated Vaseline

The best dressing you can find for wounds, bites of insects, abrasions, etc.

The Carbolic Acid helps to prevent infection: the "Vaseline" cleanses and soothes.

Especially valuable where there are children.

For sale everywhere in handy glass bottles. Be sure you get "Vaseline."

Our various "Vaseline" preparations make up a complete medicine chest that should be in every home. Write for free booklet telling all about them. Address Dept. E.

Chesebrough Manufacturing Company
17 State Street (Consolidated) New York

DEFECTIVE PAGE

JEWS FOR MINN.

IMMIGRATION COMMISSIONER MAXFIELD TAKES UP SUBJECT WITH HEBREW AID SOCIETIES.

WILL SEND PAMPHLETS

Other Nationalities Also to Be Told of Advantages of North Star State Acres for Farming Purposes.

St. Paul.—To interest Jewish immigrants in the farm lands of Minnesota is the latest plan of H. J. Maxfield, state immigration commissioner. Prominent St. Paul Jews have called on him in the last few days asking his assistance in the "back to the land" movement among the Jews in the United States, and he has decided to take the matter up with the Jewish aid societies in the cities of the country and do what he can to get the Jewish immigrants who want to go on to farms interested in the opportunities Minnesota offers for farmers.

"More than 100,000 Jews come to America every year," said Mr. Maxfield. "Practically all of them enter the trades or mercantile pursuits and crowd together in the cities. The Jewish aid societies are now attempting to get them out of the city to the country.

"The Jews who come to America are handicapped in farming because of inexperience. All their training in the other countries is to fit them for the trades. There is a tendency now among the young Jews to go back to land and to learn agriculture, and it is to encourage this spirit that we are going to assist the Jewish aid societies."

The pamphlets and other literature advertising Minnesota will be sent to the aid societies in the large cities of the country. It is planned to print some of the pamphlets in Hebrew.

Many of the Jews in St. Paul have bought state lands, but have bought them more as a speculation than anything else. A few of them have gone out onto their farms, and it is said that many of the younger Jews in St. Paul desire to get out into the country and would go if they knew the best place to settle.

Mr. Maxfield said yesterday that he purposed to interest all of the desirable nationalities in Minnesota lands, and would do so as soon as possible. He has recently learned through whom to act in interesting the Jews and will assist the other foreigners as fast as he can discover the proper authorities to co-operate with in the work.

TO PUSH "AIR" WORK

Forty "Sandhogs" Engaged for the Adams Mine at Oreland.

Brainerd.—Forty "sandhogs" as the men are termed who work in a mine under heavy air pressure, have arrived at the Adams mine near Oreland, and commenced this week. The shaft has reached a depth of 62½ feet and Superintendent Collar expects to sink it to a depth of 123 feet.

The Cuyuna Mining Timber company, although newly organized, has filled $40,000 worth of mining timber contracts for the Armour No. 1, Armour No. 2 and Kennedy mines. The second shaft of the Barrows mine of the M. A. Hanna company is down ninety feet. The Cuyuna-Duluth Iron company has closed a deal for an option on the east half of the northeast quarter of section 31, townsite 47, range 28, adjoining the townsite of Cuyuna and known as the Federal property. It was secured on a royalty basis of 45 cents a ton for all ore mined. The company is also about to acquire the Ironton townsite mine, 750,000 tons of ore averaging 62 per cent iron ore.

GLENWOOD CONVENTIONS

Six Are Scheduled for the Spring and Early Summer Season.

Glenwood.—Six organizations have scheduled their annual conventions for this place. The first will be that of the grain dealers of the northern and western part of Minnesota on March 28. Among the speakers will be E. G. Dunn of Iowa. On May 14, the seventh district group of bankers will hold its convention in Glenwood, and May 23 and 24 are the dates set for the first booster meeting of the West Central Minnesota Development association.

The other conventions scheduled for Glenwood are the Loyal Liberty league an organization of saloon men, on June 11, 12 and 13; the Tindollag on June 5 and 6, and the Telelag on June 24 and 25. These last two are societies of Norwegians, and they generally have from 1,000 to 2,000 persons in attendance. It is estimated 15,000 persons will visit Glenwood this summer as a result of these conventions.

MRS. D. MORRISON DEAD

Wife of Early Mayor of Minneapolis Dies in Spokane, Wash.

Spokane, Wash. — Mrs. Abbie C. Morrison, wife of Dorilus Morrison, a pioneer mayor of Minneapolis, died at her home here. Death was due to a general breakdown following grippe. Mrs. Morrison was the mother of Paul Clagstone, former speaker of the Idaho house of representatives and Republican candidate for governor of Idaho.

LONG CONTROVERSEY ENDED

RED WING SCHOOL NEW HEAD CHOSEN.

Charles Oliver Merica, President of Wyoming University, to Succeed F. A. Whittier.

Charles Oliver Merica, president of the University of Wyoming, has been elected to succeed Frank A. Whittier as superintendent of the state training school for boys at Red Wing by the state board of control. Mr. Merica will take charge Aug. 1. This announcement closes a controversy a year and a half old beginning with charges by former State Senator Andrew D. Stephens against Mr. Whittier and a demand for his removal, followed by a legislative investigation, and investigations by the board of control which exonerated Whittier and Whittier's resignation.

The board of control members returned from their second long trip of inspection of reformatory institutions in other states and in quest of a new Red Wing superintendent. They spent two weeks visiting fifteen eastern institutions. On the first such trip of ten days in December the board visited Wyoming among other states.

Mr. Merica was born at St. Paris, Ohio, in 1864, was brought up on a farm in Indiana, was graduated from Fort Wayne college and De Pauw university, taking academic and law degrees at De Pauw. He began teaching in country schools at the age of 15. He was formerly president of Dakota Wesleyan college at Mitchell, S. D., president of Merrivillo seminary, now the state normal school at Missouri, professor of economics and sociology at Lawrence academy, Appleton, Wis., and for six years superintendent of the industrial school for boys at Waukesha, Wis., and for the last four years president of the University of Wyoming. He has made a special study of reformatory institutions, having visited nearly all those in this country.

He is married and has two sons.

EDITORS AT MANKATO

Churchill of Windom Chosen President —"How to Boost" Considered.

Mankato.—The second district editorial association at its annual meeting here elected L. C. Churchill of Windom, president; W. D. Hinchon, Madelia, vice president; Robert Forrest, Lake Wilson, secretary; James Ruane, Slayton, treasurer, and H. W. Holslett of Butterfield, H. C. Hotaling of Mapleton, I. I. Borgen of Mountain Lake, W. F. Mahler of Springfield and C. F. Eastwood of Heron Lake, executive committeemen. The committee will select the next place of meeting.

A committee was appointed to oppose the proposed raise in railway rates on jobbers' merchandise, and a protest was forwarded to the state railway and warehouse commission.

A banquet was served at 6 o'clock in the cafe of the Elks' club and besides twenty-five visiting editors an equal number of Mankato business men were present. H. C. Hotaling of Mapleton acted as toastmaster and George W. Neff of Lake Crystal spoke on "What Should Be the Attitude of the Papers toward Politicians." The remainder of the evening was taken up in considering the theme, "How to Boost Southern Minnesota." The speakers were E. F. Searing of Mankato, L. M. Mithum of Elmore, George M. Palmer of Mankato, G. G. Stone of Pipestone, Professor J. M. McConnell of Mankato, James Runne of Slayton, Judge Lorin Cray of Mankato and C. E. Eastwood of Heron Lake.

$3,000 FOR SON'S DEATH

Woman at Luverne Recovers From Brick Company.

Luverne.—In district court the jury awarded Mrs. Maud Carver, administratrix, against Luverne Brick and Tile company, $3,000 damages for accidental killing of her son, Kenneth Carver, in an elevator shaft at the company's plant last June. The boy's head was caught between the elevator floor and wall, and the body drawn to the upper floor in this manner.

EXHIBIT IS POPULAR

St. Paul. — Minnesota's exhibition car, which is "showing" the people of Missouri Minnesota's advantages, has drawn large crowds at every stopping place, but, in spite of the interest manifested in Minnesota's products, the car cannot compete with a hanging, according to a letter received by the immigration bureau from Frank M. Eddy, who is in charge of the car.

"Yon Yonson" at Minneapolis.

Minneapolis. — The most original, typical and successful of Swedish American plays, "Yon Yonson," which has always been a favorite attraction with Minneapolis audiences, has been revived this season and will be seen here for the first time in several years at the Bijou Easter week.

Carleton Debator Winner.

Northfield. — Melkor Kjoriug, of Carleton College, won the state oratorical contest and the right to represent the Minnesota State Oratorical association at the interstate contest in May, over contestants from the other four colleges of the state oratorical association. The St. Olaf orator, L. O. Berge, got second prize, and A. E. Nelson, of Macalester, third. This is the tenth time Carleton has won the state contest in 15 years. The winning orator's topic was "Master or Slave."

COL. SAMUEL ADAMS DEAD

PIONEER OF MINNESOTA AND HIGH MASON.

Career in West Almost Coeval With That of State of His Adoption.

Minneapolis. — Colonel Samuel E. Adams, territorial pioneer, legislator, soldier, Mason and business man, died at his home here, after a brief illness.

Samuel E. Adams was born in Reading, Windsor county, Vt., Dec. 1, 1828. He was a descendant of the old Lexington, Mass., family of Adams. His great grandfather served in the Revolutionary war under General Israel Putnam.

In the fall of 1855 he visited St. Anthony Falls for his health, and being impressed favorably with the new country, on his return to Vermont made preparations to move permanently to Minnesota, which he did the year after, locating at Monticello, June 1, 1856, and engaging in mercantile pursuits.

Colonel Adams was a state senator in the last legislature of the Territory of Minnesota; was re-elected to the position when Minnesota was admitted to the union. He was later appointed special agent of the postoffice department for Iowa and Minnesota, and was appointed receiver of the land office at St. Cloud in 1860. In 1862 he was appointed a paymaster in the army by President Lincoln, and was brevetted lieutenant colonel in 1865.

During the flourishing days of the Grangers he was for eight years master of the State Grange and Grand Master of the National Grange for two years. Colonel Adams was president of the State Agricultural society in 1879, and was a life member.

For many years he was editor and proprietor of the Wright County Times, published at Monticello. In May, 1883, he moved to Minneapolis, where he resided for twenty-nine years. For twelve years he was alderman of the Fourth ward.

A pioneer of Minnesota, he was also a pioneer of Masonry in the state. He was a charter member of Monticello lodge No. 16; St. Anthony Falls chapter No. 3, and of Minneapolis Consistory No. 2. He was a Past Master of Monticello lodge No. 16, Past Junior and Senior Grand Warden of the Grand lodge and the Grand Representative of Vermont since October, 1859.

He was Past Venerable Master of the Kadosh at Minneapolis; and was the acting 33d degree Mason representing the state in the supreme council at Washington, D. C. In 1901 he was elected lieutenant grand commander of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, thus making him the second ranking Masonic officer in the world, a position he held at his death.

Colonel Adams married Miss Augusta J. Smith, of Pittsford, Vt., July 21, 1859. Two sons were born of the marriage, Henry R. Adams of Minneapolis and Dr. John C. Adams of Superior, Wis.

DIPLOMAS TO 23.

Crookston Agricultural School Has Graduating Exercises.

Crookston.—State Superintendent C. G. Schulz, as a member of the Board of Regents of the University of Minnesota, presented twenty-three graduates of the Crookston school of agriculture with diplomas. President Vincent wired congratulations from Chicago, and expressed deep regret at being unable to attend the exercises. Dean James of the University of Minnesota addressed the class.

County Superintendents Sundberg of Kittson, Thorson of Polk, Summervold of Clearwater, Anderson of Goodhue, Mostue of Pennington and Johnson of Marshall counties were present, together with hundreds of parents of the students and friends of the school from all over Northern Minnesota.

The county superintendents, State Superintendent Schulz and Superintendent Selvig were banqueted at the Hotel Crookston, and an important conference was later held at the Commercial club at which plans were outlined for a summer school at the Crookston school of agriculture. It is planned to bring the institution in closer touch with the county superintendent, who in the future will look to this school for teachers to a greater extent than ever before.

BOY IS SENTENCED.

Mill City Degenerate Must Serve Time for Murder.

Mora.—Eugene Thomas, the sixteen-year-old Minneapolis boy who confessed to shooting and killing R. N. Winters in a lonely cabin near here ten days or more ago, pleaded guilty before Judge Stolberg to murder in the second degree and was immediately condemned to a sentence without limit as to time, and also at hard labor in the state reformatory at St. Cloud.

TROUT FOR GLENWOOD

State Fish Commission to Propagate Freak Fish at Hatchery.

Little Falls.—The state game and fish commission car was at Glenwood hatchery. The car is in charge of E. W. Cobb and left fifty cans of fry at Royalton for distribution in the lakes and streams, there. Among the fry taken to Glenwood are six cans containing Albino trout, a variety white in color and classed as a freak. From Glenwood the car will make a trip through St. Louis county.

FROM A SAFE DISTANCE.

Mrs. Bridges—How long were you in your last place?

Applicant—Two weeks.

Mr. Bridges (from adjoining room) —Mary, ask the lady what delayed her.

A Frequent Type.

"Spoonleigh is a connoisseur of happiness."

"How do you define a connoisseur of happiness?"

"A person who knows how to be happy but can't."

The Paxton Toilet Co. of Boston, Mass., will send a large trial box of Paxtine Antiseptic, a delightful cleansing and germicidal toilet preparation, to any woman, free, upon request.

An Objection.

"He gave you some sound advice."

"That's what he did. I would have liked it better without so much sound."

PILES CURED IN 6 TO 14 DAYS
Your druggist will refund money if PAZO OINTMENT fails to cure any case of Itching, Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles in 6 to 14 days. 50c.

The commanding intellect should have the command and be king.—Schiller.

To restore a normal action to Liver, Kidneys, Stomach and Bowels, take Garfield Tea, the mild herb laxative. All druggists.

It might be well to remember that every man you deal with is looking for the best of it.

"Pink Eye" is Epidemic in the Spring. Try Murine Eye Remedy for Reliable Relief

Dark.

Hewett—It is pretty cloudy.

Jewett—Yes, a sort of brunette day.

THE HEART

If the blood is poor and filled with the poisons from diseased kidneys or inactive liver, the heart is not only starved but poisoned as well. There are many conditions due to impure blood—such as dropsy, fainting spells, nervous debility or the many scrofulous conditions, ulcers, "fever sores," white swellings, etc. All can be overcome and cured by

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

This supplies pure blood—by aiding digestion, increasing assimilation and imparting tone to the whole circulatory system. It's a heart tonic and a great deal more, having an alterative action on the liver and kidneys, it helps to eliminate the poisons from the blood.

To enrich the blood and increase the red blood corpuscles, thereby feeding the nerves on rich red blood and doing away with nervous irritability, take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and do not permit a dishonest dealer to insult your intelligence with the "just as good kind." The "Discovery" has 40 years of cures behind it and contains no alcohol or narcotics. Ingredients plainly printed on wrapper.

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of wrapping and mailing only. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the French cloth-bound book. Address: Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y.

W. L. DOUGLAS
SHOES
$2.25 $2.50 $3.00 $3.50 $4.00 & $5.00
For MEN, WOMEN and BOYS
THE STANDARD OF QUALITY
FOR OVER 30 YEARS

THE NEXT TIME YOU NEED SHOES give W. L. Douglas shoes a trial. W. L. Douglas name stamped on a shoe guarantees superior quality and more value for the money than other makes. His name and price stamped on the bottom protects the wearer against high prices and inferior shoes. Insist upon having the genuine W. L. Douglas shoes. Take no substitute. If your dealer cannot supply W. L. Douglas shoes, write W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass., for catalog. Shoes sent everywhere delivery charges prepaid. Fast Color Eyelets used.

AREN'T YOU LOOKING FOR THIS

A Perfect Imitation of Oak for Floors and Interior Finish

Made of materials as durable as iron and put up in rolls at a moderate price.

GAL-VA-NITE FLOORING

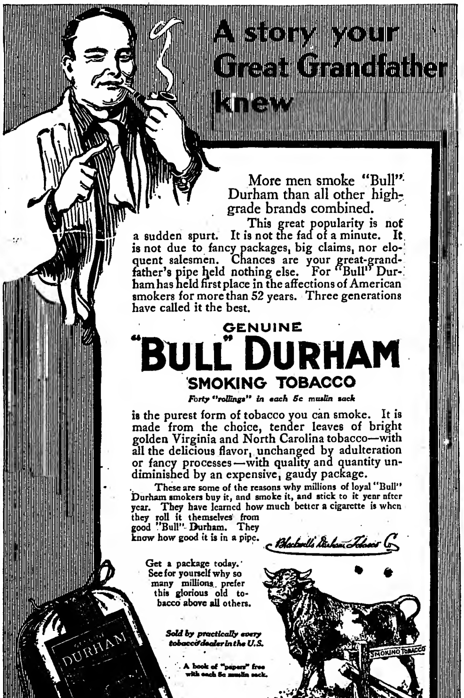
Takes the place of unsanitary carpets—makes housework a pleasure. May be used around the edge of large rugs and for wainscoting.

Durable, Sanitary, Inexpensive

Put up in rolls 38 inches wide—sold by the yard. Ask your dealer for Gal-va-nite Flooring or send for samples and Illustrated Booklet.

FORD MANUFACTURING CO.
St. Paul Omaha Chicago Kansas City St. Louis

GALVANITE FLOORING



A story your Great Grandfather knew

More men smoke "Bull" Durham than all other high-grade brands combined.

This great popularity is not a sudden spurt. It is not the fad of a minute. It is not due to fancy packages, big claims, nor eloquent salesmen. Chances are your great-grandfather's pipe held nothing else. For "Bull" Durham has held first place in the affections of American smokers for more than 52 years. Three generations have called it the best.

GENUINE
"BULL" DURHAM
SMOKING TOBACCO
Forty "rollings" in each 5c muslin sack

is the purest form of tobacco you can smoke. It is made from the choice, tender leaves of bright golden Virginia and North Carolina tobacco—with all the delicious flavor, unchanged by adulteration or fancy processes—with quality and quantity undiminished by an expensive, gaudy package.

These are some of the reasons why millions of loyal "Bull" Durham smokers buy it, and smoke it, and stick to it year after year. They have learned how much better a cigarette is when they roll it themselves from good "Bull" Durham. They know how good it is in a pipe.

Blackwell's Durham Tobacco Co.

Get a package today. See for yourself why so many millions prefer this glorious old tobacco above all others.

Sold by practically every tobacco dealer in the U.S.

A book of "papers" free with each 5c muslin sack.

PUTNAM FADELESS DYES
Color more goods brighter and faster colors than any other dye. One 10c package colors all fibers. They dye in cold water better than any other dye. You can dye any garment without ripping apart. Write for free booklet—How to Dye, Bleach and Mix Colors. MONROE DRUG COMPANY, Quincy, Ill.

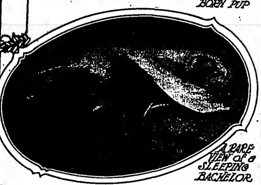
Making the Fur Seal Abundant

by Hugh M. Smith

United States Deputy Commissioner of Fisheries

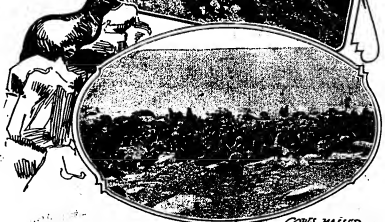
A MOTHER SEAL AND HER NEW-BORN PUP

ROOKERY ON ST. PAUL ISLAND



A RARE VIEW OF A SLEEPING BACHELOR

VIEW of TWO HAREMS



COWS MASSED ON THE BEACH

THE fifteenth of December, 1911, was the time set for the formal adoption of one of the most important international conservation measures that has ever been effected. Pursuant to a convention or treaty concluded at Washington on July 7, 1911, by the United States, Great Britain, Russia, and Japan, the fur seals of the north Pacific Ocean will receive for the first time a form of protection that has been shown to be absolutely necessary, and is guaranteed by these four great powers for a term of 15 years.

The agreement prohibits absolutely pelagic sealing, or the killing of fur seals while in the water, and places the legitimate killing of surplus male seals on land under the direct control of the governments interested.

This convention insures the rescue of the depleted fur-seal herds from commercial extinction; prohibits the citizens or subjects of the contracting powers from engaging in a wasteful, cruel occupation, and removes a long-standing disturbance of international good-will.

Fur seals inhabit certain parts of both the northern and southern hemispheres, but the most important herds live in the north Pacific, represent three distinct but closely related species, and are known as the Alaskan, Russian and Japanese fur seals, respectively. Although the northern seals roam widely on the high seas, they always resort for breeding purposes to certain definite bits of land, and it is this habit which gives particular nations property rights in them and has created several international complications.

The Japanese seals visit no land except Robben Island and certain islands of the Kurile chain; the Russian seals never go to other shores than those of the Commander Islands, off the coast of Kamchatka; and the Alaskan seals, after distributing themselves over the eastern part of the Pacific Ocean as far south as southern California, make an annual pilgrimage to islands in Bering Sea.

Of all the fur seals, the most numerous and important are those of Alaska, which came to the United States with all the other resources of the territory when Russia ceded her jurisdiction. The Alaskan fur seals have for many years been the subject of protracted national and international discussion, and during the years 1910 and 1911 came in for an unusual amount of attention. In addition to the consideration received during the diplomatic negotiations resulting in the treaty already mentioned. Congress has enacted a new law relating to the seal islands, a new dispensation has come in the administration of the islands, and the government as represented by the Bureau of Fisheries has for the first time engaged in the business of taking and marketing seal skins.

The "new dispensation" includes permanent scientific observation and control of the herd, discretionary authority to suspend all killing, and discretionary power to lease the sealing privileges or to exploit them as a government monopoly.

The only land to which the Alaskan fur seals ever resort is the group of small, rocky islands lying in Bering Sea 215 miles north of Unalaska Island, the nearest land. These bits of bleak land have come to be popularly known as the Seal Islands, from their most conspicuous feature; but among geographers they are called the Pribilof Islands, in honor of the Russian navigator who, in 1786, while in the employ of a Kamchatkan trading company, followed the migrating seals and ascertained for the first time where they resorted.

At the time of the discovery of the Pribilofs there were no human inhabitants. As soon as the Russians began to take sea skins they transferred thereto from the Aleutian Islands a number of natives to do the manual labor, and from time to time established small colonies at various convenient points.

The present population numbers about 300 on the two islands.

When the seal islands came into our custody the fur seals thereon constituted the most valuable aquatic resource that any government ever possessed. Owing to the immense body of animals present and the difficulty of counting with any degree of accuracy, estimates of the size of the herd at that time necessarily differ widely, the extremes being two million and seven million. It is safe to assume that the number was between two and a half and four million, distributed on 20 to 30 rookeries.

At the close of the season of 1911 the Alaskan seal herd consists of not more than 150,000 individuals of all ages.

This appalling dwindling of the herd has occasioned much concern and has subjected the government to much unfavorable criticism, because the government has exercised full and continuous control during all the intervening years up to the present date. It will be seen, however, that the criticism is not justified, for the reason that the decline and decimation of the herd came through causes operating when the seals were on the high sea and beyond the protecting care of their foster father.

It is furthermore a fact that the government took active steps to secure adequate protection for the seals when away from the Pribilofs, and that its efforts were frustrated chiefly by the results of an unfortunate international arbitration.

Although the seals are easily killed by the methods adopted by man for their destruction on sea and land, they are capable of withstanding great privation and of undergoing extraordinary muscular exertion.

To maintain themselves during winter in the tempestuous north Pacific without resorting to land is in itself no small accomplishment for air-breathing animals. The females, leaving the islands in November, go further south than any other members of the herd, and in December appear off southern California, where they remain until March. They then begin their long return journey, reaching the islands early in June.

Within two days of their arrival on the rookeries the cows give birth to their pups. Not until ten or twelve days have elapsed do they return to the water or take any food. Then, after washing and playing near the islands, they make their first long trip to the feeding grounds, coming back to the rookeries after three or four days. Thereafter throughout the season the cows make regular feeding trips at intervals of five to ten days.

The seals subsist chiefly on squid, but also on herring, smelt, salmon, pollock, and other kinds of fish, which are caught and eaten in the water. They have prodigious appetites and gorge themselves whenever the opportunity comes.

On the approach of cold weather, the cows and pups leave the islands together. Up to that time the pups have subsisted solely on milk, and they then have to learn to catch their own food, consisting of fish and squid. Inasmuch as the natural mortality among the pups in their first year is fully 50 per cent, it is evident that they experience many vicissitudes in the tempestuous seas to which they commit themselves. The males follow shortly after, but some remain about the islands throughout the winter in mild seasons, and the natives always depend on seals for food in December and January.

Fur seals and hair seals have always been regarded as legitimate objects of exploitation, and all governments having real or assumed property rights in herds of seals have sanctioned their killing, under restriction, for fur, leather, oil, food, etc.

Beginning in 1786 and continuing until the sale of Alaska, Russians were almost continuously engaged in killing fur seals on the Pribilof Islands. In the earlier years there was a promiscuous scramble among rival companies, so that to maintain order and properly regulate the taking of seals the government was forced in 1799 to give the privilege to a single company, created by imperial decree and having among its shareholders members of the imperial family and the nobility. This association, known as the Russian-American company, enjoyed a monopoly of this business as long as Russia had control of Alaska. An ukase issued by Alexander I in 1821 for the regulation of the company had as one of its features the prohibition of foreign vessels within 100 miles of the Russian coasts and islands. This ukase involved Russia in a dispute with the United States and Great Britain, resulting in the treaties of 1824 and 1825, which recognized Russia's claim to jurisdiction over the whole of Bering Sea, Okhotsk Sea, and other water inclosed by Russian territory.

From the outset the company placed a rational limit on the number of animals killed each year, and in the light of later experience it is evident that the herd would have been fully able to sustain the annual harvest of skins if these had been taken only from the males. But males and females alike were slaughtered in ignorance or disregard of the polygamous character of the seals, and as early as 1806 it was necessary to suspend operations for two years in order to permit the herd to recuperate.

When killing was resumed, however, it was along the same destructive lines, and the mighty fur-seal host continued to dwindle until by 1834 its numbers were reduced to one-fifteenth or one-twentieth of those present in the first years after the discovery of the islands. The suspension of all killing for a term of years then ensued, and by the time operations were resumed the company officials had come to realize that the females should be protected, and later the sacrifice of old bulls and young pups was stopped.

The result was a remarkable recuperation and increase in the herd that afford a valid basis for the belief that speedy recovery of the decimated herds of Alaska, Russia, and Japan may follow the elimination of the factor responsible for their present condition, namely, the indiscriminate killing of males and females at sea. When Russia ceded her jurisdiction over Alaska, the Pribilof fur-seal herd had attained a degree of prosperity closely approaching its condition at the time of its discovery, and we thus came into possession of a resource but little impaired and had a knowledge of its significant history to guide us in its treatment.

It is a cause for congratulation that no country has dealt with its seal life in a more intelligent, humane, and zealous manner than the United States, and it was a cruel fate that for so many years rendered our efforts futile. The only occasion when there was any laxity in our administration of the seal islands was during the first years of our possession, when the government was still unorganized anywhere in the territory and various private companies landed parties on the Pribilofs and took seal skins without any government supervision or restriction. It was in that year that the largest killing in the history of the islands was made; the number of skins obtained was probably not less than 300,000, and may have reached 375,000; but this take was not indiscriminate, was confined to bachelors, and had no effect on the permanence of the herd.

Although the indiscriminate killing of seals in the sea had been going on from very early times, this business was not extensive, was conducted by natives using spears in their canoes, and had no appreciable effect on the herd.

Special inquiry made by the government showed that in different years from 70 to over 90 per cent of the seals killed at sea, either on the northwest coast or in Bering Sea, were females.

What pelagic hunting then meant to the seal herd when so large a fleet was engaged, and what it has meant recently when the fleet was larger in proportion to the number of seals, may be appreciated when it is stated (1) that for every seal killed and secured by the hunters not less than two seals were killed and lost because they sank before the hunters could lay hold of them, while many that were wounded and escaped died later; (2) that for every adult female killed on the way to the islands in spring an unborn pup was sacrificed; (3) that for every female killed after the herd had reached the islands a pup on shore was left to die a lingering death by starvation, and a pup to be born the next season was likewise sacrificed.

The government was not slow to realize the damage done to the seal herd by pelagic sealing, and was led to assume jurisdiction over the entire American side of Bering Sea and to regard as poachers any persons found hunting seals therein. The seizure of vessels flying the United States and British flags followed, and there arose a controversy with Great Britain, which culminated in the reference of the case to an international tribunal of arbitration that met in Paris in 1893. The award of the arbitration court was against the United States on both of the main contentions, namely, the Bering Sea is a closed sea, and that the property right in the seal herd warranted the government in protecting the seals while on the high seas.

Since the award of the Paris tribunal the case of the fur-seal herd has gone from bad to worse. The United States government early showed its good faith by prohibiting its citizens from engaging in the lucrative industry of pelagic sealing; but the subjects of all other countries were permitted to do so, and it was the injection of a new factor, Japan, that contributed more than any other cause to the decimation of our seal herd.

The fur-seal problem with which the United States government now has to deal presents several phases. The most important duty the responsible officials have to perform is to conserve and increase the seal herd. This involves continuous care, study, and observation; the determination of the actual condition and needs of the herd, and the application of the results of scientific and economic investigation to the welfare of the seals.

A scarcely less important duty, and one that is in no respect antagonistic to the first, is to provide a revenue and to utilize a highly useful resource at the time when that resource possesses the greatest market value. This involves the judicious killing of the male seals when they are two or three years old and the disposal of their pelts to the best advantage. A third duty is to ascertain what are the real needs of the helpless native inhabitants of the seal islands, and to give them the air that is best suited for their mental, moral and physical natures.

Recent criticism of the government's policy of taking the skins of seals in view of the depleted condition of the herd is based on deficient knowledge. The fur seal being a highly polygamous animal, and males and females being born in equal numbers, it follows that under the conditions that have prevailed and still continue the number of males produced is far in excess of the requirements of nature for the perpetuation of the species.

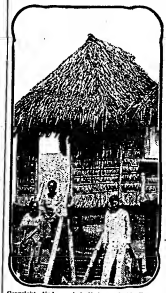
The preservation and increase of the seal herd is entirely compatible with judicious sacrifice of a limited number of young male seals each year, and this is quite as true when the herd is depleted as when the rookeries are crowded to their full capacity. When the presence of a sufficient reserve is determined by responsible officers of the government, the utilization of the surplus males for their pelts and incidentally for native food is justified and demanded by common sense, and fulfills the utmost demands of both the spirit and the letter of genuine conservation.

If not a single male seal were to be killed on the islands or at sea during the next five years, not a single additional seal would be produced as a result of that course. If not a single male seal were to be killed on the islands or at sea during the next 20 years, not a single seal would be added to the herd that will not be added if the present policy of restricted killing of surplus males is continued.

NATIVES OF LUZON ISLAND

Seven Different Tribes Inhabit This Land and Retain Ancient Customs.

Manila, P. I.—There are many strange, uncivilized people among the Asiatic-Americans of the Philippine Islands. The wild men of the great island of Luzon may be divided into seven different tribes, known as the Ilongots, Ifugaos, Bontoc-Igorots, Lepanto-Igorots, Kalingas, Tinglans and Negritos. These people have not yet felt the influence of civilization, and retain their ancient customs, dress and manner of living. They can be reached only by a long horseback journey through mountains which, on the western slopes, are covered with tropical jungle, and, on the eastern, with open pine forests. The five articles of greatest demand among these savages are salt, matches, beads, red or blue cloth and brass wire; but looking glasses, small bells, sea shells and white horsehair are also greatly prized by them. For these things they will exchange chickens, eggs, camotes (a sort of native sweet potato) and rice, their principal products.



Copyright, Underwood & Underwood, N. Y.

Typical Tinglan House.

The Tinglans are a very uncouth tribe of savages. Their head women have their arms completely covered with strings of beads, wound so as to form beautiful and striking designs. A long, heavy string of beads is also twisted around the hair and hangs down the back like braid. The skirt of these head women is white, with a blue border, and the waist is of light yellow. They smoke pipes of solid silver, ornamented with bangles, in the bowls of which pieces of cigar are inserted.

The typical young Tinglan chieftain wears a stiff collar of beads and gayly colored calico shirt, over which is a sort of scarf trimmed with many silver coins. The members of this tribe are very fond of silver. They make a large number of finger rings from silver coins, and each man usually has from five to ten of these rings about his person, but not necessarily on his fingers.

The Tinglans are fond of a peculiar dance. The music is produced by beating with the palms of the hands on "gansas," or tom-toms. The dancers, a man and a woman, with arms outstretched, circle about each other in a spiral, the man pursuing the woman with a quick, jerky step. As they approach the center of the spiral, he suddenly swoops upon her, when she always eludes him by suddenly darting out of his reach.

The Kalingas, like all wild people, are extremely fond of ornamentation.
—Forrest Clark in Leslie's Weekly.

TAX PUT ON FEMALE CATS

New Jersey Assemblymen Pass Measure That Hits Felines Without Dissent.

Trenton, N. J.—By a superhuman effort and the aid of Speaker McCran's gavel, the New Jersey house passed Assemblyman Bresinger's bill fixing a tax of a dollar a year upon female cats. The vote was 51 to 0, and the author of the measure was surprised and delighted. Every time the bill has come up for consideration heretofore the risibilities of the members have been aroused and a chorus of catcalls has set in. When this course was attempted Speaker McCran said impressively, and with no sign of a smile: "The gentleman from Hudson has been a square sport and he is now entitled to a fair hearing."

Assemblyman Bresinger then made a speech in favor of his measure, fairly bubbling with good humor but sticking to the principle of the measure and declaring with impressive eloquence that female cats as hunters of the insect-destroying birds were a menace and ought to be restrained by law. Moreover, he said, the cat has been found to be a dangerous disseminator of contagious diseases and should be suppressed for that reason, if for no other.

Assemblyman Simpson, also of Hudson, said the bill was not complete; that it ought to embrace all cats and not the females alone. He defended the cat as a destroyer of rats and mice, and said it should not be so restrained to such good work. Most of the members voted "No" on the roll call, and Assembly Bresinger saw defeat for his bill, but all changed to "Yes" before the announcement was made.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE SUNBEAM.

MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

VOL. XII. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, APRIL 12, 1912. NO. 3.

Tales of GOTHAM and other CITIES

Juror Quits Work at Sunset Friday

NEW YORK.—Superior Court Justice Lehman said the other day that a situation which confronted him in the county court house was unique in his experience, although there have always been possibilities of it in connection with juries deliberating on Friday night.

Judge Lehman and a jury had been hearing for several days a suit of George Ilno against the Pioneer Fruit company to recover $10,000 on a contract for services. The case went to the jury about four o'clock the jury day afternoon. At six o'clock the jury had not yet reached a verdict and Justice Lehman sent in word that they might remain until about eight o'clock and then sign a sealed verdict.

Juror No. 11, who was John M. Carver, told the court officer that under no circumstances would he remain after six o'clock because he was a Seventh Day Adventist, and as it was sundown his Sabbath had begun.

"Why is it you refuse to continue longer with this jury?" asked the court.

"I cannot continue here any longer because it is against my conscience," said Mr. Carver. "Not only would it be a violation of my religious vows to sign any paper on the Sabbath, but I am not permitted even to deliberate or to consider any matter outside of my religion."

"Then I shall have to excuse you," said the court.

Justice Lehman then asked Emil Schultze and a member of John B. Stanchfield's law firm, who were counsel in the case, what they wanted to do, and they agreed to accept the verdict of the other 11.

Word was then sent to the jury room accordingly, but the court attendant came hurrying back with the message that two Hebrews on the jury had notified him that their Sabbath had begun at sundown and that they couldn't sign any paper after six o'clock.

"I am a Jew myself," Justice Lehman said, "but I have to lay aside my religious beliefs for my public duties."

The two jurors then told the court that if he would remain with them for several hours in order that they might agree, if possible, and obviate the necessity of signing a sealed verdict, they would go back to the jury room. The court consented.

Here's the Champion of All Lazy Men

CHICAGO.—The great West side lost one of its most picturesque citizens—temporarily—the other day. Gustave Schillinger, who existed—it would be rank hyperbole to use a word implying so much activity as "lived" in Gustave's connection—at 1466 North Paulina street, was sentenced by Judge Goodnow to the bridewell for six months.

Before sending him away Judge Goodnow paid a tribute to Gustave for his unexampled skill in loafing.

"You are the most monumental example of lazy man it has ever been my privilege to meet," said the court. "You are one of those fellows who were born tired and never got rested."

Persons ambitious to fill Schillinger's championship, now that he has been condemned to toil, may well pause as they consider his achievements as they were brought out in court.

Here are some of the records:

For nine years he has done absolutely no work, except what he was compelled to do at the bridewell.

During these nine years his wife and eight children provided him with food, clothes and spending money, while his mother provided him with a house, rent free.

It was his custom to wake up late in the morning and send for his breakfast. If there was no money in the house for food, he would send one of his children to his mother with a note asking for 25 or 50 cents.

If his mother happened to be out of funds, he arose and got work for the children, stringing beads. The children could earn from 25 to 50 cents a day at this work. Schillinger never strung any beads himself. He got a comfortable chair and bossed the job.

Hole in the Snow All That Was Left

KANSAS CITY.—Twenty-three thousand dollars had been stolen from a hiding place on the river front near the foot of Gillis street. There's no doubt the big robbery was committed. The hole is there. You may see for yourself. The snow had been scraped away and the dirt thrown to all sides, indicating that the robbers worked hurriedly when they looted Frank Wyant's cache near his home at the foot of Gillis street.

Wyant gave the first news of the robbery to Judge Porterfield in the juvenile court the other morning when he was up for failing to provide shoes for his ten-year-old son, Jesse, and to pay the boy's board.

Wyant is a laborer, a ditch digger and garbage hauler, who made $23,000 in cash, besides notes and real estate, by squatting on valuable switching property in the East Bottoms.

"It's gone. All gone, judge," Wyant whispered. "I had it hidden in a hole—took it out of the bank and put it there. You can see the hole down there now, judge, where they stole it from."

Judge Porterfield said he did not believe the story, and his position was substantiated by a probation officer who said Wyant's neighbors had seen him dig the hole on the river bank and then walk away from it. They did not know why he had dug the hole and left it open.

Muzzle on a Goat Ends a Ticket Feast

MINNEAPOLIS.—Eating his way through trolley ropes and wires into the affections of hundreds of Minneapolis street railway employes, "Near Stop Billy," goat mascot of the street railway system, has lost his prestige by an overt and underhanded act which came near costing a score of conductors their positions with the street railway company.

For two months conductors who have hung their coats in the lounging room at the shop have been missing transfers. Whole books of transfers have disappeared from pockets. The men have been rebuked by the company heads. They have been unable to explain.

Late the other day Conductor Welch hung his coat on a hook in the lounging room and hid behind the door. "Near Stop Billy" entered the room, sniffed at the coat, looked around the room, stuck his nose in the coat pocket, extracted a transfer book, ate it, and walked sedately out.

Later when "Near Stop Billy" walked into the car shops expecting his usual tribute of rope and wire he was seized by the men he had counted his friends. Despite his struggles he was thrown to the floor, and there, while he bleated for mercy, he was forced to undergo the only real humiliation a goat knows. He was muzzled.

Then, as additional punishment, Billy was thrown inside a roll of tar felt paper, the kind he had been served for dessert on holidays in the old days. Billy couldn't eat the paper, he couldn't even lick the tar. When he was finally released he lowered his head and made straight for the door.

The door was closed. Billy went through. He is still going, or was, according to the latest bulletin which Conductor Welch posted in the shops.

WHO'S WHO—and Why

FAMED AS A SOCIAL WORKER

When Katherine Bement Davis is at home at Bedford, N. Y., she superintends the State Reformatory for Women, where bad girls are made over into good ones. The making over is a long, hard and difficult process and some two years ago Miss Davis felt that she must have a rest. So she applied for a leave of absence and sailed for Italy, sure that long days of idleness in that sunny clime would bring her the relaxation she so sorely needed.

While she was in Syracuse, there came the horror of the Messina earthquake. A few hours later, refugees from Messina began to arrive in Syracuse. Wounded; frightened almost to a state of insanity; covered at best with one or two scant garments; homeless; destitute and hungry, men, women and children poured into the city. Many travelers quietly packed their grips and departed. Within a few days four thousand refugees had arrived, one thousand of whom were wounded. Every hospital in the town was full to overflowing; the barracks, halls and every available building received their share of the injured. It was not Miss Davis' affair; she is an American. Besides, she was traveling for rest and pleasure. But she did not pack her grip. Instead she sorted out its contents and, appropriating everything that might answer as bandages, set out for the hospitals.

TO PHOTOGRAPH SEAL HUNTING

Harry Whitney, the sportsman who wintered with the most northern Esquimaux that he might go ahunting into the musk-ox country and then returned on board the steamer Roosevelt when Commodore Peary came back from his successful trip in quest of the pole, sailed from here the other day on a sealing trip with Capt. Robert A. Bartlett.

Mr. Whitney carried with him a motion-picture apparatus with which he expects to get photographs of scenes connected with seal hunting. As far as known no one has ever undertaken this feat. Captain Bartlett, who commanded the Roosevelt, has managed many successful sealing trips to the north.

Mr. Whitney said of his plans on the present trip: "That all depends of course on our luck. The Neptune will accommodate a cargo of 35,000 seals, but whether we will be lucky enough to bring back as many as that of course we can't say, but I am prepared for almost anything that may happen.

"With this motion picture apparatus I hope to get some good views. Not only do I hope to be able to get pictures of the actual scenes attendant upon the sealing, but pictures of the ship in the ice and many things of interest incidental to the trip."

WOMAN WHO AIDS RUSS GIRLS

Anna Merle Krapidtnski, special agent of the Russian government from Warsaw, Russian Poland, left Chicago the other day after gathering statistics through the medium of the Immigrants' Protective league and the Juvenile Protective association. She was detailed to investigate the conditions under which immigrant girls are cared for by the United States authorities after their arrival at Ellis Island.

She has a clear conception of the necessities of the situation. A yearly average of 1,800 immigrant girls routed out of New York for western points, most of them traveling via Chicago, are lost en route.

Mme. Krapidlnski said in an interview with a reporter:

"Conditions are so serious despite the great generosity of public spirited men and women in the United States that it is evident the problem is one not to be adequately handled by private effort. It will require a vast amount of work.

"There must be government co-operation and control of a situation that results in figures so ghastly as those shown in the toll of missing girls that start from New York for Chicago and never reach here."

QUEEN MARY STARTS A CULT

Owing to the incentive of Queen Mary, who is a devotee of the needle, the cult of stitchery prevails in society to an amazing extent. Every other woman one meets is talking of needlework and the craft of the needle; it is a sort of obsession. The mysteries of satin stitch, padded and otherwise, of crewel work, braid work, couching, herringbone, buttonhole and French knots are discussed by everybody. When Queen Mary came back from India and the Durbar she found society as keen on needlework as it used to be on bridge.

One of the cleverest needleworkers is Lady Glenconner (sister-in-law of Mrs. Asquith), who makes her own designs and has original ideas for decoration. She is fond of big, bold patterns in vivid colors and has worked many bedspreads and coverlets in William Morris patterns. There is a splendid specimen of her work at Wilsford Manor, Salisbury, on a slender mahogany bed of a very old type. She likes best to copy old designs and says she considers if women of today plied the needle more frequently they would be less restless in this feverish, hurrying age.

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

Keepers Put Ban on Dances in Zoo

WASHINGTON.—Keepers at the National Zoological park are horror-stricken. Monkeys there are doing the "turkey trot" and the "grizzly bear." The little animals do the dances in the most unapproved style.

Where the monkeys discovered the dance is the mystery that is puzzling the keepers. Some believe that it must have been danced in the house by some enthusiast. Others contend that it is the result of the monkeys' "artistic temperament."

That the monkeys were indulging in the disfavored dance was discovered yesterday when a passing keeper happened to see Julius Caesar, the dean of the monkey house, and Cleopatra, the fascinating, heart-breaking first lady of monkeyland going through the intricate steps of the dance.

He stopped, he looked, and he listened. The face of Julius, according to the keeper, was lighted up with a grin which seemed to denote a happiness and a self-satisfaction that has been strangely missing from the guests of the rustic mansion overlooking beautiful Rock creek ever since the keepers found it advisable to give them cold-storage eggs in lieu of the fresh-laid kind.

The keeper who discovered the monkey's dancing said that in a few minutes the entire population of the monkeys' cage was swaying to the steps of the dance. He said that it seemed so lifelike that he was almost convinced that he heard Julius say to Cleo, "Everybody's Doing It" and "Roll Your Eyes, My Honey."

The two monkeys that have set the fashion, according to the keeper, do not seem to approve of the younger monkeys indulging in it, and stopped dancing in a vain endeavor to have them desist.

Chief Justice Fuller Was Courteous

JUSTICE HARLAN and Chief Justice Fuller were riding home one evening on the back platform of a car, preferring that to a seat in order to smoke. The door of the car was open, and at intervals smoke from their cigars drifted in. Noticing this, the conductor informed them that smoking was prohibited.

"But," objected Justice Harlan, "the wind carries the smoke to the south and we are traveling north."

"That's all right, mister; but them's my orders," insisted the knight of the bell rope.

During the conversation Justice Fuller had stepped down on the car step and hidden himself behind the mammoth physique of his argumentative friend. He was enjoying his cigar to the fullest extent.

"Orders are orders, I know," continued Justice Harlan, determined to convince the conductor by logic of the folly of blind obedience; "but there are cases where a law coercive at one time may at another be void. Allow me to cite a certain case in our common law statute book—"

"I take my orders from the supe, and I don't care about no law!" persisted the conductor stubbornly.

The car had turned into Fifteenth street by this time.

The little chief justice was just lighting his second cigar, entirely disinterested in the plea of his learned colleague.

As the car reached their destination, just above U street on Fourteenth, both men alighted. Chief Justice Fuller stepped down from the car and gravely offered Justice Harlan the stump of his cigar as a lighter. It was his third! To his credit, though, he did not smile nor make any reference to that fact. Nor did he pass any opinion on the case that had just been tried before him. Which goes to show what a truly courteous gentleman the late chief justice of the United States really was.

Roughness in Reviving Is Not Assault

A CHARGE of assault, which had been pending against William Hart, a foreman in the employ of the Washington Gasoline company, was dismissed by Judge Pugh in police court the other day. The charge against Hart had a peculiar origin. He was foreman of a gang of men who were working in the gas mains in Takoma Park this winter. December 7 12 of the men were overcome by gas and several of them had narrow escapes from death. Hart, with the assistance of Dr. Archibald L. Miller and several citizens of Takoma, got the men out of the trench and revived all of them but one.

The man was in such a serious condition from the effects of the gas that he failed to respond to the methods used, and Hart adopted strenuous means of bringing him around.

Bystanders, including Dr. Miller, who is a dentist at Takoma Park, objected to Hart's manner of resuscitating men overcome by gas, and the assault charge was filed. Hart entered a plea of not guilty and demanded a jury trial.

After considerable delay the case was called up, when Hart withdrew his plea and demand for a jury trial, and asked Judge Pugh to dispose of the case at once. Hart explained that the method he used was one he had used successfully in many other cases, and that it has always been successful. The court held that if men who help resuscitate persons overcome by gas or almost drowned are to be prosecuted for the necessarily rough treatment that must be administered a feeling of timidity will obtain, which may result in the death of many who otherwise might be revived.

Scorns to Work on Cobbler's Bench

THERE is a limited diet in store for Marcellus Wilson, an inmate of the Home for the Aged and Infirm, and possibly expulsion from the institution, if Wilson and Superintendent William J. Fay do not adjust their difficulties shortly.

Exasperated by alleged repeated refusals by Wilson to work, Superintendent Fay has brought the matter to the attention of the commissioners of the district, suggesting a limited diet and confinement in a room as a means of enforcing obedience. The commissioners have decided to inform Mr. Fay of their support in the infliction of proper discipline, and if Wilson does not conform to the rules and regulations he will be ordered to leave the institution.

The case is such an unusual one that Superintendent Fay was in doubt as to his authority to inflict discipline. In his letter to the district heads he states that Wilson is in rugged health, although both legs are off at the knee. He is 51 years old and is said to be an expert cobbler, but, according to the head of the institution in which he is given a home by the district, the suggestion that he give his time and attention to the mending of shoes is received only with scorn. The decision of the commissioners to enforce obedience on the part of Wilson with the rules of the house was reached following a report by George S. Wilson, secretary of the board of charities, who says that his "namesake has been a disturbing element in the institution for some time."

Some Virtues Ever Present.

There is scarcely a hearth in the lowest slum of a big city where you will not find beautiful private virtues.

THE SUNBEAM.

W. G. HUNT, Publisher.

SUNBEAM. - - MINN.

LABOR EXCHANGES IN ENGLAND.

On February 1 the system of labor exchanges instituted in England by act of Parliament had received a two years' trial, and the results have an interest in this country, where similar plans for bringing unemployed labor in touch with employers have been agitated. There are now 261 exchanges as compared with the 83 with which the experiment was begun. During 1910 notification of 458,948 vacancies was given by employers, of which 373,318 were filled by the exchanges, and during 1911 these figures rose to 757,109 and 589,770, respectively. In 1911 casual employment was provided through the exchanges for 112,492 men and 12,812 women. Last year 64,901 vacancies were filled by the transfer of applicants to districts other than those in which they were registered. To facilitate this movement of labor from one part of the country to another, an obstacle to which in the case of women workers is the lack of suitable lodgings, the suggestion is made of establishing women's hotels in connection with the exchanges. During 1911 the demand for operatives exceeded the supply in the cotton, woolen and worsted trades, and in the case of women in the clothing trades and in the laundry work. One favorable outcome of the experiment is the growing confidence shown by both employers and workmen in the system and the prospect of friendly co-operation in extending its scope.

One of the curious provisions of the woman suffrage law of California calls for the registration of the height of women voters. Naturally the registrars are having trouble with it. First of all, it has to be decided where the foot of a woman begins and where her head leaves off. Shall French heels be subtracted, or ought the authorities to assume that it is indelicate for them to consider that women have heels? Are puffs, rats and other apparatus of the sort to be taken into account, or must women discard these affairs when they come up for measurement? Artificial hair is said to have gone out of fashion. We are not prepared to speak with authority on that matter, says the Toledo Blade. But supposing that next year, that fashion of the latter part of the eighteenth century, when women had their hair made up with flour and the whole baked, should be the rage. What would the registrar say when a voter came before him? Would he ask her to remove her bun? Or, being a man of experience, would he merely sigh and credit the elector with 10 inches growth in the course of a year?

A clean, honest, kind criticism is wholesome, but an underhand thrust, intended to be smart, is dangerous. There is so much of this flippant criticism these days. We are nearly all guilty of it, and yet it is a kind of sin that keeps the right from succeeding. There are instances every day where a noble fact is kicked aside by a disparaging remark, intended only as a slap. The serious trouble with these flippant criticisms is, they never leave a truth behind; it is always a blotch. The thing to do is to leave off the flippant and make a criticism sincere, thoughtful, frank and kind. If a criticism is not thus attended, it is false and flippant, unworthy of a true man or woman.

A New York factory commission has discovered in its investigations that from 50 to 75 per cent of fires in that city are caused by carelessness, principally in the thoughtless use of matches, cigars and cigarettes. The terrible results of this carelessness should be made an important point in the education of children, to the end of its elimination from the ordinary risks of life. Apparently, not even the horrors resulting from this thoughtlessness can induce the average adult to take the very slight trouble required to prevent it.

The young Indian prince, son of the Gaekwar of Baroda, has left Harvard because he could not get along there on his allowance of $250 a week. Even Oriental lavishness, apparently, cannot live up to the standard of the American money kings' sons. And this must rather puzzle the European and eastern minds to reconcile with all that has been told them about the simplicity of our republican institutions.

Telling people how to sleep, the London Globe says: "You must have your head on a level with or lower than your feet." We are opposed to an arbitrary rule for sleeping: it would destroy all individuality.

A Brooklyn railway has had a verdict rendered against it of over $1,000 because one of its employes was rude to a woman passenger. Who says the world's male chivalry has perished out?

CAPT. SCOTT REPORTS

PENETRATES SOUTHERN HEMISPHERE TO WITHIN THIRTY MILES OF THE POLE.

HE ENCOUNTERS STORMS.

Miraculously Escapes After Trying Experiences—Motor Sleds, Telephone and Moving Pictures Were New Ideas.

Special Cable to the New York Times.

Akaroa, New Zealand, April 2.—Lieutenant Pennell, commander of the Terra Nova, of the British Antarctic expedition of 1910, which arrived here yesterday, brought with him a long and intensely interesting account of the work and experiences of the expedition up to Jan. 30 last, written expressly for the New York Times by Capt. Robert F. Scott, the leader of the expedition. Captain Scott's story is as follows:

Special notice: Capt. Robert F. Scott's narrative of his explorations in the Antarctic published below was issued by New York Times company as a book, duly entered for copyright and publicly exposed for sale, the same being its first publication anywhere in the world. Its reproduction in this newspaper is of course duly authorised. Its reproduction elsewhere in the United States in any form except by permission of the New York Times company is forbidden.

Copyright 1912 by the New York Times company (all rights reserved). Copyrighted in the United Kingdom by the Central News, Ltd., London. Registered in the department of agriculture, copyright branch, Dominion of Canada, by the Central News, Ltd., London.

Macmurdo Sound, Oct. 30, 1911.—Shortly after the departure of depot-laying party from Cape Evans on Jan. 25, 1911, the sea ice broke at South Cape and severed communication with the ship. The depot party, consisting of twelve men, eight ponies and two dog teams, occupied till Jan. 30 in establishing a base camp at the barrier, seven miles east-southeast of Hut Point. Owing to the heavy weights to be transported the main part of the supplies were left at this camp. The party proceeded with single loads east-southeast twenty-seven miles to a spot named Corner Camp, before turning south to avoid the crevices of White Island.

Captain Robert Scott.

The snow surface proved very soft, making terribly hard work for the ponies. A three days' blizzard at Corner Camp was a further severe trial to the animals, which were not in good condition. On Feb. 8 we proceeded south, marching by night and resting by day. The weather was exceptionally bad, but the surface improved. The three weakest ponies were sent back, but these unfortunately were caught in another blizzard and two succumbed. With the remaining ponies and the dogs we reached latitude 79½ degrees on the 16th, when I decided owing to the condition of the weather and the animals to make a depot there and return. We left more than a ton of stores at this point, which we named One-Ton Camp and which should be a great help to us this season. We then returned to our base camp with dog teams.

Whilst cutting a corner of White Island in a bad light, the whole of one dog team fell into a crevice. Meares, myself and the sledge were miraculously held up on a part of a bridge across the crevice along which we had been traveling and most of the dogs hung by their harness. With great difficulty and after three hours' work we extracted the animals, one of which was badly injured by falling sixty feet, afterward dying.

At the base camp I found every single pony well, and visiting a hut I received news of the Terra Nova and Fram.

On Feb. 24, with men on skis and a single pony, I started to take more stores to Corner Camp. On the outward journey we passed returning ponies going well. Returning from Corner Camp, I was held up by a blizzard on the 28th. I found the storm had been phenomenal at this place, raging for three days and causing enormous accumulation of snow. Shifts of wind had baffled all efforts to shelter the ponies with snow walls and the animals had suffered very badly, so I decided to retire to Hut Point without delay.

Wilson and Meares, driving dog teams, reached Hut Point in safety. Oats, Oran and I remained to try and save the one pony which had been badly hit by the blizzard, while Bowers, Cherry, Garad and Crean, with the four best ponies, set out to follow the dogs. Nearing Hut Point they found badly working cracks in the sea ice, and hastily turned and marched for miles south.

There at 2 a. m. on March 1 the tired condition of the ponies obliged the party to camp. At 4:30 the boys awakened by a noise found the ice broken around the camp and giving away with every swell. One pony had disappeared from the picketing line and was not seen again. Hastily packing their sledges, the party decided to try and work southwest over the pack ice. With infinite difficulty the sledges were dragged, the ponies jumping from floe to floe towards the barrier.

About noon the party neared the barrier, but found its ice wall unclimbable and the swell churning and threatening heavy floes against it. In this dilemma Crean was allowed to attempt to obtain help. He traveled east over the moving pack to find a break in the ice wall and eventually hoisted himself to the barrier surface by wedging his ski stick in a crack.

Ignorant of these events, after failing to save our sick pony, my own party reached the barrier, where ice leaking under foot forced us to retreat hurriedly with the gravest anxiety for our companions. My fears were confirmed when Wilson, who had traveled out over land, reported having seen with glasses ponies adrift on sea ice. An hour later Crean and I set off immediately to the west. Working around the bay we approached the barrier edge, and at 6 p. m. by good fortune discovered the missing party on a pack which had been drifting slowly northwest and had temporarily stopped, owing to swell subsiding. With Alpine ropes the men were rescued with difficulty.

Working on through the night we succeeded in saving the sledges and their loads, but could do nothing for the ponies, which were only thirty yards away. At 4 a. m. the pack began to move again. We left the ponies with full nose bags and rested till 8 a. m., when the pack was again stationary. We made desperate efforts to save them. Bowers and Oats risked a long detour over the pack and led the animals over many jumps, while the remainder of us dug a trench to the lower part of the barrier.

The edges of the floes were high above water and very uneven. Killer whales hung about within a few yards. The ponies failing at the jump were irretrievably lost. One pony only won through. The pack was moving again as we left it and drifted clear to the north. On March 4 we ascended hills east of Castle Rock, and on the 5th the party with the two remaining ponies and the dog teams was safely housed at Hut Point. By this incident we lost three of our strongest ponies. This was a severe blow to the expedition, but not enough to wreck its plans if the remaining animals could be preserved.

The heavy swell which caused this disaster, broke more than ten miles of sea ice, large fragments from the barrier, and two miles of glacier tongue, a feature which had remained otherwise unchanged since discovery in 1902. The hut was found almost completely filled with hard snow, the windows broken and the door unhinged. With much labor we cleared and repaired it. It then afforded good shelter. While forced to wait for the sea breeze to blow over we settled down to a very primitive life. With old tins and discarded fragments of metal we constructed an excellent blubber stove and several blubber lamps. We fed almost entirely on seal meat. Seals could only be obtained at a distance over hills and were sometimes scarce, but the supply never failed entirely, thanks to the ingenuity shown by my companions in improvising arrangements with the slenderest resources. With splendid health we were quite comfortable and enjoyed the luxury of a box of old magazines.

On March 15, the Western Geological party returned, bringing our total to sixteen persons. This party had spent six weeks, making a close survey of the dry valley, lower Terror, and Koettlitz glacier regions, thus completing an important part of our plan for the geological survey for the coast.

Preparing for the Winter.

On March 17, Lieutenant Evans led a party to Corner Camp, completing the depot arrangements for the coming season. The temperature at the barrier had already fallen to minus 40 degrees. Throughout the month ice continually formed over the sea but strong winds quickly drove it out. After March 25, the ice remained fast in the sheltered bays but continued to drive out of the sound. Huge land-ice falls on the southwest slopes of Mount Erebus prevented any possibility of returning to Cape Evans by land, but with the freezing of the bay I decided to make an attempt to reach the station, partly by land and partly by sea ice.

With eight companions I started on April 11, and, although caught by a storm on sea ice, we reached Cape Evans early on the 13th. We found the station, which had been left in Simpson's charge, in excellent order, and arrangements for comfort remarkably perfect. Numerous self-recording instruments were in full swing, and all records complete to date. All the news was good except the loss of one of the nine remaining ponies and one dog. During our absence there had been much wind, the mean velocity for two months being twenty-four miles per hour. For nineteen per cent of the whole time, the wind had been over gale strength. All observations pointed to an exceptionally severe season.

On April 17 I returned to Hut Point with a fresh sledge party carrying supplies and stores. As it was impossible for animals to travel on the route taken, I left Meares and five others in charge of those at Hut Point and again returned to Cape Evans on April 30. Sea ice continued to drive out of the Sound until the first week in May. It was not until May 13, three weeks after the sun had gone that the men and animals left Hut Point and safely returned to the main station. The Sound froze solid in May and later in winter pack ice extended to an unapprehended distance northward. After the return of absentees we settled down very comfortably in our winter hut, its arrangements for lighting, heating, cooking and ventilation proved eminently satisfactory. A comfortable stable had been built for the ponies and some shelter improvised for the dogs during the four winter months.

The temperature at the station was rarely below minus 40 degrees, or lowest minus 50 degrees. The wind averaged fifteen miles an hour, but sometimes blew hard with the temperature minus 38 degrees. Everyone was very fully occupied with station and scientific work, exercising animals, etc. A series of lectures was organized and football was played to within a month of midwinter. Frequent visits were made to Cape Royds and Hut Point. The animals steadily improved in condition. On June 27, middle winter, Wilson, Bowers, Cherry and Gerrard started on sledge journey to Cape Crozier to observe the incubation of Emperor Penguins at their rookery. Very heavy surface on the barrier forced the party to relay work during the main part and a fortnight was taken on the outward journey. The temperature was seldom above minus 60 degrees and often below minus 70 degrees, the lowest observed with a sling thermometer being minus 77 degrees. Behind a land ridge on the slopes of Mount Terror the party spent three days in building a stone hut which they roofed with canvas from this camp. The men had great difficulty in crossing the huge barrier pressure ridges in the dim noon twilight to reach the rookery. They were successful at a second attempt. They found comparatively few birds at the rookery, but these had begun to lay at even this early date. Fortunately some eggs at different stages of development were secured which should give considerable information concerning the embryology of this interesting bird.

The same night a violent gale commenced and the ridge proved inadequate shelter from the hurricane gusts which whirled down on the hut. A tent and other carefully secured articles were blown away, and after straining for fourteen hours the roof of the hut flew to ribbons. For thirty hours more the travelers were confined in their frozen sleeping bags, half buried beneath snow and rock debris. Forty-eight hours elapsed before the wind decreased, and they were able to get a meal. Searching for lost articles they were fortunate in finding the missing tent between some morainic boulders, practically uninjured. The state of their equipment now forced them to turn homeward. On the return journey they were held for two days by another storm after which the temperature fell and remained below minus 60 degrees. The party returned after five absences incased in ice and suffering from want of sleep, but otherwise well.

Having regard to the darkness and extreme temperatures this first winter journey in the antarctic regions was a remarkable feat of endurance. It also shows the extraordinarily severe conditions that obtain on the great snow plain barrier during the sunless season. Since the return of the sun in August considerable increase of wind has been recorded and temperatures have remained as moderate as in winter. On September first, Meares and Miminenter, with dog teams, made their headquarters at Hut Point, the dogs leaving for that depot in splendid form. At intervals since our arrival, however, some obscure disease has robbed us of four excellent dogs. In every case the dog attacked appeared vigorously healthy, but died in a few hours. It is thought the cause must be some minute bread worm entering the brain.

First Antarctic Telephone Lines.

At the end of the month, telephone communication was established with Hut Point through fifteen miles of bare wire. This telephone has already proved extremely useful for reporting the number parties, pending changes of weather. Lieutenant Evans, Oran and Forde traveled to Corner Camp to rebuild cairns. They experienced temperatures between minus 30 and 70, and Forde's hands were badly frost-bitten, but are now recovering rapidly. With Bowes, Simpson and Petty Officer Evans, I traveled west on Sept. 16, ascending Ferrar Glacier. We found by stakes planted by Wright that the ice stream had moved thirty feet in seven months. Later, forty-five miles northwest of our stations, we found part of the glacier tongue broken in March with the forge depot left by Campbell intact.

Owing to work at the station and the need of increasing exercise for the ponies we have been unable to undertake further spring journeys. The western geological party, consisting of Taylor, Debenham, Oran and Forde, delayed by Forde's accident, will leave in a few days for Granite Harbor. All plans and preparations for the southern journey are now complete and despite the accident of last season we have great hope of success. The necessity of getting the utmost out of our remaining ponies has decided me not to expose them to great cold. We shall therefore start later than originally intended.

The motor sledge party, consisting of Lieutenant Evans, Bay, Lashley, and Hooper, started five days ago, with two motor sledges, dragging fuel and forage. The motors experienced unexpected difficulty on sea ice where it was very thinly covered with snow, but were last seen going well on the surface of the barrier beyond the base camp of last season. They have, therefore, placed the possibilities of motor traction beyond question. The pony party, consisting of myself with Wilson, Oats, Bowers, Cherry, Gerrard, Atkinson, Wright, Evans, Crean and Koehane, will start about November 1.

Independently of the success of the motors, ponies will be worked with light loads in easy marches to Corner Camp with full loads and easy marches to One-Ton Camp and with such pressure as necessary thereafter. Dog teams starting will rejoin us at One-Ton Camp and help to advance loads. By these means we hope to get thirty units of food to the foot of Beardmore Glacier, a unit being a week's provision for four men. Then with three divisions of four men and twenty-one units of provisions, I hope to extend the advance to the required distance if the weather conditions are not wholly unfavorable. Of the ten remaining ponies one is unreliable and one doubtful, the remainder being in very fine form. Officers and men are in splendid health, and eager to go forward.

Owing to my decision to postpone there is an obvious chance that the most advanced southerly party will be unable to catch the Terra Nova before she is forced to quit the Sound. Under these conditions, having regard to important scientific work done and facilities offered for further work, I have decided to maintain the station for a second year. The majority of the shore party will probably remain, but details depend upon the date of our returning from our journey on home news, and the extent of fresh transport provided. I shall greatly regret the departure of any member, as we have lived in the happiest social accord.

Ponting probably returns with a large batch of photographic material to which a second year might add little of importance. Owing to Ponting, the photographic results of the expedition are a remarkable record of our Pole life. Plans arranged for the scientific work of the expedition have succeeded so far almost in their entirety.

November 24, latitude 81, 15 S: We left Hut Point on the eve of November 2, having decided to march by night and rest during the day to give the ponies the benefit of warmer day temperatures. We reached Corner Camp this morning. Traveling south for sixty miles we followed the tracks of the motors, then found the machines abandoned. The party had proceeded onward as directed, were delayed by a blizzard on the 8th, but reached One-Ton Camp on the morning of the 16th. The dog teams had caught us up some days earlier and the whole party proceeded in company. A day's rest was given the animals at One-Ton Camp, which we left on the 17th. Having regard to the weight of the loads, the heavy surfaces and limited number of animals, I decided to march fifteen miles only every night. This distance has been maintained eight nights and so far as we can foresee it should be continued. The ponies are going very steadily and keeping condition remarkably well. The first pony has been shot for expediency but could have traveled further. The animals have ten pounds of oats and three pounds of oil coke daily. We are hopeful of getting the men's food supply to the Glacier, according to program, without great difficulty, but should be a day or two later than anticipated.

We found the motor party waiting at latitude 80½. Two of their number now leave us. The sole cause of the abandoning of the motor was the overheating of the air-cooled engines. Time did not permit of the defects being taken in hand. The system of propulsion of the motors proved entirely satisfactory. The machines dragged heavy loads over the worst part of the barrier service and crossed several crevices. Considering inadequate trial, their success has been remarkable. With the experience now gained a reliable tractor could be constructed that would travel anywhere in this region and save the sacrifice of animals. We are building snow cairns at intervals of four miles to guide the homeward parties and leaving a week's provision at every degree of latitude to the Barrier. The surface was extremely hard and trying to the ponies up to One-Ton Camp, but has been comparatively good since. The greater number of the ponies have been dragging over 650 pounds.

December 10, latitude 83 degrees 15 minutes: After the return of the motor party from latitude 81 degrees 15 minutes we pushed steadily south, hopeful for better weather conditions. A second pony was destroyed at latitude 82 degrees 10 minutes, a third at latitude 82 degrees 45 minutes, and two more at the 83d parallel. None of these animals were exhausted but were sacrificed to lighten loads and give food for dogs. As we proceeded the weather grew worse, snowstorms were frequent, the sky continually overcast and land very rarely visible. Under these circumstances it was most difficult to keep a straight course and maintain steady marches. The ponies continued to pull splendidly. The excellent condition they retained under severe work I attribute entirely to the management of Captain Oats.

In spite of delays we reached latitude 83 degrees 24 minutes within twelve miles of Mount Hope on Dec. 4. We could have reached the glacier with five ponies on the following day, but for the intervention of a southerly gale which lasted four days, during which we did not sight land, although only a few miles away. The wind was very violent at times, a prodigious amount of snow fell, and we had continually to dig out ponies and tents. The temperature rose to plus 3, the snow melting on our equipment and completely soaking everything with water. No such prolonged storm has hitherto been recorded in these regions in December.

Hard Work in the Deep Snow.

On the 9th, after the storm, eighteen inches of wet snow covered the originally soft surface. We could not have advanced at all had not the leading pony worn snowshoes. The men hauled on skis. It took fourteen hours without a meal to go eight miles. At the first halt, the ponies were destroyed, as we had no more forage for them. Today we have come through the pass and descending on Beardmore glacier, but only with infinite difficulties and after twelve hours' hard work. The soft snow brought by the storm continued over the pass. Men on foot sank to their knees and sledges sank to their crossbars continually. The dogs have given some help, but could only be lightly laden on such a surface. I send this note by returning teams. The party is very fit, but cannot keep up the hours which we have been working. The storm has already cost us five days. Its effects may yet delay us further, which would be a serious matter. Otherwise everything has worked as planned. We hope to find better conditions as we advance up the glacier. We are necessarily dependent on the weather and the season thus far has been very unpromising.

Dec. 21, Latitude 85 Degrees 7 Minutes South, Longitude 163 Degrees 4 Minutes East, Height About 6,800 Feet, Four Miles South, Thirty West of Mount Darwin.—Largely as a result of the storm reported in my last dispatch, the lower reaches of the glacier were filled with terribly soft snow. Men on foot sank to the knee at each step. It would have been quite impossible to advance had we not pulled on skis. As it was the runner surface of the sledges proved inadequate. They frequently sank to crossbars, requiring to be extracted with standing pulls. For four days we struggled in this morass, scarcely advancing five miles a day, although working ten to twelve hours. It is difficult to pitch camp and load sledges on such surface. On the fifth day the surface grew a little harder, and we were able to push on, still pulling on skis. We did not come abreast of Cloudbreaker mountain until the 7th, so that the snow cost us a week's advance.

Since the 18th we have been able to make very good marches, working up from thirteen to twenty-three statute miles per day. By program I arranged to push on from the 85th parallel with eight men and twelve units of provisions, but I hoped to reserve a margin over this. As we stand we are only half a day's food short on program and should have a good chance of getting through. The weather continues unsatisfactory. We had to march without sight of land on occasions. We are getting intermittent fog in this most creviced part of the glacier. Everybody is in the best of health and spirits.

It has been most difficult to select the returning party of four who carries this note. Our position constitutes our upper glacier depot. Complete depots have been established on the homeward route. The track of the barrier is well marked with snow cairns. The members going forward are Scott, Lieut. Evans, Wilson, Bowers, Oats, Lashley, Petty Officer Evans and Crean.

Jan. 3, 1912, Latitude 87 Minutes, 32 Degrees, Height 9,800 Feet.—After leaving the upper glacier depot, south of Mount Darwin, I steered southwest two days. This did not keep us clear of pressure ridges and crevices which occurred frequently at first and gave us trouble, but we rose rapidly in altitude. Probably the difficult places were more snow covered than further eastward. The advantage of this course was mainly felt on the third and fourth days, when, owing to our altitude, we got a splendid view of distribution of land masses fringing the ice sheet and the arm of ice falls. Since leaving the depot our marches have averaged over fifteen statute miles a day. On Christmas day we were close up to the 86th parallel and the prospect of Christmas fare gave us an excellent march, seventeen miles, but the effort was not so hard the following day. The surface grew more difficult as we approached the 87th parallel. On New Year's eve in latitude 86 degrees 56 minutes we deposited there a unit provision and rebuilt our sledges with new short runners, which remarkable piece of work was performed by the seaman of the party under adverse conditions. Although it cost us nearly a day's march, the change amply repaid us. We have been able to keep up our average and we are now within 150 miles of the Pole.

I am going forward with a party of five men, sending three back under Lieut. Evans. The names and descriptions of the advance party are: Capt. Scott, R. N.; Dr. Wilson, S. C.: scientific staff, Capt. Oats, Inniskilling dragoons, in charge of the ponies and mules; Lieut. Bowers, Royal Indian marine, commissary officer. Petty Officer Evans, R. H., in charge of sledges and equipment.

The advance guard goes forward with a month's provisions and the prospects of success good, providing the weather holds and no unforeseen obstacles arise. It has been very difficult to choose the advance party, as everyone was fit and able to go forward. Those who return are naturally much disappointed. Everyone has worked his hardest. The weather on the plateau has been good as a whole. The sun has never deserted us, but the temperatures are low now, about minus 20 degrees, and the wind pretty constant; however, we are excellently equipped for such conditions and the wind undoubtedly improves the surface and so far has worked out very satisfactorily. It is more than probable that no further news will be received from us this year. Our return must necessarily be late.

(Signed) Robert F. Scott.

Lieut. Pennell expressed the utmost confidence in the ultimate success of Capt. Scott and his party and declared that the scientific work being performed by the expedition was of an extremely valuable character. In addition to the southern party, the Terra Nova was compelled, owing to the bad ice conditions, to leave behind Lieut. Campbell's party, who were landed at Drygalsky Barrier and thence sledged into the interior. Both parties, however, were fully prepared for this emergency, says the commander of the Terra Nova, and no alarm need be felt for their safety. The two geological expeditions of the west coast have produced good results, coal and fossils which latter had not been discovered before being found. The health of the members of the expedition is excellent, the only exception being Capt. Evans, who is convalescing from scurvy. The Terra Nova returns south in November next.

OXFORD THE WINNER.

In the Annual Race Over the Course at Putney, England.

Putney, England. — Oxford won with the greatest ease the sixty-ninth annual boat race between eight-oared crews representing the universities of Oxford and Cambridge over the usual course on the Thames from Putney to Mortlake. The Dark Blues finished six lengths ahead of their rivals.

La Crosse Boy a Prisoner.

La Crosse, Wis. — A letter, smuggled through the revolutionary lines at Lluvia de Oro, Chihuahua, Mexico, written by Harry Conklin to his mother, Mary Conklin of this city, declares that Conklin and a party of Americans are held captive there by a band of about 300 Mexican bandits, and that their lives are in momentary danger. The letter was dated March 19 and some fear is expressed for the safety of the Americans.

Lluvia is a small mining settlement of Americans.

"Wets" Claim Victory.

Detroit, Mich. — Michigan's city county elections were featured by a bitter contest in the 25 counties where local option was voted on. When the final returns were in the saloon forces claimed a victory. Of seven "wet" counties that voted on the question only two went "dry." They were Mecosta and Wexford. Among the 18 "dry" counties where the saloon issue was at stake six turned to the "wet" column, as follows: Arenac, Ingham, Lapear, Ogema, Otsego and Presque Isle.

YOUNG WIFE SAVED FROM HOSPITAL

Tells How Sick She Was And What Saved Her From An Operation.

Upper Sandusky, Ohio.—"Three years ago I was married and went to housekeeping. I was not feeling well and could hardly drag myself along. I had such tired feelings, my back ached, my sides ached, I had bladder trouble awfully bad, and I could not eat or sleep. I had headaches, too, and became almost a nervous wreck. My doctor told me to go to a hospital. I did not like that idea very well, so, when I saw your advertisement in a paper, I wrote to you for advice, and have done as you told me. I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, and now I have my health.

"If sick and ailing women would only know enough to take your medicine, they would get relief."—Mrs. BENJ. H. STANSBERY, Route 6, Box 18, Upper Sandusky, Ohio.

If you have mysterious pains, irregularity, backache, extreme nervousness, inflammation, ulceration or displacement, don't wait too long, but try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound now.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and such unquestionable testimony as the above proves the value of this famous remedy and should give every one confidence.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
Cleanses and beautifies the hair.
Promotes a luxuriant growth.
Never Fails to Restore Gray Hair to its Youthful Color.
Prevents hair falling.
50c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

Veal
Write for certificates for shipping to Chicago, tags, prices, full information, etc. Quick, sure money. Good prices, square deal.
COYNE BROTHERS
160 W. So. Water St., Chicago
Financial Responsibility, $100,000.00

Pettit's Eye Salve QUICK RELIEF EYE TROUBLES

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 15–1912.

FOR HUBBY TO PONDER OVER

Innocent Answer of Quiet Little Wife Got Him Started on Train of Thought.

The husband and wife were on their way to the theater when the husband began kicking because his wife took such a long time dressing.

"What delayed you this time?" he growled.

"Seeing the children to bed," she responded, quietly.

"What's the nurse for?" snapped the man.

"The nurse is for our convenience—yours and mine, especially mine," she answered. "But the boy certainly takes after you. He asked the same kind of a fool question just as I was kissing him good night."

"Fool question, eh? Well, what was it?"

"I asked him if he had said his prayers. And he said no. And I asked him if he didn't want God to take care of him during the night. He answered: 'What's the nurse for?'"

For the remainder of the way the man pondered on this answer.

Supply Cleaned Up.

"Goin' fishin' next summer?" asked the man who tells tall stories.

"No," replied Mr. Growcher. "If you caught all the fish you said you caught last summer, there won't be any use of going fishing next summer."

The more a trust magnate wants the less the other fellow gets.

A Tempting Treat—

Post Toasties

with cream

Crisp, fluffy bits of white Indian Corn; cooked, rolled into flakes and toasted to a golden brown.

Ready to serve direct from the package.

Delightful flavour!

Thoroughly wholesome!

"The Memory Lingers"

Sold by Grocers

Postum Cereal Company, Limited
Battle Creek, Mich.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

BEST DEFENCE AGAINST DISEASE

Is a Supply of Rich, Red Blood and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Are the Tonic to Use When the Blood Is Thin and Weak.

Thin, impure blood is an invitation to sickness. The blood is at work, day and night, to maintain the health and any lack of strength or purity in the blood is a weakness in the defense against disease. Anaemia is the doctor's name for lack of blood. There may be an actual loss in the quantity of the blood or one or more of its constituents may be lacking. Its surest symptom is pallor. Anaemia is particularly common in young girls from 14 to 17 years of age. It is not confined to them for it is this same lack of blood that prevents full recovery after the grip, fevers, malaria and operations and is present in old age and in persons who have been under an unusual physical or mental strain.

Mrs. Morgan Bowen, of No. 2631 Fillmore street, N. E. Minneapolis, Minn., says:

"When I was 15 years old I went into a decline and my parents feared I was going into consumption. I was sick for a year and was not able to do much of anything. The sickness came on me gradually. I was pale and seemed to lose my strength. I was attending school at Winona at the time and became so nervous that I had to give up my studies. My parents were alarmed about my condition as there had been consumption in the family.

"A friend advised my mother to give me Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and before I used them long I was much improved. I gave the pills a thorough trial and was fully restored to health. My health has been good since, but I always keep Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in the house and take them when I feel I need a tonic."

The tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills by building up the blood so that it can nourish and strengthen the weakened system has made hundreds of cures in the most severe disorders.

Dr Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People should be used in anaemia, chlorosis or green sickness, sick headache, nervousness and for a general run-down condition of the health.

Send for free booklet, "Diseases of the Blood."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes, $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

Nothing disappoints some women more than to find that a scandal isn't after all.

A splendid and highly recommended remedy for tired, weak, inflamed eyes, and granulated eyelids, is Paxtine Antiseptic, at druggists, 25c a box or sent postpaid on receipt of price by The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass.

It takes a man of originality to pose as a successful liar.

To overcome constipation and resultant ills, take Garfield Tea, a pure herb laxative.

Beginning a proper name with a small letter is a capital offense.

"Pink Eye" is Epidemic in the Spring. Try Murine Eye Remedy for Reliable Relief.

Alimony is the cement that is sometimes used to mend a broken heart.

BACKACHE IS DISCOURAGING

Until You Get After The Cause

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

Nothing more discouraging than a constant backache.

Lame when you awoke. Pains pierce you when you bend or lift. It's hard to work, or to rest.

You sleep poorly and next day is the same old story.

That backache indicates bad kidneys and calls for some good kidney remedy.

None so well recommended as Doan's Kidney Pills. Grateful testimony is convincing proof.

Here's Another Typical Case—

Mrs. D. K. Jeffers, Colfax, Wash., says: "For two weeks I had to be propped up in bed and I lost 50 pounds in weight. I was in a terrible condition, in fact, I came very near dying. As a last resort I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. Since then I have gained back my lost weight and feel wonderfully improved."

AT ALL DEALERS 50c. a Box

DOAN'S Kidney Pills.

F.P. 20TH CENTURY Corset

STYLE 270

Made of good quality steam shrunk coutil that will not stretch.

Automatic Bosles, warranted not to break for a year. Bones constructed with a patented automatic system that gives a sliding movement in bending, distributing the strain, and making them impossible to break.

AT DEALERS or sent direct $1.50

BIRDSEY-SOMERS CO.
233 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

DEVELOPMENT ASS'N

SOUTH STATE BOOSTERS TO FOLLOW LEAD OF THEIR NORTHERN NEIGHBORS.

31 COUNTIES PARTICIPATE

T. G. Bonnallie, of Tracy, Elected President—Next Meeting Will Be Held in June in St. St. Peter.

Mankato.—The Southern Minnesota Better Development association was organized by representatives of forty cities and towns. According to the recommendations of the committee on organization, as adopted by the convention, the association will embrace thirty-one counties across the state south of the Minnesota river up to Dakota county. Neither Ramsey nor Hennepin is included in the number.

Officers were elected as follows: President T. G. Bonnallie, Tracy; first vice president, George R. Thompson, Chatfield; second vice president, Alson Blodgett, Jr., Faribault; secretary, Professor C. E. Ball, North Mankato; treasurer, J. B. Ludlow, Rushmore.

The association voted to meet twice a year and accepted the invitation of representatives from St. Peter to hold the next meeting, which will be in June.

The following counties are eligible to membership:

Rock, Pipestone, Lincoln, Lyon, Murray, Nobles, Jackson, Cottonwood, Redwood, Martin, Watonwan, Brown, Faribault, Blue Earth, Nicollet, Freeborn, Waseca, LeSueur, Steele, Rice, Mower, Dodge, Goodhue, Fillmore, Olmsted, Wabasha, Houston, Winona, Sibley, Scott and Yellow Medicine.

T. G. Bonnallie, the president-elect, is mayor of Tracy and president of the Tracy Commercial club; George R. Thompson is secretary of the Chatfield Commercial club; Alson Blodgett, Jr., is mayor of Faribault, and Professor Ball is a teacher in the Mankato Commercial college and president of the North Mankato Commercial club.

The delegates were taken for an automobile ride by members of the Mankato Commercial club and shown some of the graveled roads, which six years ago were the worst in the county.

H. J. Maxfield, state immigration commissioner, made an address to the delegates in the afternoon in which he urged the necessity of the southern part of the state waking up and doing some of the same sort of advertising which is attracting settlers to Montana, Canada and the western states. He frankly told the delegates that this part of the state was far behind the times.

H. E. Hance of Mankato moved that it be the sense of the association that the legislature should appropriate enough money to handle the department on a proper basis, whether it took $100,000 or some other sum. This was carried without dissent.

Mr. Palmer on good roads, said it had been estimated that bad roads in Minnesota alone cost the farmers from $4,000,000 to $8,000,000 a year.

Senator C. A. Johnson of St. Peter urged that the land be cultivated better, instead of attempting to cover too much ground as now.

Furlong Optimistic.

J. J. Furlong of Austin told "what southern Minnesota farmers can do." He was optimistic and said, "We can advance agricultural interests, but never can perfect them." He said he was glad to see this movement, which was intended for the good of all Minnesota.

E. Krueger, president of the Tracy Farmers' club, urged that farmers form clubs and that these clubs and commercial clubs work together for their mutual benefit. Increasing of soil fertility and of corn crop were two things that he urged particularly.

Senator J. E. Haycroft of Madelia spoke on "Relation of the Legislature to Rural Development." He said the present move was timely and important.

Senator C. A. Johnson of St. Peter advocated diversified farming.

River Improvement.

A. B. Kaercher of Ortonville, an advocate of the improvement of the Minnesota river, discussed the three-fold object to be obtained—a navigable channel, the redeeming of wet and overflowed lands, and incidentally the development of water power.

Resolutions urged good roads from congress or legislature, especially the constitutional amendment; urged stopover privileges from railroads; advocated more dairying and soil survey; urged "radical reformation of the public school system," to give proper place to agricultural and other industrial training." investing more state money in state securities; adequate support for immigration department, and co-operation with other development associations.

MORE POSTAL BANKS

Twenty-Three Are Added to List for Fourth-Class Postoffices.

Washington. — One thousand postoffices of the fourth class were designated postal savings banks by Postmaster General Hitchcock, of which twenty-three are in Minnesota, Adams, Alpha, Brownsdale, Byron, Canton, Claremont, Dexter, Dover, Eitzen, Fountain, Hayfield, Lewiston, Mantorville, Ostrando, Peterson, Rosecreek, Sargeant, Utica, Waltham and Wykoff.

UNITE IN BUYING

Merchants and Farmers of Fairmont Adopt Co-operative Plan.

Fairmont.—Business and professional men of Fairmont have formed a co-operative exchange for the purpose of handling under one management, butter, eggs, cream and all kinds of farm produce.

The new plan is working out admirably and after being in operation two weeks practically all opposition to it has been withdrawn. Farmers are patronizing it liberally and are enthusiastic over its future.

Under the system none of the merchants belonging to the company, and who formerly did a big business in butter, eggs, cream and poultry, is allowed to handle these commodities either directly or indirectly, under a penalty of $50 fine, although they still share in the business resulting from the exchange of farm produce.

The farmer brings in his products to the exchange. The manager, in payment, gives him one of the company's checks for the amount due, and the holder can go wherever he chooses and purchase his goods.

The company has a coinage of aluminum money, so that a customer not wishing to trade out the whole amount of his check in one place or at one time, can get his change in the equivalent of real money and that money is good in turn at the place of business of any other member of the company.

The system is calculated to make a better and larger market for farm produce of all kinds, centralizing the business and dealing in large quantities. There are twelve stockholders in the company, of which B. W. Schonweiler is president, W. H. Cox, treasurer and W. C. Moulton, secretary.

ELECTION AT ST. CLOUD.

First Trial of the Commission Form of Government.

St. Cloud. — The citizens' ticket won St. Cloud's first election under the commission form of government. P. J. Seberger was elected mayor with a majority of eighteen over Paul Beudreau and Colonel William Westerman. He received 925 votes, Beudreau received 553 and Westerman 254.

L. J. Rocholl, former city treasurer, was elected commissioner by a majority of 142 over the other candidates. He received 987 votes.

Charles J. Metzroth and Earl C. Scott received the second highest number of votes in a field of six candidates. Under the commission plan no candidate is elected unless he receives a majority of all the votes cast. Scott and Metzroth will come before the people at a second election to be held on April 15, for election as the third commissioner.

Hastings.—Frank W. Finch, republican, was elected mayor of Hastings by a majority of 57 votes over the democratic nominee, L. E. Niedereaf.

Blue Earth.—In the city election Blue Earth voted no license by a majority of 101. The following is the city ticket elected: Mayor, John C. McHugh; clerk, Easton Floe; treasurer, A. G. Maas; assessor, N. O. Erdabl.

Waseca.—C. H. Watson chosen mayor and Henry Gallegher justice. The town went dry by five votes.

Staples.—Election returns gave the socialist ticket only two offices on the city council, S. Montgomery and H. Florey, as aldermen for the First precinct. The citizens' ticket elected H. J. Dower as mayor, with 105 majority.

EXPERIMENT WITH SILO

Redwood Falls Farmers Watch Silo Filled With Dry Stalks.

Redwood Falls.—An experiment took place at the Sears-Gold stock farm the result of which will be watched with interest by farmers. Two large large silos with a capacity of 400 tons of ensilage were nearly empty and the management decided to refill them with corn stalks that had been in the field all winter. The dry stalks were cut up in the same manner as in the fall when the silos are filled with fresh-cut fodder. A majority of the farmers seem to think the dry corn stalks will prove a failure. The silo is steadily gaining ground in Redwood county. Last year more than twenty were constructed and it is predicted there will be at least fifty to one hundred in another year.

HEADS STATE AUTOISTS.

Dr. C. E. Dutton New President of Auto Association.

Minneapolis. At the annual election of the Minnesota Automobile association, Dr. C. E. Dutton, of Minneapolis, was elected president, and other officers were elected as follows: Samuel Gibeau of Red Lake Falls, first vice president; E. L. Thornton of Benson, second vice president; A. W. Strong of Minneapolis, third vice president; G. Roy Hill of Minneapolis, secretary, and J. K. Marlin of Little Falls, treasurer.

FATAL RIDE ON ICE CAKE.

Stewartville Boys at Play Fall Into River; One Drowns.

Stewartville. — Frank Tubbs, 14 years old, son of Charles Tubbs, of this place, was drowned in the Zumbro river. With two other boys he was playing beside the river, a mile below town. They loosened a cake of ice and the Tubbs boy and Lyle Smith started on a trip down stream. Both boys slipped off, but Smith clambered back and got out. The river was dragged and the body recovered.

QUARTEMONT NOT INDICTED

GRAND JURY FINDS NO BILL IN CASE.

Charges Against Man Held in Connection With Mathews Case Dismissed.

Frank J. Quartemont, assistant superintendent of the commissary department of the Soo railroad, who was held in the city jail charged with the murder of Alice Mathews, was released from custody. The charge of first degree murder, placed against him by Detective Hansen, was dismissed by Judge Montgomery of the municipal court on the request of an agent of the county attorney.

The grand jury report contained nothing concerning the charge against him. The only mention of the murder case made in the report was the recommendation the jury made that two policemen of the Sixth precinct station be discharged from the department.

Police officials look on grand jury report as a direct slap. As such they have not forsaken any of their theories of the case and are working as hard as ever on the mysterious death of the young flour mill worker, one hundred feet in front of her home, March 23.

They say that the action of grand jury will make no difference to them in their efforts to bring the slayer of Miss Mathews to justice. They still believe Quartemont is guilty.

CLAIMS PRIZE HEIFER

Hackney's Farm Manager Exhibits New Butter Record.

Netherland Johanna de Kol V., a heifer owned by Senator Joseph M. Hackney and kept at his Arden dairy farm at Lake Josephine, outshines any heifer of her age in the state of Minnesota as a butter producer, according to W. J. Young, manager of the farm, and has the highest record for her age of any heifer in the west except the world's champion, owned in Wisconsin.

Mr. Young saw the report that a Holstein heifer, Korndyke Maid Ormsby, at the age of 2 years and 5 months produced twenty-one and one-quarter pounds of butter in seven days. The heifer owned by Senator Hackney, he says, made a record of twenty-two and three-fifths pounds in seven days when she was but 2 years 2 months and 1 day old.

TURN DOWN PRIMARY.

Minnesota Republicans Reject the La Follette Idea.

St. Paul.—The republican state committee rejected the Roosevelt-La Follette proposition for taking a popular vote on president in the caucuses. The vote was 28 to 7.

The delegate convention was called to meet in the Minneapolis armory Thursday, May 16, at noon. County conventions are to be held Monday, May 13, and district conventions May 15. Caucus dates will be fixed for each county by the county committee.

July 2 was selected as the date of the state nominating convention, and county conventions on Friday, June 28. The state convention will take place in the St. Paul Auditorium. County conventions on June 28.

ADA FARMERS ENLIST.

Labbitt Organizes Classes for Better Tilling Methods.

Ada.—R. W. Labbitt of St. Paul, who is working in the interest of the Great Northern project for teaching better farming methods, has been organizing a class here. The railroad company furnishes the seed, pays the owner of the land $8 an acre for the use of the soil and the farmer gets the crop. Mr. Labbitt expects to spend the summer here supervising the work. Seven farmers have entered into the project.

MISSISSIPPI IS OPENING

Winona.—From the foot of Lake Pepin to the Gulf of Mexico the main channel of the Mississippi river is open and there is a general movement of ice along the entire upper river, with the exception of a few points toward the headwaters, which will probably shed the ice in a day or two. The ice movement is steady and is causing no alarm. Lake Pepin is still frozen over.

Hear Kettle Falls Dam Project.

Washington. — The International Joint Boundary commission for Canada and the United States held its first session. The application of Minnesota power interests for permission to build a dam at Kettle Falls at the head of Rainy lake to conserve the flow of water for the big power at International Falls was heard.

Iron Mining Ban Is Raised.

Hibbing.—The Oliver Iron Mining company, tied up for months by the Mrs. Liend injunction, was granted relief which permits the company to resume mining in the Sellers pit, except near Mrs. Liend's home. Judges Hughes Dibell of the district court filed their ruling, which is a modified restraining order that will not prevent the mining company from operating in other parts of the Sellers mine except that adjoining the Liend property. Work is resumed.

MILLIONS ARE LOST

LEVEES BREAK AND MISSISSIPPI TORRENT SPREADS WRECK AND DEVASTATION.

CAIRO A HEAVY SUFFERER

4,000 Are Homeless at Hickman, Ky., Where the Conditions Beggar Description—Many Other Cities Are in Great Peril.

Chicago.—The great floods which are sweeping down the Mississippi valley have to date caused the loss of over $7,000,000. This is in property values alone and does not include the loss of wages to workingmen and the loss of time to the hundreds of factories and the half dozen railroads affected by the great rush of waters.

From every city on the banks of the Mississippi, Ohio, Fox, Platte and Kankakee rivers comes additional news of the devastation caused by the overflowing banks and the breaking levees, and the indications are that the loss figures will double the amount already suffered by the farmers, residents and manufacturers along the line of the flood.

All the rivers already affected by the spring freshets continue to rise, and no relief seems to be in sight for the thousands made homeless by the floods. Had the inundation been caused by rains relief would have been a matter based only on the continuance of the downpours. This flood, however, is from the hills, caused by the great snowfall of the past winter, and shows no signs of abating. It will be at least a week before the affected territory can return to anything even resembling comfort and safety.

Cairo, Ill., seems to be the worst affected from a property loss standpoint. The city is practically isolated, as far as railroad service is concerned, and all food supplies are being taken into the city by boats. The Mobile & Ohio and the Iron Mountain roads have abandoned all efforts to move trains, while the Illinois Central, if present conditions last, cannot hope to continue more than a few hours.

The lives of 500 workmen were endangered and property valued in excess of $5,000,000 was submerged when the Mississippi river tore a crevasse 125 feet long in the levee.

The embankment broke after more than 300 workmen had fought for five hours to fill a depression seventy feet long and five feet deep. Five hundred men were fighting on the Big Four levee in an effort to stem the rise of the Ohio. Fearing that the Big Four levee would not hold under the strain, the tug Frances was ordered out with a rescue party on board and succeeded in bringing in the workers.

The territory flooded is just north of Cairo and comprises about 9,000 acres. Nine big manufacturing plants are located here.

Besides the plants the lumber yard of Upham Agler, with millions of feet of hard wood lumber, was submerged. The Chicago mill also had a large stock of lumber. It is estimated that the number of homes, business houses and other structures flooded in the drainage district numbered nearly 1,000.

Future City, a negro settlement, has a population of more than a thousand. Urbandale, with a white population of about a hundred, had many well built homes.

Hickman, Ky., faces the most desperate situation ever known during any flood in the Mississippi valley. Four thousand are homeless and the state is feeding the refugees. Militia companies are in command to prevent vandalism. Three miles below the city the great main levee of the Mississippi has broken and the back water is already entering the outskirts of the city, in addition to the three to fifteen feet already covering the streets.

TAFT HITS JAPAN BUGABOO

U. S. Will Not Intervene in Mexico—Jap Colonization at Magdalena Bay Absurd and Groundless.

Washington.—The Lodge resolution calling upon the president to send to the senate information obtained by the state department in its investigation of the report that the Japanese government was seeking from Mexico a naval base at Magdalena bay is now said to have been a part of an administration plan to smash the constantly recurring bugaboo of Japanese invasion or colonization of North America.

Huntington Wilson, acting secretary of state, and Representative Sulzer of New York chairman of the house foreign affairs committee, had a long conference with President Taft at the White House.

After his talk with the president, Chairman Sulzer said he was convinced that there would be no intervention by the United States in Mexico and that reports of Japanese colonization at Magdalena bay were absurd and groundless.

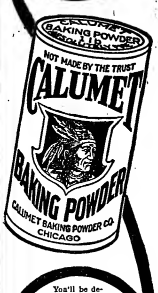
Saves Wife's Negro Assailant.

Elkton, Ky.—Ison Taliaferro, a thirty-year-old negro, was saved from lynching here only by the pleading of George W. Robinson, whose wife the negro is alleged to have attacked. Robinson, a prominent farmer, begged that the law be allowed to take its course.

Fire Destroys $100,000 Church.

Waterbury, Conn.—Fire destroyed the first Baptist church here, with a loss of $100,000. A gas explosion injured two firemen.

Always Makes Good



You'll be delighted with the results of Calumet Baking Powder. No disappoints— no flat, heavy, soggy biscuits, cake, or pastry.

Just the lightest, daintiest, most uniformly raised and most delicious food you ever ate.

Received highest reward World's Pure Food Exposition, Chicago, 1907.

Walls and how to decorate them
The Alabastine Book

Get This FREE Book Before You Decorate

It shows 20 pretty rooms in modern homes and how to get the very latest designs for your home. We will send you FREE color plans made by expert designers for any rooms you want to decorate.

Alabastine

The Beautiful Wall Tint

is more fashionable than wall paper or paint and costs far less. It is too refined and exquisite in color to compare with any kind of kalsomine. Goes further on the walls, does not chip, peel or rub off, lasts far longer 16 Beautiful Tints. Comes all ready to mix with cold water and put on. Easiest in use—full directions on every package. Full 5-lb. pkg., White 50c; Regular Tints, 55c.

Get the FREE Book of 20 Beautiful Rooms

Write today

Alabastine Company
53 Grandville Road, Grand Rapids, Mich.
New York City, Desk 3, 105 Water Street

REAL ESTATE

WESTERN CANADA FARM LANDS for $12-$18 per acre in the finest mixed farming district in Canadian West. Close to Prince Albert, Sask., splendid market point. Free Government homesteads also within 25 miles of City, crops excellent, settlement coming in fast. For free literature and maps, write Julius S. Woodward, Sec. Board of Trade, Dept. L, Prince Albert, Sask.

TAFT WILL BE ELECTED Betting? No, but we will bet a new hat you can't buy good land, as well located, as cheap, as from us. Write us. BERGSTROM'S, Wanchope, Sask., Can.

$1250 Ideal mountain farm. HURRY, 80 acres. 40 cultivated, 3¼ mi. R. R. High, healthy, good land, orchard, fair improvements, Co. road, telephone. Owner, C. W. McDaniel, Armada, Crawford Co., Ark.

GOOD FRUIT, DAIRY AND GRAIN LAND—160 a. in Washington C., Ore. 2 r. h. No other imp. Will sacrifice. HICKEN, Box 819, Chicago.

120 A. IN PINE CO., MINN., 60 A. CULT.; 6 r. h., barn, outbldgs., orchard, etc. Excellent location. Will sacrifice. SAUMER, Box 310, Chicago.

500 A. IN FERGUS CO., MONT. 110 A. CULT.; 12 r. h., built for summer resort.; outbldgs. and imp. complete. J. W. DOUGHERTY, Malden, Mont.

Why Rent a Farm

and be compelled to pay to your landlord most of your hard-earned profits? Own your own farm. Secure a Free Homestead in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, or purchase land in one of these districts and bank a profit of $10.00 or $12.00 an acre every year.

Land purchased 3 years ago at $10.00 an acre has recently changed hands at $25.00 an acre. The crops grown on these lands warrant the advance. You can by cattle raising, dairying, mixed farming and grain growing in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Become Rich

Free homestead and pre-emption areas, as well as land held by railway and land companies, will provide homes for millions. 38

Adaptable soil, healthful climate, splendid schools and churches, good railways.

For settlers' rates, descriptive literature "Last Best West," how to reach the country and other particulars, write to Sup't of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or to the Canadian Government Agent.

Chas. Pilling, Clifford Blk, Grand Forks, N. D.
J. S. MacLachlan, Box 197, Watertown, S. D.
E. T. Holmes, 315 Jackson St., St. Paul, Minn.
Geo. A. Hall, 125 2d St., Milwaukee, Wis.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1906, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3.1879.

The railroads are giving excursion rates to fishermen. His honor Major Shunk, U.S. Engineers St. Paul and H.C Rider, of the game and fish Commission of this state, should buy one and come up to Thief River Falls on a fising trip.

We wonder how it happend that 7 men got onto the present Republican state central committee that favured the presidential primary. You want to be careful gentelmen and not allow the people to speak, for if they do they would put Taft out of business, and they will put him over the dump when they do get a chance to speak.

The Taft managers claim that the fight for the republican nomination is about over as they will have enough delegates by the close of this week to assure his nomiaution on the first ballot at Chicago. Next year at about this time they can say: "my friend Taft also ran," for the people will surly take an inning at the ballot box, and he will be defeated. If he is nominated we will have another democratic president next March, of that fact you may be certain.

The Republican state central committee has fixed the date for state Conventions, as follows: To elect delegates to the National Convention May 16, in Minneapolis; the county conventions will be held May 13. To nominate a state ticket and congressman at large, July 2, in St. Paul; the County conventions will be held June 28. The Congressional conventions to elect Presidential delegates will be held May 15. The committee voted 28 to 7 against the presidential primary.—Ada Index.

Senator F. H. Peterson, of Moorhead has filed for the republican nomination for congress from the Ninth District as the opponent of Halvor Steenerson. It is not because the people is disatisfied with Steenerson, but because Mr. Peterson would like to have his job, is what has started this fight. But, the people are not likly to exchange a new congressman for a man with the experience of Steenerson at this time when there is so many masures now before congress of vital interest to the people of this district, which they desire to see passed. It takes a new member of congress about two years to get aquainted down there at Washington, before he can accomplish anything, and the people of this district can not afford to spare the time for them to get aquainted. However if the supporters of Mr. Peterson are looking for a race they will find the "nags" of Steenerson in good trial to get into the race from the word "go," and stay in until they pass under the wire on the home stretch.

Senator Sageng, from Ottertail county, in his speech at Crookston last week charged Taft with turning the rains of power over to the interests in his appointments. He need not told the people living along Red Lake River that, for they found it out last fall and winter with the rights of the people on one side and the corporations on the other. That engineers outfit of his at St. Paul was ready and willing to certify to anything required to justify the lumber companys in closing up Red Lake River, and they did close it off and killed every fish in it and every fur baring animal on its banks.

The Danger After Grip

lies often in a run down system. Weakness, nervousness, lack of appetite, energy and ambition, with disordered liver and kidneys often follows an attact of this wretched disease. The greatest need then is Electric Bitter, the glourious tonic, blood purifier and regulator of stomach, liver and kidneys. Thousands have proved that they wonderfully strengthen the nerves, build up the system and restore to health and good spirits after an attact of Grip. If suffering, try them. Only 50 cents. Sold and perfect satisfaction guarenteed by All Druggists.

FODDER CORN.

Owing to the fact that so much land has been sold during the past season in this county to actual settlers that are moving here this spring and the majority of these being un-improved land, the result will be that hay land will be more scarse than ever as also more people during the past two years have gone into the dairy business thus requiring about twice the amount of hay that was used in former years so it will be well for the farmers to make arrangements for the feed as early as pussiable, and the writer having recently made a trip thru a certain dairy district in the southern part of the State, where there of course is no wild hay but an abundance of both clover and timothy we find that even there the farmers are prefeering fordder corn to fine tame grass and that about the same amount of feed can be gotten from 10 acres of well cultivated fodder corn as they would get from 160 acres of either clover or timothy besides being a great deal more nutrious and especially far better for milk cows fur milk purposes. Even people now moving here that have no old fields on the land need not hesitate to put in fodder corn on the prairie sud broken this spring provided they will break it well and thourly disc it up and if given a good coat of old manure the result will still be better. We would advise the farmers figuring on planting fodder corn to make arrangements for the seed in good season and see to it that they are getting the right kind best adapted to this country.

It Looks Like A Crime

to separate a boy from a box of Bucklen's Arnica Salve. His pimples, boils, scratches, knocks, sprains, and bruises demand it, and its quick relief for burns, scalds, or cuts is his right Keep it handy for boys, also girls. Heals everything healeble and does it quick. Unequaled for piles. Only 25 cents at All Druggists.

FARM LOANS.

Made Without Delay, at reasonable rates of interest.

Be sure and see me before you place your loan.

GEORGE ELDER.
McGinn Block,
Thief River Falls.

For Profit.

"He is different from other men. He enjoys being misunderstood."

"He must be eccentric."

"No, he is quite normal."

"Then why glory in obscurity?"

"He is marketing a line of doubtful mining stock."

Worse Than Hard Words.

"Why did you kill your parrot? The poor bird meant nothing by its profanity."

"I could stand its profanity, but it learned to imitate the lawn mower last summer."—Washington Herald.

Prayer carries us halfway to God, fasting brings us to the door of his palace, and almsgiving procures us admission.—Koran.

IN THE MILLENNIUM.

When Our Weather Man Becomes Polite.

IF it suits the great American people Tuesday will be a bit blustery. Your humble weather prognosticator would beg of you to remember that winter is now upon us and that the unpleasant days have been held off as long as possible. If it is the will of the majority the morning will open up with sun, grow a bit troubled by noon, then cloud over rapidly until by the middle of the afternoon the atmospheric conditions will make a fire seem more cheerful than usual. The man behind your weather bureau would remind you that this is the best he can do by you and that by beginning with a fair morning and have the day grow clouded as the hours pass away a sudden change is thus avoided and many ruffled nerves are saved. On account of the extreme lateness of the season the bureau would call the fact to your attention that many worse days have been experienced at this time of the year and that it has striven hard to suit the majority. A little fortitude and patience on your part will make the day slip by much more quickly, and the state of mind with which you receive it that morning, the department would point out, determines in a great way whether or not the day drags heavily on your hand.—Judge's Library.

Too Hasty.

At a lecture a well known authority on economics mentioned the fact that in some parts of America the number of men was considerably larger than that of women, and he added humorously, "I can therefore recommend the ladies to emigrate to that part." A young woman seated in one of the last rows of the auditorium got up and full of indignation, left the room rather noisily, whereupon the lecturer remarked, "I did not mean that it should be done in such a hurry."—Tit-Bits.

The Charm of Venice.

A young lady who had returned from a tour through Italy with her father informed a friend that he liked all the Italian cities, but most of all he loved Venice. "Ah, Venice, to be sure!" said the friend. "I can readily understand that your father would like Venice, with its gondolas, and St. Mark's, and Michelangelos." "Oh, no," the young lady interrupted, "it wasn't that. He liked it because he could sit in the hotel and fish from the window."—Catholic News.

A Vain Effort.

"Why don't you take an interest in affairs?" said the offhand adviser. "Why don't you read the newspapers so that you can converse intelligently with your husband?"

"I tried to," replied young Mrs. Torkins, "but I made a mistake. I read the president's message instead of the football news."—Washington Star.

About the Size of It.

Even though they are all cast in the same mold, the size of a dollar depends on how many of them you have.—New York Times.

A Good Offer.

Her Father—I don't know about letting you have my daughter, Mr. Sellers. Will you take care of her in good style?

Her Suitor (in retail line)—I'll guarantee it, sir, or return the goods.—Boston Transcript.

Sure Thing.

Plutocrat—Riches, my friend, do not bring happiness.

Poor Man—Maybe not, but it must be a great satisfaction to have a lot of money and be able to talk like that to people who haven't got any.—New York Mail.

The Drop.

The weather man he sighed full long
And cried: "'Tis thankless plan
To satisfy in least degree
The fickle mind of man!
Here I've been criticised by all
That warm the weather was;
That flies annoyed and skeeters too
Continued nightly buzz.

"Unseasonable, the public said,
The weather of the past,"
And wondered in sarcastic way
How long it was to last.
So then I thought their taste to please,
This Cerberus give a sop,
And, taking down the temperature,
I gave them quite a drop.

"Quite satisfied? Well, that's the point!
No: not a little bit!
I'm popular with just myself
When I thought to be 'it.'
But now I'll show these fickle folk
I know what I'm about.
I'll seek no more their whims to please,
But give them a freeze out."
—Baltimore American.

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 10.00 a. m. on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m

Wm. G. Hunt p. m.

Nerves of Genius.

Many of the men whose names we revere today in science, art, literature and poetry suffered from emotional disturbances, resulting in nerve storms or outbursts of mental violence, which can only be described as superacute mania. The poet Cowper had strong suicidal tendencies, yet he wrote "John Gilpin" when suffering from intense melancholia. Shelley had an insane ancestry, and at Eton he was called "Mad Shelley." Charles Lamb had to be placed in an asylum, and his sister Mary stabbed her mother to the heart while insane. Wordsworth and his sister Dorothy are almost a parallel to Charles and Mary Lamb. At the age of thirty Coleridge was broken down, and he died a wreck at sixty-two. Southey came of an insane stock. The mother of Richard Brinsley Sheridan, the dramatist, died demented at forty-two. Pope was deformed and rickety, and Keats was neuropathic to his finger tips. Byron's mother was unbalanced, and so was his maternal grandfather.—London Globe.

Value of Deep Breathing.

Writing on the cultivation of physical fitness in the Herald of the Golden Age, Eustace Miles says that those who have mastered the art of deep and full breathing are thereby enabled to master their emotions—they can overcome pain and secure control of the mind and of the circulation of the blood. The control of the breathing prevents one from becoming hurried and flurried, and one acts leisurely, although not lazily. Breathing can be adapted to various needs—for instance, in producing warmth or the opposite effect—or one can breathe in order to become more sensitive. In fact, the all round value of deep and full breathing cannot be overestimated. Of all physical practices this is the first and foremost and one that can be regulated without being in the least conspicuous. If you have learned how to breathe deeply and fully people may not suspect it—they only notice that you are calm, poised and good tempered.

Siam's Amazon Guard.

Siam is one of the few countries which boast of a corps of women police. The members of this amazon guard are all old and ugly. They wear uniforms, though they are not armed Their chief duty is to act as gate keepers of the inner, or women's, palace at Bangkok. They follow any stranger who enters the palace and remain with him until he takes his departure. Men who have business inside the palace—doctors, architects, carpenters, electric light fitters, etc., enter the palace freely, but are always accompanied by some of the Amazon guard. The palace has some difficulty in recruiting these guards, as the work is hard and the pay poor, and the qualification — uncomplimentary.—London Standard.

It Depended.

"Do you believe in capital punishment?" asked the lawyer who was examining the candidates for the jury.

"Well, that depends."

"Depends on what?"

"Oh, the defendant. If she is that good looking young woman who sits at your left, I don't."—Chicago Record-Herald.

An Elemental Error.

A judge was angling in the Mahtowick waters and just after dinner became involved in an argument with his boat companion. The debate lasted some minutes, and during that time the judge had his baited hook dangling in the air over his shoulder.

The guide took a hand.

"Judge," said he peremptorily, "drop your line in the water. There are no flying fish around here."—Chicago Post.

A Rich One.

The Visitor—And what are you going to make of him?

Mammo—I want him to be a philanthropist.

"Why, there's no money in that."

"But all the philanthropists have been very rich."

"If It Breaks Owners."

Mr. Stutters—We-we-write it ju-ju-just as I s-s-s-say it.

Miss Stenographer—Gee, I see my [illegible]—New York Mail.

An Old Saw, With A New Set.

We have now a large and complete stock of new goods at our Kratka store, and would be pleased to have all our old customers call and see us at the new store and post Office.

A FINE LINE OF BOTH HEAVY AND LIGHT SHOES.

Ask to look at our stock of Shoes. No trouble to show GOODS.

Higest market price paid for butter and eggs.

Singer Bros. Kratka Minn.

RHODA STORE

NEW GOODS, NEW PRICES.

A trial order will convince you, that this is the best Store to buy your goods.

I HAVE A FINE LINE OF GROCERIES.

BOOTS, SHOES, & COMPLET STOCK OF SUMMER FOOT WARE.

give me a call and get prices.

GEORGE SINGER. Prop. Rhoda Minn.

SINGSONG GIRLS.

They Are to China What the Geishas Are to Japan.

"Singsong" girls of China are first cousins to the geishas of Japan. These young ladies vary in age from sixteen to thirty and are chosen for their physical and their artistic attractiveness. The singsong girls are habited in coat and trousers of the finest silk, satin or brocade. The former is cut very much in the style of a French ouvrier's blouse, and the latter are cylindrical, falling to the ankles and disclosing the finest silk hosiery and the daintiest embroidered shoes.

At an understood interval one of the singsong girls comes forward to play an instrumental solo. It is more or less a fantasia on two notes, the pitch lying at about E in the treble clef, with squeaky, high excursions. No sheet of music is unfolded, the Chinese professional singer being expected to know the words as well as the music of at least 500 ballads. There are sure to be solos, duets and trios, and here the male orchestra comes in with fine enthusiasm in accompanying the singers.

Sometimes there is a tremendous racket in the midst of a most pathetic episode, which prevents you entirely from gathering the meaning of the song. But custom has sanctioned these outbreaks, which are understood of the Celestials, though it is certain no western star singer would put up with them at any price.—Chicago News.

When Rhymes Come Hard.

Matthew Arnold complained of the unmusical sound of the names of many of his countrymen. But an American is astonished by the substantial musical quality of countless English names. A list of "first year" students at one of the English colleges for women contains hardly a name that lacks euphony, and many of them, like the following, are a "treat" to the ear: Laetitia Helen Alford, Alice Seligman, Margaret Bryson, Ethel Muriel Meredith. But is any name quite so musical as Meredith, and has any name so ravishing a connotation? An English journalist some weeks ago set himself the task of finding a rhyme for it and produced "out-Herodeth," which was clever if not affording a perfect concord.—Detroit Free Press.

McCall's Magazine and McCall Patterns
For Women

Have More Friends than any other magazine or patterns. McCall's is the reliable Fashion Guide monthly in one million one hundred thousand homes. Besides showing all the latest designs of McCall Patterns, each issue is brimful of sparkling short stories and helpful information for women.

Save Money and Keep in Style by subscribing for McCall's Magazine at once. Costs only 50 cents a year, including any one of the celebrated McCall Patterns free.

McCall Patterns Lead all others in style, fit, simplicity, economy and number sold. More dealers sell McCall Patterns than any other two makes combined. None higher than 15 cents. Buy from your dealer, or by mail from

McCALL'S MAGAZINE
236-246 W. 37th St., New York City

Note—Sample Copy, Premium Catalogue and Pattern Catalogue free, on request.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

CORN-SEEDS TREES

Our 29th Annual Catalog is now ready and free for the asking. It is a work of art and full of good things. See King Corn on front cover.

WILL'S PIONEER SEED HOUSE and NURSERY
OSCAR H. WILL & CO.
BISMARCK, NO. DAKOTA

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Call and see us, when you are ready to make your final proof.

Edward Singer was transacting business at Rhoda Wednesday.

Rush the seed into the ground. You can't reap, if you don't sow.

Everbody is busy and about evryone you meet wants to hire men to brush or do breaking.

A second hand cream seperator in good condition for sale cheap. Inquire of A. Rolandson.

The lumber companys are still on the job with their log jam at the outlet of Red Lake.

Who is the oldest post master, in point of service, on the eleven townships? Wm. G Hunt, of Sunbeam.

Tore Lande has just bought a fine young team and will do a lot of breaking on his Deer Park farm this season.

A good big handsom steer, that will make a good working ox, for sale cheap. Partly broken., Inquire at this office.

We received an article from eastern Deer Park this week, which we did not get time to set in type.

The farmers are all busy seeding and the close of this week will see a lot of grain in the soil of Pennington and Red Lake Counties, whare crops never fail.

WANTED: I want to hire three or four men to grub and clear land on my farm one mile south from Highlanding. Call at the reidence of Tallak Dale.—Simon Solberg.

The navigable Red Lake River is now fordable and a petition will soon be circulated to have it declared non navgable, so it will be bridgeable.

McIntosh had another big fire last week. The shack that it started in was well insured, and rope on the fire bell had been cut, so as not to alarm anyone until the fire got a good start.

Simon Solberg has been moving his steam plow engine up from McIntosh this week, and if you hear an awful cracking in the brush south from Highlanding do not be allarmed for its only Simon and the steam plow.

Charles W. Johnson sold his farm north of Rhoda this week to a new settler who will farm the land. Mr. Johnson was a good citizine and "settler" but what this country needs now is to hear the crack of the breaking team whip.

We started in the chicken business this week with two prize hens and a rooster. We have three eggs up to date that don't look much different from the ordinary eggs that you buy from stores. But they must be different for ther'o worth $1,40 cents a dozen. 15 cts. for the eggs and $1,25 cents for the breed.

Vaughn Bros. & Co. will breake up and seed to flax a large portion of the farm that they bought from Mr. Arndt last fall. Andrew Ellingson is also going to put in a good crop of grain this year, and we are trying to get in every acre possiable on the Sunbeam farm, and in fact everybody is trying to make some ready cash from the rich farming lands of Pennington.

We received notice to late for publication this week of the Republican Ninth Congressional District Convention to be held at Thief River Falls May 15, to elect two delegate to the Republican National Convention. The call will be published next week, and we want to congratulate the boys on the securing the holding of that Convention at Thief River Falls. Pennington county is now, but she has got some good old "hustlers", just the same. It is needless to add that the delegates from other parts of the District will be well intertained, and will return to their homes with a good impression of our people and the future prospects of the new county of Pennington.

Garden making has started some this week, but will not be general until next week.

When you are laying out your plans for the different crops do not forget the corn patch.

The mail carriers out from Plummer are loaded down with packages for farmers now days, who order by telephone, to be sent out by the mail carrier. They were so heavy loaded this week that they could not bring our express, which compells us to re publish some plate matter.

Almost A Mirical.

One of the most startling chages ever seen in any man, according to W. B. Holsclaw, Clarendon, Tex., was affected years ago in his brother. "He had such a dreadful cough," he writes, "that all our family thought he was going into consumption, but he began to use Dr. Kings New Discovery, and was copletly cured by ten bottejs. Now he is sound and well and weighs 218 pounds. For many years our family has used this wonderful remedy for Coughs and Colds with excelent results." It's quick, safe, reliable and guarateed. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottle free, at All Druggists.

GOMMITED SUICIDE.

Last Friday evening Joseph Schlekocer living on section 11, in this, Highlanding township shot himself dead with a single barrel shot gun. It is supposed that he commited the rash act during a temporary fit of insanity altho he had loaded the shot gun, which was a muzzle loader during the afternoon. His wife was milking the cows and he came out to barn and bid her good by, then back of the house and shot himself, the charge entering the body just above the heart killing him instantly. He leaves a wife and two small children to mourn his loss who have the sypathy of friends and neighbors in their sorrow. Funeral services were held at Thief River Falls on Monday and interment was made in Greenwood cemetery.

Puts End to Bad Habits.

Things never look bright to one with "the blues." Ten to one the trouble is a sluggish liver, filling the system with billious poison, that Dr. King's New Life Pills would expel. Try them. Let the joy of better feelings end "the blues." Best for stomach, liver and kidneys. 25 cents, at All Druggists.

FARM FOR SALE.

The N. E. ¼ Section 14 Township 152 N. Range 40. Town of Deer Park. Price $16,00 per acre.

Henry Rovoold,
Alsask, Sask. Canada.

DRESS MAKING.

For plain and Farcy sewing apply to Mrs. Sam McMahr Student of the America College of dress making.

Kuehuel, Minn.

Notice To Farmers.

I have an a No. Jack, nine years old which will stand for service during the season of 1912, at my farm on section 8 town of Deer Park. M. E. Hylnud.

Superfluous.

"Is your son a college man?"

"No. He won't need an education."

"Why?"

"He's going to marry a college woman."

The Teazel.

Those who have never seen a teazel imagine a fir cone or swamp cattail set all over with little stiff hooks. It is the bur (or tassel or flower head or thistle top) of the plant dipsacus. However familiar to people who live in lands where the teazel is extensively grown, the fact may be that the prickly heads of that plant are universally used to raise the nap on cloth. A multitude of persons in this country probably never heard of it and would be astonished to learn in what enormous quantities the plant is cultivated. In France alone many thousands of acres of land are exclusively devoted to the cultivation of the teazel. French manufacturers use enormous numbers of the prickly heads, and from France there are exported many millions of them. They are also raised in Austria, England, Belgium, Poland and the Crimea. The prickles of the teazel have a small knob at the end, and this, mounted on an elastic stem and set with great precision on the central spindle, affords a little brush such as the utmost mechanical skill has never been able to rival, at all events at the same price.—Harper's Weekly.

Tea Tasters in Formosa.

In the Formosan tea trade the most important man is the cha si, or taster. He inspects and tests samples of all teas offered to his firm, and his judgment determines the price to be paid. In a room admitting light only from the north the cha si does his work. He first examines the leaf, then its infusion in hot water and lastly its odor and taste. Practically all the faculties are exercised in making this test. It requires the services of an expert, and the tea tester receives a good salary, though relatively not so large as obtaining twenty years ago. A tea tester never uses any perfume which would destroy the tea odor. He must not allow the acuteness of his taste to become dull. He never drinks domestic tea. Constant tea testing, it is said, will injure the health. In Formosa the tea testers are Americans or Englishmen.

Black and White.

For many years a large department store has spent thousands of dollars on placards with which almost every article of merchandise is ticketed throughout the store, and only within a short time did they realize the amount of money that was wasted in using the white cardboard with block lettering. These white cards soon become soiled and shop worn if allowed to remain in place any length of time. The cards which are handled by customers in bins, trays, etc., are even more so. By substituting the black cardboard with white lettering this store has overcome this difficulty to a very great extent. The show cards are always clean, fresh and bright looking and they last many times as long, saving the firm several hundred dollars in the course of a year.—Business.

Wesley's "Narrow Neck of Land."

The actual first and last house in England is a shed where a woman sells specimens of rock. Just below this, as one goes down the zigzag path between the rocks, on the neck of the peninsular is a flat stone about two feet square and rising six inches above the ground. This, tradition asserts, is that upon which John Wesley sat when he composed the hymn—

Lo, on a narrow neck of land
'Twixt two unbounded seas I stand
Secure, insensible!

It is also stated that Wesley wrote other hymns there. Apparently he had at this time (July 30, 1743) experienced a bad spell of weather at Land's End, for he writes, "I saw a strange sight—the sun shining in Cornwall."—English Illustrated Magazine.

Pulling an Elephant's Tooth.

Perhaps the greatest dental operation on record was performed upon an elephant in the City of Mexico. The aching tooth was twelve inches long and measured fourteen inches round the root. After the animal had been securely fasten with chains his mouth was pried open and a quantity of cocaine applied to deaden the pain. When this was done a hole was bored through the tooth and an iron bar inserted. Then a rope was twisted around the bar, and four horses were attached thereto to drag the offending molar out.—London Tit-Bits.

Speak to the Horse.

The human voice has more or less marked influence on all animals. In managing horses especially the voice is of the greatest use. It should be quiet and, though confident and masterful, not loud and boisterous. No one should ever touch a horse without at the same time speaking to it.—Exchange.

An Accepted Story.

"Quilla has really had a story accepted at last," remarked a journalist to a colleague.

"Surely not," was the rejoinder.

"Yes. He went home at 2 o'clock this morning with an awful yarn, and his wife believed it."

Golden Thought.

An irreverent and illiterate Englishman who has just returned from the United States was heard to describe the country the other day as "a hell dollarado."—London Punch.

Unlucky.

"The more I try to sing this child to sleep the louder it yells."

"Your voice, my dear, is a Jonah—it is being swallowed by a wail."—Baltimore American.

No one is useless in this world who lightens the burden of it for another.—Charles Dickens.

Take One Pain Pill then— Take it Easy

To get the best of Backache Get a Box of

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills

Otherwise Backache May get the best of you

Nothing disturbs the human system more than pain whether it be in the form of headache, backache, neuralgia, stomachache or the pains peculiar to women. Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are a standard remedy for pain, and are praised by a great army of men and women who have used them for years.

"A friend was down with LaGrippe and nearly crazed with awful backache, I gave her one Anti-Pain Pill and left another for her to take. They helped her right away, and she says she will never be without them again."

MRS. G. H. WEBB, Austinburg, O.

At all druggists—25 doses 25 cents.
MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

Turning It Off.

Molly (holiday making in the country)—I say, Mr. Hoats, do you mind if I ask a question?

The Farmer—No, my dear. What is it?

Molly—What I want to know is when you've finished milking that cow how do you turn it off?—London Sketch.

State of Ohio, city of Toledo, }
Lucas County. } ss.

Frank J. Cheney makes oath that he is senior partner of the firm of F. J. Cheney & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by the use of HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

FRANK J. CHENEY.

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1886.

(Seal) A. W. GLEASON, Notary Public.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials, free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by all Druggists, 75c.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

[illegible] DISEASE

[illegible] our family had died [illegible] I was taken with [illegible] and lung trouble, [illegible] saved and I gained [illegible] through using

DR. KING'S NEW DISCOVERY

[illegible], Wellington, Tex.

[illegible] AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

LUMBER FOR SALE.

I will have about 50,000 ft. of lumber for sale this winter at $15.00 per thousand Will take cattle in exchange.

Andrew Nilson.

W.G.Hunt.

Notary Public.

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you,

Special attention given to Probate Court Work.

The Last Dueling Clergymen.

"When did clergymen cease to fight duels?" is a startling inquiry in London Notes and Queries. It will be news to many of us that they were ever fond of that exhilarating pastime. But, as a matter of fact, the Rev. Mr. Allan fought a duel with Lloyd Delany, Esq., and killed him in Hyde park in 1782. He was convicted of manslaughter and fined 1 shilling plus six months in Newgate.

NEW BANK.

FIRST STATE BANK,

OF OKLEE Lambert Post Office Minn.

NEW STATION ON DULUTH SOO LINE.

Your Business Solicited.

Directors: A. P. Toupin, Pres. Samul Gileau Vic. Prs.
Larry O'Niel, Abrham Fuiquire, T. L. Cruzon.
J. A. DUFFY, Cashier. T. L. CRUZON, Assist. Coshier.

Let Us Tell You Something!

This Season we are offering the best line of Dry Goods that ever came into this Section of the Country.

Don't Buy Elswhare, Until You Have Seen What We Have To Offer.

No Matter What Price you pay, WE Will please YOU.

VAUGHAN BROS. & CO.

Highlanding Minn.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's

$50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day

Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were piloting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory? We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.

Our New Home. Capacity 20,000 Safes Annually.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars it will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Ask for Calalogue 16 T.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.

CINCINNATI, OHIO

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT

IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the regular retail prices.

$10.00 Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof Self-healing Tires A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks, or Glass will not let the air out. A hundred thousand pairs sold last year.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D" also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

J. L. MEAD CYCLE COMPANY, CHICAGO, ILL.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

BURNING DAYLIGHT

By JACK LONDON

AUTHOR OF "THE CALL OF THE WILD" "WHITE FANG" "MARTIN EDEN," ETC.

(Copyright, 1910, by the New York Herald Company.)
(Copyright, 1910, by the MacMillan Company.)

SYNOPSIS.

Elam Harnish, known all through Alaska as "Burning Daylight," celebrates his 30th birthday with a crowd of miners at the Circle City Tivoli. The dance leads to heavy gambling, in which over $100,000 is staked. Harnish loses his money and his mine but wins the mail contract. He starts on his mail trip with dogs and sledge, telling his friends that he will be in the big Yukon gold strike at the start. Burning Daylight makes a sensationally rapid run across country with the mail, appears at the Tivoli and is now ready to join his friends in a dash to the new gold fields. Deciding that gold will be found in the up-river district Harnish buys two tons of flour, which he declares will be worth its weight in gold, but when he arrives with his flour he finds the big flat desolate. A comrade discovers gold and Daylight reaps a rich harvest. He goes to Dawson, becomes the most prominent figure in the Klondike and defeats a combination of capitalists in a vast mining deal. He returns to civilization, and, amid the bewildering complications of high finance, Daylight finds that he has been led to invest his eleven millions in a manipulated scheme. He goes to New York, and confronting his disloyal partners with a revolver, he threatens to kill them if his money is not returned. They are cowed, return their stealings and Harnish goes back to San Francisco where he meets his fate in Dede Mason, a pretty stenographer. He makes large investments and gets into the political ring. For a rest he goes to the country.

CHAPTER XI.—Continued.

Daylight could not persuade himself to keep to the traveled roads that day, and another cut across country to Glen Ellen brought him upon a canyon that so blocked his way that he was glad to follow a friendly cow-path. This led him to a small frame cabin. The doors and windows were open, and a cat was nursing a litter of kittens in the doorway, but no one seemed at home. He descended the trail that evidently crossed the canyon. Part way down, he met an old man coming up through the sunset. In his hand he carried a pail of foamy milk. He wore no hat, and in his face, framed with snow-white hair and beard, was the ruddy glow and content of the passing summer day. Daylight thought that he had never seen so contented looking a being.

"How old are you, daddy?" he queried.

"Eighty-four," was the reply. "Yes, sirree, eighty-four, and spryer than most."

"You must a' taken good care of yourself," Daylight suggested.

"I don't know about that. I ain't loafed none. I walked across the plains with an ox team and fit Injuns in '51, and I was a family man with seven youngsters. I reckon I was as old then as you are now, or pretty nigh on to it."

"Don't you find it lonely here?"

The old man shifted the pail of milk and reflected.

"That all depends," he said oracularly. "I ain't never been lonely except when the old wife died. Some fellers are lonely in a crowd, and I'm one of them. That's the only time I'm lonely, is when I go to 'Frisco. But I don't go no more, thank you 'most to death. This is good enough for me. I've been right here in this valley since '54—one of the first settlers after the Spaniards."

The old man chuckled, and Daylight rode on, singularly at peace with himself and all the world. It seemed that the old contentment of trail and camp he had known on the Yukon had come back to him. He could not shake from his eyes the picture of the old pioneer coming up the trail through the sunset light. He was certainly going some for eighty-four. The thought of following his example entered Daylight's mind, but the big game of San Francisco vetoed the idea.

CHAPTER XII.

Instead of returning to the city on Monday, Daylight rented the butcher's horse for another day and crossed the bed of the valley to its eastern hills. As on the previous day, just for the joy of it, he followed cattle-trails at haphazard and worked his way up toward the summits. Coming out upon a wagon road that led upward, he followed it for several miles, emerging in a small, mountain-encircled valley, where half a dozen poor ranchers farmed the wine-grapes on the steep slopes. Beyond, the road pitched upward. Dense chaparral covered the exposed hillsides, but in the creases of the canyons huge spruce trees grew, and wild oats and flowers.

Late in the afternoon he broke through, and followed a well-defined trail down a dry canyon. The dry canyon gave place to one with a slender ribbon of running water. The trail ran into a wood-road, and the wood-road emerged across a small flat upon a slightly traveled country road. There were no farms in this immediate section, and no houses. The soil was meager, the bed-rock either close to the surface or constituting the surface itself. Manzanita and scrub-oak, however, flourished and walled the road on either side with a jungle growth. And out a runway through this growth a man suddenly scuttled in a way that reminded Daylight of a rabbit.

He was a little man, in patched overalls; bareheaded, with a cotton shirt open at the throat and down the chest. The sun was ruddy-brown in his face, and by it his sandy hair was bleached on the ends to peroxide blonde. He signed to Daylight to halt, and held up a letter.

"If you're going to town, I'd be obliged if you mail this," he said.

"I sure will." Daylight put it into his coat pocket. "Do you live hereabouts, stranger?"

But the little man did not answer. He was gazing at Daylight in a surprised and steadfast fashion.

"I know you," the little man announced. "You're Elam Harnish—Burning Daylight, the papers call you. Am I right?"

Daylight nodded.

"Well, I'm glad I wrote that letter this afternoon," the little man went on, "or else I'd have missed seeing you. I've seen your photo in the papers many a time, and I've a good memory for faces. I recognized you at once. My name's Ferguson."

"Do you live hereabouts?" Daylight repeated his query.

"Oh, yes. I've got a little shack back here in the bush a hundred yards and a pretty spring, and a few fruit trees and berry bushes. Come in and take a look. And that spring is a dandy. You never tasted water like it. Come in and try it."

Walking and leading his horse, Daylight followed the quick-stepping, eager little man through the green tunnel and emerged abruptly upon the clearing, if clearing it might be called, where wild nature and man's earth-scratching were inextricably blended. It was a tiny nook in the hills, protected by the steep walls of a canyon mouth. Here were several large oaks, evidencing a richer soil. The erosion of ages from the hillside had slowly formed this deposit of fat earth. Under the oaks, almost buried in them, stood a rough, unpainted cabin, the wide veranda of which, with chairs and hammocks, advertised an out-of-doors bedchamber. Daylight's keen eyes took in everything. The clearing was irregular, following the patches of the best soil, and every fruit tree and berry bush, and even each vegetable plant, had the water personally conducted to it. The tiny irrigation channels were everywhere, and along some of them the water was running.

Ferguson looked eagerly into his visitor's face for signs of approbation.

"What do you think of it, eh?"

"Hand-reared and manicured, every blessed tree," Daylight laughed, but the joy and satisfaction that shone in his eyes contented the little man.

"Why, d'ye know, I know every one of those trees as if they were sons of mine. I planted them, nursed them, fed them, and brought them up. Come on and peep at the spring."

"It's sure a hummer," was Daylight's verdict, after due inspection and sampling, as they turned back for the house.

The interior was a surprise. The cooking being done in the small, lean-to kitchen, the whole cabin formed a large living-room. A great table in the middle was comfortably littered with books and magazines. All the available wall space, from wall to ceiling, was occupied by filled bookshelves. It seemed to Daylight that he had never seen so many books assembled in one place. Skins of wildcat, 'coon and deer lay about on the pine-board floor.

Daylight found himself charmed and made curious by the little man. Why was he hiding away here in the chaparral, he and his books? So it was, when between them they had washed and wiped the dishes and put them away, and had settled down to a comfortable smoke, that Daylight put his question.

"Look here, Ferguson. Every since we got together, I've been casting about to find out what's wrong with you, to locate a screw loose somewhere, but I'll be danged if I've succeeded. What are you doing here, anyway?"

Ferguson frankly showed his pleasure at the questions.

"First of all," he began, "the doctors wound up by losing all hope for me. Gave me a few months at best, and that, after a course in sanitariums and a trip to Europe and another to Hawaii. They tried electricity and forced feeding and fasting. I was a graduate of about everything in the curriculum. They kept me poor with their bills, while I went from bad to worse. The trouble with me was two-fold; first I was a born weakling; and next, I was living unnaturally—too much work, and responsibility and strain. I was managing editor of the Times-Tribune in San Francisco, and I wasn't strong enough for the strain. Of course my body went back on me, and my mind, too, for that matter. It had to be bolstered up with whisky, which wasn't good for it any more than was the living in clubs and hotels good for my stomach and the rest of me. So I quit, quit everything, absolutely, and came to live in the Valley of the Moon—that's the Indian name, you know, for Sonoma Valley. I lived in the lean-to the first year; then I built the cabin and sent for my books. I never knew what happiness was before, nor health. Look at me now and dare to tell me that I look forty-seven."

"I wouldn't give a day over forty," Daylight confessed.

"Yet the day I came here I looked nearer sixty, and that was fifteen years ago."

"What Do You Think of it, Eh?"

They talked along, and Daylight looked at the world from new angles. Here was a man, neither bitter nor cynical, who laughed at the city-dwellers and called them lunatics; a man who did not care for money, and in whom the lust for power had long since died.

It was not until ten o'clock that Daylight parted from Ferguson. As he rode along through the starlight, the idea came to him of buying the ranch on the other side of the valley. There was no thought in his mind of ever intending to live on it. His game was in San Francisco. But he liked the ranch, and as soon as he got back to the office he would open up negotiations with Hillard.

Here Was a Man Who Laughed at City Dwellers and Called Them Lunatics.

The time passed, and he played on at the game. San Francisco's attitude toward Daylight had undergone a change. While he, with his slashing buccaneer methods, was a distinct menace to the more orthodox financial gamblers, he was nevertheless so grave a menace that they were glad enough to let him alone. He had already taught them the excellence of letting a sleeping dog lie.

Dede Mason was still in the office. He had made no more overtures, discussed no more books. He had no active interest in her, and she was to him a pleasant memory of what had never happened, a joy, which, by his essential nature, he was barred from ever knowing. Yet, while his interest had gone to sleep and his energy was consumed in the endless battles he waged, he knew every trick of the light on her hair, every quick definite mannerism of movement, every line of her figure as expounded by her tailor-made gowns. Several times, six months or so apart, he had increased her salary, until now she was receiving ninety dollars a month. Beyond this he dared not go, though he got around it by making the work easier. This he had accomplished after her return from a vacation, by retaining her substitute as an assistant. Also, he had changed his office suite, so that now the two girls had a room by themselves. The more he saw of her, and the more he thought he knew of her, the more unapproachable did she seem to him. But since he had no intention of approaching her, this was anything but an unsatisfactory fact. He was glad he had her in his office, and hoped she'd stay, and that was about all.

Daylight did not improve with the passing years. The life was not good for him. He was growing stout and soft, and there was unwonted flabbiness in his muscles. The more he drank cocktails, the more he was compelled to drink in order to get the desired result, the inhibitions that eased him down from the concert pitch of his operations. And with this went wine, too, at meals, and the long drinks after dinner of Scotch and soda at the Riverside. Then, too, his body suffered from lack of exercise; and, from lack of decent human associations, his moral fibers were weakening. Never a man to hide anything, some of his escapades became public, such as speeding, and of joy-rides in his big red motor car down to San Jose with companions distinctly sporty—incidents that were narrated as good fun and comically in the newspapers.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Destruction of Rats.

An East Africa publication contains a description of a method of destroying rats, followed in Java, in which carbon bisulphate is employed. In carrying out the method a small quantity, usually about half a teaspoonful of the carbon bisulphide is poured into the rat hole and after waiting a few moments to let the liquid evaporate, the mixture of air and vapor is lighted, a small explosion resulting and filling the hole with poisonous gas, killing the rats instantly. Such a process practiced openly might be objectionable under some circumstances because of danger from fire resulting from the explosion and a field for invention appears to offer itself to provide some form of fire-proof gun or explosion chamber suitably formed to be inserted in the mouth of the rat hole and adapted to enclose the explosion and discharge the resulting noxious gas into the hole.—Scientific American.

The Sailor's Chest.

Bobby—This sailor must have been a bit of an acrobat.

Mamma—Why, dear?

Bobby—Because the book says, "Having lit his pipe, he sat down on his chest."—Sacred Heart Review.

A Quarter Century

Before the public. Over Five Million Free Samples given away each year. The constant and increasing sales from samples proves the genuine merit of Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder to be shaken into the shoes for Tired, Aching, Swollen Tender feet. Sample free. Address, Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

It would save people a lot of trouble if they could be born with their wisdom teeth already cut.

Pure blood is essential to Good Health, Garfield Tea dispels impurities, cleanses the system, and eradicates disease.

The more a man expects the more he will be surprised if he gets it.

The Wretchedness of Constipation

Can quickly be overcome by CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Purely vegetable—act surely and gently on the liver. Cure Biliousness, Headache, Dizziness, and Indigestion. They do their duty.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

THE NEW FRENCH REMEDY. No.1, No.2, No.3.

THERAPION Used in French Hospitals with GREAT SUCCESS. CURES KIDNEY, BLADDER DISEASES, PILES, CHRONIC ULCERS, SKIN ERUPTIONS—EITHER SEX. Send address envelope for FREE booklet to DR. LE CLERC MED. CO., HAVERSTOCK RD., HAMPSTEAD, LONDON, ENG.

900 DROPS

CASTORIA

ALCOHOL—3 PER CENT

A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of INFANTS & CHILDREN

Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral NOT NARCOTIC

Recipe of Old Dr SAMUEL PITCHER

Pumpkin Seed -
Alx Senna -
Rochelle Salts -
Anise Seed -
Peppermint -
Bi Carbonate Soda -
Worm Seed -
Clarified Sugar
Wintergreen Flavor

A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP

Fac Simile Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK.

At 6 months old
35 DOSES—35 CENTS

Guaranteed under the Food and

Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES

$2.25 $2.50 $3.00 $3.50 $400 & $5.00

For MEN, WOMEN and BOYS

THE STANDARD OF QUALITY FOR OVER 30 YEARS

THE NEXT TIME YOU NEED SHOES give W.L. Douglas shoes a trial. W.L. Douglas name stamped on a shoe guarantees superior quality and more value for the money than other makes. His name and price stamped on the bottom protects the wearer against high prices and inferior shoes. Insist upon having the genuine W.L. Douglas shoes. Take no substitute. If your dealer cannot supply W.L. Douglas shoes, write W.L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass., for catalog. Shoes sent everywhere delivery charges prepaid. Fast Color Eyelets used.

SPOHN'S DISTEMPER CURE

For DISTEMPER Pink Eye, Epizooti
Shipping Fever
& Catarrhal Feve

Sure cure and positive preventive, no matter how horses at any age are infected or "exposed." Liquid, given on the tongue; acts on the Blood and Glands; expels th poisonous germs from the body. Cures Distemper in Dogs and Sheep and Cholera i Poultry. Largest selling live stock remedy. Cures La Grippe among human beings and is a fine Kidney remedy. 50c and $1 a bottle; $5 and $10 a dozen. Cut this ou Keep it. Show to your druggist, who will get it for you. Free Booklet, "Distemper, Causes and Cures." Special Agents wanted.

SPOHN MEDICAL CO., Chemists and Bacteriologists GOSHEN, IND., U. S. A

Rheumatic Pains quickly relieved

Sloan's Liniment is good for pain of any sort. It penetrates, without rubbing, through the muscular tissue right to the bone—relieves the congestion and gives permanent as well as temporary relief.

Here's Proof.

A. W. LAY of Lafayette, Ala., writes:—"I had rheumatism for five years. I tried doctors and several different remedies but they did not help me. I obtained a bottle of Sloan's Liniment which did me so much good that I would not do without it for anything."

THOMAS L. RICE of Easton, Pa., writes: "I have used Sloan's Liniment and find it first-class for rheumatic pains."

Mr. G.G. JONES of Baldwins, L.I., writes:—"I have found Sloan's Liniment par excellence. I have used it for broken sinews above the knee cap caused by a fall, and to my great satisfaction I was able to resume my duties in less than three weeks after the accident."

SLOAN'S LINIMENT

is an excellent remedy for sprains, bruises, sore throat, asthma. No rubbing necessary—you can apply with a brush.

At all dealers. Price, 25c., 50c, & $1.00.

Sloan's Book on Horses, Cattle, Sheep and Poultry sent free. Address

Dr. EARL S. SLOAN, BOSTON, MASS.

WHY PEOPLE GO TO CANADA

Those who are wondering why the number of Americans going to Canada year by year increases in the rates that it does, would not be so surprised were they to accompany one of the numerous excursions that are being run under the auspices of the Government from several of the states, and remain with the settler until he gets onto the free homesteads, which, as stated by Speaker Champ Clark, in the U. S. senate the other day, comprises 160 acres of the most fertile soil and with remarkably easy settlement conditions. Then watch the results, whether it be on this free homestead of 160 acres or on land which he may purchase at from $15. to $20. per acre, fully as good as the $100. and $150. per acre land of his native state, and which his means will not permit his purchasing. On the part of the members of the U. S. Senate and Congress there is nothing but praise for Canada. Canadian laws and Canadian lands although the reasonable desire is shown in their remarks, that they pass legislation, (which is very praiseworthy) that will make the land laws of the United States much easier.

It is the success of the American settler in Canada that attracts others, and when experiences such as the following are related to the friend "back home" is it any wonder that increased interest is aroused and a determination arrived at, to participate in the new-found way up in Canada that means wealth and health and all that accompanies it.

William Johnston, who formerly lived at Alexandria, Minn., settled in the Alberg District near Bottle River and in writing to one of the Canadian Government agents, located in the United States says: "We have had no failures of crops during our nine years in Canada. I threshed 1208 bushels of wheat and 1083 bushels of oats in 1911, off my 160 acres. This is a beautiful country. I keep six good work horses and milk seven cows, getting good prices for butter and eggs. We get our coal for $2.00 per ton at the mine, about one mile from the farm. Am about one and a half miles from a fine school. As for the cold weather it is much milder here than in Minnesota, where I lived for 21 years. Our well is 35 feet deep and we have fine water. Wild land is selling for $18. to $25. per acre. Improved farms are much higher. I am well satisfied with the country, and would not sell unless I got a big price, as we have all done well here."

Good reasons to account for the number going to Canada.

Rats.

Jim—Do you think Mamie is taller than Susie?

Tim—I should say that she is just about one rat taller.

RASH ALL OVER BABY'S BODY

Itched So He Could Not Sleep

"On July 27, 1909, we left Boston for a trip to England and Ireland, taking baby with us. After being in Ireland a few days a nasty rash came out all over his body. We took him to a doctor who gave us medicine for him. The trouble started in the form of a rash and was all over baby's body, head and face, at different times. It irritated, and he would scratch it with all his might. The consequence was it developed into sores, and we were afraid it would leave nasty scars on his face.

"When we reached England we took baby to another doctor, who said his condition was due to change of food and climate, and gave more medicine. The rash got no better, and it used to itch and burn at night so bad that the child could not sleep. He was completely covered with it at different times. It was at this time that my mother advised us to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment for about nine months the places disappeared. There are not any scars, or other kind of disfigurement, and baby is completely cured by the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. We have no further trouble with baby's skin. Nothing stopped the itching, and allowed baby to sleep but Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment." (Signed) Mrs. Margaret Gunn, 29 Burrell St., Roxbury, Mass., March 12, 1911.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Midnight Scare.

Knicker—Did your wife beat a burglar in the cellar?

Bocker—No, she heard a burglarette in the cellarette.

Cole's Carbolisalve quickly relieves and cures burning, itching and torturing skin diseases. It instantly stops the pain of burns. Cures without scars. 25c and 50c by druggists. For free sample write to J. W. Cole & Co., Black River Falls, Wis.

We always feel sorry for a stuttering man who is trying to put in a good word for himself.

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY
Take LAXATIVE BROMO Quinine Tablets. Druggists refund money if it fails to cure. E. W. GROVE'S signature is on each box. 25c.

The woman who suffers in silence usually manages to make a lot of noise about it.

As we grow more sensible we refuse drug cathartics and take instead Nature's herb cure, Garfield Tea.

Outwardly most people are cheerful givers, but how about the feeling inside?

NELSON HELPS YOUNG SWEDE

FOLKE E. BRANDT IS RESCUED FROM LONG TERM FOR LIGHT OFFENSE.

GIVEN THIRTY YEARS.

Has Served Five, But Not Likely To Be Returned To Prison, for What Friends Claim Is Unjust Charge.

New York, N. Y. — After examining 41 witnesses the grand jury investigating the case of Folke E. Brandt, handed up a presentment to Judge Crain in the court of general session, holding in effect that in its opinion neither Mortimer L. Schiff, who employed Brandt as a valet, nor his personal counsel, Howard Gans, had been guilty of conspiracy in causing the servant to be sent to prison for 30 years for burglary in the Schiff home. At the same time, the jury holds that Brandt should not have been indicted for burglary in the first degree, but for grand larceny. The court refused, however, to receive a presentment to this last effect.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Schiff had appeared as witnesses before the grand jury, and Brandt, himself, had had a hearing. He is now out on bail and KNUTE NELSON.

United States Senator From Minnesota.

Judge Rosalsky, who sentenced him, having set aside the sentence, it is not thought that he will be imprisoned again.

Senator Knute Nelson of Minnesota, was largely responsible for the investigation that resulted in the young Swede's release. The New York Sun of February 25, 1912, has the following to say of the case and on Senator Nelson's personality:

The man who perhaps has done most to bring about the recent developments of the Brandt case and to whom Mortimer L. Schiff's former valet may give first thanks if he finally goes free is United State Senator Knute Nelson, who, for almost three years, has moved quietly but persistently toward securing justice for the young Swede. This the Senator from Minnesota has done simply out of compassion for a young Scandinavian who, he believes, had been treated unjustly.

While Senator Nelson has steadfastly refused to talk of his activities in behalf of Brandt, a few facts concerning his good offices in the interest of the young Swede have been obtained from his friends. It appears that Brandt made an appeal to Senator Nelson for help. At the time, Brandt was in Dannemora prison. One day while reading a newspaper Brandt's eye fell upon a speech made by Senator Nelson in support of a bill, which later became a law, authorizing the parole of Federal prisoners under certain circumstances.

A note of sympathy for the unfortunate was detected by the Swedish prisoner in the speech, and this prompted him to comunicate with the Minnesota Senator. Under the prison rules Brandt was able to write only in the briefest manner, on a single sheet of note paper. The mail of a United States Senator is always loaded with appeals for help, but this letter aroused Senator Nelson's interest, not only because the writer was a young Scandinavian, but also because he was able to impress upon the Senator a sense of the justice behind his complaint.

Just how Brandt managed to convey his story in full to Senator Nelson is not known. It is known, however, that not long after Brandt's first letter was written Senator Nelson received another narrating in detail the circumstances under which Brandt was discharged from the Schiff household and giving an account of his arrest and conviction on a charge of burglary and of the sentence imposed upon him of imprisonment for thirty years.

Ask any United States Senator about Knute Nelson and he will tell you that the Minnesota man is about the hardest headed individual in the Senate. Although homely and picturesque in his manners he has the reputation of reaching conclusions after only careful, painstaking deliberation. Incidentally he also is regarded as one of the most independent and fearless Senators in the Senate. There must have been something in Brandt's story that appealed to him, for he immediately instituted an inquiry into the case on his own account.

This inquiry, conducted by correspondence convinced Mr. Nelson that justice demanded that the Brandt affair be looked into. He engaged a New York man of Swedish extraction to investigate the case. This man reported to Senator Nelson that Brandt was the victim of injustice. Soon after, according to the story told in Washington, the man who had investigated the case for Senator Nelson abruptly abandoned the affair, but the Minnesota Senator refused to be discouraged. A lawyer was engaged by him and the inquiry resumed. Furthermore Senator Nelson interested the Swedish Minister to the United States in the case and continued his efforts until the legal machinery began to work in New York and the case was again brought to public attention.

While Senator Nelson was prosecuting his inquiries he met with difficulties and discouragements, but he pegged away, convinced that in time the truth as he understood it would come out. Senator Nelson did not take any one into his confidence aside from the persons with whom he was in communication. His colleagues knew nothing of his activities until recently. He instituted the fight at long range, kept it up for about three years, and finally had the satisfaction of seeing Brandt again brought into court and proceedings instituted that promise to bring all the facts of the case before the public.

Senator Nelson is proud of his Norwegian blood. "Descended from a long line of Norwegian pirates," is his own description of his antedecents. He has been in public life for many years, and the Norwegians of the United States point to him with admiration. He is the only man of his nationality who up to date has seen service in the United State Senate.

While Senator Nelson is a bit old fashioned, he is proud of it. He takes no part in Washington society, has not been in a theatre for twenty years, and amuses himself in leisure moments by reading about great sea and land fighters of the past. Once in a while when he tires of the grind of the Capitol he disappears for a day or so. On such occasions he visited a battlefield near Washington and with history books in hand follows the lines of the movement of the hostile forces of the '60s.

James J. Hill, the railroad builder, can testify that Knute Nelson is a hard man to win by persuasion once his mind has been made up. Hill and Nelson have had a great deal to do with public affairs in Minnesota and the Northwest generally. It is a toss-up as to which of them is the more highly regarded in that part of the country.

During his long career in public life Mr. Nelson devoted his attention to a variety of subjects and he has made his mark on the statute books. He is the author of the present bankruptcy law. He is the father of the Department of Commerce and Labor. It won at the instance of Senator Nelson that the Republican national convention in 1900 adopted a plank committing the party to the creation of such a department. Nelson drew the bill under which the department was created.

Senator Nelson was 69 years of age on the second day of February. He landed at Castle Garden as a boy of six with his widowed mother, sixty-three years ago. The Nelsons first settled in Chicago, and then journey on to Wisconsin, where Knute remained off and on until 1871. Nelson served as a private and non-commissioned officer in the Fourth Wisconsin Regiment, and was for a short time a prisoner of war.

Upon his retirement from the army he rejoined his mother in Wisconsin. He read law in Hudson, Wis., alongside of John C. Spooner, later a distinguished Senator and now a lawyer in New York. He served two terms in the Wisconsin Legislature, three terms in the Minnesota Legislature, was a member of the House of Representatives for six years and was twice elected Governor of Minnesota. He has been a member of the United States Senate since March 4, 1895.

MAY PROSECUTE JOHNSON

Negro Fighter Charged With Smuggling Diamond Necklace.

Chicago, Illinois. — Jack Johnson will be prosecuted by the United States government for smuggling unless the sum of $9,600 is paid as penalty for secretly bringing a diamond necklace into this country from Europe without paying duty. The treasury department charges he smuggled a necklace valued at $6,000 into this country when he returned from the coronation.

SCOTCH POTATOES.

Tubers Will Be Imported and Sold Cheaper Than Domestic Variety.

Chicago, Illinois. — Potatoes from Scotland will be served on Chicago tables within a week. Nine carloads are on the way here and will be delivered in Chicago at $1.40 a bushel, wholesale, as against $1.42 to $1.45 for potatoes grown in Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan. Only once or twice have potatoes ever before been imported for Chicago from across the Atlantic.

PROOF.

Tom—Do you think your father dislikes me?

Tess—Well, he gave the dog's chain and muzzle away yesterday.

THE PEEVISH CHILD NEEDS TREATMENT

When a child sulks drowsily, or is fretful, it is usually due to some slight disorder of the digestive organs, and a mild laxative is very often all that is necessary to restore cheerfulness and buoyancy of spirits.

In cases where the use of a gentle, effective laxative stimulant is indicated, many of the best physicians are now prescribing Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This preparation is admittedly the perfect laxative, being mild, yet positive in its action on the bowels, and far preferable to violent cathartics and purgative waters. It is very pleasant to the taste and is an ideal remedy to regulate and strengthen the stomach, liver and bowels. Its easy, natural action makes it especially desirable in the case of children, a dose at bed-time being sure to have the desired result next morning, with no attendant unpleasantness or discomfort.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold by druggists everywhere in 50c and $1.00 bottles. If you have never tried this splendid remedy, write to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., for a sample. He will be very glad to send a trial bottle without any expense to you whatever.

Two Smiles.

Ezra Pound, the poet, was talking at the Author's club, in New York, about Shelley's cremation.

"Cremation, although beautiful," he said, "lends itself to ribald jest in a way that sepulture doesn't.

"Who can forbear a smile at the thought of that devoted young matron, who, her front steps being covered with sleet, sprinkled her first husband's ashes over them in order that her second husband might descend in safety?"

Smiling himself, Mr. Pound resumed:

"And who could forbear another smile at the thought of the young widow on the blustery March morning who entered her drawing room to find that the wind had overturned the vase which contained her husband's remains?

"'Pshaw,' she said, 'now isn't it just like George to throw his ashes all over my new Kirmanshah rug!'"

To Take a Different Route.

"Sistern and brethren," exhorted Uncle Abraham, a recent promotion from the plow to the pulpit, "on de one side er dis here meetin' house is a road leading to destruction, on de udder is a road gwine to hell and damnation. Which you gwine pursoo? Dor is the internal question: Which is you gwine pursoo?"

"Law, Bref Abrahom," spoke Sister Eliza from the back pew, "I speck I'm er gwine home too de woods!"—Lippincott's.

Facts for Weak Women

Nine-tenths of all the sickness of women is due to some derangement or disease of the organs distinctly feminine. Such sickness can be cured—is cured every day by

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

It Makes Weak Women Strong, Sick Women Well.

It acts directly on the organs affected and is at the same time a general restorative tonic for the whole system. It cures female complaint right in the privacy of home. It makes unnecessary the disagreeable questioning, examinations and local treatment so universally insisted upon by doctors, and so abhorrent to every modest woman.

We shall not particularize here as to the symptoms of those peculiar affections incident to women, but those wanting full information as to their symptoms and means of positive cure are referred to the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser—1008 pages, newly revised and up-to-date Edition, sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only; or, in cloth binding for 31 stamps.

Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y.

GAL-VA-NITE ROOFING

You will get full value for every penny you spend on Gal-va-nite Roofing. Although it is 15 pounds heavier than the ordinary roofing, every ounce of its weight serves to make it more durable and serviceable.

It Needs No Painting or Repairing
First Cost—Last Cost

Gal-va-nite is attractive in appearance, easy to lay, suitable for steep or flat roofs, adapted to any kind of a climate. It is excellent for lining silos. Put up in rolls of 108 sq. ft. with galvanized nails, cement and directions.

Buy Gal-va-nite from your local dealer or send for booklets, "Gal-va-nite Qualities" and "The Inside of an Outside Proposition."

FORD MANUFACTURING COMPANY
St. Paul Omaha Chicago Kansas City St. Louis

Talent in the kitchen and a balance in the bank should form a combination for generating domestic bliss.

PILES CURED IN 6 TO 14 DAYS
Your druggist will refund money if PAZO OINTMENT fails to cure any case of Itching, Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles in 6 to 14 days. 50c.

Not only say the right thing in the right place, but, far more difficult still, leave unsaid the wrong thing at the tempting moment.—Sala.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

Something in It.

Governor Beryl Carroll of Iowa has an amusing story of a state senator whose amusing appearance might possibly lead one to mistake him for a laboring man, but who is as sensitive as a woman to all unpleasant circumstances.

"This man," said Governor Carroll, "happened to be standing outside a Des Moines undertaking establishment, conversing with a friend on political matters, when one of the employees came out of the shop and said:

"'Say, will you give us a lift with a casket?'"

"The senator shuddered and replied hesitatingly:

"'Is there—is there—anything in it?'

"'Sure,' came the hearty reply, 'there's a couple of drinks in it!'"—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

Convenient Code.

Frank I. Cobb used to be a reporter in Detroit and knew intimately a former governor of the state of Michigan, who was renowned among other things for his ability as a free-hand swearer.

One night Cobb was dining with the ex-governor and his family. A messenger came in to tell the host that one of his pet political schemes had just been defeated through the bungling of a lieutenant. The old man ripped out a string of dark blue ones.

"Now, pa," said his wife, "you promised me you would quit cursing."

"Marie," said the ex-governor, "I'm not cussing—this is just the way I talk!"—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

Smelting the Matter, Anyhow.

Little Harold lives in Broad Ripple. His mother got him ready for bed one cold night, and to be sure he would be warm enough during the night she took extra precautions, relates the Indianapolis News. After she had put on his little fuzzy pajamas she tucked him carefully in between the wool blankets. Then, to make doubly sure she got a hot water bottle for him—and the youngster was apparently as snug as could be with only his little nose sticking out from beneath the covers.

When his mother had finished the tucking-in job she turned down the light. Soon the entire family was in bed. But Harold is like most youngsters. He loves his mother, and wishes lots of attention. So in his child mind he figured out a way to get her to his bed.

"Mamma," he wailed, "I'm cold!"

"Nonsense, son!" replied his mother, and she never made a move to go to his rescue.

The little boy tried the opposite.

"Well, I'm hot, then!" he yelled.

True Till Death.

His companions bent over him with pitiful earnestness, and stared beseechingly into his waxen features. Again came the flutter of the eyelids, but this time his will mastered approaching death. His lips weakly struggled to execute his last command, and the friends bent closer to hear the faltering whisper. "I am—gone? Yes—er—I know. Go to Milly. Tell her—er—I died with—her name on—my lips; that I—er—have loved—her—her alone—er—always. And Bessie—tell—er—tell Bessie the same thing."—London Weekly Telegraph.

Saving His Money.

Owens—Say, lend me a fiver, old man.

Bowens—If you'd save your own money you wouldn't have to borrow from your friends.

Owens—But it's because I want to save my own money that I borrow from my friends.

Extreme Measures.

"I hand my husband the bills."

"Well?"

"Then he foots them."

Why Should a Chicken Lay a Soft-Shelled Egg?

Because, Willie, the chicken don't know how to create a hard-shelled egg unless it has some food with lime in it.

So chicken-raisers often provide limestone gravel, broken oyster shells or some other form of lime.

Let the chicken wander free and it finds its own food and behaves sensibly.

Shut it up and feed stuff lacking lime and the eggs are soft-shelled.

Let's step from chickens to human beings.

Why is a child "backward" and why does a man or woman have nervous prostration or brain-fag? There may be a variety of reasons but one thing is certain.

If the food is deficient in Phosphate of Potash the gray matter in the nerve centres and brain cannot be rebuilt each day to make good the cells broken down by the activities of yesterday.

Phosphate of Potash is the most important element Nature demands to unite albumin and water to make gray matter.

Grape-Nuts food is heavy in Phosphate of Potash in a digestible form.

A chicken can't always select its own food, but a thoughtful man can select suitable food for his children, wife and himself.

"There's a Reason" for

Grape-Nuts

Postum Cereal Company, Limited, Battle Creek, Michigan

GENERAL VIEW OF HONOLULU

Features of Honolulu

By KATHERINE POPE

PHOTOGRAPHS COPYRIGHTED [illegible]

The EXECUTIVE BUILDING

FEATURES of Honolulu? They crowd to mind fast. Rain on one side of the street, sunshine on the other. Daily rainbows, and occasional night rainbows. Blazing sun but fresh breezes and often wild gales. Sea and mast and husky stevedores. Green trees and lawns down to the ocean's edge, on the brilliant water outrigger canoes bobbing about, and surf-riders dashing shoreward. An Arabian Night's wonder of an aquarium exhibiting great ugly shark and hideous squid that offer strongest contrast to graceful small fishes tinted like unto the rainbow arch before the Koolau mountains. Valley after valley cutting the range that walls Honolulu along the side opposite the sea. Cloud draped mountain peaks towering above the town, ever inviting and challenging the beholder. Flowers abloom on numberless hedges and various tall blossoming trees. Brown-skinned men wearing hats wreathed with fresh posies and ferns. Old Hawaiian crones and young Hawaiian women sitting on shaded sidewalks weaving wreaths and exchanging badinage with tourists and Jackies. "Millogtary," enlisted and commissioned. Representatives of races ranging from subjects of the czar, from the land of the Great Bear, all the way to folk from lower Polynesia. Between these extremes the jostling of European and Korean, New Englander and Filipino, Porto Rican and Chinese, with now and then a tall, white robed Hindoo, and swarming everywhere Japanese men, women and babies.

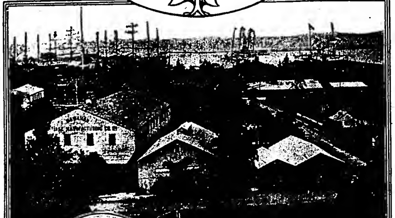
Children, children, children certainly are a feature. The streets abound with them, the tenements overflow, automobiles are crowded to capacity with the rising generation. The world hears repeated reference to the Hawaiians as a dying race, but the part-Hawaiians are unquestionably doing their duty toward populating "The Islands"; large families are the rule with the half-white Hawaiians, and the Chinese-Hawaiians, all about the town, big-eyed, shy native kiddies add to the tropic picture. In the so-called Oriental quarter—although now the Japanese are so numerous they pop up in all portions of Honolulu—the newcomer is struck by the army of fond fathers, the doting male parent, Chinese or Japanese, tenderly toting offspring up and down in hours of leisure, the hunched-up Oriental live doll very fat and impassive and philosophical. Jap women pass along continually with anywhere from two to four chubby babies clinging to the mother—mayhap one tied to her back, one carried before, two toddlers trying locomotion for themselves.

The other day I heard a newcomer remark as she surveyed a street in Chinatown: "I never in my life have seen so many men nurses, and how fond the Chinese seem of their babies." It is all very different from the Sunday school tales we used to read about the cruelty of the Chinese fathers, who were painted as ogres forever devouring unwelcome infants. Here—perhaps because so many of the men are kept by the laws of Uncle Sam from having their wives and families join them—the babies in the occasional Chinese families appear to be household idols, objects of worship and adoration. From the tenements and hovels these idols emerge decked out in most remarkable hues and embroideries, borne aloft in the proud daddy's arms, they look down with condescension and hauteur upon the world at large.

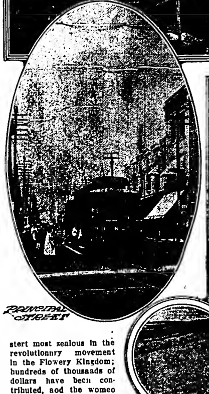
The street cars day after day offer something novel and interesting. Of continued interest is the young Chinese girl standing with hesitant feet between the new and the old. Her dress is that of her people and class, long loose jacket and wide trousers—a distinctly feminine costume in spite of the bi-furcated garment. Her smooth-plastered hair with the pure gold band in the flattened knob at the nape of the neck, her delicate complexion enhanced by a bit of rouge, the bracelet of gold and jade, the slim beringed fingers, all bespeak care with the toilet, care of appearances. About these girls there is an air of reserve and self-respect; they do not suggest, are not, the "painted ladies" of civilization.

Occasionally on the street may be seen a little-footed woman. Not long ago I noticed one that was hastening to catch our car, and as the conductor and motorman made unusually long halt for her accommodation, they indulged in appraisal of her appearance, concluded that she was "real cute." She certainly was gotten up regardless, bright blue silk, richly embroidered, and pearls for her jewels. A passenger said that probably she was wife number one and that the plainly-dressed woman with her, attired in what looked like cheap black silesia, probably was wife number two, a sort of hand-maid for the former. Whatever their relations, they consorted together very amiably on this occasion, appeared to be enjoying their outing with zest. It is only of late Chinese women have begun to appear on the streets of Honolulu with anything like the frequency of women of other races. And this, I am told, is significant of the increase of freedom Chinese women are enjoying in the homeland, a freedom that has spread to the colonists.

The Chinese in Hawaii have been from the start most zealous in the revolutionary movement in the Flowery Kingdom; hundreds of thousands of dollars have been contributed, and the women have worked away earnestly for the cause. It was of interest to see the quiet little things modestly making their way in and out of the Chinese business houses on the mission of gathering funds and supplies for the Red Cross relief work in their disturbed land. All classes were represented in this woman's effort, from the wife of the lowly duck-farm man to the silk-robed mate of the prosperous merchant. Side by side they labored for their country; rolled bandages, made garments, and made plans at their central club house on King street. As one saw them hastening hither with the red-cross badge on the arm, one turned smilingly to contemplate the Chinese woman of today.



HONOLULU HARBOR



PRINCIPAL STREET

A YOUNG HAWAIIAN STREET SWEEPER

Everywhere about the center of Honolulu now waves the flag of the anti-Manchus; every day the town wears a festal air with these flaunting banners so numerous and so gay.

Turning from China and her revolution to shoes, I would speak of footgear as a feature of the Hawaiian capital. One is early impressed by the Cinderella nature of the footwear worn by femininity in Honolulu. Such ridiculous feet were not intended—as a matter of fact are little used—for walking. They seem to be designed chiefly for display, wherefore are shod in silks and satins, in beads and bronze, in suede and embroideries, in delicate tints, extreme soles and heels. No matter how many stone the white woman may weigh, no matter how exuberant the avordupois of the native girl, the feet that peep beneath the gown are, as a rule, small, and elaborately shod. The average woman from "The States," the athletic girl used to shoes for service, finds it almost impossible here to renew her stock of footgear by anything that promises utility. Black velvet or white satin may be had, but not much that is less frivolous. The newcomer wonders whether in time she herself will go in for pretty, idle pedal extremities and increasing bodily weight, or send for sensible shoes and strive for slimness.

In addition to the Cinderellas and their futile finery, there is other footwear on the streets and in the shops that holds attention. In muddy weather the Jap women keep their snow-white stockings immaculate by wearing a wooden sandal raised high from the ground, which protects the kimono ladies admirably and is a decided improvement on our "rubbers." Contrasting with the clatter of these is the soft footfall made by the wearers of straw sandals. The boat-shaped slippers of silk worn by the Chinese are very coquettish, though even the betrousered ladies are beginning to show preference for American shoes.

Jumping to another subject as unrelated to shoes as shoes to a revolution, let us speak of the novel feature of an agricultural city. A goodly portion of Honolulu, in expanses scattered far and wide, is given over to wet farming, and some parts to dry farming. Those wide fields that look like lakes choked with calla lilies, are really taro patches, taro being the vegetable that provides the native food, poi. Duck ponds line the way to the seaside playground, Waikiki, and neighboring these are broad acres of bananas. Residents climb the moist breezy valleys for the sake of verdure and freshness, and compete for possession of a district with Oriental truck farmers who keep to their unspeakable Oriental ideas of farm fertilization. But the commercial flower fields of the Orientals one does not quarrel with; they add color and fragrance here and yon—one field in a resident district is given over entirely to red carnations, another flaunts asters month after month, another big, yellow chrysanthemums.

Steamer day is surely a feature of Hawaii's chief port. Yesterday Honolulu may have been as lethargic, lifeless, as the poor jaded horses of the Chinese hackman waiting there disconsolately for the fare that never comes. But today all is different, for today is Steamer day in the marnin'! Behold a town alive to its farthest outpost. Automobiles dashing everywhere, every seat full. Business houses hustling, clerks counting seconds before the mail departs. At the postoffice frenzy running high; congestion within and without, incoming foreign mail to be distributed, outgoing foreign mail to be delivered at the wharves, island mail transhipped, and addressee in so many languages, such a Babel outside the windows, the wonder is anything goes right. Gold clinking at the banks, the impassive gentlemen in the cages handling in one day wealth which would make the outside world, if it knew, sit up and take notice. Tourists from Australia and India, officers from the Philippines, Chinese and Japanese notables, fresh-cheeked folk fresh from "The States" and Canada, fly here and there, bringing in life not insular, livening things up at a great rate. From these the flower venders reap their harvest, share with the chauffeurs in a renewed prosperity. Of course the "tourister" desires to wear leis (garlands), of course the traveler wants all the local color possible. He puts a wreath of carnations about his hat, a long garland of maile over his shoulder, and starts forth on the mission of "seeing Honolulu." The Hawaiian band plays for him, the water heroes do their best stunts out in the surf, the very waves glitter and roll high in his honor, the curio shops present all of the primitive they possess to tempt him, downtown cafe and seaside hotel have an added sparkle, townsfolk are out in careful costumes. Everyone is in a hurry, but everyone seems in holiday humor, hastening because there is something worth while to hasten for. The street urchins are especially alert, and most alert of these are the eager elfin newsboys, the olive-skinned urchins whose shrill cry of "Daily 'Tiser, Plenty News!" is now full of meaning, for is not this Steamer Day and Foreign Mail?

The street car service in Honolulu is noted for the courtesy of its employes; an outsider used to the rudeness that is the rule in cities at home, rubs his eyes, thinks these polite servants of the public must be the figment of a dream. The idea of a street car conductor listening attentively, answering politely, putting himself to trouble smilingly, seems too good to be true.

Conductor and motorman in Honolulu are under one great strain that interferes with their equanimity and reveals that they are mere men after all, that they occasionally indulge in violence of language and act. Japs newly arrived from Nippon, or just in from a sugar-mill village, are blandly, crassly ignorant about street car customs and restrictions. Individually and in groups you see them do this incomprehensible thing—touch the bell, then immediately and confidently step off. Often they are killed; always they are hurt, for the street cars not only go buzzing along at a good pace, but because of the slope of the streets they have their steps very high from the ground, and a fall from one of these rapidly moving cars is anything but a joke. The number of accidents, one would think, would have been noised about among the Orientals so that by this time they would have learned their lesson, but even today the closest watch has to be kept on the Japanese passengers—some conductors put on a worried look the moment a Jap enters the car, and are on the qui vive to clutch his shoulder the second he fingers the bell. I have seen a pretty little doll of a Jap woman board a car daintily costumed, daintily coiffed, fresh and colorful as the flower in her hair, her face alert and intelligent, appearing as though she could very well take care of herself, as though very modern, decidedly of the new Japan. And I have seen this little goose touch the bell and skip lightly forth, seen her come down with great heaviness and force, her poor little rose crushed in the dirt, her wonderful obi deep in the mire, and heard her scream of amazement and terror. Another time the case was worse, now a mother, father and babe the victims. The father had stepped on the car with the proud air of owner of the infant he held so tenderly in his arms, after him had stepped the little mother. The elders seemed devotedly attached to the wee morsel with them, but what did they do the moment the woman rang the bell but alight in a bunch on top of the morsel! It was dreadful, and proved too much for the nerves of the much-tried conductor. All white and trembling he bent over this species of "Japanese tumblers" that is part of the white men's burden in Honolulu, and picking them up with more emphasis than gentleness, he proceeded to give them a very frank opinion of themselves and the place he considered they rightfully belonged. We passengers expected the three to swoon in our arms and perhaps die there; but no, the baby but gently whimpered, Mr. and Mrs. Kimono gently brushed off the dust and smiled apologetically and conciliatingly upon the angry street car man.

Autos might be called a feature of Honolulu were it not that they have ceased to be looked upon as needing much comment nowadays. It is the occasional carriage and pair one turns to look at twice, and a certain carriage and pair of Honolulu attracts the passing glance. "The Queen" drives out of afternoons sometimes to take the air and perhaps mark some new change that is helping transform the capital of what was once her realm.

Honolulu is fond of outdoor life, has the Outrigger club down by the beach and aquatic sports, the Country club and golf; various athletic fields, and a fine polo field just beyond the town, on a private estate called Moanalua. Men from other islands bring their polo ponies to Honolulu during the season. This year the island of Oahu played the island of Kauai only, but generally Maui sends men and ponies. The United States cavalry have their own polo grounds about thirty miles from Honolulu, and send to Moanalua players and ponies of excellent mettle. There are no more interesting events in Honolulu than the polo matches, the game, the plucky horses, the field in the mountain valley all making a spirited, beautiful spectacle.

SCHOOL FOR INDIANS

How Savages Are Taught Practical Things in Southwest.

Institution Conducted by W. T. Shelton of Shiprock, N. M., on the Navajo Reservation—Children Prefer Outdoor Work.

Shiprock, N. M.—It is only within the last few years that the practical note has been emphasized in the education of the Indian child, and the results have been so hopeful that those who were beginning to despair of the Indian's future are taking a new view of the situation.

It used to be that when the subject of Indian education was brought up, people were told to investigate the work being carried on at the Carlisle and other non-reservation Indian schools. But now there are many reservation schools which afford an interesting study in practical accomplishment.

The Indian school that is generally accepted as a model for the entire Indian service is conducted by Superintendent W. T. Shelton at Shiprock, N. M., on the Navajo Indian reservation. The agency and school were established by Mr. Shelton about eight years ago. Surrounding the school and agency buildings are several hundred acres of beautifully cultivated farm land. There is a fine herd of dairy cows in the barnyard and the boys take turns at the milking in the model dairy house.

About the agency one finds children engaged in many useful tasks. A trained seamstress is teaching a class of girls the intricacies of needlework. Other girls, who are under the watchful eye of the matron, are flitting about the building, sweeping, making beds or washing dishes. The big boys are caring for the live stock, and the smaller lads are busy in the garden or orchard.

Before His School Training.

"The practical note is emphasized here," said Mr. Shelton. "That is done because it is the practical that is going to be of most benefit to the Indian. All the old prejudices of the Indians against the white man's education are being wiped out. Old Indians bring their children across the desert for many miles, and beg me to put them in school. Sometimes the children themselves, who have heard from other children about the life here, will run away and show up here at the agency with the request that I put them in school.

"It is surprising the talent that is being developed among these Indian boys and girls. I have an Indian boy who acts as interpreter and works on the greenhouse. He has a positive genius for floriculture. The school-girls have woven Navajo rugs that have taken prizes at our annual Navajo fair in competition with rugs from the looms of the oldest and most experienced weavers on the reservation. The children without exception love the outdoor work in the garden and orchard. We raise more fresh vegetables here than we can consume, and the girls preserve the surplus."

TEETH WORTH $1,500 EACH

Man Who Lost Eight Is Awarded $12,000 Damages by New York Jury.

New York.—It is very expensive to knock eight good teeth from a man's head, as the Brooklyn Heights Railroad company learned in Long Island City, when a jury brought in a verdict of $12,000 against the company. The jury decided that each tooth was worth $1,500.

The case was that of Axel Homestead, an insurance man of Brooklyn. He was about to board a trolley car in October, 1910, when he was struck and knocked down by another car.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE SUNBEAM.

MINNESOTA
[illegible]TORICAL
[illegible]

VOL. XII. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, APRIL 19, 1912. NO. 4.

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

Mud Turtles are Served as Terrapin

ST. PAUL, Minn.—Mississippi river fishermen in Wisconsin have developed a handsome trade in shipping turtles to the east, where they are sold in competition with the famous terrapin of the Baltimore region. Especially in Lent has the shipment of the common snapping turtle been a prosperous business.

A typical shipment was that sent recently by W. T. Allen to Philadelphia for distribution in coast cities to compete with the most famous delicacy of Baltimore. The shipment contained 125 live snapping turtles and weighed 1,229 pounds. It netted Allen $150. Despite the fact that the turtles had been in a cellar without food or drink or care of any kind since last October, they were game enough as they were put aboard the train to snap and bite with considerable belligerence. It is expected they still will be alive when they reach Philadelphia.

Some of the turtles weighed twenty-five pounds each. They were caught in one of the stagnant sloughs of the Mississippi. At the ice-forming time in the fall it is the habit of turtles to seek some sheltered spot near a bunch of weeds or a sunken log and burrow in the mud beside it until their bodies are about half covered and their heads wholly so.

After the ice in the slough is strong enough to bear his weight Mr. Allen goes over it, finds the half buried turtles, breaks through the ice, hooks them up through the hole, slings them into a sack over his shoulder and takes them home to his cellar. The cellar has a moist, sandy floor. As soon as the turtles are deposited on it they burrow in the sand just as they did in their native habitat and there remain through the long winter without requiring further attention.

When the price of turtle flesh reaches high mark, Mr. Allen takes them out of their hibernating quarters and has marketed them as high as eighteen cents a pound, live weight.

Dump Munitions of War Into the Sea

NEW YORK.—Enough munitions of war to start several Central America comic opera revolutions were dumped into the ocean off Sandy Hook the other day by Commissioner Waldo.

The several thousand weapons were confiscated by the police under the Sullivan law against the carrying of death-dealing instruments.

Since the Sullivan law went into effect, September 1 last, the entire detective and police force have been searching both thugs and civilians whom it was thought might for various reasons be carrying concealed weapons. As a result, a whole room of the property bureau at police headquarters was filled with weapons of every sort.

As fast as the revolvers and what-not were received they were tagged and put in this room. The tags showed from whom and under what circumstances the articles were secured, and if they appeared in a court case a record of such use was also attached.

There were 1,500 revolvers, valued at $11,000. Some of these revolvers were of very handsome design, with pearl handles and gem screw sets. Others were mere toy, blank cartridge pistols of the Fourth of July sort that sell for fifty cents.

Then there were rifles—over a hundred, valued at something like $3,000. Some of these had elaborately hand-carved black walnut butts, and if placed on exhibition at the Sportsmen's Show would make many a crack shot envious of the deep blue sea that was their final resting place.

From these high grade weapons the list jumps to everything from a slung shot to pieces of gas pipe. Of these miscellanae there was almost a wagon-load.

Saws Home in Two Dividing Property

DENVER, Col.—If James W. Ponder had not been so conscientious he would not have been a prisoner here. He was arrested on complaint of his wife, who accuses him of carrying out too literally an agreement he had made with her in court when she was granted a decree of divorce from him. This agreement was really Ponder's own idea, and it was to eliminate the alimony idea and to make an equal division of the property owned by the couple. This seemed fair to the woman and she signed the agreement.

Everything in the house was shared without any trouble, and then the barn was visited. First the flock of chickens was shared, and then the bales of hay, grain and farming implements. Two lumber wagons were easy to divide, but the one surrey was a problem.

Ponder solved this puzzle by having the wagon pulled out to a vacant lot and burned, so that neither would have the vehicle. Then the one-horse owned by the couple was turned loose and allowed to wander away. Mrs. Ponder became a little angered at this and demanded how her erstwhile husband was going to share the real estate and the property. The land was easy to divide, Ponder said, and he had a scheme that would make equal the sharing of the house and barn. Going to an outhouse he got a long cross cut saw and climbing to the roof of the dwelling house measured the roof tree, and then finding the exact center of the building started to saw through the shingles. Mrs. Ponder began screaming for help.

The man had cut his way through two of the rafters before the police arrived and he was forced to stop his equal division operations.

Police Nab Oldest Known "Con" Man

CHICAGO.—Shaking with palsy and totally blind, "Jerry" McLean, 84 years old, "the oldest con man" in the world, slept on an iron bed in the Central station the other night.

"Jerry" had turned one too many "tricks." This time it was "bleeding" suckers who answered the aged crook's lurid advertisements of "traveling companion wanted by blind gentleman who intends spending a few months in California. Salary $25 a week." "Jerry" got a "guarantee" of from $50 to $90 from each of them.

"I guess I might as well tell you my right 'moniker,'" he told Captain Halpin after Detectives Aldenhovel and Bishop had arrested him. "I'm 'Jerry' McLean. I guess you know me. They do in lots of other cities I could name.

"I've lived on 'Comfortable avenue' ever since I was a kid. I've did a couple of 'bits' in the New York penitentiaries, but nothing that was very long. I'll get out of this all right."

"Jerry's" accusers are Darrington Evans of 7351 Coles avenue, Joseph Willett of 739 North Clark street, Frank Widsher of Strongburst, Ill., and E. Suran of 1801 South Michigan avenue. Willet gave "Jerry" $50 as a "guarantee" and Evans $90. They had been "hired" after visiting the aged confidence man in his rooms.

"I was born in Castle Bar, County Mayo, Ireland, eighty-four years ago," Jerry said. "I came to America when I was a kid and was in New Orleans when the civil war broke out. I joined General Beauregard's army. I was captured and taken to Fort McHenry.

"It was at Fort McHenry that my 'easy money' career began. With another prisoner named Bliss I stole $30,000 of yankee greenbacks and we sawed our way to freedom."

PROMINENT PEOPLE

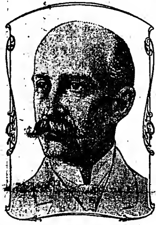
WILL TRY TO WIN BACK MOORS

Mme. Camille Dugast, the famous explorer, artist and aeronaut, just now is trying to civilize the tribes of southern Morocco, bearing a special commission from the French minister of education.

While her task is a stupendous one and fraught with many dangers from poisonous insects and jungle plagues, and is forced to put up with many inconveniences, Mme. Dugast writes to a friend here that civilizing savages is mere child's play compared with the work of trying to ward off proposals from the marriageable tribal chiefs and even the sultan himself.

The sultan is one of Mme. Dugast's most consistent admirers and ever since she became interested in Morocco he has paid persistent court to her. First, he offered her the superintendency of his harem, which is the same as to say he wanted to make her his principal wife. Mme. Dugast very cleverly avoided offending her royal suitor and at the same time firmly rejected the offer.

SECURES A STRENUOUS POST



Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson accepted the post in Mexico City two years ago because he had become weary of the inactivity at the Brussels legation, where the only diplomatic excitement was the wearisome controversy over the Belgian atrocities in the Congo. President Taft was anxious to have him accept one of the European posts, as fortunately he is rich enough to pay the bills for house rent and hospitality which these appointments demand, but he chose Mexico City just for the pleasure of downright hard work and hard fighting.

And he has certainly obtained it. It would be difficult to overestimate the difficulties of his position. The intrigues and cabals against him have been legion, and they have been especially strong and bitter among his own countrymen.

Before Mr. Wilson left the American legation in Brussels for his appointment at Mexico City he was besieged by representatives of different American interests in Mexico, who made overtures to bargain for his influence in pushing their enterprises. His mail brought frequent letters inclosing blocks of stock made out in his name, and when they were returned the promoters promptly sent them back, made out to Mrs. Wilson.

It was not until the ambassador had been in Mexico City several months that his vehement denunciation of these capitalists made them realize finally that he could not be induced to work for them except in a legitimate way. And since that time his path has certainly been a thorny way.

ROYAL ROMANCE IS BLIGHTED

On indisputable authority it is learned that Princess Victoria Luise of Prussia, only daughter of the kaiser, is the unhappy heroine of a "true love" romance, which is now finding a sequel in the princess' "rest cure" with her father on the Mediterranean.

The princess, who will be 20 years old next September, fell deeply in love during the recent court season, according to reports current in society, with the hereditary Count Fugger, a lieutenant in the elite gardes du corps at Potsdam and a descendant of an ancient Bavarian family, which was once the wealthiest in Europe.

The affection was mutual, but it was necessary to represent to the princess that marriage was impossible, not only on account of the difference in the lovers' rank, but also because the Fuggers are devout Roman Catholics.

The princess succumbed to a distressing attack of nervous prostration in consequence of this state of affairs, and was required, at the height of the court season, to abstain from further participation in it. It was announced at the time that she was suffering from an "affection of the throat."

As soon as the season ended the kaiser and kaiserin decided to send their daughter to St. Moritz with the crown prince and princess.

MIGUEL TO FIGHT FOR MANUEL

The proposed movement to restore King Manuel of Portugal to the throne from which he was deposed by his people will be one of the most formidable ever prepared against an existing government, according to the man who expects to lead it, Dom Miguel of Braganza.

The former pretender, who has entered into an offensive and defensive agreement with Manuel, discussed his plans freely the other day, only insisting that such portions as might be of benefit to the Portuguese government be withheld.

Dom Miguel prefaced his remarks by praising Americans he has met, paying especial compliment to Mrs. J. H. Smith, mother of his daughter-in-law and widow of the American speculator, "Silent" Smith.

He emphasized his belief that it is only a question of time when the Portuguese monarchy will be restored, citing recent outbreaks in various parts of that country to support his contention that the present republican government is unstable.

Neither property nor personal rights are respected at present, he alleged.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

Radium Quest Interesting the Scientists

WASHINGTON.—Austria has not, according to the United States geological survey, a world monopoly in the production of radium, as was stated in a consular report from W. L. Loownie of Carlsbad. This report recorded the purchase of the only two mines under private ownership producing the ores from which radium is made. The purchase price was stated to be $600,000, and to complete the world monopoly in radium by the Austrian government.

The geological survey announces that this monopoly is a myth. It is true that the Austrian mines and the Austrian government heretofore have furnished the bulk of the radium salts existing in the world, but at present radium is being manufactured in three other countries, including the United States.

Sweden is producing radium from kolm, the English are producing it from mines in Wales, and it is extracted also from ores brought from the United States. There is a large deposit of radium producing ore in western Colorado.

The Colorado deposits produce uranium and vanadium, the latter an essential in making some of the new high-grade steel alloys. It is mined for the vanadium, but the ore carries two or three per cent. of uranium. Some idea can be had of the microscopic trace of radium in the original ore from the fact that ten tons of the uranium has to be handled to get between 20 or 30 milligrams of radium.

There are no very exact statistics of radium available, but the whole quantity in the world, according to the geological survey, is probably not over two or three ounces. As to the value, it is largely nominal like that of the biggest diamonds. It is worth whatever the holders can get for it.

Seeing Much Gold Makes Employes Ill

FEAR of the spread of the white plague and typhoid fever were relegated to the dusty past the other day, when it became known that a new ailment had seized upon the woman clerks of the treasury. So swift has been the disease in its progress that it has been necessary to establish an emergency room in the basement of the treasury, and an average of five cases a day are treated.

Currencitis is the name of the new enemy that has spread terror among the fair clerks. Its symptoms are an acute attack of dizziness, sharp pains in the neck, followed by a severe headache. So far, the medical profession of the District has been unable to determine whether the ailment is conveyed by germs.

Miss Ivy Eichelberger, who is in charge of the new emergency room, has made a study of the cases brought under her observation. Miss Eichelberger was surprised to see the great number of young women clerks who would stumble into her room, gasp for a bottle of smelling salts and then fling themselves upon a couch, complaining of racking headaches, necks stiff as boards, and a dizzy sensation.

After a brief treatment, they would recover and go back to their desks. It was then that Miss Eichelberger suggested to Chief Clerk Wilmoth the installation of an emergency room, patterned after wards in hospitals, with white enameled cots, nurses' costumes for the matrons, and a full equipment of medicines.

Then the attention of Miss Eichelberger was turned toward the disease itself. Test tubes were purchased, with her own funds; a microscope was procured, and the midnight oil consumed. And this is what was revealed—that currencitis was caused by the glare of the piles of shimmering gold pieces and dazzling silver present in the treasury.

Ancient Mummy for National Museum

QUARTERS for the famous African collection of Theodore Roosevelt are to be provided in the National museum at Washington, and work is proceeding at a lively rate. The National museum, together with the Smithsonian institution, will, in a few years, contain the most interesting collection in the world, not excepting that of the famous British museum in London.

Side by side with the regular progress in this field comes the report of an ancient mummy found in a newly opened tomb at Abydos in Egypt; and no sooner had the telegraph news reached Washington than a syndicate was formed to bring it on for exhibition in this country, reminding us of the day when Barnum alone was ready to expend money and effort to secure such curiosities, and discovered "the petrified giant man." Now there is an association of scientists and experts organized to secure these valuable ancient relics for the museum at Washington and those of other large American cities.

The latest mummy is from a tomb of the Twelfth Dynasty, which reaches back to the time of Shishak, who sacked Jerusalem in the time of Rehoboam. The skeleton of a woman is revealed with a necklace of beads about her throat and three scarabs, one of them a superb amethyst, on her left hand. The most remarkable thing is that the head retained its long, black hair, under which were ornaments of every description, including a nose-ring such as is still worn by the princess in British India.

In the land of the Pharaohs, the tombs and funereal pomp of mummies give the story of a past civilization such as even the pyramids, the Sphinx and the tablets of countless pylons and statues have failed to preserve.

Something "Dropped"; It Was a Hammer

AN ironworker, swinging between earth and sky from a steel beam on the top of the Munsey building, near Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue, dropped a heavy riveting hammer shortly after noon the other day, and then had almost an attack of heart failure when he realized what that hammer would do if it hit some one on the street below.

Just as the ironworker dropped the implement, Judge J. A. C. Groner of Norfolk, president of the Benning Sand and Gravel company, was walking in front of the building, talking to his old friend, Judge R. A. Wade of San Francisco. They were stepping briskly along, about a foot and a half apart. Mr. Groner was saying:

"And let me tell you, judge, that when that Chicago convention gets going you're going to hear something drop."

B-i-i-ff!

The heavy riveting hammer shot downward so suddenly it appeared to be a solid shaft of black, so rapid was its flight. Just as the last word was out of Mr. Groner's mouth the hammer smacked against the sidewalk. It sounded like a rifle shot, and the two men didn't have a chance to dodge an inch.

The hammer, however, bounded high in the air and leaped into the street, where it broke in two.

A few minutes later a scared ironworker appeared at the front door of the Munsey building.

"You didn't see anything of a hammer, did you?" he asked.

Critics.

Agnes—"You saw Belle's wedding gifts; how was her silver marked?"
Ethel—"From the looks of it, I should say most of it was marked down."

THE SUNBEAM.

W. G. HUNT, Publisher.

SUNBEAM. - - - MINN

ELECTRICITY AS CURATIVE.

Electricity was formerly the mystic remedy of the quack, but since electrical apparatus has become so essential for X-ray work, more serious attention has been given by regular physicians to the physiological effects of this powerful agent. Among the notable results has been an electrical method of arresting the degeneration of the arteries so common in premature old age. A new announcement is that of Dr. Labordie, a French medical man, who gives details of a method of treating sciatica by ionization with sodium hyposulphite, and shows what appears to be an effective cure for a painful disease. The effects are attributed in this treatment to sulphur oxide from electrolytic decomposition instead of the direct action of the electric current itself. A thick layer of absorbent tissue saturated with a 5 per cent solution of the sodium hyposulphite was covered over a piece of tin as the negative electrode, which was placed on the rear of the thigh over the sciatic nerve. The positive pole, wet with water, was put in contact with the calf of the leg. The patient had been unable to use his legs for ten months, but after ten sittings of forty minutes he could walk a mile and recovery seems to have been complete.

Experiments at the Pasteur Institute in Paris have demonstrated that chickens can thrive without bacteria, though most vertebrates seem to require them. The experiments were made by Doctor Cohendy at the suggestion of Professor Metchnikoff. Doctor Cohendy used a sterilized incubator. He introduced three eggs which were about hatching. He sterilized them on the outside, the air apparatus was carefully filtered and all the food was perfectly sterilized. Several sets of chickens raised in this way were found after six weeks to be too big for the incubator and were taken out and compared with chickens which had been raised in the ordinary way. The tests showed that the incubator chickens were absolutely free of microbes, though after some hours of unsterilized life their digestive tubes contained thousands of them.

Physicians tell us that 65 per cent of the children in the public schools of Boston are physically defective, says the Boston Globe. The trained nurses who attend the pupils have performed good service in correcting temporary defects. Now it is proposed seriously to not only feed the hungry, but to furnish medicated baths for children suffering from skin troubles. It is also urged that more attention should be paid to school clinics by teachers and parents co-operating for that purpose. A wise medical suggestion is made that there should be less competitive work in the schools and that the pupils should be relieved of some studies, home lessons abolished and children promoted or graduated with more regard to their actual mental capacity as shown by their daily efforts.

As the output of real gold was $500,000,000 in 1911, it seems strange that some men should care to buy the imitation article in bricks, says the Chicago News. But the trouble is that if these men get $25,000 worth of real gold they have to put up $25,000 for it; while the alleged $25,000 of gold bricks can be had for a beggarly $500.

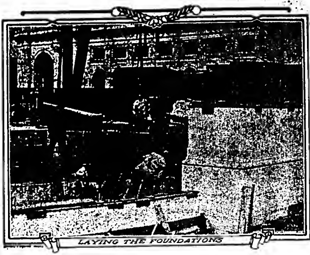
Nine people were killed in January and nearly forty maimed by automobiles in the streets of New York. In every city of any size a toll of either life or limb is demanded as the price of carelessness or speed mania on the part of motor car drivers. It is time that strict laws guarded the right of way of the pedestrian and put the burden of care on the vehicle. It is a hardship not to be tolerated in these times of law, order and equal rights that the pleasure of a few should exact this toll from the many.

Painting and sculpture are conducive to long life. Yet music kills men young. Schubert, with all his wealth of song, died at 31; Mozart, who danced and laughed his melodies into being, died at 35, the same age as Bellini; Bizet, the composer of "Carmen," died, like Purcell, at 37; Mendelssohn survived to 38; Chopin, who loved life so well, had done with it at 39, while Weber expired at the age of 40 and Schuman at 46. But Verdi lived and flourished as a nonagenarian.

Russia threatens to retaliate by ceasing to purchase American-made sewing machines. This leaves us helpless. We can't get even by refusing to consume Russian caviar, because our entire supply comes from Sandusky, Ohio.

A Boston social scientist wants women to do the proposing. This will be a terrible strain on the remnant of male chivalry which is left in these prosaic times.

PREPARING TO HONOR COLUMBUS



WORKMEN are very busy in Washington erecting the statue of Columbus in front of the Union station. The monument is to be unveiled on June 8 with considerable ceremony.

PRESIDENT IS HIT

SECRETARY STIMSON ALSO CRITICIZED BY COMMITTEE IN AINSWORTH CASE.

REPORT IS SENSATIONAL

Says That Accusations Against the General Were Based Upon Prejudice; That His Advocacy of 5-Year Enlistment Plan Was the Cause.

Washington.—The house committee on military affairs came to the defense of former Adjt. Gen. Fred C. Ainsworth in a report which impugns the motives of the president of the United States, challenges the veracity of Secretary Stimson and discredits the ability and experience of Gen. Leonard Wood, chief of staff, and charges that a conspiracy between Stimson and Wood forced Ainsworth out of office at a time when his services were most needed by his country.

Charging that the accusations against General Ainsworth had been bolstered up to secure his removal and that the language used by the officer in his communications had been tortured, misrepresented or suppressed by Secretary Stimson, the report continued:

"Your committee, being familiar with all the different phases of the legislative features in the army appropriation bill can very readily account for this violent assault on General Ainsworth. On May 17, 1911, in response to a summons from this committee, and not at his own suggestion General Ainsworth appeared before this committee for a hearing on the bill then pending to fix the term of enlistment in the army at five years. He expressed himself frankly and freely in favor of the measure and his reasons for favoring the bill were so cogent, so convincing and so clearly stated as to carry conviction of their soundness to the mind of many if not to those of most of the members of the committee.

"Clearly it was to the interests of those opposing these measures to discredit General Ainsworth and his views. It was known that the army appropriation bill would come to a vote on February 15, 1912. On that date the letter of the secretary of war of February 14, relieving General Ainsworth from the duties of his office was served upon him.

SPRECKELS WILL FIGHT ENDS

Litigation by Sons and Heirs Over Sugar Magnate's Millions Ended by Court.

San Francisco.—Years of litigation over the millions left by the late Claus Spreckels, sugar magnate, in which two sons, Claus A. and Rudolph Spreckels were arrayed against his other sons, John D. and Adolph B. Spreckels, ended here when the supreme court sustained the validity of the elder Spreckels' will.

Five million dollars was involved in the contest. Claus Spreckels left an estate of $10,000,000. Half of this went to the widow and the other half was willed to Claus A. and Rudolph Spreckels and Mrs. Emma C. Ferris, his daughter, in equal one-thirds.

The decision of the supreme court reverses Coffey's decision and leaves John D. and Adolph B. Spreckels with no share in the $5,000,000 under contest. They inherit only what their father gave them before his death.

Two Die in Auto Accident.

Philadelphia.—John Lewis Hoffman and Arthur L. Ryerson, Yale students, were killed in an automobile accident while speeding. The young men were home for the Easter holidays. Ryerson was the guest of Hoffman.

Man Rescued From Lake Ice Floe.

St. Joseph, Mich.—Two boys and the life saving crew of this city, who were carried out into the lake in an ice field, were rescued by a relief expedition, after a hard battle with the floes in Lake Michigan.

Stores Would Pay Wiley $12,000.

New York.—A New York department store owner, who also controls a chain of stores in other cities, has offered Dr. Harvey Wiley a position as pure food expert for the stores at a salary of $12,000 a year.

AMERICAN IS SLAIN

U. S. CITIZEN SHOT TO DEATH DESPITE PROTESTS.

Insurrectos Ignore Plea in Man's Behalf From Washington—Killed Under "Law of Flight."

El Paso, Tex.—Among the 184 Americans and other foreign refugees who returned from the battle-swept districts around Parral was an American newspaper man, who brought news of the execution of Thomas Fountain of Las Cruces, N. M., by the rebels, after American residents had ineffectually sought a modification of his sentence and after what is believed to have been an appeal for his life from Washington had been made.

American Consul Letcher at Chihuahua sent to General Salazar what is believed to have been an appeal from Washington. In delivering the missive to a messenger the consul remarked: "This is the last resort."

In Mexico they have recourse to what is known as the "law of flight," under which a prisoner who has been condemned, but where there exists a doubt as to the legality of the sentence, is allowed his freedom within certain limits.

The prisoner knows his fate is sealed. Even if he does not walk a step the fatal bullet will come from some unexpected quarter and the report will be made that he was shot while "in flight." It was thus in Fountain's case. He told the correspondent that there was no hope, but strolled about the streets waiting for death.

When his body was brought in it contained four bullet wounds, made by shots fired from behind.

TWO RECEIVERS ARE NAMED

D. W. Call and Otto H. Falk to Take Over Allis-Chalmers Company's Affairs.

Milwaukee.—Receivers have been appointed for the Allis-Chalmers company by Judge A. L. Sanborn of the United States district court. The receivers are D. W. Call, president of the company, and Gen. Otto H. Falk of this city, a prominent manufacturer and president of the Merchants and Manufacturers' association.

The appointments were made on the application of the First National and the Wisconsin National banks of this city, both creditors of the company, and W. W. Nichols of New York, a bondholder and stockholder.

PLAN SHAFT FOR BJORNSON

Norwegians of Minneapolis Honor Poet in 1914—Will Give Norway $1,000,000.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Norwegian residents of Minneapolis have formed an organization to erect a $10,000 monument to the memory of Bjornstjerne Bjornson, the poet, during the centennial celebration of Norway's freedom in this city, May 17, 1914. A fund of $1,000,000 also is being raised by the Norwegians of America to be presented to Norway at the time of the celebration, with a four-volume history of Norwegians in the United States.

REFUSE TO HOLD STEEL MEN

Federal Grand Jury Fail to Find Anyone Guilty of Destruction of Papers.

Washington.—The federal grand jury in New York, which investigated the alleged destruction of certain papers desired by the government in its anti-trust suit against the United States Steel corporation, failed to find anyone guilty of violation of law, it was learned at the department of justice.

Investigate Ship Trust.

Washington.—Just before adjournment the house voted $25,000 for the expenses of the investigation of the shipping trust and $4,000 additional to wind up the investigation of the steel trust by the Stanley committee.

Rebels Try to Blast S. P. Span.

Del Rio, Tex.—A band of Mexican revolutionists is reported to have crossed the Rio Grande to American soil eight miles west of here and to be attempting to blow up the Southern Pacific railroad bridge there.

TAFT MEN WIN OUT

RIOT IN MICHIGAN CONVENTION —MILITIA CALLED TO KEEP ORDER.

ROOSEVELT SUPPORTERS BOLT

President Gets Kentucky Delegation—New York Democrats Select 90 Delegates to Baltimore Convention—Harmony Keynote of Big Meeting.

Bay City, Mich.—The Roosevelt forces, after a riot on the floor, entrance to which was guarded by a company of the state militia, beaten in their attempt to control the preliminary organization and to seat their delegates, withdrew from the Republican state convention here, held a convention and named six delegates at large to the national convention. Roosevelt leaders announced that they will carry the question of the disputed delegates to the national body.

Many Roosevelt men, who entered the convention hall through transoms, were ejected by the police and private detectives, and when one Roosevelt supporter, W. D. Gordon of Midland, reached the platform and attempted to make a speech, he was thrown to the floor by J. F. Cremer, a Taft man.

The police and militia kept back a hundred men who attempted to take part in the physical encounter that resulted, while former Senator Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana was swept back from his seat.

After waiting three hours to make a speech, Mr. Beveridge announced that he would decline to do so, as two conventions were being held. He took the position that he should not decide the legality of either body.

The opening act in the turbulent meeting took place under guard of members of Company B of the Michigan National Guard, which had been called out after all-night conferences failed to develop any sign of peace.

While the militia held the front entrance to the armory against a crowd of 1,800 delegates and contested delegates, members of the state central committee, headed by Acting Chairman Robert H. Shields of Houghton, were admitted through a side entrance.

While the Taft forces held the armory in this manner, Roosevelt leaders conferred at a downtown hotel and prepared to go to the convention and seat their temporary chairman, former Secretary of the Navy Truman Newberry of Detroit.

When the Taft men were seen to be in absolute control, the Roosevelt forces went to another hall and held their own convention. They named the following delegates at large to the national convention: Gov. Chase S. Osborn, Charles Nichols, Detroit; Sybrant Wesselius, Grand Rapids; H. F. Boughey, Traverse City; Theodore Joslyn, Adrian; W. D. Gordon, Midland.

The Taft delegation is headed by John D. McKay of Detroit. The other five are Capt. W. J. Richards, Crystal Falls; George P. Morley of Saginaw; Fred A. Diggles, Cadillac; Eugene Fifield, Bay City, and William Judson, Grand Rapids.

Louisville, Ky.—With the election of four delegates at large, alternates and the electors, the state Republican convention has adjourned without the threatened bolt on the part of the Roosevelt faction, and President Taft will have 23 instructed votes in the national convention at Chicago, while three will support the former president. The four delegates at large are: United States Senator William O. Bradley, Judge James G. Breathitt, Hopkinsville; W. D. Cochran, Maysville, and J. Edward Wood, a negro preacher from Danville.

New York.—On a strong platform, which also has the merit of brevity, New York's 90 delegates to the Baltimore convention were selected by the Democratic state convention at Terrace Garden in record time and amid the most marked conditions of all around harmony.

Following are the delegates at large, or "big four," who will represent the New York Democracy at the national conclave:

Delegates—United States Senator O'Gorman, Governor Dix, Alton Brooks Parker and Charles Francis Murphy.

TRUNK CONCERN IS BANKRUPT

Romadka Brothers Company Falls for $200,000—Wife's Disgrace is Back of Trouble.

Milwaukee.—The Romadka Brothers company, a trunk manufacturing concern, was thrown into involuntary bankruptcy upon the claims of three New York creditors. Back of the financial trouble is the scandal which arose when Evelyn, then wife of C. J. Romadka, one of the brothers, was arrested some years ago in Chicago as an accomplice in crime of a negro.

Claims are known to total about $200,000 and the firm has assets estimated at about $100,000 in addition to real estate.

Flee Mexican Rail Strike.

Washington.—Anticipating a tie-up on the entire railway system in Mexico in a few days, Americans are leaving Mexico City in large numbers, according to advices to the state department. The strike on the National railway is set for next Monday, April 15.

Shot by Mistake; May Die.

Los Angeles, Cal.—When running to assist his brother, who had been a victim of hold-up men, T. E. Yandis was mistaken for a robber here and shot, perhaps fatally, by an officer.

71 LIVES ARE MENACED

THIRTY PASSENGERS SAVED FROM BURNING SHIP.

Blaze is Extinguished After a Hard Fight—S. O. S. Signals Make the Rescue Possible.

Ditch Plain Life Saving Station, L. I.—The rescue of a ship in peril at sea was again due to the wireless, when the 30 passengers of the coast-wise steamer Ontario, plying between Baltimore and Boston, were taken off the craft after a fire had broken out in the hold.

The ship ran aground off Montauk Point and the passengers taken to New London by the tug Tosco, summoned by wireless. The crew, 41 men, stayed with the captain on the boat, and after a hard fight succeeded in extinguishing the blaze.

The fire broke out during the night and became so threatening that Captain Bond ordered the wireless operator to send S. O. S. distress signals. An hour later he turned back upon his course and drove the vessel full speed ahead for the reefs off Montauk Point.

The life savers, reinforced by a crew from the Hether Plain station, two miles away, transferred the passengers in small boats to a tug and stood off in readiness to take the crew ashore if need be. The passengers were transferred in the Ontario's lifeboats.

The revenue cutters Mohawk and Seneca picked up the wireless call at New York and the cutter Acushnet at Boston hurried to the scene. They were able to give little assistance, however.

GEN. FRED D. GRANT DEAD

Commander of the Department of the East Expires Very Suddenly in New York City.

New York.—Maj. Gen. Frederick Dent Grant, U. S. A., commander of the department of the east and eldest son of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, died very suddenly at the Hotel Buckingham here.

Gen. Frederick D. Grant.

General Grant was granted a two months' leave of absence from duty a few weeks ago and went to the winter home of his sister, Mrs. Potter Palmer, near Sarasota, Fla.

It was not generally known until news of his death that he had returned to New York.

CAIRO IS ALMOST NORMAL

River Falling and Business in Illinois City Has Again Been Resumed.

Cairo, Ill.—The river marked 53.8 feet on the gauge here and is falling. The lid is off and business has been resumed in Cairo.

Adjt. Gen. Frank S. Dickson went to see what was needed in way of supplies for flood refugees and will order them more sent by the state. The government steamer Nokomis passed Cairo point loaded with supplies for the flood sufferers at Columbus, Hickman and other points down the river. The boat had on board several thousand dollars' worth of provisions donated by the citizens of St. Louis, besides a supply from the government, including many tents and blankets.

None of the railroads will be able to resume business into Cairo before the end of the week.

BUTTE MONT., IS FIRE SWEPT

Six Business Blocks and Thirty Houses Are Destroyed—Loss Estimated at $1,250,000.

Butte, Mont.—A fire starting in the warehouse section of this city, spread into the business district and did damage estimated at $1,250,000. The flames, fanned by a high wind, were beyond control for several hours. Help was summoned from surrounding towns. Six business blocks and thirty houses were destroyed.

Rock Island Mayor Wins.

Rock Island, Ill.—Henry McCaskrin, whose public address was followed by the recent riots in which two men were killed, and which resulted in the state troops being brought here, was nominated by the Republicans for state's attorney.

Canadian Coal for England.

Ottawa, Ont.—The steamer Mairfield has left Cape Breton for England with 5,000 tons of coal, the first cargo of Canadian coal ever sent from Cape Breton to England.

Write For This
Free Book—Shows
20 Beautiful Modern Rooms—

tells how you can get the very latest effects on your walls.

Contains a sample of the Color Plans our artists will furnish you, FREE, for any rooms you wish to decorate.

Walls and how to decorate them

Alabastine Book

Alabastine

The Beautiful Wall Tint

comes in 16 exquisite tints. More artistic than wall paper or paint at a fraction of the cost. Kalsomine colors are harsh and common beside the soft-hued water color tints of Alabastine. Absolutely sanitary—easiest and quickest to use, goes furthest and will not chip, peel, or rub off.

Doesn't need an expert to put on. Easy directions in every package. Full 5 lb. Pkg., white, 50c; regular tints, 55c.

Alabastine Company

54 Grandville Road, Grand Rapids, Mich.
New York City, Desk 4, 105 Water Street

DON'T FAIL to WRITE FOR THE FREE BOOK

A man is always willing to pay what he owes—if it is a grudge.

Since it is worth while to be well, take Garfield Tea, Nature's Medicine.

The Easiest Answer.

Teacher—Thirty eggs at 55 cents a dozen is what?

Pupil—It's—it's outrageous, sir.—Boston Evening Transcript.

Life Sentence.

The marquis of Queensberry, apropos of the long sentence of Foulke E. Brandt, said at a dinner in New York:

"It reminds me of an incident in London. A certain peer drove in a taxicab to Westminster and, when he got out, gave the driver a very small tip.

"The driver mistook him for a member of the house of commons and sneered:

"'I hope you get turned out next election and don't never get in again!'

"'Don't worry, my friend,' said the peer, as he set off for the house of lords. 'Don't worry—I'm in for life.'"

A Believer.

Gifford Pinchot, at his brother's house, in Park avenue, New York, listened quizzically to a political story that was being submitted to him for verification by a political reporter.

When the reporter finished his narrative Mr. Pinchot laughed and said:

"I'll reply to that as the old Italian peasant replied to the statement that his fellow-countryman loved birds too well ever to eat them:

"'Well, I don't mind believing that myself,' the old man said, 'but there's a good many who wouldn't.'"

Another Use for Medicine.

A Chicago family which employs as its butler an old-fashioned negro was constantly annoyed by the doorbell of the house getting out of order. On several occasions an electrician, who used some sort of white powder in his work, had been called in to fix the bell.

One evening when there were guests at dinner, one of them complained of a sore throat. The mistress of the house turned to the butler and said:

"Sam, when dinner is over, go to the drug store and get a small bottle of Dobell's solution."

"Before de Lawd!" exclaimed the negro in genuine distress. "Is dat do' bell out of ordeh ag'in?"—Popular Magazine.

COFFEE HURTS
One In Three.

It is difficult to make people believe that coffee is a poison to at least one person out of every three, but people are slowly finding it out, although thousands of them suffer terribly before they discover the fact.

A New York hotel man says: "Each time after drinking coffee I became restless, nervous and excited, so that I was unable to sit five minutes in one place, was also inclined to vomit and suffer from loss of sleep, which got worse and worse.

"A lady said that perhaps coffee was the cause of my trouble, and suggested that I try Postum. I laughed at the thought that coffee hurt me, but she insisted so hard that I finally had some Postum made. I have been using it in place of coffee ever since, for I noticed that all my former nervousness and irritation disappeared. I began to sleep perfectly, and the Postum tasted as good or better than the old coffee, so what was the use of sticking to a beverage that was injuring me?

"One day on an excursion up the country I remarked to a young lady friend on her greatly improved appearance. She explained that some time before she had quit using coffee and taken to Postum. She had gained a number of pounds and her former palpitation of the heart, humming in the ears, trembling of the hands and legs and other disagreeable feelings had disappeared. She recommended me to quit coffee and take Postum and was very much surprised to find that I had already made the change.

"She said her brother had also received great benefits from leaving off coffee and taking on Postum." "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

125,000 AMERICANS GO TO CANADA IN 1911.

THE YEAR 1912 WILL SHOW A GREAT INCREASE.

In a report of the House Committee (Washington) appears the following:

"Canada offers a three-year homestead upon good land, easily reclaimed and cultivated, with six months' leave of absence each year and most lenient regulations."

All of which is true and it is now the part of the careful reader to consider the opportunities that exist in Western Canada which, in addition to the above, are attractive features. The evidence of these is found in the letters contributed by some of the settlers. For instance: A former Minnesotan, writing from Warner, Southern Alberta, speaks of that district, but what he says, applies generally to all of Southern Alberta. He says:

"I have seen six crops, four of them were first class, one of them a very good crop, and the other a poor crop. Government statistics for the last fifteen years show that this country has averaged about fifteen or sixteen inches of moisture. In 1910 there was only seven inches, and in 1911 twenty-two inches. The 1909 crop was about as good as I have seen in this country and we had about twelve inches of moisture, so that I am thoroughly convinced that with normal conditions, that is, from twelve to fifteen inches of moisture, and with the natural increase of population and immigration, that Southern Alberta will be one of the very best mixed farming districts in the world. We have good soil, good water, and a good climate, and altogether just as desirable a country to live in as Dakota, Minnesota, Iowa, or Wisconsin."

Hundreds of letters are on file from former American settlers, which give good reasons why the Western Canada lands are being settled so rapidly. Full particulars can be had of any Canadian Government Agent, who will furnish literature and give low rate certificates. Excursions are being run daily.

Chance for Him.

Gerald—People can get used to anything.

Geraldine—Then why not cheer up?

To keep artificial teeth and bridgework antiseptically clean and free from odors and disease germs, Paxtine Antiseptic is unequaled. At druggists, 25c a box or sent postpaid on receipt of price by The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass.

Ambition is a good thing, but don't fly higher than you can roost.

WHAT WILL CURE MY BACK?

Common sense will do more to cure backache than anything else. 'Twill tell you whether the kidneys are sore, swollen and aching. It will tell you in that case that there is no use trying to cure it with a plaster. If the passages are scant or too frequent, proof that there is kidney trouble is complete. Then common sense will tell you to use Doan's Kidney Pills, the best recommended special kidney remedy.

A TYPICAL CASE—

James C. Hardin, Weatherford, Tex., says: "My feet and limbs became numb and I had terrible pains through my back. Kidney secretions caused untold annoyance and I began to think there was no hope for me. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me and I have not had the slightest trouble since."

"Every Picture Tells a Story."

AT ALL DEALERS 50c. a Box

DOAN'S Kidney Pills

PATENTS START FACTORIES. Send for free book how to get Patents. Patent secured or fee returned. Sues & Company, 400 11th St., Washington, D.C.

Pettit's Eye Salve TONIC FOR EYES

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 16–1912.

REAL ESTATE

FOR SALE—40 A. IN KNOX CO., ILL.; near Williamsfield; 5 r. h., barn, outbldgs., 2,000 bearing fruit trees, etc. HILL, Box 818, Chicago.

120 A. IN ANOKA CO., MINN.; NEAR MINNEapolis; 60 a. cult.; 8 r. h., outbldgs., orch., stock, machy., etc. Will sac. BOYD, Box 818, Chicago.

WESTERN CANADA FARM LANDS for $12-$18 per acre in the finest mixed farming district in Canadian West. Close to Prince Albert, Sask., splendid market point. Free Government homesteads also within 25 miles of City, crops excellent, settlement coming in fast. For free literature and maps, write Julius S. Woodward, Sec. Board of Trade, Dept. L, Prince Albert, Sask.

640 ACRES adjoining city limits in Duluth for sale on easy terms for only $20 per acre. Only short distance from land selling at $18 to $100 per acre. Duluth and Superior have a combined population of 118,000 and offer an unsurpassed market. Hundreds of acres for sale in tracts ranging in size from five acres to a section. Little & Nolte Company, Duluth, Minnesota. (Established 1885.)

The Panama Canal

Will soon be open. Farm lands on Puget Sound and Western Washington, with its delightful climate, rich soil, and proximity to Seattle markets will be money makers. 208 acres level, black soil. Big house, granary, two barns, R. F. D., church, school, etc. Good roads; 3 miles to railroad station. Place stocked complete, including machinery, horses, hogs and 19 Jersey Cows. A complete dairy and stock ranch. Price $27,000. Half cash, balance at 6%. An 80 acre farm with 70 acres in crop and 10 acres timbered pasture. 5 room house, 6 good barns, 2 chicken houses, granary, etc. On fine road, ¾ mile from town. One-third crop to buyer. $6,800, with $2,000 cash. Write us for full information.

BANK REFERENCES

A. B. NEWELL

120 SPRING STREET, SEATTLE, WASHINGTON

BURNING DAYLIGHT

By JACK LONDON

AUTHOR OF "THE CALL OF THE WILD," "WHITE FANG," "MARTIN EDEN," ETC.

(Copyright, 1910, by the New York Herald Company.)
(Copyright, 1910, by the MacMillan Company.)

SYNOPSIS.

Elam Harnish, known all through Alaska as "Burning Daylight," celebrates his 30th birthday with a crowd of miners at the Circle City Tivoli. The dance leads to heavy gambling, in which over $100,000 is staked. Harnish loses his money and his mine but wins the mail contract. He starts on his mail trip with dogs and sledge, telling his friends that he will be in the big Yukon gold strike at the start. Burning Daylight makes a sensationally rapid run across country with the mail, appears at the Tivoli and is now ready to join his friends in a dash to the new gold fields. Deciding that gold will be found in the up-river district Harnish buys two tons of flour, which he declares will be worth its weight in gold, but when he arrives with his flour he finds the big flat desolate. A comrade discovers gold and Daylight reaps a rich harvest. He goes to Dawson, becomes the most prominent figure in the Klondike and defeats a combination of capitalists in a vast mining deal. He returns to civilization, and, amid the bewildering complications of high finance, Daylight finds that he has been led to invest his eleven millions in a manipulated scheme. He goes to New York, and confronting his disloyal partners with a revolver, he threatens to kill them if his money is not returned. They are cowed, return their stealings and Harnish goes back to San Francisco where he meets his fate in Dede Mason, a pretty stenographer. He makes large investments and gets into the political ring. For a rest he goes to the country. Daylight gets deeper into high finance in San Francisco, but often the longing for the simple life nearly overcomes him.

CHAPTER XIII.

One Sunday, late in the afternoon, found Daylight across the bay in the Piedmont hills of Oakland. As usual, he was in a big motor car, though not his own, the guest of Swiftwater Bill, Luck's own darling, who had come down to speed the clean-up of the seventh fortune wrung from the frozen Arctic gravel. It was a merry party, and they had made a merry day of it, circling the bay from San Francisco around by San Jose and up to Oakland, having been thrice arrested for speeding, the third time, however, on the Haywards stretch, running away with their captor. Fearing that a telephone message to arrest them had been flashed ahead, they had turned into the back-road through the hills, and now, rushing in upon Oakland by a new route, were boisterously discussing what disposition they should make of the constable.

"We'll come out at Blair Park in ten minutes," one of the men announced. "Look here, Swiftwater, there's a cross-road right ahead, with lots of gates, but it'll take us back-country into Berkeley. Then we can come back into Oakland from the other side, sneak across on the ferry, and send the machine back around tonight with the chauffeur."

But Swiftwater Bill failed to see why he should not go into Oakland by way of Blair Park, and so decided.

The next moment, flying around a bend, the back-road they were not going to take appeared. Inside the gate, leaning out from her saddle and just closing it, was a young woman on a chestnut sorrel. With his first glimpse, Daylight felt there was something strangely familiar about her. The next moment, straightening up in the saddle with a movement he could not fail to identify, she put the horse into a gallop, riding away with her back toward them. It was Dede Mason—he remembered what Morrison had told him about her keeping a riding horse, and he was glad she had not seen him in this riotous company. Intervening trees at that moment shut her from view, and Swiftwater Bill plunged into the problem of disposing of their constable, while Daylight, leaning back with closed eyes, was still seeing Dede Mason gallop off down the country road.

On Monday morning, coming in for dictation, he looked at her with new interest, though he gave no sign of it; and the stereotyped business passed off in the stereotyped way. But the following Sunday found him on a horse himself, across the bay and riding through the Piedmont hills. He made a long day of it, but no glimpse did he catch of Dede Mason, though he even took the back-road of many gates and rode on into Berkeley. It had been a fruitless day, so far as she was concerned; and yet not entirely fruitless, for he had enjoyed the open air and the horse under him to such purpose that, on Monday, his instructions were out to the dealers to look for the best chestnut sorrel that money could buy. At odd times during the week he examined numbers of chestnut sorrels, tried several and was unsatisfied. It was not till Saturday that he came upon Bob. Daylight knew him for what he wanted the moment he laid eyes on him. A large horse for a riding animal, he was none too large for a big man like Daylight. In splendid condition, Bob's coat in the sunlight was a flame of fire, his arched neck a jewelled conflagration.

Daylight examined the mane and found it finer than any horse's hair he had ever seen. Also, its color was unusual in that it was almost auburn. While he ran his fingers through it, Bob turned his head and playfully nuzzled Daylight's shoulder.

"Saddle him up, and I'll try him," he told the dealer. "I wonder if he's used to spurs. No English saddle, mind. Give me a good Mexican and a curb bit—not too severe, seeing as he likes to rear."

Daylight superintended the preparations, adjusting the curb strap and the stirrup length, and doing the cinching. He shook his head at the martingale, but yielded to the dealer's advice to allow it to go on. And Bob, beyond spirited restlessness and a few playful attempts, gave no trouble. Nor in the hour's riding that followed, save for some permissible curveting and prancing, did he misbehave. Daylight was delighted; the purchase was immediately made; and Bob, with riding gear and personal equipment, was dispatched across the bay forthwith to take up his quarters in the stables of the Oakland Riding Academy.

The next day being Sunday, Daylight was away early, crossing on the ferry and taking with him Wolf, the leader of his sled team, the one dog which he had selected to bring with him when he left Alaska. Quest as he would through the Piedmont hills and along the many-gated back-road to Berkeley, Daylight saw nothing of Dede Mason and her chestnut sorrel. But he had little time for disappointment, for his own chestnut kept him busy. At the end of half an hour of goodness Daylight, lured into confidence, was riding along at a walk and rolling a cigarette, with slack knees and relaxed seat, the reins lying on the animal's neck. Bob whirled abruptly and with lightning swiftness, pivoting on his hind legs, his fore legs just lifted clear of the ground. Daylight kept his seat, but, beyond a futile rein across the neck, did nothing to prevent the evolution.

"Well, Bob," he addressed the animal, at the same time wiping the sweat from his own eyes, "I'm free to confess that you're sure the blamedest all-fired quickest creature I ever saw. I guess the way to fix you is to keep the spur just a-touching—ah! you brute!"

For, the moment the spur touched him, his left hind leg had reached forward in a kick that struck the stirrup a smart blow. Several times, out of curiosity, Daylight attempted the spur, and each time Bob's hoof landed the stirrup. Then Daylight, following the horse's example of the unexpected, suddenly drove both spurs into him and reached him underneath with the quirt.

"You ain't never had a real licking before," he muttered, as Bob, thus rudely jerked out of the circle of his own impish mental processes, shot ahead.

Half a dozen times spurs and quirt bit into him, and then Daylight settled down to enjoy the magnificent gallop. No longer punished, at the end of a half mile Bob eased down into a fast canter. Wolf, toiling the rear, was catching up, and everything was going nicely. And when, at last, Daylight decided that the horse had had enough, he turned him around abruptly and put him into a gentle canter on the forward track. After a time, he reined in to a stop to see if he were breathing painfully. Standing for a minute, Bob turned his head and nuzzled his rider's stirrup in a roguish, impatient way, as much as to intimate that it was time they were going on.

"Well, I'll be plumb gosh darned!" was Daylight's comment. "No ill-will, no grudge, no nothing—and after that lambasting! You're sure a hummer, Bob."

He had taken a liking to the animal, and repented not of his bargain. He realized that Bob was not vicious nor mean, the trouble being that he was bursting with high spirits and was endowed with more than the average horse's intelligence. It was the spirits and the intelligence, combined with inordinate roguishness, that made him what he was. What was required to control him was a strong hand, with tempered sternness and yet with the requisite touch of brutal dominance.

Throughout the week Daylight found himself almost as much interested in Bob as in Dede; and, not being in the thick of any big deals, he was probably more interested in both of them than in the business game. Bob's trick of whirling was of special moment to him. How to overcome it—that was the thing. Suppose he did meet with Dede out in the hills; and suppose by some lucky stroke of fate, he should manage to be riding alongside of her; then that whirl of Bob's would be most disconcerting and embarrassing. He was not particularly anxious for her to see him thrown forward on Bob's neck. On the other hand, suddenly to leave her and go dashing down the back-track, plying quirt and spurs, wouldn't do, either. What was wanted was a method wherewith to prevent that lightning whirl. He must stop the animal before it got around. The reins would not do this. Neither would the spurs. Remained the quirt. But how to accomplish it? Bob always whirled to the right. Very well. He would double the quirt in his hand, and, the instant of the whirl, that double quirt would rap Bob on the nose. The horse didn't live, after it once learned the lesson, that would whirl in the face of the doubled quirt.

It Was Dede.

More keenly than ever, during that week in the office, did Daylight realize that he had no social, nor even human contacts with Dede. The situation was such that he could not ask her the simple question whether or not she was going riding next Sunday. Thus he found another card in the hand the mad god had dealt him. How important that card was to become he did not dream, yet he decided that it was a pretty good card.

Sunday came, and Bob, out in the Piedmont hills, behaved like an angel. His goodness at times was of the spirited, prancing order, but otherwise he was a lamb. But no Dede did Daylight encounter. He vainly circled about among the hill roads, and in the afternoon took the steep grade over the divide of the second range and dropped into Maraga Valley. Just after passing the foot of the descent, he heard the hoof beats of a cantering horse. It was from ahead and coming toward him. What if it were Dede? He turned Bob around and started to return at a walk. The canter came nearer, but he faced straight ahead until he heard the horse behind check to a walk. Then he glanced over his shoulder. It was Dede. The recognition was quick, and, with her, accompanied by surprise. What more natural thing than that, partly turning his horse, he should wait till she caught up with him; and that, when abreast, they should continue abreast on up the grade? He could have sighed with relief. The thing was accomplished, and so easily. Greetings had been exchanged; here they were side by side and going in the same direction with miles and miles ahead of them.

He noted that her eye was first for the horse and next for him.

"Oh, what a beauty!" she had cried at sight of Bob. From the shining light in her eyes, and the face filled with delight, he would scarcely have believed that it belonged to the young woman he had known in the office, the young woman with the controlled, subdued office face.

"I didn't know you rode," was one of her first remarks. "I imagined you were wedded to get-there-quick machines."

Thus, and to his great relief, they launched on a topic of mutual interest. He told her about Bob's tricks, and of the whirl and his scheme to overcome it; and she agreed that horses had to be handled with a certain rational severity, no matter how much one loved them. There was Mab, which she had had for eight years, and which she had had to break of stall-kicking. The process had been painful for Mab, but it had cured her.

"You've ridden a lot," Daylight said.

"I really can't remember the first time I was on a horse," she told him. "I was born on a ranch, you know, and they couldn't keep me away from the horses."

And thereat she told him more of her ranch life in the days before her father died. And Daylight was hugely pleased with himself. They were getting acquainted. The conversation had not lagged in the full half hour they had been together. When she talked, he listened and followed her, and yet all the while he was following his own thoughts and impressions as well. It was a nervy thing for her to do, this riding astride, and he didn't know, after all, whether he liked it or not. His ideas of women were prone to be old-fashioned; they were the ones he had imbibed in the early day, frontier life of his youth, when no woman was seen on anything but a side-saddle. He had grown up to the tacit fiction that women on horseback were not bipeds. It came to him with a shock, this sight of her so manlike in her saddle. But he had to confess that the sight looked good to him just the same.

CHAPTER XIV.

Another Sunday man and horse and dog roved the Piedmont hills. And again Daylight and Dede rode together. But this time her surprise at meeting him was tinctured with suspicion; or rather, her surprise was of another order. The previous Sunday had been quite accidental, but his appearing the second time among her favorite haunts hinted of more than the fortuitous. Daylight was made to feel that she suspected him, and he, remembering that he had seen a big rock quarry near Blair Park, stated offhand that he was thinking of buying it. His one-time investment in a brickyard had put the idea into his head—an idea that he decided was a good one, for it enabled him to suggest that she ride along with him to inspect the quarry.

So several hours he spent in her company, in which she was much the same girl as before, natural, unaffected, light-hearted, smiling and laughing, a good fellow, talking horses with unflagging enthusiasm, making friends with the crusty-tempered Wolf, and expressing a desire to ride Bob, whom she declared she was more in love with than ever. Against his better judgment, Daylight gave in, and, on an unfrequented stretch of road, changed saddles and bridles.

"Remember, he's greased lightning," he warned, as he helped her to mount.

She nodded, while Bob pricked up his ears to the knowledge that he had a strange rider on his back. The fun came quickly enough—too quickly for Dede, who found herself against Bob's neck as he pivoted around and bolted the other way. Daylight followed on her horse and watched. He saw her check the animal quickly to a standstill, and immediately, with rein across neck and a decisive prod of the left spur, whirl him back the way he had come and almost as swiftly.

"Get ready to give him the quirt on the nose," Daylight called.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

REMEDIES FOR RHEUMATISM

Are Many but the Important Thing Is to Enrich the Blood and Cleanse the System of Rheumatic Poison.

There are many remedies for rheumatism. Most of them are considered successful if they relieve the pain and stiffness. That means a temporary suppression of the symptoms while the disease remains in the blood to appear again on the next rainy day.

Mrs. J. W. Rapp, of R. F. D. No. 1, South Omaha, Neb., says: "Several years ago I was a sufferer from rheumatism which followed a general run-down condition and exposure to wet and dampness. The pains started in my hands, which had a sort of pricking sensation like needles were being thrust into them. As the disease grew worse the joints of my fingers became affected. They were swollen and were so painful that I could hardly bear it. Gradually the disease began to affect my limbs in the same manner. They became terribly swollen and I had to give up my work. The pains then spread all over my body and were sharp and shooting. They would suddenly shift from one part of the body to another but fortunately did not seem to affect my heart. For three months I was propped up in a chair and had to be waited on. I could not get any sleep and was losing flesh all of the time. The doctor treated me a long time but did not give much relief as the pains were as severe as ever when I quit taking his medicine. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People were brought to my notice while reading a booklet and I made up my mind to give them a trial. A wonderful change came over me as soon as I commenced using the pills. They absolutely cured me from the terrible rheumatic pains and I have never had them since. I have recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People to many persons and always explain that they cannot help giving benefit as they are a blood medicine."

A new edition of our booklet, "Diseases of the Blood," will be sent free on request to anyone interested. Write for it today.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50c. per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

How Aggravating.

Brown—I saw a man drop twenty stories the other day, and it was a caution the way he swore.

Greene—Swore after dropping twenty stories?

Brown—Yes. They were in a magazine he had just bought, and he dropped it in the mud.—Judge.

PIMPLES ON FACE 3 YEARS

"I was troubled with acne for three long years. My face was the only part affected, but it caused great disfigurement, also suffering and loss of sleep. At first there appeared red, hard pimples which later contained white matter. I suffered a great deal caused by the itching. I was in a state of perplexity when walking the streets or anywhere before the public.

"I used pills and other remedies but they failed completely. I thought of giving up when nothing would help, but something told me to try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I sent for a Cuticura Booklet which I read carefully. Then I bought some Cuticura Soap and Ointment and by following the directions I was relieved in a few days. I used Cuticura Soap for washing my face, and applied the Cuticura Ointment morning and evening. This treatment brought marvelous results so I continued with it for a few weeks and was cured completely. I can truthfully say that the Cuticura Remedies are not only all, but more than they claim to be." (Signed) G. Baumel, 1015 W. 20th Place, Chicago, Ill., May 28, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

What She Wanted.

Before the fire on Christmas eve, two old maids were planning for the holiday.

"Sister Mollie," said the younger, "would a long stocking hold all you want for a Christmas gift?"

"No, Elvira," said the older, "but a pair of socks would."

All things are for the best—and every imagines he's the best.

When Your Eyes Need Care

Try Murine Eye Remedy. No Smarting—Feels Fine—Acts Quickly. Try it for Red, Weak, Watery Eyes and Granulated Eyelids. Illustrated Book in each Package. Murine is compounded by our Oculists—not a "Patent Medicine"—but used in successful Physicians' Practice for many years. Now dedicated to the Public and sold by Druggists at 25c and 50c per Bottle. Murine Eye Salve in Aseptic Tubes, 25c and 50c.

Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago

His Work.

"An electrician ought to be a social success."

"Why an electrician especially?"

"Because he is so well posted on current topics."

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle.

Our idea of a lazy woman is one who never gets busy with her complexion.

Garfield Tea, by purifying the blood, eradicates Rheumatism, Dyspepsia and many chronic ailments

When an old man dies and his relatives say that he is better off the chances are that he is.

THE SUNBEAM.

·BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 ,905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3,1879.

Some of the Taft supporters are claiming that the Roosevelt delegates will walk out of the Chicago Convention if Taft receives the nomination, They will not walk out, but the people will in November and take Taft out with them,

A VERY GOOD LAW.

A mighty good bill is that which Congressman Steenerson has introduced in Congress, which if passed, will prevent corporation from trasfering cases involving less than $10,000 from the state to the fedral courts. Railroad corporations nearly always transfer damage cases and consequelly cripples, widows, and orpnans somehow seem to nearly always lose out. If Steenerson means business with the bill and can get it passed, it will be a great feather in his cap, but if introduced merely for a little campaign hunder--well it will cause people o demand such a bill until a lecent Congress will pass it -and hat won't hurt Steenerson either —Battle Lake Review.

Congressman Steenerson appe red before the Judicary Commit e on April 11, in favor of rais g the jurisdictional amount re uired for suits in United State ourt, and limiting the right of movel from state court to the dral court where suit is brought the county where the cause of tion arose, or within the county here the defendant 's serveo th process and the plaintiff re les.

it is reposted that the commit will report the Dyer Bill. rai the amount to $5.000,and may o report a provision for limi the right of removel substan lly as advocated by Mr. Steener. 1.

A BLUFF CALLED.

Judging from the unearthly lps that emitted from the Times nnel, the weekly "skavenger", of .Falls last week, our local ot of two weeks ago must have the mark "The way of the ansgressor is hard." When the ushroom" publication came to rescue of the lumber compa s last fall, to justifiy them in sing off the Red Lake River, told them that they had bit more than they could "chaw." w after we have proven by the ssing of time that all we publi d was facts the Times would to justify themselves by sland g and publishing libellous icles about THE SUNBEAM. Of ir threats about putting us out business we care nothing; but uld advise them for hevens e don't resolve to not cut their r until they do it.

BLUFF PROMPTLY CALLED

o your article of last week you : "We are willing to bet that publication of April 5 was not gal newspaper." All right Mr. sey! Now we are willing to bet hundred dollars to fifty that issue of April 5th. was a legal lication, and any day that we r this you have deposited the in any of your banks we will n Thief River Falls with the hundred to put on top of it, you might just as well try to the hundred as you will be d on to prove the above stat t in court anyway. In all our jam fight we have published ing but facts and shall con e to do so, and if the official an of the lumber companys ooking for a business fight, just the ball and and, we will e you dance to our music, and will continue to play the fiddle until we have routed you skavenger sheet out of this county. We will open the dance by the publication of the names of the business houses who advertise in your sheet with a request that the people living up this way withdraw their patronge from them. You will find out before long that we are not in this fight alone, but as the representative of the people,

The Danger After Grip

lies often in a run down system, Weakness, nervousness, lack of appetite, energy and ambition, with disordered liver and kidneys often follows an attact of this wretched disease. The greatest need then is Electric Bitter, the glourious tonic, blood purifier and regulator of stomach, liver and kidneys. Thousands have proved that they wonderfully strengthen the nerves, build up the system and restore to health and good spirits after an attact of Grip. If suffering, try them. Only 50 cents. Sold and perfect satisfaction guarenteed by All Druggists.

Republican District Convention.

The Republican District Convention for the Ninth Congressionel District of Minnesota, will be held at the Armory in the City of Thief River Falls on the 15th, day of May A.D.1912, at 10 o'clock A.M. for the purpose of electing two delegates and two alterates to the Republican National Convention to be held at Chicago ou June 18, 1912, for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for president and vice president, and for the transaction of any other business that may properly come before the convention.

The county conventions to elect delegates thereto will be held n the respective counties on Monday, May 13th, A.D.1912, at the places to be designated by th several county committees.

Representation in this convention will be made upon the following basis: Each county shal e entitled to one delegate fo each two hundred and fifty votes, or major fraction thereof, cast fo state officers in the year of 1910 in such county, and each county in addition thereto five delegates at large. The several counties in the district will be entitled to the following number of delegates in aid convention:

Becker 12 Beltrami 11 Clearwater 8 Clay 13 Kittson 8 Marshall 12 Mahnomem 6 Norman 1 Ottertail 18 Polk 20 Pennington 10 Red Lake 8 Roseau 9 Wilkin 9

By order of the Ninth Distric Republican Committee.

John Petterson, Chairman

Fred Denuls, Secretary.

Dated April 8, 1912.

It Looks Like A Crime

to separate a boy from a box of Bucklen's Arnica Salve. His pimples, boils, scratches, knocks, sprains, and bruises demand it, and its quick relief for burns, scalds, or cuts is his right Keep it handy for boys, also girls. Heals every thing healeble and does it quick Unequaled for piles. Only 25 cent at All Druggists.

FARM LOANS.

Made Without Delay; at reasonable rates of Interest.

Be sure and see me before you place your loan.

GEORGE ELDER.
McGlon Block,
Thief River Falls

U. S. Mail,

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 10.00 a. m. on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m

Wm G. Hunt, p. m.

FARMERS MASS MEETING.

Turn Out And Fight For Your Rights.

The Red Lake River is now lower than it was last fall and the lumber company are not making any attempt to move their log jam The object of this meeting is to raise funds to employ two or more Engineers to go up to that outlet and take the levels and make a report of the facts as they are, The reports can then be sent to our Representatives at Washington who will take action to compell the lumber compnys to open this river. All turn out to this meeting. At HIGHLANDING SCHOOL HOUSE, SATURDAY APRIL 27th, 1912, AT 1'O Clock p.m. Called by request.

JOHN SCOTT'S PUP

He Is an Affectionate Critter and Dearly Loves His Master

YET HE GOT HIM IN TROUBLE

The Joyous Antiss of the Playful Canina Brought About the Scene That Queered John With His Wifa and Gave Calor to Her Cruel Suspicion.

One of the most touching things in nature is the affection of a dog for its master. Authors have wept over this before now. Indeed, in some cases canina affection would make a cube of billiard chalk weep.

John Scott has an affectionate dog. It is a young dog, but joyful, and he keeps it in the cellar at night. The dog and the furnace are great friends, probably because contrasted natures agree well. The dog's nature is warm, and the furnace's nature is cold. But the pup simply adores John Scott.

One night John Scott left the banquet of the Petonic club at 1 o'clock in the morning when his wife had told him positivaly to be home at 10:30. She had told him also to drink but one cocktail. That was the only cocktail he drank, but in the bright lexicon of banquets there are other drinks. The care free yet dignified manner in which John Scott wended his homeward way gave proof that he had studied the lexicon.

He was not intoxicated. He could still lift his feet as he walked, but when he had lifted a foot he waved it in the air a moment before he decided just where to set it down, and it did not always hit the exact spot he had selected. But his brain was clear as a bell He remembered that he must put coal in the furnace before he went to bed.

When he opened the cellar door the pup was asleep on his bed in a box, but by the time John Scott had descended the cellar stairs the pup and its affectionate nature were wide awake. The pup gave one little bark of joy and rushed across the cellar like a rubber shoe fired out of a cannon and stopped itself by making a flying tackle with its teeth on the hem of one of the legs of John Scott's dress trousers. John Scott swayed, put out a hand and sat down on the floor, and the pup affectionately climbed into his lap and, putting two coal dusty paws on John Scott's shirt bosom, kissed him

This evidence of canine affection was too much for John Scott. He compared it with the reception he would probably receive from Mrs. Scott, and he was so affected that he hugged the pup to his bosom and wept. Then he placed the pup carefully on the cellar floor and stood up. The pup immediataly got between his feet, threw him twice as he walked to the coal bin and, when he bent down to pick up the coal scoop, grabbed the tail of his dress coat in a death grip.

Mr. Scott divested himself of the pup by taking off his coat and hanging it on a nail—the one the poker hangs on. All indications pointed to a permanent suspension of the pup. The pup hung to the coattail, and the coat hung on the nail, and Mr. Scott turned to the coal bin He raised the scoop ready to plunge it into the coal, but as he did so he paused The pup was standing on the coal, just where the scoop was about to scoop up coal. At intervals the pup would dash down and worry the heel of Mr. Scott's dress trousers, but whenever the scoop approached the coal the pup got in front of it. Sometimes Mr. Scott scooped up the pup, and sometimes he missed the pup, the coal and the bin, but whenever he got coal he got the pup too. If by chance he got coal in the scoop without any pup the pup showed its canine affection by jumping into the scoop. Then the coal and pup would slide off the scoop on to the floor.

Not for worlds would John Scott have shoveled the affectionate pup into the furnace, but he saw that he was likely to do so any minute if he continued to fool with the scoop. There was but one way to get the coal into the furnace without cremating the pup. So John Scott proceeded in that way. He sat on the coal and held the pup in his lap and threw coal piece by piece at the furnace door.

And this was the only basis for Mrs. John Scott's unjust suspicion that John Scott had taken more than one cocktail at the Petonic club banquet. She came to the head of the cellar stairs to see what was obstructing the draft of the furnace, and she saw John Scott sitting on the coal in his shirt sleeves weeping over the affection of the pup and throwing coal at the furnace with his left hand, while the pup nestled inside his dress waistcoat and kissed his face. And she accused him of having taken more than one cocktail!

But a woman never knows how the affection of a canina affects a tender hearted Petonic club banqueter. The love of a dog for its master will touch the heart of the strongest man.—Ellis Parker Butler in Judge's Library.

Only Guideposts.

A well known Fourth avenue banker was sitting in a downtown restaurant eating toast and milk.

"What's the matter?" inquired a friend.

"Got dyspepsia."

"Don't you enjoy your meals?"

"Enjoy my meals?" snorted the indignant dyspeptic "My meals are merely guideposts to take medicine before or after."—Pittsburgh Post.

Doubt of all kinds can be removed by nothing but action.—Goethe

Slingers of Greece.

The Acarnanians were considered the most skillful slingers of Greece. These weapons were used not only to throw stones, but balls of lead, and in some localities, especially in the plain of Marathon, many of these metal projectiles have been found. The relics are interesting from the inscriptions and devices cut upon them which consist of the names of persons and appropriate epithets, the legend in many cases meaning when fully translated "Look out!"

The Bells of Davos.

The first thing that strikes the stranger in Davos, Switzerland, and strikes him unpleasantly is the bells. Not only does every cow, goat and sheep wear its bell, but when they are shut up for the winter and we hope for a little rest then comes the infernal eternal din from every cart, carriage sleigh, omnibus and all other kinds of vehicle which ply for hire or otherwise. No doubt they become a necessity on the silent highways as winter progresses, but that does not render them one bit more palatable.

Impressionistic.

Edward was showing Miss Brown how well he could draw a cow. As he drew he glanced from time to time at a cow grazing in a near by yard.

"This is her nose," he said, drawing a curved line.

"Here's her body," he explained, and, after a look at his model, he added another curved line.

"Now, here's her tail," and he placed a curved line opposite the so called nose.

As he held the finished drawing up for inspection an embarrassed smile spread over his countenance.

"Perhaps we'd better call it a pump," he said.—Youth's Companion.

Money Making In Wall Street.

The real money makers of Wall street deal in investment securities or speculative stocks that have passed the scrutiny of the Stock Exchange committee and secured a place among the listed stocks on the exchange. The successful speculator would not listen for a moment to the gold brick man with a recipe for getting rich quickly. It is just as easy to buy stocks from a responsible broker on Wall street as it is to buy them from a peddler. One should be just as careful to see that he deals with an honest broker in buying securities as he is to see that he is dealing with an honest butcher, grocer or baker—one who gives him honest weight and count.—Leslie's.

Epistolary Caution.

Before the customer paid his bill the hotel stenographer tore several pages out of her notebook and handed them to him.

"Only the notes of his letters," she said to the next customer. "About once in six months somebody comes along who keeps such a watchful eye on his correspondence that he won't even let a stenographer keep his notes. Of course it is nothing to us, and we always give them up when asked to. I don't know what the cautious folk do with them—destroy them, maybe. Anyhow, there is no record of foolish utterances left in the stenographer's books."—New York Times.

An Old Saw, With A New Set.

We have now a large and complete stock of new goods at our Kratka store, and would be pleased to have all our old customers call and see us at the new store and post Office.

A FINE LINE OF BOTH HEAVY AND LIGHT SHOES.

Ask to look at our stock of Shoes. No trouble to show GOODS.

Higest market price paid for butter and eggs.

Singer Bros Kratka minn.

RHODA STORE

NEW GOODS, NEW PRICES.

A trial order will convince you, that this is the best Store to buy your goods.

I HAVE A FINE LINE OF gROCERIES.

BOOTS, SHOES, & COMPLET STOCK OF SUMMER FOOT WARE.

give me a call and get prices.

GEORGE SINGER. Prop. Rhoda Minn.

The First Thimble.

There is a tradition that a Dutch silversmith pondered over a certain notion which he had cherished long and silently in the slow working senses which he deemed his brain—a notion for a trinket, a fallal, for a dignified lady of Holland. It must be a useful trinket, albeit a costly one, meet for so good a sempstress as Dame Alixa Van Rensselaer. When the notion took definite shape, the thing was quickly wrought in precious metal by fingers as deft as the brain was slow, and the industrious housewife proudly wore not only her first thimble, but the first thimble possessed by any Dutch frau.—Century.

ORDER IS POWER.

There is power in order—material order, intellectual order, moral order. To keep one's word and one's engagements, to have everything ready under one's hands, to be able to dispose of all one's forces and to have all one's means of whatever kind under command—that is order; to discipline one's habits, efforts and wishes, to distribute one's time, to take the measure of one's duties and make one's rights respected, to employ one's capital and resources, one's talent and one's chances profitably. Order is power.

Combination.

"I think I will write a great novel."

"Why don't you?"

"If I just had a bottle of ink"—

"And some ideas."

McCall's Magazine and McCall Patterns

For Women

Have More Friends than any other magazine or patterns. McCall's is the reliable Fashion Guide monthly in one million one hundred thousand homes. Besides showing all the latest designs of McCall Patterns, each issue is brimful of sparkling short stories and helpful information for women.

Save Money and Keep in Style by subscribing for McCall's Magazine at once. Costs only 50 cents a year, including any one of the celebrated McCall Patterns free.

McCall Patterns Lead all others in style, fit, simplicity, economy and number sold. More dealers sell McCall Patterns than any other two makes combined. None higher than 15 cents. Buy from your dealer, or by mail from

McCALL'S MAGAZINE
236-246 W. 37th St., New York City

Sample C [illegible] Premium Catalogue and Pattern Catalogue free, on request.

CORN-SEEDS TREES

Our 29th Annual Catulog is now ready and free for the asking. It is a work of art and full of good things.

See King Corn on front cover.

WILL'S PIONEER SEED HOUSE and NURSERY
OSCAR H. WILL & CO.
BISMARCK, NO. DAKOTA.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

[illegible]

Scientific American.

[illegible]

MUNN & Co. [illegible] New York

[illegible]

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Call and see us, when you are ready to make your final proof.

Fine weather this! Oh yes fine.

The Clearwater River has been quite high the past week, makeing the bridge at Roland In an unsafe condition.

The weather has been ideal for seeding this week and the farmers have been rushing the work as fast as posiable.

A good big handsom steer, that will make a good working ox, for sale cheap. Partly broken. Inquire at this office.

The farm house of Anton Ellingson was distroyed by fire Wednesday night. It has been vacant the past two years, so there was no insurance.

WANTED: I want to hire three or four men to grub and clear land on my farm one mile south from Highlanding. Call at the reidence of Tallak Dale.—Simon Solberg.

C. L. Clark walked across the Red Lake River Tuesday with a low pair of shoes on and did not wet his feet, which shows that the lumber companys have a solid calk in the Red Lake jug.

At the farmers meeting on April 27th, the question will be discussed of trying to get Red Lake River unnavigable. This is the best thing to do so we can get bridges across it. Come to this meeting and express your opinion

There will be nearly twice the amount of grain sown on the eleven towns this year that there was last year and the indications are that there will be a railroad across the eastern part of Pennington county to hawl it to market.

As the Thief River Falls Times has dug up that old circulation dead cat that we buried six years ago, when we had the row with three papers, two in T.R.F and one in Plummer, and did them proper. We will give the circulation of the Times and SUNBEAM at Kratka last week. The Times 4. THE SUNBEAM 34. Come on with your "mushroom" publication you are a "pudden" on circulation in this neck of the woods when you go up against THE SUNBEAM.

The prairie fire ran across the speculators land north of the river Wednesday and made a good annual clean up of brush and rubbish. There was two good big fires, one from the east and one from the west that met just opposit of Sunbeam, and they did a fine job of cleaning up for the non-residents, so they will not be called on by the board of health to clean up their back yards. Of course it distroyed a lot of valuable timber and removed the house of Ellingson, which has stood vacant for the last two years, just to make strangers comeing into the country ask questions.

Read the notice of a farmers mass meeting published in another colum. It does not matter whether you live on the banks of the Red Lake River or not, for every settler in eastern Pennington county is interested in having this river opened, and the only way we can do it now is to have a survey made by qualified engineers and preve to the war department at Washington by an overwelming amount of evidence that the report made by Major Shuuk was false.

The bridge across the Clearwater river at Roland is in bad condition which has started a movement by the people west of there to have the mail line from Sunbeam to Lillo go west of Roland and cross the new bridge near Greens place and go direct to Lillo, and leave the Roland office to be supplied by the Rodell carrier. If the Roland patrons of that office do not care enough about the service on this line to repair that bridge the mail will have to take the road that they can travel safely from Sunbeam to Lillo.

Be sure and take the time to attend the farmers mass meeting April 17, at the Higlanding school house.

As we are having numerous inquries about ditch No. 47, we will say; that there was no extension of time given for the compleating this ditch which was to have been finished by the 1st, of last January. As to whether the bondsmen are going to compleate it, or not we do not know.

L. K. Vindlos came up from Wanke yesterday to take a look after his Kratka farm. He has a farm on the banks of Red Lake River and is very much in favor of the farmers movement to try and get that log jam out.

Almost A Mirical.

One of the most startling chages ever seen in any man, according to W. B. Holsclaw, Clarendon, Tex., was affected years ago in his brother. "He had such a dreadful caugh," he writes, "that all our family thought he was going into consumption, but he began to use Dr. Kings New Discovery, and was copletly cured by ten bottels. Now he is sound and well and weighs 218 pounds. For many years our family has used this wonderful remedy for Coughs and Colds with excelent results." It's quick, safe, reliable and guaranteed. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottle free, at All Druggists.

Puts End to Bad Habits.

Things never look bright to one with "the blues." Ten to one the trouble is a slugish liver, filling the system with billious poison, that Dr. King's New Life Pills would expel. Try them. Let the joy of better feelings end "the blues." Best for stomach, liver and kidneys. 25 cents, at All Druggists.

FARM FOR SALE.

The N. E. ¼ Section 14 Township 152 N. Range 40, Town of Deer Park. Price $16,00 per acre.

Henry Rovoold,
Alsask, Sask. Canada.

DRESS MAKING.

For plain and Farcy sewing apply to Mrs. Sam McMahn Student of the America College of dress making.

Kuehnel, Minn.

Notice To Farmers.

I have an a No. Jack, nine years old which will stand for service during the sesson of 1912, at my farm on section 8 town of Deer Park. M. E. Hyland.

BONEHEAD BASEBALL.

This Was About the Richest Double Play Ever Perpetrated.

Double boneheads are rare in baseball—scarcer than hens' teeth, and naturally so, for the completion of a bonehead requires vigilance and quick thinking by the opposition. Still, double concretes happen now and anon, the most famous one possibly being that pulled by Cozy Dolan and Harry Gessler at Chicago several years ago.

On this occasion Dolan had reached second in the ninth, and one was down, the score at the time being in favor of the Cubs by a one run margin. The next batter hoisted a long fly over center field. Gessler grabbed the ball and, deciding that it was the third out, tucked the ball in his pocket and flew for the clubhouse.

Dolan, instead of taking advantage of the break to score the tying run, also figured that it was the third out and followed Gessler across the field, while a raving mob of players from both teams, surrounding them, tried to impress the horror of the situation upon them.

Artie Hofman finally took the ball away from Gessler, chased Dolan to the clubhouse and made the putout at the edge of the bathtub. That was the richest double break on record, but there have been a few others almost as funny.

Corrected.

"Was Rome founded by Romeo?" inquired a pupil of the teacher.

"No, my son," replied the wise man "It was Juliet who was found dead by Romeo."—London Answers.

Dividing the Task.

Lottie—Oh, well, let's kiss and make up. Dottie—All right, dear I'll do the kissing, but you've had more experience with the other part of the program.—Cleveland Leader.

VISIONS OF GHOSTS.

They Seem to Come to About One Person in Every Ten.

The modern theory of ghosts insists that invariably, when they are real ghosts and not the spurious product of credulity and deception, they are distinctly subjective in character and exist only by virtue of conditions permitting their creation in the mind of the person or persons seeing them. In other words, a real ghost is never an objective phenomenon, like a tree or a house. As a psychologist would say, it is always "a percept having no basis in external reality." Less learnedly, it is always a case of "seeing things where they ain't." That is to say, it is a hallucination.

It has been conclusively demonstrated that one person out of every ten has experienced at least one hallucination at some time in his or her life.

Proof of this results chiefly from a remarkable census of hallucinations originated more than twenty years ago at the International congress of psychology and simultaneously carried on—principally by members of the Psychical Research—in the United States, England, France, Germany and other countries. To thousands of persons the question was put, "Have you ever, when believing yourself to be completely awake, had a vivid impression of seeing or being touched by a living being or inanimate object or of hearing a voice, which impression, so far as you could discover, was not due to any external physical cause?" Of the 27,339 replies received to this question no fewer than 3,200 were in the affirmative.—Hampton's Magazine.

WEATHER SIGNS.

Some Rules That Help In Reading the Clouds and Winds.

The following formula of weather signs was adopted by the Farmers' club of the American Institute some years ago, and it has been found to give satisfaction:

When the temperature falls suddenly there is a storm forming south of you When the temperature rises suddenly there is a storm forming north of you The wind always blows from a region of fair weather toward a point where a storm is forming.

Cirrus clouds always move from a region where a storm is in progress to one of fair weather. Cumulus clouds always come from a region where a storm is forming. When cirrus clouds are moving rapidly from the north or northeast, no matter how cold it is, there will be rain within twenty-four hours When cirrus clouds are moving rapidly from south or southeast there will be a hailstorm on the morrow, if it be in summer, and if it be in the winter there will be snow.

The wind always blows about a storm in a circle. When it blows from the north the heaviest rain is east of you. If it blows from the south the heaviest rain is west of you. If it blows from the east the heaviest rain is south The wind never blows even moderately unless rain or snow is falling within a radius of 1,000 miles

Whenever heavy white frost occurs a storm is forming within 1,000 miles north or northwest of you.—Christian Herald Almanac.

The "Nickel Plate."

The railroad name "Nickel Plate" found its origin in a remark made by Jay Gould When the road had failed and was placed on sale Gould entered a bid for it The bid was considered unsatisfactory, and Gould was urged by the interested parties to increase the amount Though the road had not proved very profitable, it was a splendid piece of construction and worth much more than he had offered Gould tersely replied that his bid was the maximum and that he wouldn't raise it if the old line was "nickel plated."—Railroad Man's Magazine.

A Northern Venice.

The old city of Ghent, Belgium, is built on twenty-six islands, which are connected with one another by eighty bridges. Three hundred streets and thirty public squares are contained in these islands. Ghent is famous because Charles V and John o' Gaunt were born there It has been the scene of many treaties, insurrections and revolts, and it was there the treaty was made terminating the war of 1812 between this country and England

The Point of Surprise.

"Did you notice the man over there who took off his hat to the lady he met and begged pardon so politely for stepping on her dress?"

"Why, what is so remarkable about such ordinary politeness?"

"But, man alive, she's his wife!"—Baltimore American.

His Friendship.

He—I know how this catastrophe has crippled you, and as one of your oldest friends I should like to help you. I will buy your furniture for 300 francs She—You're very kind, but I've just sold it for 825 francs He—What? You allowed yourself to be robbed like that?—Pele Mele.

A Sad Meeting.

"I think we met at this cafe last winter. Your overcoat is very familiar to me."

"But I didn't own it then."

"No, but I did."—Fliegende Blatter.

Intelligent Girl.

Maud—Why do you always wear gloves when you are playing cards? Alice—Because Jack told me I must never show my hand.—Boston Transcript.

Oblivion is the flower that grows best on graves.—George Sand.

"I had been given up to die by three of our best doctors,

I could not stand it to be on my feet and I was so swelled in the abdomen I could hardly breathe.

But thanks to Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy and Nervine I am able to be about the streets, a walking advertisement of the curative qualities of your remedies, although I am 70 years old."

JOHN R. COCHRAN,
Lewistown, Ill.

Better than any statement we could make regarding the value of

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy

are these words of Mr. Cochran. He speaks from experience, the highest possible source of knowledge. If you have any of the signs of a weak heart, such as pain in the left shoulder or arm, fainting and hungry spells, shortness of breath, smothering spells, fluttering or palpitation of the heart, you need which for over twenty years has been recognized as the best preparation of its kind to be had.

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy

Sold under a guarantee assuring the return of the price of the first bottle if it fails to benefit. AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

Royal Night Bodyguards.

For more than 400 years a body of men known as the Monteros de Espinosa have enjoyed the exclusive privilege of watching over the slumbers of the kings and queens of Spain They are bound by tradition to be natives of Espinosa, and to have served with distinction in the army. One of these is on guard at the door of the bedroom of each royal personage in the palace, and the others, armed with huge halberds and wearing felt soled shoes, tread silently all through the night along the corridors and halls. Their service begins at midnight and ceases at 7 in the morning.

Japanese "Silent" Music.

A curious ceremony used to be performed in Japan by the court musicians at certain Shinto festivals. Both stringed and wind instruments were used, but it was held that no sound should be allowed to fall upon unworthy ears, and, as some of the ears present might be unworthy, all the motions of playing were gone through by the musicians, but not a single sound was heard This strange custom dated back many generations

State of Ohio, city of Toledo, } ss.
Lucas County, }

Frank J. Cheney makes oath that he is senior partner of the firm of F. J. Cheney & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by the use of HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

FRANK J. CHENEY.

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1886.

(Seal) A. W. GLEASON,
Notary Public.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials, free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Sold by all Druggists, 75c.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

LUNG DISEASE

"After four of our family had died of consumption I was taken with a frightful cough and lung trouble, but my life was saved and I gained 87 pounds through using

DR. KING'S NEW DISCOVERY

W. R. Patterson, Wellington, Tex.

PRICE 50c and $1.00 AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

LUMBER FOR SALE.

I will have about 50,000 ft. of lumber for sale this winter at $15.00 per thousand. Will take cattle in exchange.

Andrew Nilson.

W. G. Hunt.

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate Court Work.

Use For a Friend.

"I let my house furnished, and they have had measles there. Of course we've had the place disinfected, so I suppose it's quite safe What do you think?"

"I fancy it would be all right, dear But I think perhaps it would be safer to lend it to a friend first."—London Punch.

NEW BANK.

FIRST STATE BANK,

OF OKLEE Lambert Post Office Minn.

NEW STATION ON DULUTH SOO LINE.

Your Business Solicited.

Directors: A. P. Toupin, Pres. Samuel Giteau Vic. Prs.
Larry O'Niel, Abrham Parquine, T. L. Cruzon.
J. A. DUFFY, Cashier, T. L. CRUZON, Assist. Cashier.

Let Us Tell You Something!

This Season we are offering the best line of Dry Goods that ever came into this Section of the Country.

Don't Buy Elswhare, Until You Have Seen What We Have To Offer.

No Matter What Price you pay, WE Will please YOU.

VAUGHAN BROS. & CO.

Highlanding Minn.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's $50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day

Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were piloting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory? We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.

Our New Home. Capacity 20,000 Safes Annually.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales Organization, but to learn all particulars, it will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Ask for Catalogue 16 T.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.

CINCINNATI, OHIO

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT

IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the regular retail prices.

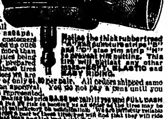
$10.00 Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof Self-healing Tires A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. A hundred thousand pairs sold last year.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.



Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

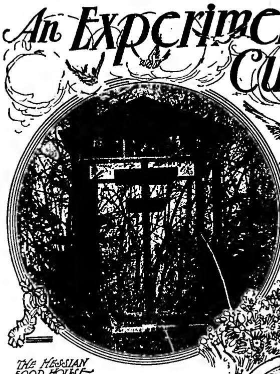
We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER [illegible] We are perfectly reliable [illegible] that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. [illegible] bicycle you will give us your order. We want [illegible]

IF YOU NEED TIRES [illegible] until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

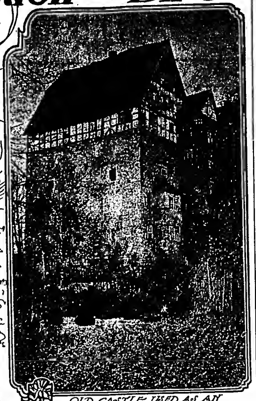
DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it now.

J. L. MEAD CYCLE COMPANY, CHICAGO, ILL.

An Experiment Station for Bird Culture



THE HESSIAN FOOD HOUSE



OLD CASTLE USED AS AN EXPERIMENT STATION

SIX NESTING BOXES IN A MAPLE

TREE TRIMMED TO MAKE ROOM FOR NESTS

THE first bird census, taken in this country a few years ago showed the fact that the number of birds decreased in the past 15 years 46 per cent. This is not only the case in the United States, but also in European countries. But with this difference that over there the government took steps to prevent the total extermination of our faithful and unpaid guardians of crops. Farming is growing very fast and the land covered with hollow trees, hedges and bushes is cleared without giving attention to the fact, that by destroying these natural dwellings of our feathered singers, they are forced to leave the spot and settle in some other place not yet touched by culture. The modern farmer can not permit a great part of the soil to remain uncultivated on account of being covered with all kinds of undergrowth. The evolution of farming is obvious and the farmer is not to be blamed for the decrease of birds.

A great many birds have been slaughtered for the single reason that their feathers would prove attractive as trimming for the hats of the ladies, but the government and aroused public sentiment has checked this gradually. In Germany, for instance, there are severe fines for those who violate the game law which provides that no singer or any other bird shall be killed, except those especially mentioned.

The most remarkable step toward the prevention of the extermination of birds has been taken by the Baron von Berlepsch who has devoted 500 acres of his estate for the erection of the first experiment station for the study and preservation of bird life. Here the interested parties are shown how to restore to the feathered citizens of the forests the comforts and conveniences of which modern civilization is gradually robbing them. The federal states of Germany are not only protecting 152 species of birds by law, but are growing nesting-hedges for them, cultivating, pruning and grafting nesting bushes; hollowing out natural nesting holes, building nesting boxes in the trees, fashioning natural and convenient winter feeding houses and protecting the birds from their carnivorous enemies.

On this unique bird farm the convenience and comfort of the feathered tenants have everywhere been considered in developing the grounds. Nineteen acres in the neighborhood of the castle of the count are laid out as a park; sixty acres are planted with thickets of shrubbery, chiefly of poplar and willow, for nesting places for the birds. The bushes are specially pruned or tied in clusters to accommodate the nesting habits of the birds. The rest of the estate is a forest. A lake near the castle furnishes an attractive residence for water-birds and a little brook bordered with nest-filled shelter thickets winds through the grounds.

The most essential parts of the work of bird protection is to provide nesting places, and over two thousand nesting boxes are maintained and fitted out in the style preferred by the various bird families. Baron von Berlepsch is the inventor of a most successful type of bird box that he developed after a detailed study of several hundred woodpecker holes. He discovered that all of the woodpecker houses were built on the same plan and conceived the idea of imitating their construction by the hand of the man. He copied with infinite care the circular opening, always wisely inclining upward to keep out the rain and always running down into the wood into a deep bottle-shaped cavity and ending in the same pointed bowl. At first he fashioned the boxes by hand but the demand grew so strong that a manufacturer was interested, and elaborate machinery devised to manufacture the boxes in commercial quantities. There are now four factories making them and it was found necessary to trademark them to prevent spurious imitations from getting on the market and cheating the birds. For the feathered tenants are more particular than the city apartment hunter and if the box is not furnished exactly as the bird wants it, with just the right quantity at the bottom, it will not be inhabited. It must not be too high or too low from the surface of the ground, and inclined a little toward the opening, away from the wind. The grand duchy of Hesse after investigating the baron's work, has ordered 9,300 nesting boxes and the Hungarian government has sent a commission to study and purchase a lot of those nesting boxes.

Winter feeding is second only to housing in making life endurable to the birds in severe weather. After eleven years of study the baron developed three practical feed devices—the food tree, the food house and the food "bell." The food tree is made by simply sprinkling a carefully prepared mixture over the branches of one of the coniferous trees. This is a man's imitation of a tree covered with a natural meal of insects' eggs and larvae. The Hessian food house consists essentially of two small tables placed beneath a roof mounted on four small posts. The food bell is an ingenious mechanical device that serves automatically. An inverted glass jar or bottle holds the supply of seed which is fed through a tube to a bowl or bell below. The lower edge of the tube must extend exactly below the upper edge of the food dish.

LIVING OVER A VOLCANO

Dishonest Promotor Is Always In Deadly Fear of Apprehension or Exposure.

But as soon as the promoter swings off into excess and begins to leave a trail of empty bottles and enthusiastic waiters and chorus girls, his troubles begin, Arthur H. Gleason writes in Collier's. For here enter the honest prosecutors, detectives, inspectors and scribes. And with them come the blackmailing crew of shyster detectives, dubious agencies and obscure journalists—a dark cloud of witnesses. From this time he is harassed by his shadowers, the men who hunt him down. We are told that every Jack has his Jill. Well, every promoter has his trailer.

Like a shadow to each of the promoters moves the detective. Some one man is always on his trail, butting in on him with a knowing smile during office hours, winking at him from the other end of an uptown bar. Often there will be several men trudging along in his wake. But some one of them will pull away from the toiling crew and grow closer as he catches the promoter's ideas, sizes up the scheme and fits together its pieces with a sudden click, like a bolt slipping into its socket.

The blackmail sheets send out an agent demanding advertisements, and, failing to get trade, pound the promoter for his crooked ways. One lone promoter has been approached by one hundred separate blackmail publications within the space of a half dozen years.

Another tax comes from the gentler intruders, who give you a friendly writeup, if you buy 500 or 1,000 copies.

Poor old, ignorant, illiterate Colonel Wilson was always the easy mark for these.

If the promoter is harassed by sinners who graft on him for hush money, he is hounded yet more keenly by the honest papers, who pry into his affairs, rip his balance sheet to tatters, reveal the nakedness of his claims, and let up when he lies gasping and prostrate with his great work finished, his race run. Such men as Larry Hill of the Sun are as welcome as an unchained bulldog to unctuous tricksters like Middlebrook and Shumaker; to thieves like the Burrs; to oleo-clerical promoters like the Rev. Claude Severance.

It is easy money and big money for the promoter, but the nerve pressure is high, and always there is the dread of exposure. Promoters live in acute expectancy of the deluge.

GRETNA GREEN MARRIAGES.

Famous Register to Be Offered for Sale in British Capital.

The original certificates of marriages celebrated at Gretna Green between 1825 and 1854, signed by the contracting parties, and the Gretna Hall Marriage Register, will be sold at Sotheby's, says the London Times. They are in the autograph of John Linton, by whom almost all the marriages were celebrated, and who, after being confidential servant to Sir James Graham at Netherby hall, invested his savings in the purchase of Gretna hall, which he turned into an inn.

His house became the most popular at Gretna for eloping couples, and, while Linton had many rivals in the business, his registers are believed to be the most important in existence. There are between 1,100 and 1,200 certificates.

The most noteworthy entry in the register is that of Edward Gibbon Wakefield to Ellen Turner on March 8, 1826, of which the certificate has been lost. Miss Turner was an heiress, only sixteen years of age, and Wakefield decoyed her from school by means of a forged letter, and induced her to marry him by pretending that her compliance was necessary to save her father from ruin. He was subsequently tried for abduction and sentenced to three years' imprisonment, the marriage being annulled by a special act of parliament.

On May 7, 1836, Prince Carlo Ferdinando Borbone, younger brother of the notorious King Ferdinand II., of the Two Sicilies, was married at Gretna hall to Penelope Caroline Smyth of Waterford, Ireland. Among the most interesting of the other marriages, the certificates of which are present, is that of Capt. Charles Parke Ibberton to Lady Adela Corisande Maud Villiers, daughter of the earl of Jersey, on November 6, 1845.

In making a runaway match Lady Adela was following the example of her grandmother, Miss Sarah Child, daughter of the founder of Child's bank, who was married at Gretna Green to Lord Westmoreland. The story of their pursuit by the angry banker, who gave up the chase only after one of the horses in his coach had been shot by his prospective son-in-law, is one of the most famous in the annals of Gretna Green.

Use Allen's Foot-Ease

The antiseptic powder to be shaken into the shoes for tired, tender, smarting, aching, swollen feet. It makes your feet feel easy and makes walking a Delight. Sold everywhere, 25c. For free trial package, address Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

Rather than lose out at the last minute, the bride will promise to obey—but she always has her fingers crossed.

Nothing jolts an egotist like the refusal of people to pay any attention to him.

PILES CURED IN 6 TO 14 DAYS
Your druggist will refund money if PAZO OINTMENT fails to cure any case of Itching, Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles in 6 to 14 days. 50c.

After sympathizing with people who are in trouble many a man begins to feel like a hypocrite.

Garfield Tea insures a normal action of the liver.

Always remember to be a gentleman—unless you are a woman.

The Army of Constipation
Is Growing Smaller Every Day.
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS are responsible — they not only give relief — they permanently cure Constipation. Millions use them for Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Sallow Skin.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.
Genuine must bear Signature
Brent Good

THE NEW FRENCH REMEDY. No.1. No.2. No.3.
THERAPION Used in French Hospitals with GREAT SUCCESS, CURES KIDNEY, BLADDER DISEASES, PILES, CHRONIC ULCERS, SKIN ERUPTIONS—EITHER SEX
Send address envelope for FREE booklet to DR. LE CLERC MED. CO., HAVERSTOCK RD., HAMPSTEAD, LONDON, ENG.

DEFIANCE STARCH easiest to work with and starches clothes nicest.

Women

From Forty-Five to Fifty Are Much Benefited by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The "change of life" is a most critical period in a woman's existence, and the anxiety felt by women as it draws near is not without reason.

When her system is in a deranged condition, she may be predisposed to apoplexy, or congestion of some organ. At this time, also, cancers and tumors are more liable to form and begin their destructive work.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

These symptoms are calls from nature for help. The nerves are crying out for assistance and the cry should be heeded in time.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is prepared to meet the needs of women's system at this trying period of her life. It invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

Mrs. Estella Gillispie

ONE CASE OUT OF MANY TO PROVE OUR CLAIMS.

St. Anne, Ill.—"I was passing through the change of life and I was a perfect wreck from female troubles. I had a displacement and bearing down pains, weak fainting spells, dizziness, then numb and cold feelings. Sometimes my feet and limbs were swollen. I was irregular and had so much backache and headache, was nervous, irritable and was despondent. Sometimes my appetite was good but more often it was not. My kidneys troubled me at times and I could walk only a short distance.

"I saw your advertisement in a paper and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I was helped from the first. At the end of two months the swelling had gone down, I was relieved of pain, and could walk with ease. I continued with the medicine and now I do almost all my housework. I know your medicine has saved me from the grave and I am willing for you to publish anything I write to you, for the good of others."—Mrs. ESTELLA GILLISPIE, R.F.D. No. 4, Box 34, St. Anne, Illinois.

Pomade Vaseline

A choice dressing and preservative for the hair. Highly refined; delicately perfumed.

Checks dandruff and keeps scalp in healthy condition.

Pomade Vaseline is put up in attractive bottles and in collapsible tubes. Insist on Pomade VASELINE.

If your dealer does not carry it, write us.

We will also be glad to send you free illustrated booklet, 32 pp., describing other choice "Vaseline" preparations for toilet and family use.
Address Dept. K.

Chesebrough Manufacturing Company
17 State Street (Consolidated) New York

TIME AND MONEY
SAVE THEM

FORD'S
GAL-VA-NITE

Why waste valuable time and money on unreliable roofings and building papers when your local dealer sells GAL-VA-NITE PRODUCTS whose quality is guaranteed by reputable manufacturers, the oldest and largest in the line.

Gal-va-nite Roofing
"Triple Asphalt Coated—Mica Plated." Needs no paint—No after-attention. First Cost—Last Cost. Ready to lay—Ready to wear. No skilled labor required. Suitable for any kind of building. Put up in rolls of 108 sq. ft. with galvanized nails, cement and directions.

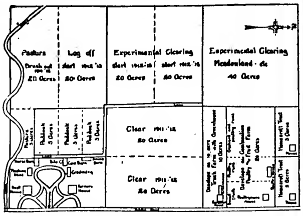
Gal-va-nite Flooring
A perfect imitation of oak used over old soft wood floors, giving the appearance of the finest quartered oak. Takes the place of unsanitary Carpets—lightens housework. Used around edge of large rugs and for interior finish. Durable, sanitary and inexpensive. Put up in rolls 38 inches wide—sold by the yard.

Gal-va-nite Plaster Board
An economical substitute for lath and plaster. It is weather-proof, moisture-proof, odorless and sanitary. Can be applied by any one. May be painted, calcimined or papered over. Put up in rolls 36 and 48 inches wide.

Gal-va-nite Black Enamel Sheathing
Superior to tarred felts, red rosins, etc., for general sheathing purposes. Especially adapted for damp-proofing floors in concrete buildings and concrete foundation walls, storm-proofing screen doors and insulating refrigerators. Water-proof, damp-proof, odorless and sanitary. Put up in rolls of 500 sq. ft.

FORD MFG. CO.
ST. PAUL CHICAGO ST. LOUIS
OMAHA KANSAS CITY

Ask your dealer for Gal-va-nite Products or send for Samples and Booklets



EDUCATIONAL AND DEMONSTRATION FARM AT DULUTH.

NEW FARM SCHOOL

WORK ON DULUTH STATE INSTITUTION AND DEMONSTRATION FARM TO START SOON.

OF HOMECROFT TRACTS

Families Will Have to Pay Only 5 Per Cent on Money Invested by State in Land Occupied.

Duluth.—Duluth is to have an agricultural school and a demonstration farm located near the city on a street car line soon to be built. This school will differ materially from the other agricultural schools in Minnesota, in order to meet the conditions that are peculiar to the northeastern part of the state.

The school, which was authorized by the last legislature, has an appropriation of $65,000 for the purchase of land and equipment in the next two years. The farm, consisting of 240 acres, has already been purchased at a cost of $12,000, and is in process of development. The plans for the arrangement and conduct of the farm were made by Prof. Andrew Bose, of the College of Agriculture at St. Anthony Park, and, without material change, will undoubtedly be adopted by the board of regents of the State University.

Four Divisions Planned.

The plan, as shown on the diagram herewith, provides for the division of the farm into four separate divisions; a dairy and stock farm of 160 acres, the stock to consist of dairy cows, swine and sheep; a co-operative creamery, sanitary milk plant and home dairy; a truck farm of ten acres, with greenhouse and hotbed equipment, and a twenty-acre combination, poultry, orchard and small fruit farm. The remaining land is to be divided into from one to five-acre homecroft tracts, to be developed by families employed at the farm or elsewhere.

The entire farm, including all the units, is to be supervised and directed by a general superintendent trained in agricultural science, with a broad, practical working knowledge of farm work and rural affairs. The dairy farm is to be under the immediate management of a practical farmer and dairyman capable of demonstrating to those seeking knowledge any phase of dairy management and production.

Creamery to Aid Farmers.

The creamery is to be operated separately from the dairy farm by an expert creamery man under the supervision of the superintendent. It will be the aim of the creamery not only to provide means for handling the milk produced on the dairy farm, but also to be a co-operative creamery at the service of the farmers contiguous to it.

The truck garden will be under the management of an experienced gardener capable of giving instruction in gardening and greenhouse work. The poultry and fruit farm will be in charge of an expert in poultry and fruit raising, and will be equipped and prepared to give thorough instruction and demonstration in these branches.

The main object of the farm will be to educate by experience, to develop the farm and equipment, and to operate it so far as possible with the help supplied by those who enroll as students, and who will be required to work at least part of the time.

Can Choose Line of Farming.

The five-acre homecroft tracts will be developed as family truck gardens, small fruit gardens or poultry farms, according to the inclination of those undertaking their development with a limited capital. The buildings are to be furnished by the state and each unit developed by a family without further aid than supervision and advice. The property is to remain in possession of the state, but will remain the home of the one developing it so long as his services are satisfactory. An interest charge of 5 per cent on money invested in land and equipment will be collected as rental and the party operating the tract is to own all produce grown on the place while he operates it.

On the dairy farm it is proposed to expend this year $5,000 for clearing. Nine thousand dollars will be expended for buildings, $1,000 for fences, and $2,000 for equipment. Next year $3,000 will be spent for clearing and about $16,000 for buildings. Five thousand dollars will be spent to prepare and equip the truck farm; and about $6,000 on the poultry and fruit farm.

It is hoped to have everything in readiness to do full work in eighteen months, though it may be possible to give some service before that time. Dean Woods and Prof. Bose are in Duluth today making final preparations so that active work may be started at once on the preparations for buildings, fences and other equipment.

Dormitory Facilities.

The buildings will have dormitory facilities for those who may attend at the beginning, and as fast as applications warrant and the school grows, the legislature will be asked for additional school buildings and equipment. The peculiar nature of the soil, the problems presented, and the unique method by which it is proposed to handle them, make this school one of the most interesting in the country. The soil in the northeastern part of the state is as rich in agricultural possibilities as its mines are in iron ore. This school will undoubtedly awaken and stimulate the people to see its desirability as an agricultural proposition, and the near future see this section of the state populated as it should be, by a large, prosperous, agricultural community.

EPIDEMIC IS SUBSIDING

Only Two New Cases in the Past Two Weeks at Two Harbors.

Two Harbors.—The typhoid fever epidemic here is subsiding, only two new cases having developed the past two weeks. Of a total of nearly 170 cases there were but five deaths. Most of the patients have recovered or are convalescing. All city water is being treated.

Lake Superior is open from this port three miles to the west and fifteen miles to the south, and to the east beyond the range of vision. With strong variable winds the ice is breaking fast. The local harbor is clear of ice.

Indications are that the coming ore season will be the greatest in the history of this section. At Ely the mines have about 1,200,000 tons of ore in stock piles which they expect to ship this year. When the movement will commence is uncertain owing to the large amount of ice still in Lake Superior.

OFFERS TROPHY CUP.

State Fair Board Will Give Prizes for Best County Exhibits.

Minneapolis.—Three solid silver trophy cups, valued at $250 each, will be given as extra prizes for county exhibits in the department of agriculture at the state fair this year.

The counties will be divided into three sections, as usual, northern, central and southern, and a cup goes with each first prize.

OLD MINE IS LEASED

Abandoned Property, Supposedly Worked Out, Now a Shipper.

Virginia.—By a deal recently made, the lease held by the Lily Iron Mining company on a portion of section 16, township 58, range 17 has been turned over to the Northeastern Minnesota Development association with headquarters in Duluth. The property will be operated on a royalty basis. Stock in the Lily Iron Mining company was taken chiefly by people of Virginia. The property includes the old Alberta mine which about three years ago was abandoned in the belief that it had been worked out. Later exploration showed a body of ore of considerable extent, and last year there was shipped from this mine 50,000 tons. Much more will be shipped this year.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" at Minneapolis.

Minneapolis.—No season at the Bijou would be complete without a presentation of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and that time-honored play will be the offering at that playhouse the week of April 21st.

Winona Aviator Injured.

Winona.—Leon Richardson, a Winona young man who left his position as auditor for the Winona Railway & Light Co. to become an aviator in Chicago, was injured in a fall there, according to information received by Winona friends. The accident occurred on the aviation instruction field at Cicero, Ill., where he had been taking the course. Richardson, who is the heaviest man in the flying business, ascended but lost control of the machine and was dashed to the ground.

FARMERS TESTING.

Countryman in Southeast Minnesota Awake to Situation.

St. Paul.—Farmers in the vicinity of St. Charles have awakened to the necessity of testing their seed corn. This is indicated by the report of W. E. Gordon, manager of the People's Telephone Company, of St. Charles. Mr. Gordon reports to M. L. Lane, commercial superintendent of the Northwestern Telephone Exchange Company, as follows:

Of the 455 farmers called on this exchange, I find that 385 have already thoroughly tested their seed corn and the remainder, though they have not yet tested, would not think of planting until they have done so.

"However, I found quite a number of farmers whose own seed corn failed to germinate and who were obliged to buy. These are testing the seed purchased."

Mr. Lane issued a second letter to managers of local exchanges and district managers, urging them to take immediate action, if they have not already done so, to comply with his first letter, requesting that each farmer having a telephone be called and instructed to test his seed corn.

KING LAUDS ELWELL LAW

North State Boosters' Chief Confident It Is Constitutional.

Bemidji.—"I am unreservedly for the Elwell law because it is our only statute which provides adequate means for building good wagon roads needed," declared Cyrus M. King of Grand Rapids, president of the Northern Minnesota Development association, at a meeting of business men and farmers here. "This law makes it possible to build roads without delay and the cost is equally distributed.

"The law makes it possible to build ten times as many miles of road with the use of the state aid as can be built by the use of any and all other laws in a given year and at the same time," he continued. "It would not increase the state tax rate and would actually decrease the county road and bridge tax by one-half."

Mr. King said he believed the Elwell law would safely withstand all legal attacks, and that its constitutionality would be declared by the supreme court.

DEPUTY IS ATTACKED

Farmer Swung Ax, Daughter Wielded Whip, It Is Charged.

St. Cloud.—Deputy Sheriff Joseph Eich, of this county, was assaulted and slightly injured by John Palige, a farmer living nine miles west of here, and his daughter, Mrs. Pauline Kolodjeski, while the official was attempting to gain possession of cattle under an execution issued by the court.

The daughter, armed with a wooden whip, struck Eich over the head, cutting an ugly gash in his forehead. The farmer swung an ax. Eich retreated before the ax, and, on the second swing, says he slipped and fell, the weapon breaking the ground six inches from him.

A warrant was sworn out and Poliga arrested. At a hearing he was bound over to the grand jury. The daughter was fined $50 and costs before Justice W. H. Alden.

FLAT FEE SYSTEM.

University Regents Make Fixed Schedule for Students.

Minneapolis.—A flat system of students' fees, with the abolition of special laboratory and other charges, was adopted by the university regents. The annual fees hereafter will be:

Science, literature and art, $30; mines, $55; engineering, $50; chemistry, $55; education, $30; agriculture, $30; law, $65; medicine, $150; dentistry, $150; pharmacy, $82.50.

The diploma fee of $5 also is abolished. Luther W. Porker, University of North Carolina, and Johns Hopkins university, was appointed as instructor in romance languages. A. S. Edwards, of the graduate school of Cornell university, was named instructor of philosophy and psychology, J. Theodore Geissendoerfer of the University of Pennsylvania, was elected as instructor in the department of German.

NELSON BACKS SURVEY

Pledges His Support to Proposition to Improve Red River Valley.

East Grand Forks.—In a letter to Judge T. A. Sullivan of this city, United States Senator Knute Nelson pledges his support to the provision of the rivers and harbors bill, calling for a survey of the Red river valley from Wahpeton, N. D., and Breckenridge, Minn., to the international boundary.

The rivers and harbors bill, as passed by the House, instructs the secretary of war to make the survey in question. In addition the bill also carries $17,500 for general maintenance of the river navigation.

YOUNG JOURNALIST DIES.

Son of Alvah Eastman, at St. Cloud, Succumbs to Heart Disease.

St. Cloud.—Maurice W. Eastman, twenty-four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Alvah Eastman, died of heart disease following a six months' illness. Following his graduation from Dartmouth college in 1910 he has been employed on his father's paper, the Journal-Press, up until the time he was taken ill. He was vice president of the Journal Press company of this city.

Wins Again.

The International Pure Food Show held in Paris March 1912, has just awarded Calumet Baking Powder the highest honors, giving them the Grand Prize and Gold Medal.

This, in addition to the Highest Award that Calumet won at the World's Pure Food Exposition in Chicago, gives Calumet the highest honors issued by two of the largest Pure Food Shows ever held and proves conclusively the superior wholesomeness, purity and uniformity of Calumet Baking Powder.

Comparative Values.

"My wife can make a tart reply."

"My wife can do better than that. She can make a pie speak for itself."

Markswomanship.

"I am afraid those militant suffragettes are going to give us serious trouble," said one London policeman. "They mean business."

"Why do you think so?" inquired the other.

"A lot of them have quit giving parades and making speeches and are practicing with quoits and baseballs."

Fact and Fancy.

"Great Scott, Marie, that's a daring dress!"

"It's a fancy costume."

"Well, if I were you, I would stick a little closer to fact."—Judge.

TWO WEEKS' TREATMENT AND MEDICINE FREE

no matter what your disease. If you suffer from Rheumatism, write. If you suffer from Kidney Trouble, write. No matter what you suffer from, write to

MUNYON'S DOCTORS

53d and Jefferson Sts., Philadelphia, Pa.

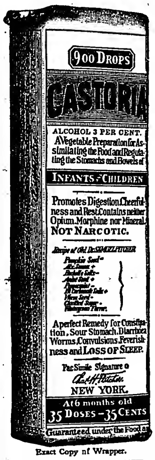
NOT A PENNY TO PAY

Offer Is Good for the Next Thirty Days

What is Castoria.

CASTORIA is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic, all Teething Troubles and Diarrhœa. It regulates the Stomach and Bowels, assimilates the Food, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.



900 DROPS
CASTORIA
ALCOHOL 3 PER CENT.
A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of INFANTS & CHILDREN
Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral.
NOT NARCOTIC.
Recipe of Old Dr. SAMUEL PITCHER
Pumpkin Seed
A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.
Fac Simile Signature of
NEW YORK.
At 6 months old
35 DOSES - 35 CENTS
Guaranteed under the Food a

Exact Copy of Wrapper.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. Albert W. Kahl, of Buffalo, N. Y., says: "I have used Castoria in my practice for the past 26 years. I regard it as an excellent medicine for children."

Dr. Gustave A. Eisengraeber, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "I have used your Castoria repeatedly in my practice with good results, and can recommend it as an excellent, mild and harmless remedy for children."

Dr. E. J. Dennis, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have used and prescribed your Castoria in my sanitarium and outside practice for a number of years and find it to be an excellent remedy for children."

Dr. S. A. Buchanan, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have used your Castoria in the case of my own baby and find it pleasant to take, and have obtained excellent results from its use."

Dr. J. E. Simpson, of Chicago, Ill., says: "I have used your Castoria in cases of colic in children and have found it the best medicine of its kind on the market."

Dr. R. E. Eskildson, of Omaha, Neb., says: "I find your Castoria to be a standard family remedy. It is the best thing for infants and children I have ever known and I recommend it."

Dr. L. R. Robinson, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria certainly has merit. Is not its age, its continued use by mothers through all these years, and the many attempts to imitate it, sufficient recommendation? What can a physician add? Leave it to the mothers."

Dr. Edwin F. Pardee, of New York City, says: "For several years I have recommended your Castoria and shall always continue to do so, as it has invariably produced beneficial results."

Dr. N. B. Sizer, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I object to what are called patent medicines, where maker alone knows what ingredients are put in them, but I know the formula of your Castoria and advise its use."

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS

Bears the Signature of

Chas. H. Fletcher.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

In Use For Over 30 Years.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

PUTNAM FADELESS DYES

Color more goods brighter and faster colors than any other dye. One 10c package colors all fibers. They dye in cold water better than any other dye. You can dye any garment without ripping apart. Write for free booklet—How to Dye, Bleach and Mix Colors. MONROE DRUG COMPANY, Quincy, Ill.

Very Far.

"That's a pretty far-fetched story."

"Yes, I got it by long distance telephone."

Cole's Carbolisalve quickly relieves and cures burning, itching and torturing skin diseases. It instantly stops the pain of burns. Cures without scars. 25c and 50c by druggists. For free sample write to J. W. Cole & Co., Black River Falls, Wis.

Many a man is dissatisfied with his lot because it is too near his neighbor's.

ONLY ONE "BROMO QUININE." That is LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE. Look for the signature of E. W. GROVE. Used the World over to Cure a Cold in One Day. 25c.

Does a thin woman worry because she has such a narrow outlook?

Garfield Tea, for the ills resulting from impure blood, is a remedy of tried efficacy. Drink before retiring.

He who lends money without security borrows trouble.

"Pink Eye" is Epidemic in the Spring. Try Murine Eye Remedy for Reliable Relief.

Women lean toward mystery, but men lean toward mastery.

W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES

$2.25 $2.50 $3.00 $3.50 $400 & $5.00

For MEN, WOMEN and BOYS

THE STANDARD OF QUALITY FOR OVER 30 YEARS

WEAR W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES

You can save money because they are more economical and satisfactory in style, fit and wear than any other makes. W. L. Douglas name and price stamped on the bottom guarantees full value and protects the wearer against high prices and inferior shoes. Insist upon having the genuine W. L. Douglas shoes. Take No Substitute.

If your dealer cannot supply W. L. Douglas shoes, write W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass., for catalog. Shoes sent everywhere delivery charges prepaid. Fast Color Eyelets used.

MOST OF THE PURCHASE MONEY loaned you at 6% interest, 5 years' time, to buy a home in Terrill County, Southwest Georgia. Lands level, fertile, even temperature, no snows, no blizzards, no freezing winters, grow cotton, corn, vegetables, fruit, peaches, pecans, cattle, hogs, chickens. In ten years these lands have enhanced in value from $2.50 to $10.00 and $25.00 per acre. When the Panama Canal is completed they will be out of reach. Buy now and borrow the money from us to pay for them. Write for free description of lands. Irwin Loan & Investment Co., Dawson, Georgia.

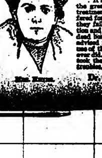
A BLOOD MEDICINE WITHOUT ALCOHOL.

Recently it has been definitly proven by experiments on animals that alcohol lowers the germicidal power of the body and that alcohol paralyzes the white corpuscles of the blood and renders them unable to take up and destroy disease germs. Disease germs cause the death of over one-half of the human race.

A blood medicine, made entirely without alcohol, which is a pure glyceric extract of roots, such as Bloodroot, Queen's root, Golden Seal root, Mandrake and Stone root, has been extensively sold by druggists for the past forty years as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The refreshing influence of this extract is like Nature's influence—the blood is bathed in the tonic which gives life to the blood—the vital fires of the body burn brighter and their increased activity consumes the tissue rubbish which has accumulated during the winter.

Dr. R. V. Pierce, the founder of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, and a physician of large experience and practice, was the first to make up an ALTERATIVE EXTRACT of roots, without a particle of alcohol or narcotic.

"It is with the greatest of pleasure, that I write to let you know of the great benefit I received from the use of your medicines and self-treatment at home," writes MRS. WM. HEYER, of Ladysmith, B.C. "I suffered for three years from a running sore. Consulted four doctors but they failed to mend or give relief. Finally I was told I was in consumption and would have to consult a specialist concerning my ear, that the dead bone must be cut out before the wound would heal. A kind friend advised me to write to Dr. Pierce, which I did, and after seven months' use of the treatment the sore is healed, and I enjoy better health than I ever did. I dressed the wound with Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve and took the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets' for my troubles. I shall always recommend your medicines."



MRS. HEYER.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate liver and bowels.

Splendid Crops

In Saskatchewan (Western Canada)

800 Bushels from 20 acres of wheat was the thresher's return from a Lloydminster farm in the season of 1910. Many fields in that as well as other districts yielded from 25 to 35 bushels of wheat to the acre. Other grains in proportion.

LARGE PROFITS are thus derived from the FREE HOMESTEAD LANDS of Western Canada.

This excellent showing causes prices to advance. Land values should double in two years' time. Grain growing, mixed farming, cattle raising and dairying are all profitable. Free Homesteads of 160 acres are to be had in the very best districts; 160 acre pre-emptions at $3.00 per acre within certain areas. Schools and churches in every settlement, climate unexcelled, soil the richest; wood, water and building material plentiful.

For particulars as to location, low settlers' railway rates and descriptive illustrated pamphlet, "Last Best West," and other information, write to Sup't of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or to Canadian Government Agent.

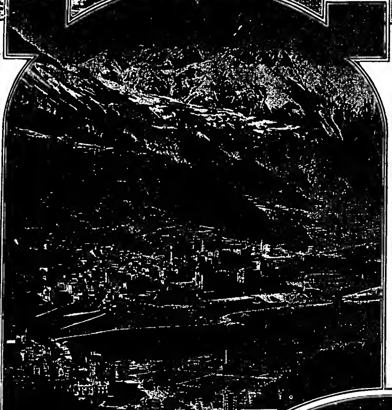
HARNESSING GLACIER STREAMS

How Switzerland Capitalizes Its Barrenness

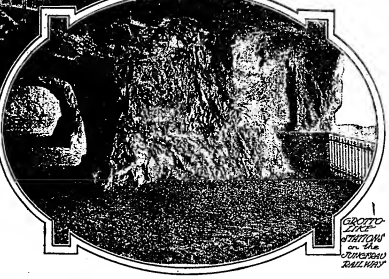
By Gregory Underhill

MOUTH OF A GLACIER

ST. GALLEN, SWITZERLAND



VILLAGE OF ST. MORITZ



GROTTO-LIKE STATIONS on the JUNGFRAU RAILWAY

WHO has not known Switzerland the past five years knows not tho Switzerland of today. Thn cascades, the torrents, end rivers run there still, but they are controlled aud utilized. The mountains rear their lofty heads, but not as of old. They are conquered and harnessed.

The early summer of 1911 indicated that the heat was to be unusual in italy, end that we must leave our vitta on the heights near S. Miniato for some cool retreat, and Switzerland was decided upon. Our approach thither was by Lago di Como, plenning to remain a few days at Tramezzo, where the summer preceding we had enjoyed for nearly two weeks, the companionship of several American friends.

From Tramezzo we took steamer for Menaggio, crossed by the railroad to Porlezza on Lake Lugnno, over which we sailed, past Lugano to Capo di Lago and hy tho "rack and pinion" railroad to Monte Generoso, conceded to offer the widest, most varied, and beautiful expanse of mountain scenery la Switzerland, its only rival the Gorner Grat.

In our approach down the Lake of Lucerne hy the historic point where Tell jumped ashore, past tho Rigi, and the many summits that rise from the shores of thot historic lake, we began to observe tho wonderful results of Swiss energy and ability. The rack and pinion railroad takes onn to the summit of Pilatus, about 6,000 feet altitude, where the night may be passed in a large comfortable hotel, and returns you to Lucernn next morning for the moderato charge of twenty-five francs, covering all chargea for the excursion. Tha rack and pinion also escends the Rigi some 5,000 feet, on whose summits are several good hotels. The general impression made by such ascent was well voiced, i think, hy an American girl, whom i overheard saying: "I was really disappointed with the Rigi, but i am glad i went up, for i should always have thought I had missed much if I had not gone." The funicular railroad takes one to Burgenstock, Stanserthorn, and also Sonnenberg and Gutsch.

As, even in this age of travel, not every one goes to Switzerland, or has observed the difference in principle of construction between the rack end pinion and the funicular, i may say here that the former has a middle rail on the roadbed, set with teeth deep and hroad, and the motor car usually has four cylinders with similar teeth, each cylinder so successively revolving as to reciprocally insert its teeth between the teeth of the middle rail, and so force the car up. It usually descends hy gravity, controlled by hrakes, in either casn moving at very slow pace, rarely six miles an hour. It is obviously much safer than the funicular, having so much more holding surface, and nowhere depending upon a single support. The funicular is run by a single cable on tho principle of the elevator. It has the advantage of being usable on much steeper grades than the rack and pinion can be run on, even at an angle over 60 per cent, while the rack and pinion seldom exceeds 25 per cent, and usually runs at about 20 per cent. Both systems are armed with very efficient hrakes, but in case of mishap I should prefer to he on the "rack and pinion."

The ascent of the Wetterhorn is made by a car suspended from a cable dangling in midair. The ride across the S. Gothard from Lugano to Lucerne had heen interesting. We were now to attempt an even wilder pass, the Brunig, on our way to Interlaken, mainly taken over hy the "rack and pinion." The development in the rural region is remarkable, and particularly in recent years. The view of the Jungfrau from the park at Interlaken was not nearly as attractive as it was lest year, when in the vary cool summer it was completely covered with glistening snow and ice.

Thn courage and shrewdness of the Swiss is shown in reaching out from the old established centers to new fields, selected hecause of their favorable exposures; sometimes approached by the funicular, or rack and pinion, sometimes only ovor a donkey peth, and even for miles on foot. Saas-Fee, for example, at 6,000 feet oltitudn is so approached from the Visp to Zermatt.

We met a gray-haired rector of tha Church of England end his grown daughters, who were all to walk for five honrs, mostly up grade, from the station to Saas Fee. The English are particularly fond of such picturesque quiet mountain resorts. But I must return to our ride to the Jungfran. The last six miles and over were thrnugh a tunnel cut in the solid rock, and the present terminus is in the solid rock, hundreds of feet below the surface. The only light, air, and outlook are through wide apertures cut through the solid rock of the mountainside. Standing in the large open restaurant, salotto, and entrance room containing even post office facilities (except for the open spoces in the mountain side) you are completely entombed in solid rock beneath great bodies of snow and ice in the very heart of the Swiss mountains.

It is the loftiest tunnel in Europe, probably in the world, measuring ten feet wide and fourteen feet three inches in height, cut through limestono so herd aad tenacious thet a lining of masonry is unnecessary. The gradient is one in four, the track is three feet four inches wide; the last stretch starts from Kleine Scheidegg, on which only a score of years ago not a single house stood. Now several large huildings have been erected, hotels, shops, sheds, etc., and they are the center of great animation; the cries of railway and hotel porters, and the ringing of bells, mingled with the conversations carried on in every known tongue by tourists, are heard on every hand. Over 3,000 persons are carried to the Kleinn Scheidegg in a single day. The Jungfrau railway is worked hy electricity, and its engines are the finest mountain engines in the world.

The Wegen alps and the Jungfrau railway is not worked after October. Because of the heavy snowfalls, water is difficult to procure. From November to May, fresh water is entirely lacking, every drop required for drinking, washing, etc., and for the drills, is obtained from snow, melted by electricity. Fourteen quarts of snow make one quart of water. Incredible quantities of snow fell here, the entire lower story of thn houses is huried in snow, and a thick wall of it rises in front of the windows. The worst foe of the colonists is the south wind, or "Fohn." Under its impact the huildings tremble to their very bese. In the open air it is impossible to make head against the "Fohn," the only thing to do is to lie down flat on the ground and to hold on to whatever one can grasp, taking advantage of the lulls to advance a few yards.

The first station after entering the great tunnel is Eigerwand, excavated in the rock. Nowhere except on the Jungfrau railway is there a station hlasted out of the interior of a mountain and yet commanding a magnificent view. In the avening an electric searchlight of 94,000,000 candle-power throws its heams far and wide. It is said that hy its light a newspaper can he read in the streets of Thun, sixty miles distant. At last we reach Eismeer, the present terminus, 10,370 feet above sea level. The station is a marvel of constructive ingenuity. A large hall, excavated, pierced with several openings on the sonth side, twenty feet wide, forms a comfortable room which can he heated, with parquet floor and glass windows. On one side are the apartments of the stationmaster, with a post office, the loftiest in Europe; on the other, the kitchen of tho restaurant and the larders. No wood or coal is used. Electricity does the cooking and heating.

Soon the railway will he carried to a point near the summit, where an elevator, a genuine perpendicular lift, will take the tourist 240 feet to the very summit of the Jungfrau (13,428 feet).

A two days' drive over the Grimsel Pass took us through tunnels, under overhonging archea, hy leaping coscades, roaring hrooks and rivers, and endless chains of pines and firs, hroken occasionally hy a small holding of cleared land. A level bit of land is always cultivated, and chalets are raised here and there, the goats crossing our track, the cows, with their hells keeping time with the footfalls of our horses, and always in ever-shifting lines the everlasting hills, rising higher and higher. Who knows how they came there?

All along I have been impressed with the sagacity and energy with which the Swiss exploit their rugged country, whose chief assets are mountains and glaciers, ordinarily the most profitless. And, yet, in doing so, they kill the romance of mountaineering. The imagination that kindles the courage that dares, the glory of being one of the elect few to achieve such ascents, the fine ecstasy of conquest, the exhilaration of the hardly won far-distant reaches, all are to disappear hefore machenism and finance. In ahont two years any gouty old gentleman and delicate, gray-haired (never old) lady on the summit of the Jungfran, nt 13,670 feet altitude, can look sympathizingly down upon the toilers below. Mont Blanc, the highest summit of the entire range, is heing rapidly harnessed clear to its summit, with its equipment of rack and pinion. Even the Matterhorn is partially equipped with fixed ropes, ond some attempts at paths heve been made. On can reach the summit of the Rigi and return in a few hours or remain in a comfortable hotel.

I have alluded to tho exploiting of the mountains. The glaciers are heing similarly utilized. All the mountain reilweys ore run by electricity, so ern the cars in pessing through the Simplon Tunnel. Soon the S. Gothard lino will be electrified, and in turn the other railroads will follow. The only hindrance is the delay and first cost in substituting electric motors for steam. As I drove by the fierce rushing torrents, meinly fed hy snow and glaciers and apparently unfailing, I estimated that at no distant day Switzerland would supply electricity profitebly not only for its own requirements, hut also for nearly all Germeny. In time those snows end glaciers are to pay the entire expenses of the republic, averting the necessity of taxation. A gold mine will give out; those mountain summits and gleciers will not.

The Itelians wern shrowd and eble in utilizing, capitalizing the forestiert, but the Swiss are far in the lead, the most highly organized, scientific ebsorbers (onother word nearly escaped me), I think, on the face of the eorth. When I found myself taxed for the hand I protested. I had not asked for any bund, or agreed to pey for one; I would pay something if they would not play. Of course, it ended in my paying. A Kursaal tax is levied on tourists, through the landlords. A friend of mine protested that her mother, past eighty, never entered it. The official replied there is no requiring such pnyments, but your landlord will have to pey if you do not; she paid it.

The railroads are practically all owned by the government, and the rates are high; the mountnin rates, very high. Of course, as they nre expensive, and the seeson is short, they should charge accordingly; hut I have paid 50 cents a mile for each of my family. All trunks nre weighed and charged for at high rntes. On the mountain railroads even the hand-pieces are so charged. Not every one, these tunnel-days, has crossed the Passes, and noted the admirable road-engineering in which the Swiss, as well as the Italians, are past masters. And they protect their roads; outomobiles being allowed only on certain roads and passes, aud at certain hours. We might well tnke lessons from them. Automobiles, like the railroad cars, should have their special roads, end be restricted to them.

In the season Switzerland is a mob. The extreme tunnel road to Eismeer, only six miles long, is carrying three thousand passengers a day, running trams in three sections, at fourteen cents a mile. The income is easily reckoned. I should advise all Americans to time their visit to Switzerland for June or September, unlees they are fond of "winter sports" and are strong enough to hear them.

Every winter sees a decided increase of visitors who come to slide down hill, skate, aud revel in the snow and ice. Toboggan slides of three to four miles, run with proper safeguards, are arranged; the return ascent is made by railroad or other similer contrivance. Artificial ice ponds, if natural ones are not near, are cleared of snow for the skater.

Switzerland is to be as much of a winter resort as a summer one—perhaps more. In short, the canny Swiss are likely to coin money out of snow and ice.

NOTED CAFE CLOSED

New Orleans Health Board Orders Resort to Suspend.

Every Tourist Who Has Visited French Quarter in the Crescent City Will Be Grieved to Learn Restaurant Is No More.

New Orleans—Mme. Begue's restaurant—that delightful old placo just opposite the French market in New Orleans—has heen ordered closed. Not only has it been ordered closed, but the order come from Dr. Oscar Dowling of the stote boord of health.

And unless Papa Begue obeys tho demands of the deportment, the Crescent City will lose one of its most famous landmerks, known to tourists and epicures throughout the civilized world. Doctor Dowling avers the place has heen weighed in the sanitary scales and found wanting.

Until her death, October 20, 1906, Mme. Begue, dark, short, plump and smiling, wes the presiding genius of the Beguo establishment. Her experience and handicraft created the dishes which remain sacred in tho memory of every guest. Since her death Papa Begue hes conducted the rendezvous for tourists.

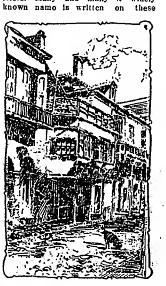
Located in the derkest, dirtiest, noisiest quarter of New Orleans, almost a part of the stir end chaos of the French market, the food bazaar of bizarre food became known to tourists as tho Begue Exchange.

Breakfast et Begue's was en eight or ten course meal which began at 11 o'clock in the morning and continued until 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Three hours of cuisinic medleys; three hours whiled by the bebel of foreign tongues; three hours of fun, of eating, drinking end smoking.

The meal fascinated end satisfied from its beginning of French bread and wine to the strong coffee and cigars, and not until the timn hod nearly expired did one wonder that the Begue Exchange served only one meal a day.

Time and prosperity did not enter into tho fashion end furnishing of tho Begue Exchenge.

One of tho most interesting features of Begue's wee the trio of registers. Many and meny a widely known namo is written on these thumbed pages. Henry Irving, Ellen Terry, Marion Crawford, William H. Crane, Joseph Jefferson, De Wolf Hopper—these sre only a few taken at random.



Mme. Begue's Restaurant.

In Eugene Field's handwriting is the following:

"I'm very proud to testify the happiest of my days is March 11, '95, at breakfost at Begue's."—Eugeno Field.

Selina Fetter Roylo turns to Scripture end writes:

"O Lord, open thou our mouths and our lips shall show forth our praise."

CURE FOR SLEEPING SICKNESS

West Coast of Africa May Get Rid of Disease Through Fowls Who Eat Pupa of Fly.

London.—Letters received from the west coast of Africa during the last few days tell of a new hope for the ultimate conquest of sleeping sickness. It is known that one or two of the tsetse flies cerry the parasite (trypanosome) either from man to man or from beest to mon. The attempt to remove the natives from the fly areas, ond thus to protect them from the disease, hes not been altogether successful. Any effort to kill down the flies appcors hopeless.

Recent work, however, shows that the guinea fowl finds the pupa of the fly a tasty morsel. Land that has heen scratched over by fowls is completely free from the pest. In a few weeks full details of this new hope will be published the world over. If tho natives can be persuaded to keep fowls it will not only he a source of profit to thomselves, but elso a protection egainst the assaults of the fly. Fowls do not harbor the diseese, and olthough they have maladies of their own they nre not such as attack human beings.

City Is Old Name.

Kansas City.—The city of Kanaos City, Kan., was once the town of Wyandotte. The natives had a clever way of saving time hy writing it "Y&."

THE SUNBEAM.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

VOL. XII. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, APRIL 26, 1912. NO. 5.

Tales of GOTHAM and other CITIES

Where Finnegan Held His Christening

WAH-WAH FLIGHT DOWN —STRAIGHT AHEAD-HIC AN' THEN TO TH' -TH' RI-RIGHT

NEW YORK.—There was a christening the other night at the home of Michael Finnegan. He had known Mike for years, had Bill Murphy, but for the life of him he could not reveal to Magistrate O'Conner, in the West side court, where Mr. Finnegan and the little Finnegans lived, save in a vague way.

Bill Murphy blinked his eyes and hardened his features. Followed a heavy bar of silence while the court turned his head away. Bill Murphy was taking violent hold of himself and began:

"Me own home, your honor, is at 300 West Fortieth street, wan flight down, straight ahead an' then to the right."

"Good," Magistrate O'Conner cheered him. "Now tell me where Mr. Finnegan held his christening and how you came to undress and go to sleep on a bench in the Ninety-sixth street station of the subway."

Bill Murphy drew his hand across his lips and set his teeth.

"Mike Finnegan," he uttered fiercely, "lives just a bit off that avenue named after the wop that discovered New York. 'Tis a common name, but it don't come to me just now."

"Columbus avenue," suggested his honor.

"Righto," ejaculated Bill Murphy, brightly. "Columbus was the wop's name. Now we're gettin' along. 'Twas a grand christening, judge, an' it begun Sunday. Leastwise Sunday run along into it, not to spake o' part o' Saturday an' mebbe some o' Friday. Lavin' Mike's house, says I to meself, 'Bill, let's walk home; ye need the air.' The answer was yes, an' we walked, the two of us, Bill an' meself, castin' two shadows off the lamps.

"Me home, as I said before, judge, is at 300 West Fortieth, one flight down, straight ahead an' thin to the right. We come along, judge, a long piece, a good Irish mile, when I see ahead o' me a open-faced entrance an' steps leadin' down.

"'Is it home we are, Bill?' says I, an' Bill he says, 'Yis.' 'Very good,' says I, 'we need sleep an' a power of it, on'y sleep light an' don't wake the house.' So down we wint, the two av us, judge, one flight down, straight ahead an' thin to the right.

"'There's our bed, Bill,' says I, an' Bill says, 'Yes,' so we both undressed an' wint to bed, the two av us in the same bed, an' the next thing I know me home is full o' cops an' bleatin' women yellin' 'Horrors.'"

Why Chicago Man Dotes on Shortcake

STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE ALWAYS BRINGS GOOD LUCK TO ME—

CHICAGO.—"Give me a piece of that strawberry shortcake."

This was what a waitress in a restaurant near the board of trade heard several days ago—in fact, the first day that strawberry shortcake was on the menu in that particular restaurant. The man who asked for the cake was a good customer, but one who had a regular diet and seldom if ever varied from his prescribed meal. The waitress gave the man a piece of shortcake. He smacked his lips over the luscious berries and the rich cake crust, and, finally too full of good cheer at the reminder of what a piece of shortcake meant to him at one time, turned to the waitress and said:

"Every day that you have shortcake, you can count on me for one piece, no difference how much it costs. I have a particular reason for liking shortcake, or rather for being partial to the delicacy, and no wonder when one piece of it meant just $14,000 to me. I know that statement sounds strange, but it is true, nevertheless. Three years ago, during a scurry in wheat I was advised, much against my will, to sell out my holdings when the market looked as if it were about to cave in. I finally took my broker's advice and started for the board of trade to sell what wheat I had. As I was about to enter the door of the building, a friend of mine stopped me and asked me to come over to this same restaurant and have a piece of shortcake. I told him I was nervous about the market and probably had better go directly in and sell.

"'Oh, the market is steady for 15 minutes,' he said, and I came over here. We sat around and talked for fully twenty-five or thirty minutes, and when I got back to the floor the market had taken a bull stand and was going up in leaps and bounds. I hung on until the first cent was pulled off the top and then, fearing a bottom crash, I sold and cleared just $14,000.

Wade Through Huge Drifts for Food

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—The passengers on a Chicago, Burlington & Quincy train, which became stalled in the snow west of Lincoln, Neb., went 48 hours practically without food during a recent storm. F. H. Hooper, a traveling salesman, was one of them.

"There was not even a fruit vender on the train," Mr. Hooper said, "and no provisions at all, for we expected to take on a diner at Lincoln.

"When we woke up next morning the snow was drifted high above our windows, so we could not see out.

"I walked through the train and found a sturdy looking chap up in the smoking car. I suggested to him that we undertake to walk back to the nearest ranch, a mile back down the track, and try and get some food for the passengers. He was willing.

"Some places the wind had swept pretty nearly clean of snow and we had no difficulty at all, but other places progress was well-night impassable. We floundered in drifts and for hundreds of yards had to walk through snow up to our waists. It was the most exhausting task I ever attempted, and I am something of an athlete.

Belief in Witch Doctors Not Insanity

I THINK HE ISS GRAZY -HE BELIEFS IN WITCH DOCTORS

DETROIT.—That a man may be the victim of a monomania for years and yet be perfectly rational on every other matter and be able to do the most delicate work, in which a mistake or even a little carelessness might have the most serious results, was testified to in the probate court the other day while Judge Hulbert was investigating the sanity of August Mais, a German Pole.

It was alleged as a proof of the man's insanity that he believed in "witch-doctors," and that he paid them as much as $5 at a time for their advice, but one of the Polish lawyers explained to the court that that belief was very prevalent in the Polish quarter of the city, and that hundreds of them who were in all other respects rational and intelligent, consulted witch-doctors.

Mais is a hard-working man who came to this country twenty years ago. He worked seven years in one factory and eight in another. For the past two years he has been working for the Michigan Wire company, making insulated wire, a job that requires to be done with the utmost nicety, for any defect in the insulation might cause serious accidents. The superintendent of the factory testified that Mais was one of the best men he had ever had, and that he wished he could get fifty more like him.

It was explained to the court that a belief in witch-doctors was not considered a sign of insanity in the Polish quarter, and the petition to have Mais committed to a lunatic asylum was denied.

A woman is so used to pinning things that she can't understand why a man should make so much fuss about a missing button.—Chicago News.

WHO'S WHO—and Why

ARIZONA SMITH IN CONGRESS

A shout of joy went up all over Washington when it was known that Mark Smith was coming back. For twenty-two years, barring a couple of terms when the Territory of Arizona had the bad taste not to re-elect him, he was one of the landmarks of Washington. And when he took his seat in the senate every member knew it would not take him long to make Arizona a power in that body, for his position in Washington has long been established.

A territorial delegate occupies the position of a small boy, who must be seen and not heard. Mark Smith was the sole exception. He ranked with Amos J. Cummings and Private John A. Allen, and his cloakroom stories were classics. Tall, grizzled, red-faced, with a big gray mustache and a kindly drawl, an unquenchable sense of humor, the delegate was a better-known and more familiar figure than many a senator.

But he was no mere Rialto figure. His ability was everywhere acknowledged and respected, and when the interests of his territory were involved the genial, drawling, story-telling tongue turned into an engine of war.

HEAD OF IMPORTANT DIVISION

Wisconsin's university extension division has two fundamental aims—to create in all the people a realization of their educational need and to satisfy that need. Education by "extension" does not mean that the laboring man is taught Greek and Chaucer, regardless of his individual want. It does not mean that knowledge is ground out to him by a soulless machine, but that he is stimulated to live, in the true sense of the word. Whether the means of that stimulation be vocational or cultural education, the end sought is the same.

In Wisconsin the seemingly impossible task of making the university a personal friend of every one in the state is attempted by means of a well-developed organization, headed by Dr. Louis E. Reber, who has been dean of the extension division since November, 1907, and has demonstrated over and over again his rare executive ability.

The correspondence department is the only one that deals primarily with individuals. Therefore it, more than any other, affords concrete examples of the way in which people are being helped to make the best of their abilities. Contrary to popular opinion, this work is, above all else, personal. Prof. William H. Lighty, who is in charge of it, has had years of "settlement" experience that is invaluable to one dealing constantly with all classes and all nationalities of people.

MRS. SUN-YAT-SEN A LEADER

The latest news from China shows that the transition from Imperial to Republican rule is encountering all the shoals and currents which beset such changes. It is fortunate that such men as Yuan Shih-kai and Dr. Sun-Yat-Sen are in a position to lead the nation. The latter's wife is a remarkably intelligent-looking woman. Yuan Shih-kai's action in submitting a list of the boards of ministers has been much criticised in Nankin. According to the terms of the provisional constitution this duty belongs to the premier. Several of the names proposed by Yuan Shih-kai are likely to meet with strong opposition from the assembly. Even China is not without its suffragette problems; for in response to a petition from Chinese women the assembly have adopted a resolution approving the principle of women suffrage but relegating its realization to the background. Trouble is still prevalent in many districts among the unpaid troops. Kiangsi soldiers raided the pay office just recently at Nankin, but were repulsed by Cantonese troops. Two of the mutineers were killed. At several points on the Yangtse from Shanghai westward, where there are large forces, the question of pay is causing dissatisfaction, which the provisional government is unable to appease owing to the hitch in the loan negotiations at Pekin.

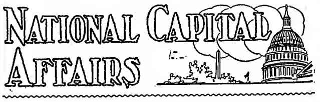
MAYOR GAYNOR'S NEW HOBBY

Mayor Gaynor and more than a thousand members of the Housewives league, the new organization of market basket progressives, took possession of Washington market the other day and inaugurated the new era by which it is hoped to show the middleman he is deriving an unholy profit and to educate the New York housewife in the domestic science of buying first hand.

The campaign among the housewives has been going on for many weeks, but this gathering marked the first big demonstration that brought to market almost a thousand women who had never been there before and who were treated to a series of surprises in the way of lower prices and choicer cuts.

The entire market was in gala dress and the butchers and green grocers were as spic and span as so many bridegrooms. Every man of them had a bloom in the buttonhole of his linen jacket, was shaved and powdered, and wore a hundred candle power smile.

Mayor Gaynor mingled with the throngs of purchasers, jollying the stall-keepers, asking innumerable questions and enjoying himself.



How a Middle Man Failed to Get His

I GOT MINE
I OUGHT TO GET STUNG FOR BEING FOOL ENOUGH TO TRUST THAT DON!!!?

"THERE is no particular moral in this story of Washington life, unless it be confirmation of the ancient philosophy to get your money first," remarked Col. Richard K. Lee the other day.

"A diplomat, whom we will call Don Juan Rapida, from one of the inflammatory Latin republics, caught the fancy of a young American girl, the heiress to many millions. The diplomat is good-looking, but financially impoverished. The girl agrees to wed him, and her plutocratic pater, who made his pile out of beer, is willing to take Rapida as a son-in-law. So desperately hard up is the South American gentleman for ready coin that he goes to a friend of mine to see if he can't raise $5,000 in order to make a showing in the preliminaries. This friend, being good-natured, introduces him to a generous party who agrees to provide the cash, provided Rapida will give him back $10,000 for the loan of the $5,000 as soon as the nuptials with the brewer's daughter have been consummated.

"My friend who arranges the deal is promised $1,000 for his trouble, but, being a rather harum-scarum business man, he takes no written promises, as did the lender of the money. Prior to that he had often put up small sums ranging from $10 to $30 so that Don Juan Rapida might be able to convey his loved one to the theater and a small dinner after the show. The very money that went to buy the engagement ring was furnished by my friend, who had to mortgage some little property of his own to get the ornament.

"Well, the wedding came off as per schedule, and the Don and his bride sailed for the gay capitals of Europe. The money lender got his $10,000 on the minute, but my unfortunate friend has had nothing more substantial than some polite letters from Paris and Berlin begging him to wait in patience and cease sending costly cablegrams marked collect. The letters are written with a view of cheering the recipient, but he refuses to be cheered and has about come to the conclusion that it will be many a day ere he gets back the cash that went for the engagement ring and the theater tickets, to say nothing of the fee promised for negotiating the $5,000 loan.

"Don Juan and his bride are having a gay time in the Old World, and the groom seems to have entirely forgotten his benefactor and friend in need. After all, that old saw about getting your money first is right in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred."

"Why Is a Cat?" a Burning Question

I SAY GENTLEMEN—TH' CAT IS A FELINE THAT SHOULD BE PROTECTED !-!-!!-?-!

A MINIATURE house of representatives, made up of a hundred or more of the "baby members," who are serving their first term in congress, convened at Rauscher's the other night and spent the evening joyously. It was the first banquet of the kind ever held. Party lines were forgotten, the methods of the house, the personalities of the older members, were burlesqued by the "youngsters."

There are 120 members in the house serving their first term, the greatest number since the beginning of congress, due to the political upheaval in 1910.

The business of the evening, after the banquet had been cared for, was a bill, introduced by Representative William C. Redfield of New York, placing a duty of $1 on all cats, and parts of cats, whether wild, pole or domestic in type, brought into this country or its possessions.

The bill also provided for a special additional duty on Maltese cats of 40 cents per pound of malt contained in each cat. Catnip was to be placed on the free list. The measure, declared its father, was to protect the American cat industry.

The Democratic opposition to the bill was led by Representative Frank B. Willis of Ohio. He denounced Representative Redfield as representing the cat industry. Free cats, Mr. Willis declared, were indispensable to the American people.

Whether the measure finally was passed or turned down was never quite decided. The burning question which developed from the debate was "Why is a cat?"

A Girl Balks at Marrying an Old Man

I WILL NOT MARRY THAT RED-EYED OLD TERRAPIN !-!-!?

HARVEY GIVEN, assistant United States attorney for the District of Columbia, happened to be walking the other morning by that famous corner in the courthouse where marriage licenses are issued, when he heard a girl's voice, saying with considerable feeling:

"Don't! I will not marry that red-eyed old terrapin, and I'm not eighteen years old—I am only fourteen."

Mr. Given stepped up to the counter in time to prevent a marriage license being issued. The man who was applying for it was Louis Garrison, sixty-one years old, of Stafford county, Virginia, and the girl, who was strenuously objecting, was Myrtle Baldwin of the same county. Mr. Given took matters into his own hands and conducted Garrison and Myrtle Baldwin to the office of United States Attorney Wilson. With them were Mrs. Lulu Decatur, a niece of Garrison, and Goodwin Mellow, a young man from Stafford county. Mr. Given told Mr. Wilson of the occurrence, and thereupon the quartet went under a very careful examination.

Myrtle declared over and over again she was only fourteen years old.

Hanging Is the Only Penalty for Murder

JUSTICE ROBB'S DECISION THAT LOOKS BAD FER ME ALRIGHT !!!

DEATH by hanging is the only punishment for murder in the first degree in the District of Columbia.

The right of a jury to qualify its verdict by adding the words "without capital punishment," is denied by the court of appeals of the District of Columbia in an opinion by Mr. Justice Robb. The appellate court holds that Arthur Johnson, colored, must explate on the scaffold the killing of John Ofenstein, a blacksmith, in December, 1910.

The decision of the appellate court sustains the finding of Justice Wright that the new penal code does not apply in this jurisdiction.

Justice Robb in his decision holds that the provisions of the District code relating to the murder were intended to supersede the provisions of the general statutes relating to these crimes.

"A careful study of the District code," says the justice, "irresistibly leads to the conclusion that congress in its enactment stepped aside from its revision and codification of the general laws of the United States and in its capacity as a national legislature for this municipality revised and brought together statutes supposedly applicable to conditions here existing."

"The main object in thus bringing together these local statutes," continues Justice Robb, "was to do away with ambiguity and provide for the people of the capital city a compact code of law.

Some people never make a good go so long as they can run.

To dream you are a judge means that you will never marry.

THE SUNBEAM.
W. G. HUNT, Publisher.
SUNBEAM. - - MINN.

VALUE OF COLD STORAGE.

A St. Louis dealer declared to a convention of egg and poultry men that "it is the cold-storage men who insure cheap eggs instead of high-priced ones, as some legislators would have us believe. Were it not for cold storage, eggs would go to one dollar a dozen in winter, and in some places would be absolutely unobtainable, says the Omaha Bee. Of course, cold storage boosts the price occasionally in the summer; but if it did not, farmers in that season could not get more than two or three cents a dozen for their eggs." No doubt much of this is strikingly true. The cold-storage plant is, indeed, a leveler of conditions, not only for eggs, but many other articles of produce, and, when properly conducted, with the purpose of serving natural needs and conditions, the cold storage becomes a most valuable economic factor. The trouble is that it is not always so conducted. Its potential harm equals its potential good, and, unfortunately, selfish men have exploited this fact to their own advantage and the consumers' detriment. It is this mismanagement of the cold-storage system itself against which remedial legislation is directed.

A poor working man told his wife on awakening one morning of a curious dream he had during the night, relates the Marquette Tribune. He dreamed he saw coming toward him in order, four rats. The first one was very fat, and was followed by two very lean rats, the rear rat being blind. The dreamer was greatly perplexed as to what evil might follow; as it had been understood that to dream of rats denotes calamity. He appealed to his wife concerning this but she could not help him. His son, who heard the father tell the story, volunteered to be the interpreter. "The fat rat," he said, "is the mail order firm which sells booze. The two lean rats are my mother and me, and the blind rat is yourself."

Vienna can boast a curious eccentric, who turns life upside down, a rich young Pole, who lives in sumptuous style, but always summons his servants by bugle call. His favorite pastime is driving an omnibus, attired like an ordinary busman, and, though he is said to spend a fortune each year in clothes, he wears no garment until it has been worn by his valet. He has astonished the guests at a ball by appearing in a costume of pure white, save for the shirt and tie, which were black. To complete his oddities, when dining, which he invariably does alone at a table d'hote, he reverses the usual order, beginning his meal with the sweets and ending with the soup.

A western woman lecturer on perfect love is suing for divorce. Her husband was mean enough to tell her she had better stay at home with her own family than to go abroad lecturing other people about the perfection of theirs, which, of course, constituted enough extreme cruelty to justify her plea.

Women in Washington got together and organized a successful war on the high car step. New York is the next city to capitulate to feminine demands. Two such signal victories will encourage feminine opposition to the high step everywhere.

A. Maurice Low in a lecture at Yale said that newspaper reporters are "men of trivial minds without perspective and without education." We infer that Mr. Low is not exactly pleased with the reports of his speeches that have appeared in the newspapers.

A passenger on a New York street car has discovered the way to deal with the hatpin peril. When the points of two came perilously near his eyes he snipped them off with a pair of pincers. A pair of pincers will now be the equipment of every man who is so fond of his eyesight that he is blind to consequences.

Thirteen per cent of college girls in a Wisconsin university have been found to be flat-footed. There is no doubt whatever that this is an unlucky percentage, and science is to be asked what it is going to do about it. The higher education is not worth such apparently dire affects.

A Hungarian doctor has succeeded in transplanting living hair to bald heads. Here is a real benefactor to the human race who makes a whole wig grow where no hairs grew before.

Concerning a red-hot meteor that fell through the roof of a house, a correspondent explains that it was cooled off with water. Evidently he wishes to make it clear that it didn't take place in Milwaukee.

AS THE TITANIC WENT TO IT'S GRAVE

Graphic Description Given By a Reporter.

1,726 Lives Lost In This Most Appalling of All Sea Tragedies—Boat Strikes Berg and Then Boilers Explode—Brave Men and Women Meet Death With Undaunted Courage.

BY CARTER P. HURD.

Staff Reporter, N. Y. World, who arrived on the Carpathia.

(Copyright, 1912, by Pulitzer Publishing Company; all rights reserved. Any violation of this copyright will be vigorously prosecuted by the N. Y. World.)

New York, April 19.—Seventeen hundred lives—the figures will hardly vary in either direction by more than a few dozen—were lost in the sinking of the Titanic which struck an iceberg at 11:45 p. m. Sunday and was at the ocean's bottom 2 hours and 35 minutes after.

The printed rolls of first and second cabins, compared with the list of the survivors on the Carpathia, show that of 341 first-cabin passengers, 212 were saved, 154 of them women and children; and that of 262 second-cabin passengers, 115 were saved, 102 of them women and children. of the third-class passengers, 800 in number, 136 survive, of whom 83 are women and children.

Of 985 officers and crew, 199, including 22 women, reached the Carpathia. A few in each class doubtless escaped enumeration on the Carpathia.

1,688 Are Unaccounted For.

Accepting the estimate of the Carpathia's officers that 700 survivors reached the ship, comparison with the total, 2,388, shows that 1,688 are unaccounted for.

There is but the faintest hope that any of these reached any other ship. Reports that the Californie, a cattle ship, may have rescued a few persons, have given merciful respite from utter despair to some of the women.

Cause, responsibility and similar questions regarding the stupendous disaster will be taken up in time by the British marine authorities. No disposition has been shown by any survivor to question the courage of the crew, hundreds of whom saved others and gave their own lives with a heroism which equaled, but could not exceed that of John Jacob Astor, Henry B. Harris, Jacques Futrelle and others in the long list of the first cabin missing.

Officers Knew Icebergs Were Near.

Facts which I have established by inquiries on the Carpathia, as positively as they could be established in view of the silence of the few surviving officers, are:

That the Titanic's officers knew, several hours before the crash, of the possible nearness of icebergs.

That the Titanic's speed, nearly 23 knots an hour, was not slackened.

That the number of lifeboats on the Titanic was insufficient to accommodate much more than one-third of the passengers, to say nothing of the crew. Most members of the crew say there were 16 lifeboats and two collapsibles; none say there were more than 20 boats in all. The 700 who escaped filled most of the 16 lifeboats and the one collapsible which got away to the limit of their capacity.

"Women First" Rule Enforced.

That the "women first" rule, in some cases, was applied to the extent of turning back men who were with their families, even though not enough women to fill the boats were at hand on that particular part of the deck. Some few boats were thus lowered without being completely filled, but most of these were soon filled with sailors and stewards, picked up out of the water, who helped man them.

That the bulkhead system, though probably working in the manner intended, availed only to delay the ship's sinking, the position and length of the ship's wound (on the starboard quarter) admitted icy water which caused the boilers to explode, and these explosions practically broke the ship in two.

Bulkheads Rendered Ineffective.

Had the ship struck the iceberg head-on, at whatever speed, and with whatever resultant shock, the bulkhead system of water-tight compartments would probably have saved the vessel. As one man expressed it, it was the "impossible" that happened when, with a shock unbelievably mild, the ship's side was torn for a length, which made the bulkhead system ineffective.

The Titanic was 1,799 miles from Queenstown and 1,191 miles from New York, speeding for a maiden voyage record. The night was starlight, the sea glassy. Lights were out in most of the staterooms, and only two or three congenial groups remained in the public rooms.

In the crow's nest, or lookout, and on the bridge, officers and members of the crew were at their places awaiting relief at midnight from their two hours' watch.

Danger Warning Sounded.

At 11:45 came the sudden sound of two gongs, a warning of immediate danger.

The crash against the iceberg which had been sighted at only a quarter of a mile, came almost simultaneously with the click of the levers operated by those on the bridge, which stopped the engines and closed the water-tight doors.

Captain Smith was on the bridge a moment later giving orders for the summoning of all on board, and for the putting on of life-preservers and the lowering of lifeboats.

Many Men in First Boats.

The first boats lowered contained more men than the latter ones, as the men were on deck first and not enough women to fill them.

When, a moment later, the rush of frightened women and crying children to the deck began, enforcement of the "women first" rule became rigid. Officers loading some of the boats drew revolvers, but in most cases the men, both passengers and crew, behaved in a way that called for no such restraint.

Report Captain Shot Self.

Revolver shots, heard by many persons shortly before the end of the Titanic, caused many rumors. One was that Captain Smith shot himself, another was that First Officer Murdock ended his life. Smith, Murdock and Sixth Officer Moody are known to have been lost. The surviving officers, Lightoller, Pitman, Bothall and Lowe have made no statement.

Members of the crew discredit all reports of suicide, and say Captain Smith remained on the bridge until just before the ship sank, leaping only after those on the decks had been washed away. It is also related that when a cook later sought to pull him aboard a lifeboat he exclaimed: "Let me go!" and, jerking away, went down.

Life-Preservers Effective.

What became of the men with life-preservers is a question asked since the disaster by many persons. The preservers did their work of supporting their wearers in the water until the ship went down. Many of those drawn into the vortex, despite the preservers, did not come up again. Dead bodies floated on the surface as the last boats moved away.

Band Plays as Ship Sinks.

To relate that the ship's string band gathered in the saloon, near the end, and played "Nearer, My God, to Thee," sounds like an attempt to give an added solemn color to a scene which was in itself the climax of solemnity. But various passengers and survivors of the crew agree in the declaration that they heard the music. To some of the hearers, with husbands among the dying men in the water and at the ship's rail, the strain brought in thought the words:

> "So, by my woes I'll be > Nearer, my God, to thee,
> Nearer to thee."

"Women and children first," was the order in the filling of the Titanic's lifeboats. How well that order was fulfilled the list of missing first and second cabin passengers bears eloquent witness. "Mr." is before almost every name.

Chose Death With Husbands.

Mrs. Isidor Straus, who chose death rather than to leave her husband's side; Mrs. Allison, who remained below with her husband and daughter, and others who, in various ways were kept from entering the line of those to be saved, are striking examples of those who faced the disaster calmly.

To most of the passengers the midnight crash did not seem of terrific force. Bridge players in the smoking room kept on with their game.

Once on deck, many hesitated to enter the swinging lifeboats. The glassy sea, the starlit sky, the absence, in the first few minutes, of intense excitement, gave them the feeling that there was only some slight mishap—that those who got into the boats would have a chilly half hour below, and might later be laughed at.

Remarkable Heroism Displayed by All.

Enforcement of the Rule "Women First" Sunders Family Ties Forever—Famous Americans Show Elements of Strong Manhood—Passengers in Lifeboats Watch Great Steamer Sink.

It was such a feeling as this, from all accounts, which caused John Jacob Astor and his wife to refuse the places offered them in the first boat and to retire to the gymnasium. In the same way H. J. Allison, Montreal banker, laughed at the warning, and his wife, reassured by him, took her time about dressing. They and their daughter did not reach the Carpathia. Their son, less than two years old, was carried into a lifeboat by his nurse and was taken in charge by Maj. Arthur Peuchen.

The admiration felt by passengers and crew for the matchlessly appointed vessel was translated, in those first few moments, into a confidence which, for some, proved deadly.

Lifeboats Are Lacking.

In the loading of the first boat, restrictions of sex were not made, and it seemed to the men who piled in beside the women that there would be boats enough for all. But the ship's officers knew better than this, and as the spreading fear caused an earnest advance toward the suspended craft the order, "Women first!" was heard, and the men were pushed aside.

To the scenes of the next two hours on those decks and in the waters below, such adjectives as "dramatic" and "tragic" do but poor justice. With the knowledge of deadly peril gaining greater power each moment over those men and women, the nobility of the greater part, both among cabin passengers, officers, crew and steerage, asserted itself.

Straus Held Back by Guard.

Isidor Straus, supporting his wife on her way to a lifeboat, was held back by an inexorable guard. Another officer strove to help her to a seat of safety, but she brushed away his arm and clung to her husband, crying, "I will not go without you."

Another woman took her place, and her form, clinging to her husband's, became part of a picture now drawn indelibly in many minds. Neither wife nor husband, so far as anyone knows, reached a place of safety.

Astor and Wife Part.

Colonel Astor, holding his wife's arm, stood decorously aside as the officers spoke to him, and Mrs. Astor and her maid were ushered to seats. Mrs. Henry B. Harris parted in like manner from her husband, saw him last at the rail, beside Colonel Astor. Walter M. Clark of Los Angeles, nephew of the Montana senator, joined the line of men as his young wife, sobbing, was placed in one of the craft.

"Let him come! There is room!" cried Mrs. Emil Taussig as the men of the White Star line motioned to her husband to leave her. It was with difficulty that he released her hold to permit her to be led to her place.

George D. Widener, who had been in Captain Smith's company a few moments after the crash, was another whose wife was parted from him and lowered, a moment later, to the surface of the calm sea.

Butt, Hays and Stead Lost.

Of Major Archie Butt, a favorite with his fellow tourists; of Charles M. Hays, president of the Grand Trunk; of Benjamin Guggenheim, and of William T. Stead, no one seems to know whether they tarried too long in their staterooms or whether they forebore to approach the fast filling boats. None of them was in the throng which, weary hours afterward, reached the Carpathia.

Pistols Check Steerage Man.

Simultaneously on the upper decks of the ship the ropes creaked with the lowering of boats, and as they reached the water those in the boats saw what those on the decks could not see—that the Titanic was listing rapidly to starboard, and that her stern was rising at a portentious angle. A rush of steerage men toward the boats was checked by officers with revolvers in hand.

Some of the boats, crowded too full to give rowers a chance, drifted for a time. None had provisions or water, there was a lack of covering from the icy air, and the only lights were the still undimmed arcs and incandescents of the settling ship, save for one of the first boats. There a steward, who explained to the passengers that he had been shipwrecked twice before, appeared carrying three oranges and a green light.

Green Lantern as Savior.

That green light, many of the survivors say, was to the shipwrecked hundreds as the pillar of fire by night. Long after the ship had disappeared, and while confusing false lights danced about the boats, the green lantern kept them together on the course which led them to the Carpathia.

As the end of the Titanic became manifestly but a matter of moments, the oarsmen pulled their boats away, and the chilling waters began to echo splash after splash as passengers and sailors in life preservers leaped over and started swimming away to escape the expected suction.

Icy Water Brings Death.

Only the hardiest of constitutions could endure for more than a few moments such a numbing bath. The first vigorous strokes gave way to heartbreaking cries of "Help! Help!" and stiffened forms were seen, the faces relaxed in death.

Revolver shots were heard in the ship's last moments. The first report spread among the boats was that Captain Smith had ended his life with a bullet. Then it was said that a mate had shot a steward who tried to push his way upon a boat against orders. None of these tales have been verified, and many of the crew say the captain, without a preserver, leaped in at the last end went down, refusing a cook's offered aid.

Last Lifeboat is Capsized.

The last of the boats, a collapsible, was launched too late to get away, and was overturned by the ship's sinking. Some of those in it—all, say some witnesses—found safety on a raft, or were picked up by lifeboats.

In the Marconi tower, almost to the last, the loud click of the sending instrument was heard over the waters. Who was receiving the message, those in the boats did not know, and they would least of all have supposed that a Mediterranean ship in the distant South Atlantic track would be their rescuer.

Music Was a Sacrament.

As the screams in the water multiplied another sound was heard, strong at first, then fainter in the distance. It was the melody of the hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," played by the string orchestra in the dining saloon. Some of those on the water started to sing the words, but grew silent as they realized that for the men who played, the music was a sacrament soon to be consummated by death. The serene strains of the hymn and the frantic cries of the dying blended in a symphony of sorrow.

Titanic Goes to Bottom.

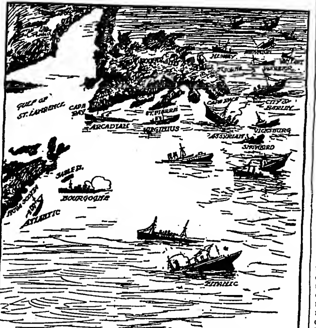
Led by the green light, under the light of the stars, the boats drew away, and the bow, then the quarter, then the stacks, and at last the stern of the marvel-ship of a few days before passed beneath the waters. The great force of the ship's sinking was unaided by any violence of the elements, and the suction, not so great as had been feared, rocked but mildly the group of boats now a quarter of a mile distant from it.

Sixteen boats were in the forlorn procession which entered on the terrible hours of rowing, drifting and suspense. Women wept for lost husbands and sons. Sailors sobbed for the ship which had been their pride. Men choked back tears and sought to comfort the widowed. Perhaps, they said, other boats might have put off in another direction toward the last. They strove, though none too sure themselves, to convince the women of the certainty that a rescue ship would appear.

Carpathia Brings Joy.

Early dawn brought no ship, but not long after 5 a. m. the Carpathia, far out of her path and making 18 knots an hour instead of her wonted 15, showed her single red and black smokestack upon the horizon. In the joy of that moment, the heaviest griefs were forgotten.

Soon afterward, Captain Rostron and Chief Steward Hughes were welcoming the chilled and bedraggled arrivals over the Carpathia's side.



MOST DREADED PART OF ATLANTIC OCEAN.

The list of survivors given out after the Carpathia reached port did not contain the name of Arthur Ryerson, formerly of Chicago, although the other members of his family were saved. Miss Elizabeth Isham of Chicago is not in the list of rescued. E. G. Lewy, Chicago jeweler, was not on the Carpathia.

A survivor says the crew acted with great courage—but not with more heroism than was shown by John Jacob Astor, Jacques Futrelle and others of the noted passengers who perished.

SUFFERED EVERYTHING

For Fourteen Years. Restored To Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Elgin, Ill.—"After fourteen years of suffering everything from female complaints, I am at last restored to health.

"I employed the best doctors and even went to the hospital for treatment and was told there was no help for me. But while taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I began to improve and I continued its use until I was made well."—Mrs. HENRY LEISEBERG, 743 Adams St.

Kearneysville, W. Va.—"I feel it my duty to write and say what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered from female weakness and at times felt so miserable I could hardly endure being on my feet.

"After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and following your special directions, my trouble is gone. Words fail to express my thankfulness. I recommend your medicine to all my friends."—Mrs. G. B. WHITTINGTON.

The above are only two of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which show clearly what great things Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound does for those who suffer from woman's ills.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Beauty specialists encounter many hard lines.

No harmful drugs in Garfield Tea. It is composed wholly of simple health-giving herbs.

The Worst of the Week.

"If you will come back Monday night," she said, "I'll give you some of my home-made fudge."

"I'll sure come," he said, "for this is the year for candy-dotes."—Judge.

Women's College for Buddhists.

A university is to be founded by the Buddhists for the high education of women. A meeting is reported to have taken place on the Nishi-Hongangi temple, Kyoto, in which it was unanimously decided to carry on the undertaking as a work of the Women's Association of this Buddhist sect. The cost for the institute is estimated at 280,000 yen.

Story of a Bible.

A case that had to do with the theft of a Bible was before the grand jury some time ago and after it had been disposed of, George W. Seibert, foreman of the jury, related a story in which a Bible figured prominently. Mr. Siebert said that his mother had given him an old-fashioned family Bible when he married. About two years after his marriage Mr. Siebert needed money, he said, and had almost decided to dispose of the Bible. When such thoughts were occupying his mind, Mr. Seibert picked up the Bible one day and began turning over the leaves of the book. He had passed over several pages when his eye fell on two $50 bills. His mother had placed them in the Bible when she had presented the book to him. Mr. Seibert still has the Bible.—Indianapolis News.

THANKSGIVING PSALM
A Rhythmical and Grateful Chant.

A teacher in a Terre Haute public school joins in the chorus:

"Teaching is a business which requires a great deal of brain and nerve force. Unless this force is renewed as fast as expended the teacher is exhausted before the close of the year. Many resort to stimulating tonics for relief.

"For 3 years I struggled against almost complete exhaustion, getting what relief I could from doctors' tonics. Then in the spring of 1903 I had an attack of la grippe and malaria which left me too weak to continue my work. Medicine failed to give me any relief, a change of climate failed. I thought I should never be able to go back in school again.

"I ate enough food (the ordinary meats—white bread, vegetables, etc.), but was hungry after meals.

"I happened at this time to read an article giving the experience of another teacher who had been helped by Grape-Nuts food. I decided to try Grape-Nuts and cream, as an experiment. It was a delightful experience, and continues so after a year and a half of constant use.

"First, I noticed that I was not hungry after meals.

"In a few days that tired feeling left me, and I felt fresh and bright, instead of dull and sleepy.

"In three months, more than my usual strength returned, and I had gained 15 pounds in weight.

"I finished the year's work without any kind of tonics—was not absent from duty even half a day.

"Am still in best of health, with all who know me wondering at the improvement.

"I tell them all 'Try Grape-Nuts!'" Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

OF SMALL CONCERN TO HIM

Why Uncle Eph Refused Information He Felt to Be Altogether Superfluous.

When Robert H. Davis was young and loose in the tent he once wandered into a little Mississippi town. It was a bright day in the early spring and he walked down one street. By and by he came to the county jail—a two-storied affair, standing flush with the sidewalk. "There was a negro pressing his face against the barred window on the second floor," said Mr. Davis, "holding on to the bars and yawning. By and by an old negro came limping along the street toting a whitewash bucket.

"'Hello, Uncle Eph'm,' says the one in the window.

"'Howdy,' says Ephraim, limping on.

"'Wait a minute, uncle,' says this lonesome negro in the window. 'What time is it, uncle?'

"Uncle Ephraim limped right on. He hardly looked up.

"'What diffunce does it make to you, niggeh?' he asked. 'You ain't goin' nowhere.'"—New York Letter to the Cincinnati Times-Star.

ALMOST CRAZY WITH ECZEMA

"I, the undersigned, cannot give enough praise to the Cuticura Remedies. I had been doctoring for at least a year for eczema on my foot. I had tried doctor after doctor all to no avail. When a young girl I sprained my ankle three different times, paying little or no attention to it, when five years ago a small spot showed upon my left ankle. I was worried and sent for a doctor. He said it was eczema. He drew a small bone from the ankle about the size of a match and about an inch long. The small hole grew to about the size of an apple, and the eczema spread to the knee. The doctors never could heal the hole in the ankle. The whole foot ran water all the time.

"My husband and my sons were up night and day wheeling me from one room to another in the hope of giving me some relief. I would sit for hours at a time in front of the fireplace hoping for daybreak. The pain was so intense I was almost crazy, in fact, I would lose my reason for hours at a time. One day a friend of mine dropped in to see me. No more had she glanced at my foot than she exclaimed: 'Mrs. Finnegan, why in the world don't you try the Cuticura Remedies?' Being disgusted with the doctors and their medicines, and not being able to sleep at all, I decided to give the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment a trial. After using them three days that night I slept as sound as a silver dollar for eight long hours. I awoke in the morning with but very little pain, in fact, I thought I was in heaven. After using the Cuticura Remedies for three months I was perfectly restored to health, thanks to the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I will be sixty-four years of age my next birthday, hale and hearty at present." (Signed) Mrs. Julia Finnegan, 2234 Hebert St., St. Louis, Mo., Mar. 7, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Found Imitation Difficult.

Bert, a freshman, closed a letter to his cousin Joe, five years old, by saying: "Now, I must quit and write five pages on Esther."

The next day his father found Joe armed with tablet and pencil, trying to hold down his young brother Robert, and said to him: "Joe, what are you doing?"

"I'm trying to write five pages on Rob, but he won't be still," replied the little fellow.

A better thing than tooth powder to cleanse and whiten the teeth, remove tartar and prevent decay is a preparation called Paxtine Antiseptic. At druggists, 25c a box or sent postpaid on receipt of price by The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass.

Shrewdness.

"And why are you writing 'Personal' on that envelope?"

"I want the man's wife to read the letter."

For torpid, inactive or disordered liver, take Garfield Tea. All druggists.

Nothing pleases a woman more than her inability to show her age.

44 Bu. to the Acre

is a heavy yield, but that's what John Kennedy of Edmonton, Alberta, Western Canada, got from 40 acres of Spring Wheat in 1911. Reports from other districts in that province showed other excellent results—such as 4,000 bushels of wheat from 120 acres, or 33 1-3 bu. per acre. 25, 30 and 40 bushel yields were numerous. As high as 132 bushels of oats to the acre were threshed from Alberta fields in 1911.

The Silver Cup

at the recent Spokane Fair was awarded to the Alberta Government for its exhibit of grains, grasses and vegetables. Reports of excellent yields for 1911 come also from Saskatchewan and Manitoba in Western Canada.

Free homesteads of 160 acres, and adjoining preemptions of 160 acres (at $3 per acre) are to be had in the choicest districts.

Schools convenient, climate excellent, soil the very best, railways close at hand, building lumber cheap, fuel easy to get and reasonable in price, water easily procured, mixed farming a success.

Write as to best place for settlement, settlers' low railway rates, descriptive illustrated "Last Best West" (sent free on application) and other information, to Sup't of Immigration, Ottawa, Can., or to the Canadian Government Agent. (30)

[illegible]

SPUR OF ICEBERG RIPS BOTTOM OFF GIGANTIC SHIP

Titanic Is Literally Disemboweled by Submerged Floe While Speeding.

PLACID SEA HIDES DEATH

Little Shock Is Felt When Vessel Strikes—Passengers for Half an Hour Believe Damage Is Slight—Pathetic Stories of Survivors.

New York, April 19.—It was the submerged spur of an iceberg of ordinary proportions that sent the White Star liner Titanic more than two miles to the bottom of the Atlantic off the banks of Newfoundland. The vessel was steaming almost full tilt through a gently swelling sea and under a starlit sky, in charge of First Officer Murdock, who a moment after the collision surrendered the command to Captain Smith, who went down with his boat.

The lifeboats that were launched were not filled to their capacity. The general feeling aboard the ship was, even after the boats had left its sides, that the vessel would survive its wound, and the passengers who were left aboard believed almost up to the last moment that they had a chance for their lives.

The captain and officers behaved with the utmost gallantry and there was perfect order and discipline in the launching of the boats and after all hope had been abandoned for the salvation of the ship for those who were on board.

Just before it went down the Titanic broke its back.

Placid Sea Hides Death.

The great liner was plunging through a comparatively placid sea on the surface of which there was much mushy ice and here and there a number of comparatively harmless looking floes. The night was clear and stars visible. Chief Officer Murdock was in charge of the bridge.

The first intimation of the presence of the iceberg that he received was from the lookout in the crow's nest. They were so close upon the berg at this moment that it was practically impossible to avoid a collision with it.

The first officer did what other unstartled and alert commanders would have done under similar circumstances—that is, he made an effort by going full speed ahead on his starboard propeller and reversing his port propeller, simultaneously throwing his helm over, to make a rapid turn and clear the berg.

Rips Bottom Open.

These maneuvers were not successful. He succeeded in preventing his bow from crashing into the ice cliff, but nearly the entire length of the great ship on the starboard side was ripped.

The speed of the Titanic, estimated to be at least twenty-one knots, was so terrific that the knifelike edge of the iceberg's spur protruding under the sea cut through her like a can opener.

The shock was almost imperceptible. The first officer did not apparently realize that the great ship had received its death wound and none of the passengers it is believed had the slightest suspicion that anything more than a usual minor accident had happened. Hundreds who had gone to their berths and were asleep were not awakened by the vibration.

Return to Card Game.

To illustrate the placidity with which practically all the men regarded the accident it is related that four who were in the smoking room playing bridge calmly got up from the table, and, after walking on deck and looking over the rail, returned to their game. One of them had left his cigar on the card table, and while the three others were gazing out on the sea he remarked that he couldn't afford to lose his smoke, returned for his cigar, and came out again.

The four remained only for a few moments on deck. They resumed their game under the impression that the ship had stopped for reasons best known to the commander and not involving any danger to her. The tendency of the whole ship's company except the men in the engine department, who were made aware of the danger by the inrushing water, was to make light of it and in some instances even to ridicule the thought of danger to so substantial a fabric.

Slow to Realize Peril.

Within a few minutes afterwards and other members of the crew were sent round to arouse the people. Some utterly refused to get up. The stewards had almost to force the doors of the staterooms to make the somnolent appreciate their peril.

Mr. and Mrs. Astor were in their room and saw the ice vision flash by. They had not appreciably felt the gentle shock and supposed then nothing out of the ordinary had happened. They were both dressed and came on deck leisurely.

It was not until the ship began to take a heavy list to starboard that a tremor of fear pervaded it.

Launch Boats Safely.

The crew had been called to clear away the lifeboats, of which there were twenty, four of which were collapsible. The boats that were lowered on the port side of the ship touched the water without capsizing. Some of the others lowered to starboard, including one collapsible, were capsized. All hands on the collapsible boats that practically went to pieces were rescued by the other boats.

Sixteen boats in all got away safely. It was even then the general impression that the ship was alright and there is no doubt that that was the belief of even some of the officers.

At the lowering of the boats the officers superintending it were armed with revolvers, but there was no necessity for using them as there was nothing in the nature of a panic and no man made an effort to get into a boat while the women and children were being put aboard.

Begin to Jump Into Sea.

As the ship began to settle to starboard, heeling at an angle of nearly forty-five degrees, those who had believed it was all right to stick by the ship began to have doubt and a few jumped into the sea. These were followed immediately by others and in a few minutes there were scores swimming around. Nearly all of them wore life preservers.

One man who had a Pomeranian dog leaped overboard with it and striking a piece of wreckage was badly stunned. He recovered after a few minutes and swam toward one of the lifeboats and was taken aboard. Most of the men who were aboard the Carpathia, barring the members of the crew who had manned the boats, had jumped into the sea as the Titanic was settling.

Ship Breaks in Two.

Under instructions from officers and men in charge the lifeboats were rowed a considerable distance from the ship itself in order to get away from the possible suction that would follow the foundering. The marvelous thing about the disappearance was so little suction as to be hardly appreciable from the point where the boats were floating.

There was ample time to launch all boats before the Titanic went down, as it was two hours and twenty minutes afloat.

So confident were all hands that it had not sustained a mortal wound that it was not until 12:15 a. m., or thirty-five minutes after the berg was encountered, that the boats were lowered. Hundreds of the crew and a large majority of the officers, including Captain Smith, stuck to the ship to the last.

It was evident after there were several explosions, which doubtless were the boilers blowing up, that it had but a few minutes more of life.

The ship broke in half amidship and almost simultaneously the after half and the forward half sank, the forward half vanishing bow first and the other half stern first.

Sinks With Little Flurry.

The sinking ship made much less commotion than the horrified watchers in the lifeboats had expected. They were close enough to the broken vessel to see clearly the most gruesome details of the foundering. All the spectators agree that the shattered sections of the ship went down so quietly as to excite wonder.

Some of the rescued were scantily clad and suffered exceedingly from the cold, but the majority of them were prepared for the emergency. In the darkness aboard the ship that came shortly after the collision it was impossible for those in the boats to distinguish the identity of any of the persons who leaped into the sea. It is believed that nearly all cabin passengers who had not gone overboard immediately after the boats were launched vanished with the officers and crew.

Had Time to Dress.

Some of the stewards who formed part of the lifeboat crew say that after the ship hit the berg the majority of the cabin passengers went back to their staterooms and that it was necessary to rout them out and in some instances force life preservers upon them. All agree that the engines of the ship were stopped immediately after she had made the ineffectual turn to clear the berg.

The lifeboats' crew were made up of stewards, stokers, coal trimmers and ordinary seamen. It is said that the davits were equipped with a new contrivance for the swift launching of the boats, but that the machinery was so complicated and the men so unfamiliar with it that they had trouble in managing it.

Describes Death of Butt.

Among the first of the passengers to leave the pier were Washington Dodge, his wife, and his seven-year-old son, whose large eyes shone with excitement from beneath the rolls of white mufflers that bound him from head to foot.

A camera man set off a flashlight directly in front of the party, but it only seemed to please the little boy. He shouted with joy. Mr. Dodge said he estimated that the time the ship sank was 12:15 a. m.

He said the last man he saw was Archibald Butt, who was standing stiff and erect on the deck.

Mr. Dodge was asked if he heard any shots. He replied "Yes."

"Suicide?" asked a reporter.

"I am afraid so," said Mr. Dodge.

First Woman in Lifeboats.

Mrs. Dickinson Bishop of Detroit said:

"I was the first woman in the first boat. I was in the boat four hours before being picked up by the Carpathia. I was in bed at the time the crash came, got up and dressed and went back to bed, being assured there was no danger. There were very few passengers on the deck when I reached there. There was little or no panic, and the discipline of the Titanic's crew was perfect. Thank God my husband was saved also."

P. D. Daly of England said he was above deck A and that he was the last man to scramble into the collapsible boat. He said that for six hours he was wet to his waist with the icy waters that filled the boat nearly to the gunwales.

Men Praised by Women.

One of the few women able to give an account of the disaster was Miss Cornelia Andrews of Hudson, N. Y. Miss Andrews said she was in the last boat to be picked up.

"The behavior of the men," she said, "was wonderful—the most marvelous I have ever beheld."

"Did you see any shooting?" she was asked.

"No," she replied, "but one officer did say he would shoot some of the steerage who were trying to crowd into the boats. Many jumped from the decks. I saw a boat sink."

Miss Andrews was probably referring to the collapsible boat which overturned. She said that the sinking of the ship was attended by a noise such as might be made by the boilers exploding. She was watching the ship, she said, and it looked as if it blew up; anyhow, it broke in two.

Story by Swedish Officer.

Lieut. Hakan Bjornstion Steffanson of the Swedish army, who was journeying to this country on the Titanic to see about the exportation of pulp to Sweden, narrowly escaped being carried down in the sinking ship when he leaped out from a lower deck to a lifeboat that was being lowered past him. Henry Woolner of London also made the leap in safety. Lieutenant Steffanson thinks he made the last boat to leave the ship and was only about a hundred yards away when it went down with a sudden lurch.

He had about his experience as he lay in bed at the Hotel Gotham, utterly worn out by the strain he had been under despite his six feet of muscle. It was also the first time he had discarded the dress suit he had worn since the shock of collision startled him from his chair in the cafe where he and Mr. Woolner were talking.

"It was not a severe shock," said the lieutenant. "It did not throw anyone from his seat; rather it was a twisting motion that shook the boat terribly. Most of the women were in bed. We ran up to the smoking room, where most of the men were rushing about trying to find out what was the matter, but there was a singular absence of apprehension, probably because we believed so thoroughly in the massive hulk in which we were traveling.

Sought to Calm Women.

"We helped to calm some of the women and advised them to dress and then set about getting them in boats. There seemed to be really no reason for it, but it was done because it was the safest thing to do.

"The men went about their task quietly. Why should they have done otherwise—the shock was so slight to cause much ruin. Mr. Woolner and I then went to a lower outside deck. It was deserted, but as we wished to find out what had happened we went down a deck lower. Then for the first time did we realize the seriousness of that twisting which had rent the ship nearly asunder. We saw the water pouring into the hull and when we finally stood water rose to our knees.

"Woolner and I decided to get out as quickly as we could and as we turned to rush upward we saw sliding down the port side of the drowning ship a collapsible lifeboat. Most of those it contained were from the steerage, but two of the women were from the first cabin. It was in charge of two sailors.

Jump Into Swaying Boat.

"'Let's not take any chances,' I shouted to Woolner, and as it came nearly opposite us, swinging in and out slowly, we jumped and fortunately landed in it. The boat teetered a bit and then swiftly shot down to the water. Woolner and I took oars and started to pull with all our might to get from the ship before she sank, for now there was little doubt of what would happen.

"We could see some gathered in the steerage, huddled together, as we pulled away, and then cries of fear came to us.

"We had hardly reached a point a hundred yards away—and I believe the boat I was in was the last to get safely away—when the horrible screams came through the night and the ship plunged swiftly down. It was so terribly sudden, and then there was a vast quiet, during which we shivered over the oars and the women cried hysterically. Some of them tried to jump overboard and we had to struggle in the shaky boat to hold them until they quieted down.

Victims Float to Surface.

"There was little widespread suction from the sinking ship, strange to say, and shortly after it went down people came to the surface, some of them struggling and fighting to remain afloat, and some were very still. But they all sank before we could reach them.

"It was bitterly cold and most of us were partly wet. It seemed hours before the Carpathia came up and took us aboard. Why, it was so cold that on board the Titanic we had been drinking hot drinks as if it were winter. The weather was absolutely clear, there was not the slightest fog or mist."

Aged Editor Drops Dead.

Cleveland, April 19.—Col. Isaac F. Mack of Sandusky, O., for 40 years editor of the Sandusky Register, one of the earliest members and directors of the Associated Press and formerly commander of the Ohio G. A. R., died suddenly of apoplexy here while in a downtown store with his wife. He was sixty-eight years old.

MINNESOTA BRIEFS

Week's History in Gopher State Told in Paragraphs.

Preston.—In the hottest fight in the history of the town Preston defeated license by one vote.

Duluth, April 16.—Thomas Healy, a business man at Proctor, a suburb, was held up by two men and robbed of $1,300.

Duluth. — Thomas Healy, a business man at Proctor, a suburb, was held up by two men and robbed of $1,300. The robbery took place in the main section of the village.

Minneapolis.—A bleached skull of a man, which apparently had lain there for at least twenty years, was found by laborers in the cellar of a razed building on the new postoffice site.

Duluth.—Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Silvey, prominent residents of Duluth, were on board the Titanic. Mrs. Silvey is reported safe. No word concerning Mr. Silvey has been received.

St. Paul.—Eight thousand and five hundred acres of land were sold by Theodore Nelson, in charge of the land sales department of the state auditor's office at Duluth. The prices ranged from $5 to $36. The average price was $8.

Hastings.—Henry Zusan, an old resident of Hastings, aged seventy years, while presumably in an unbalanced state of mind, created a sensation by making a high dive from the spiral bridge over the Mississippi river, a distance of about 75 feet. He was unhurt.

Red Wing. — Governor Eberhart was the guest of honor at a banquet in the Lutheran ladies' seminary here. Following the banquet the Governor spoke in the seminary chapel to the students and invited friends. The Governor addressed the high school pupils during the afternoon.

St. Paul.—Theodora Solberg of Oakland, Neb., told H. J. Maxfield, immigration commissioner, that if the Minnesota soil is right he will plant a colony of Swedes in the northern part of the state. He inquired about the soil near Bruno, Pine county. Mr. Maxfield said he would tell Mr. Solberg to send his colony as the soil had been tested and that Swedes grow abundantly in Pine county as in other parts of the state.

Winona.—At the annual meeting of the board of education it was decided to procure Prof. Grey of the University of Minnesota to give an address at the commencement exercises in June, in preference to the former oratorical contest in which the students took part. The action was taken on the suggestion made by the senior class some time ago, and the change has been met by the approval of the entire high school faculty.

Duluth.—More than 3,000 acres of state and school lands were sold at the state sale here. The sale was the first of the year in St. Louis county and was conducted by Theodore Nelson, manager of the land sales department of the state auditor's office. While a majority of the tracts disposed of were sold at about $5 an acre, some of the parcels were bid up to $8.25. The average price was $5.25. About 150 bidders were present.

Minneapolis.—Students at the University of Minnesota are either growing less studious or their work is being graded more rigidly, according to comparative figures on the number "below" in their work, compiled by Registrar E. B. Pierce and made public. With 105 less students registered than last year, an increase of "low marks" amounting to seventy-three was shown. The increase came entirely from the law college, where "flunks," "cons" and "incompletes" aggregated considerably more than an average of one to each student. The total was 376, with a total enrollment of only 306. Last year there were but 151 low-grade marks distributed, with an enrollment of 367. The figures compiled by Registrar Pierce include the academic, mines, engineering, chemistry and law colleges. In the five the total registration for the present school year was 2,460, compared to 2,565 last year. Every college showed a decrease in attendance except the chemistry college, which reported an increase of 17.

St. Paul.—Official call for the republican state nominating convention was issued by chairman E. E. Smith and Secretary J. A. O. Praus of the republican state committee. As decided by the committee at its meeting April 2, the convention will be held July 2, at 12 o'clock noon, in the St. Paul auditorium. County conventions are to be held June 28, and caucuses according to call by the county committees. The call provides for nomination of the ticket in the following order: Chief justice, two associate justices of the supreme court, congressman at large, governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, state treasurer, attorney general, and two railroad and warehouse commissioners. The apportionment of delegates is the same as for the delegate convention May 16. There will be 1,106 in all, Hennepin county having 84.

Appleton.—Frank Kanult, an elderly farmer living near here, died from the effects of a kick from one of his horses. He had just fed his team preparatory to going to work and was passing behind them when one of the horses kicked him in the stomach, causing his death in a few hours.

Duluth.—Manager Currie of the Duluth branch of the Lake Carriers' association announced that he has engaged and sent 200 men aboard the ships in Duluth-Superior harbor and that by the time interlake navigation opens there will be more than 500 aboard the fleet that wintered here.

Walls and how to decorate them
Alabastine Book

Free Color Plans

for any rooms you want to decorate

You can have the prettiest walls in your town, at the least cost. Our expert designers will plan the work for you FREE.

Get This Book 20 Pretty Rooms

—we will mail you a copy Free. It tells how to have the best decorating at least cost, is full of new color schemes and shows sixteen of the exquisite Alabastine tints, famous for their soft, refined qualities.

Alabastine

The Beautiful Wall Tint

is more in vogue in modern homes than wall paper or paint and costs far less. All kalsomine colors are harsh and crude beside Alabastine tints. Absolutely sanitary, goes farthest, does not chip, peel or rub off. Easy to use—just mix with cold water and put on. Directions on each package. Full 5-lb. package, White 50c; Regular Tints 55c.

Alabastine Company
55 Grandville Road, Grand Rapids, Mich.
New York City, desk 5 105 Water Street

REAL ESTATE

WESTERN CANADA FARM LANDS for $12-$18 per acre in the finest mixed farming district in Canadian West. Close to Prince Albert, Sask., splendid market point. Free Government homesteads also within 25 miles of City, crops excellent, settlement coming in fast. For free literature and maps, write Julius N. Woodward, Sec. Board of Trade, Dept. L, Prince Albert, Sask.

FOR SALE—200 A. IN SWIFT CO., MINN.; 150 a. cult.; 14 r. h., barn, outbldgs., orchard, etc.; nr. Iowa; will sac. MENGE, Box 310, Chicago.

ARKANSAS FARMS—Ozark fruit belt; mild climate; pure water; perfect health; free range; virgin forest; productive soil; $5 to $10 acre. Free homesteads under new law. Chas. Jones, Pettigrew, Ark.

MANITOBA WHEAT LANDS offer best homes and investments on earth. Not one crop failure since first settlement 25 years ago. Free information furnished by Campbell, Simpson & Gurton, Dauphin, Man.

OPPORTUNITY IN ARIZONA—Remit one dollar and ask for reliable information on any subject, Homestead, Dry Farming, Irrigated Lands, Climate, etc. No private axes to grind. Otis E. Young, Wenden, Ariz. References: National Bank of Arizona, Phoenix, Ariz.; The Commercial Bank of Parker, Ariz.; Yuma National Bank, Yuma, Ariz.

MOST OF THE PURCHASE MONEY loaned you at 6% interest, 5 years' time, to buy a home in Terrell County, Southwest Georgia. Lands level, fertile, even temperature, no snows, no blizzards, no freezing winters, grow cotton, corn, vegetables, fruit, peaches, pecans, cattle, hogs, chickens. In ten years these lands have enhanced in value from $2.00 to $10.00 and $25.00 per acre. When the Panama Canal is completed they will be out of reach. Buy now and borrow the money from us to pay for them. Write for free description of lands. Irwin Loan & Investment Co., Dawson, Georgia.

Reduced.

Potash—Cohen can nefer make a goot golluf bleyer.

Perlmutter—For vy not?

Potash—He neffer hollers fore—always he yells dree ninety-eight.—Wisconsin Sphinx.

A Correction.

"We are drifting toward a paternal form of government," said the economist.

"Pardon me if I correct you," responded the suffragette, gently; "to be accurate, you should say a maternal form of government."

Useful Agent for Show.

Al G. Field, the minstrel man, has another story which he is telling. He says that not long ago an attache of his show was sent out in an Iowa town to give some handbills, or heralds, to boys for distribution. The man found only one boy willing to work. He didn't deem it necessary to explain to the boy that the bills were to be distributed about town. He took it for granted that the boy knew. The youngster took the printed slips of paper and the man gave him a quarter and left. Half an hour later the showman chanced to pass along the street and saw the boy standing on the sidewalk.

"What's the matter?" asked the man.

The boy gave a couple of final sobs and, wiping his eyes on his sleeve, said:

"A man jist come along an' took one of my bills."

Every Crisp, Little Flake of

Post Toasties

has a flavour all its own.

"Toasties" are made of selected white Indian corn; first cooked, then rolled into wafer-like bits and toasted to an appetizing golden brown.

A favorite food for breakfast, lunch or supper in thousands upon thousands of homes where people are particular.

"The Memory Lingers"

Sold by Grocers

Postum Cereal Company, Limited
Battle Creek, Mich.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

Read who is supporting Taft published in another colum, and do not wonder when we say that Taft will be out of his present job the 4th, of next March, whether he gets the nomination, or not.

REPUBLICAN COUNTY CONVENTION.

Persuent to the call of the Republican State Central Committee duley communicated to the Republican County Committee for the County of Pennington, State of Minnesota, a Republican County Delegate Convention is hereby called to be held on the 13th, day of May, A.D. 1912, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon of said day at the Court house in Thief River Falls, Pennington County Minnesota, for the purpose of electing ten (10) delegates to the Republican State Convention to be held on the 16. day of May, A.D. 1912, at twelve o'clock noon of said day at the Armory, in Minneapolis, Hennepin County Minnesota, for the purpose of electing six delegates at large at large and six alternates to the National Republican Convention to Nominate a president and vice-president of the United States, to be held in Chicago, Illinois, on June 18th, 1612, and to nominate twelve Republican electors for the State of Minnesota; and for the further purpose of electing 10 delegates to the Republican District Convention for the Ninth Congressional District of the State of Minnesota, to be held at the Armory in the City of Thief River Falls, Pennington County, Minnesota, on the 15th, day of May A.D. 1912, at ten (10) o'clock in the forenoon of said day, for the purpose of electing two delegates and two alternates to the National Republican Convention to nominate a president and vice president of the United States, to be held at Chicago Illinois, on June 18th, 1912.

The primaries for the election of delegates to the said Republican County Convention shall be held at the usual voting places in each voting precinct in the County of Pennington, State of Minnesota, on Saturday the 11th, day of May 1912, from 7 to 8 o' clock p.m.

The several voting precincts in Pennington County will be entitled to the following number of delegates in said County Convention:

Bray	2
Black River	2
Cloverleaf	2
Deer Park	2
Goodridge	2
Highlanding	3
Hickory	2
Kratka	3
Mayfield	2
Norden	2
Numedahl	2
North	1
Polk Centre	2
Reiner	2
River Falls	2
Rockesbury	4
Sanders	3
Silverton	8
Smiley	4
Star	2
Village of St. Hilaire	3
Wyendotte
City of Thief River Falls
First Ward	6
Second "	7
Third	4
Fourth "	7
Total number of delegates.	79

By order of the county central committee of Pennington county. Minnesota.

DANIEL SHAW,
Chairman.

H.G.HIEBER,
Secretary.

The Danger After Grip

lies often in a run down system, Weakness, nervousness, lack of appetite, energy and ambition, with disordered liver and kidneys often follows an attact of this wretched disease. The greatest need then is Electric Bitter, the glourious tonic, blood purifier and regulator of stomach, liver and kidneys. Thousands have proved that they wonderfully strengthen the nerves, build up the system and restore to health and good spirits after an attact of Grip. If suffering, try them. Only 50 cents. Sold and perfect satisfaction guarenteed by All Druggists.

Republican District Convention.

The Republican District Convention for the Ninth Congressional District of Minnesota, will be held at the Armory in the City of Thief River Falls on the 15th, day of May A.D. 1912, at 10 o'clock A.M. for the purpose of electing two delegates and two alterates to the Republican National Convention to be held at Chicago on June 18, 1912, for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for president and vice president, and for the transaction of any other business that may properly come before the convention.

The county conventions to elect delegates thereto will be held in the respective counties on Monday, May 13th, A.D. 1912, at the places to be designated by the several county committees.

Representation in this convention will be made upon the following basis: Each county shall be entitled to one delegate for each two hundred and fifty votes, or major fraction thereof, cast for state officers in the year of 1910 in such county, and each county in addition thereto five delegates at large. The several counties in the district will be entitled to the following number of delegates in said convention:

Becker 12 Beltrami 11 Clearwater 8 Clay 13 Kittson 8 Marshall 12 Mahnomem 6 Norman 10 Ottertail 18 Polk 20 Pennington 10 Red Lake 8 Rossue 9 Wilkin 9.

By order of the Ninth District Republican Committee.

John Petterson, Chairman

Fred Dennis, Secretary.

Dated April 8, 1912.

It Looks Like A Crime

to separate a boy from a box of Bucklen's Arnica Selve. His pimples, boils, scratches, knocks, sprains, and bruises demand it, and its quick relief for burns, scalds, or cuts is his right Keep it handy for boys, also girls. Heals everything healeble and does it quick. Unequaled for piles. Only 25 cents at All Druggists.

FARM LOANS.

Made Without Delay, at reasonable rates of interest.

Be sure and see me before you place your loan.

GEORGE ELDER.
McGinn Block.
Thief River Falls.

U, S, Mail,

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 10.00 a. m. on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m

Wm.G. Hunt, p.m,

Consideration.

"Do you think women have a sense of humor?"

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne. "But I think they have become accustomed to restrain their laughter through fear of hurting some man's feelings."—Washington Star.

Pretty Near It.

Gibbs—One gets no diploma in the school of experience. Dibbs—I don't know. The marriage certificate comes pretty near being one.—Boston Transcript.

LORIMER AND HIS MEN ALL FOR TAFT

Their Customary Methods Being Used to Secure Delegates to National Convention,

STEPHENSON, TOO, IN LINE

Senators Who Voted to Seat These Representatives of Privilege and Special Interests United in Working for Taft's Renomination,

Because of the high-handed methods which have been used by the Taft managers to secure delegates for the renomination of the president, a situation has arisen in the ranks of his own supporters which is bound to have a tremendous influence upon the results of the Chicago convention.

There is developing a feeling among them that the methods they have pursued are wrong, not because of their realization that the ordinary rules of ethics have been violated, but because the fact is being brought home to them that the rank and file of the American voters are determined upon clean politics, especially in connection with the nomination and election of their chief magistrate. The country has witnessed the spectacle of the dragooning of federal office holders not only in the south but throughout the land for the purpose of forcing the selection of Taft delegates. Officials daring to display independence are subjected to charges of pernicious political activity or threatened with discipline. In the Indiana state convention contesting Taft delegates from Marion county were permitted to vote upon the question of whether they should remain in the convention. In New York the gross frauds which disenfranchised thousands of Republicans added crime to the farce of the State. In Colorado the Guggenheim machine, supported by the vast power of the Guggenheim interests, dominated the situation and forced the election of delegates pledged to vote for Mr. Taft.

These conditions have been repeated elsewhere and give a distaste to candidacy of a man promoted by such outrageous methods. Wherever a proper primary is held there is absent the cry of fraud. In the case of North Dakota, for example, no one questioned the result. This likewise was true of Oklahoma. It will be true of Nebraska, California, Oregon, New Jersey and Massachusetts. It will be true also of Illinois and Maryland, if those states shall secure a presidential preference primary law such as obtains in North Dakota and other states.

Composition of Taft Machine.

In view of the way in which the Taft machine is operating, it is interesting to see who compose it. Its manager, Congressman McKinley of Illinois, is a traction magnate, a warm personal friend of ex-Speaker Joseph G. Cannon, and one of Cannon's most ardent supporters in the house of representatives. McKinley was rewarded for his subservience by appointment to chairmanship of an important committee and by being placed in charge of the congressional campaign committee. In this way he became quite a power among his fellow congressmen, and during his years in Washington became known to Aldrich, Crane, Smoot and the other representatives of the "interests." Aldrich is still in Washington, watching over various matters in which he is interested and which are important to his friends in New York, and assisting in the direction of the Taft campaign. He still maintains the most friendly relations with Mr. Taft, who indorsed him so cordially in a speech at Boston, after having approved the tariff law, which the then senator from Rhode Island largely framed. In passing, it may be said that the reports of the tariff board on the wool and cotton schedules of this law show the disgraceful protection accorded to the wool and cotton manufacturers under it. Particularly in connection with cotton, the duties upon which aroused Mr. Aldrich's especial concern, because of the pressure of the cotton trust, known to the trade as the Arkwright club, it should be noted that the tariff board's report shows that American labor, especially upon plain goods, is no better paid than English labor, and that the sole result of the duties is to keep the American market for the special exploitation of the Arkwright club either in normal or abnormal times.

Mr. Aldrich approved the choice of Mr. McKinley as Mr. Taft's campaign manager. So did Senator Crane of Massachusetts and Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania, whose cynical disregard of the rights of the plain people is known the country over. In fact, Crane recommended Mr. McKinley to Mr. Taft. Smoot of Utah regards the selection as an excellent one.

May Be Judged by Their Actions.

Perhaps the best indication of the character of the men behind Taft is shown by the votes of those of his supporters in the senate in the Lorimer and Stephenson bribery cases. Starting with New England, we find that Dillingham of Vermont voted for Lorimer last winter and was chairman of the new committee which an outraged sentiment forced the senate to appoint. In this position he showed time and time again his sympathy for Lorimer, and was so unfair as to invite sharp criticism. He supported Lorimer in a report to the senate and will do so in the senate itself. It is hardly necessary to say that he voted to retain Stephenson, a man who admitted a personal expenditure of $107,000 in his senatorial campaign. Gallinger and Burnham of New Hampshire voted for Lorimer last winter, for Stephenson a few days ago and unquestionably will vote for Lorimer again. Crane of Massachusetts voted for Lorimer and Stephenson and will support Lorimer a second time. Lippitt, who succeeded Aldrich, and Wetmore of Rhode Island voted for Stephenson. Lippitt was not a member of the senate when the Lorimer vote occurred last winter, but there is no question as to what he will do. Wetmore voted for Lorimer the first time and will do so again. Brandegee of Connecticut is a member of the senate ring, and has stood by both Lorimer and Stephenson. McLean, the new senator from Connecticut, voted for Stephenson.

Root of New York voted against Lorimer and for Stephenson. This likewise is the situation of Burton, of Ohio, Page of Vermont and Sutherland of Utah. Penrose and Oliver of Pennsylvania joyfully press Stephenson and Lorimer to their bosoms. They voted for both men and will stand by them to the end. Dupont of Delaware, himself under charges of having purchased his seat in the senate, and his colleague, Richardson, both voted for Lorimer and Stephenson. Dupont will expect the favor to be returned. Bradley of Kentucky, who is supporting Taft, also supported Lorimer and Stephenson.

All Ardent Supporters of Taft.

In Illinois, Lorimer is fighting for Taft, and in Wisconsin Stephenson is doing likewise. In South Dakota, Gamble, who voted for both Lorimer and Stephenson, is advocating Taft's nomination. This likewise is true of Warren and Clark of Wyoming, both of whom voted for Lorimer and Stephenson. Senator Heyburn of Idaho has been the ardent champion of both Lorimer and Stephenson. Of course, he is for Taft. Senator Smoot of Utah fought for Lorimer and Stephenson. He is fighting for Taft. Senator Guggenheim, who is identified with the powerful Guggenheim interests, and delivered the Colorado delegation to the Taft column, stood shoulder to shoulder with Lorimer and Stephenson. Senator Nixon is the Nevada cog in the machine and the aid of the two senators whose election, it was charged, was procured through bribery and corruption. Senator Perkins of California voted for both Lorimer and Stephenson, but his power has gone with the passing of the Southern Pacific machine from California politics.

Of the Taft Republicans in the senate, only Smith and Townsend of Michigan, Brown of Nebraska and Jones of Washington, voted against both Lorimer and Stephenson. That is to say, but four of Taft's supporters in this large body of men, known to the country as "the greatest legislative assemblage in the world," have stood before the country for clean and honest politics. This was reduced to three, when Jones voted the second time in the committee report, for Lorimer.

Take the record of the progressive Republicans, on the other hand. Every one of them stands for senatorial and presidential preference primaries. Every one of them is opposed to political corruption of any form. Every one of them voted to unseat Lorimer and Stephenson and thus put the brand of dishonor upon men seeking a seat in the upper house of congress by or through bribery.

In spite of the action of the senate in seating Lorimer and Stephenson by narrow majorities, it is perfectly evident that the country does not accept the verdict as just. The overwhelming sentiment is that seats in the senate should be obtained by honorable and not by dishonorable means. What is true of the senate is likewise true of the presidency. It is evident that any man who is an aspirant for the highest office in the land must be clean morally, ethically and politically. He cannot afford to be smirched by corruption and fraud. He cannot afford to be a party to methods which are a stench in the nostrils of the nation. There is an election to follow the nomination. The Republican party, to be certain of victory, must have as its candidate a leader of whose probity there is no question, upon whose record no taint can be cast, and whose selection is brought about by fair and honorable means. Mr. Taft has ceased to be in this class. He confided his fortunes to Mr. McKinley, knowing the man and knowing for what he stood. He has accepted as his advisors men like Crane, Penrose, Smoot and others, knowing the view taken of them by the American people based upon their records as "public servants." He has accepted the support of other men, notably Lorimer and Stephenson, knowing how they gained their elections. He was guided in Indiana by ex-Senator Hamenway and ex-Congressman "Jim" Watson, who were repudiated by their own states. He wrote a letter to County Chairman Koenig of New York approving in advance his disgraceful methods in New York. He is hand in glove with State Chairman Barnes of New York.

Taft's Nomination Means Defeat.

There is an axiom as old as the hills that a man is known by the company he keeps. There is another old saw that evil associations corrupt good manners. In view of what is known about Mr. Taft's advisers and supporters, in view of the outraged public sentiment which has been created by the spectacle of the President of the United States consorting and advising with, and approving the action of such men, the wiseacres in Mr. Taft's immediate circle are realizing that he cannot and should not be the nominee of the Republican party. To make him the standard bearer would be to invite inevitable defeat.

It is this realization that is responsible for the circulation of reports in Taft newspapers about a possible compromise on another candidate than the President or Colonel Roosevelt. Taft supporters have sought to create the impression that these reports emanate from the Roosevelt headquarters. Nothing is farther from the truth. The strength Colonel Roosevelt has with the voters is phenomenal. The voters are being deprived of their rights by machine methods, but the men behind the Taft candidacy are finding that these voters will not be disenfranchised, that they will have their preference recorded. It is their demands that will be heard in Chicago and that will result in Colonel Roosevelt's nomination.

Human foresight often leaves its proudest possessor only a choice of evils.—Colton.

Ample Time.

Tired Tim (to laborer on a new railroad)—When do they expect to have the first train run over this road?

Laborer—In six months.

Tired Tim—All right; I'll wait.—New York Mail.

An Old Saw, With A New Set.

We have now a large and complete stock of new goods at our Kratka store, and would be pleased to have all our old customers call and see us at the new store and post Office.

A FINE LINE OF BOTH HEAVY AND LIGHT SHOES.

Ask to look at our stock of Shoes. No trouble to show GOODS.

Higest market price paid for butter and eggs.

Singer Bros Kratka minn.

RHODA STORE

NEW GOODS, NEW PRICES.

A trial order will convince you, that this is the best Store to buy your goods.

I HAVE A FINE LINE OF gROCERIES.

BOOTS, SHOES, & COMPLET STOCK OF SUMMER FOOT WARE.

give me a call and get prices.

GEORGE SINGER. Prop. Rhoda Minn.

McCall's Magazine and McCall Patterns

For Women

Have More Friends than any other magazine or patterns. McCall's is the reliable Fashion Guide monthly in one million one hundred thousand homes. Besides showing all the latest designs of McCall Patterns, each issue is brimful of sparkling short stories and helpful information for women.

Save Money and Keep in Style by subscribing for McCall's Magazine at once. Costs only 50 cents a year, including any one of the celebrated McCall Patterns free.

McCall Patterns Lead all others in style, fit, simplicity, economy and number sold. More dealers sell McCall Patterns than any other two makes combined. None higher than 15 cents. Buy from your dealer, or by mail from

McCALL'S MAGAZINE
236-246 W. 37th St., New York City

Note—Sample Copy, Premium Catalogue and Pattern Catalogue free, on request.

CORN-SEEDS TREES

Our 29th Annual Catalog is now ready and free for the asking. It is a work of art and full of good things. Sea King Corn on front cover.

WILL'S PIONEER SEED HOUSE and NURSERY
OSCAR H. WILL & CO.
BISMARCK, NO. DAKOTA

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

[illegible]

Scientific American.

[illegible]

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

[illegible] Washington, D. C.

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Call and see us, when you are ready to make your final proof

Fine weather this! Oh yes fine.

M. E. Hyland and family made Mr. George Singer a birthday present of a fine center table lamp Saturday evening.

A. D. Brown and his doughter Mrs. Fred DuChamp, of Neptune was down to Highlanding on a shopping expedition Saturday.

The new church at Highlanding is now near enough completed to hold services in, and it adds to general appearence of the country.

We understand that a walking dredge is to be put in on ditch No. 47, and the people will hope it can walk as they are awful tired of setting dredges.

Last night we got a good rain that wet the ground down as far as it was dry which will make the grain and grasa sheot upward very rapidly.

Herbert Swift closes a very successful tearm of school in this district to-day, it being the last four months tearm of an eight months school with a first grade teacher.

WANTED: I want to hire three or four men to grub and clear land on my farm one mile south from Highlanding. all at the reidence of Tullak Dale.—Simon Solberg.

When you have some more comeing for the sale of your butter and eggs, just tell Mr. Merchant that you will take the ballence in blue grass seed and scatter the seed in the pasture.

The farmers have been improving the fine weather that we are haveing and about all of them are done seeding wheat and oats, and now comes the harly flax and corn, and be sure to not forget the corn patch.

If a farmer had charge of the making of the weather he could not have bettered it this spring. Nice sunshiney weather to sow your crops and about the time you are done, a fine rain to wet them down and start them growing.

Take a look at the navigable Red Lake River at the present time and see Uncle Sams fence to the developement of this part of the country, kept there and guarded by men of the ilk of his nibs Major Shunk, for the benefit of the lumber companys.

There is nothing that pays a farmer and stock raiser better than to invest what loose change he can spare in tame grass seed and scatter it on the barren spots in the pasture. Blue grass or timothy is the best as we have had very poor success with clover, so far.

A very plesent birthday party was given by Mr. George Singer, at his Rhoda home on last Saturday evening, to a large number of invited friends and neighbors, who met to wish him and his family continued health and prosperity and him many returns of his birthday. An elegant supper was served at midnight, and the danceing and meory good time was kept up until morning. The Kolskie string band furnished first class and highly appreaciated music.

Say neighbors! Did you ever stop to consider what a drawback this government navigable river is to us getting a railroad north and south through this part of this country? If you did not, just stop and consider that the government have got a fence across the proposed north and south line of any railroad throu this country, that is of no beanifit to onyone, except the lumber companys. This is the second year that the lumber companys have had the Red Lake River closed off under the protection of the government, and we are of the opinion, that if we all pull togeather with a petition to congress we can get it declared non-navigable so we can get a railroad and other bridges across it.

The wind seems to be taking an inning today.

Will Vaughn was transacting business at Thief River Falls this week.

Edward Singer has been appointed state fire patrolman for this district.

Politicts are warming up down at the county seat, the fight being between the supporters of Roosevelt and LaFolette.

Be sure and take the time to attend the farmers mass meeting April 27, at the Higlanding school house.

The people that are living on mail routes should take an intereat in fixing a dagerous place on their mail roate so it is passiable If some of the people on the lower end of this route miss their mail carriers some fine morning they can blame themselves, and not the mail carriers or government.

Almost A Mirical.

One of the most startling chages ever seen in any man, according to W. B. Holsclaw, Claredon, Tex., was affected years ago in his brother. "He had such a dreadful cauch," he writes, "that all our family thought he was going into consumption, but he began to use Dr. Kings New Discovery, and was copletly cured by ten bottels. Now he is sound and well and weighs 218 pounds. For many years our family has used this wonderful remedy for Coughs and Colds with excelent results." It's quick, safe, reliable and guarenteed. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottle free, at All Druggists.

Puts End to Bad Habits.

Things never look bright to one with "the blues." Ten to one the trouble is a slugish liver, filling the system with billious poison, that Dr. King's New Life Pills would expel. Try them. Let the joy of better feelings end "the blues." Best for stomach, liver and kidneys. 25 cents, at All Druggists.

FARM FOR SALE.

The N. E. ¼ Section 14 Township 152 N. Range 40, Town of Deer Park. Price $16.00 per acre.

Henry Rovoold.
Alsask, Sask, Canada.

DRESS MAKING.

For plain and Farcy sewing apply to Mrs. Sam McMahn Student of the America College of dress making.

Kuehnel, Minn.

Notice To Farmers.

I have an a No. Jack, nine years old which will stand for service during the season of 1912, at my farm on section 8 town of Deer Park.

M. E. Hyland.

* *

The Snab.

"Are you studying many branches now?"

"Yes."

"What are they?"

"The branches of my family tree."

* *

His Protest.

Mrs Benham—Before you married me you said that I was a queen. Benham—Well, I no longer believe in a monarchial form of government.—Chicago News.

Foiled.

"A man tried to pick my pockets in the street yesterday, but my wife prevented him."

"Did she grapple with him or just scream?"

"Neither. She wasn't there."

"Then how could she prevent him?"

"She had been through my pockets first."

A Halp to Promptness.

Anxious Voice Over the Phone—Doctor, please hurry over to our house. One of the family has suddenly been stricken with a fainting fit. Is there anything you want ready when you get here, so that there will be no time lost? Doctor—Yes—er—you may have my fee ready.—Lippincott's.

AN ENGINE OF TORTURE.

The Pillory Was Not Abolished In England Until 1837.

The pillory was done away with by act of parliament in the year 1837, and it is amazing that it should have endured until that date, for it was a mode of punishment which could be made so extremely barbarous as to be a crying scandal to any nation. This engine of torture seems to have been known before the conquest under the name of "stretch neck," which is pleasantly suggestive of its functions.

Edward I enacted that all stretch necks should be made of a proper size so that the life of the occupant should not be endangered, and a print of the reign of Henry III. shows very clearly what the pillory was like in those days. The culprit was mounted upon a stool, at one side of which was fixed a pole, supporting a pair of boards hinged together and with holes cut in them large enough to admit the wrists and neck.

The hands and arms were thus held on a level with the face, and the appalling stiffness which this must have caused can well be imagined. Thus confined and powerless, the offender was placed in some public spot, where the riffraff employed themselves hurling dirt, sticks and stones at him until they were tired or until the object of their sport succumbed, as not infrequently came to pass.

It would seem that primarily the pillory was intended for cheats of all kinds, such as mountebanks, fraudulent dealers in horses, coal, corn, etc., and we read in Fabian that the mayor of London in 1287 "did sharp correction upon bakers for making bread of light weight. He caused divers of them to be put in the pillory, as also one Agnes Daintie for selling of mingled butter." Soothsaying and other magic arts were also punished with the pillory.

It would appear that famous men did not appear in the pillory until after 1637, when a star chamber decree forbade the printing of any book or pamphlet without permission from the archbishop of Canterbury, the bishop of London or the university authorities and also made an order that any printer who did not conform to this and set up a printing press should not only be pilloried, but also whipped through the city of London.

Stafford is told by Garrard the way in which three men underwent their pilloryings. "They stood two hours in the pillory. The place was full of people, who cried and howled terribly, especially when Burton was cropped. Dr. Bastwick was very merry. His wife, Dr. Poe's daughter, got on a stool and kissed him."—London Globe.

Gave Him a Warm Tip.

"Yes, it's a lot of trouble to raise hens till you know how," said a poultry dealer. "I'll tell you a story about that very point. A man who looked as if he hadn't had anything to eat for a week or so leaned over the back fence of my park some time ago. I had my eye on him, and he saw I had my eye on him, so he started up a conversation.

"'Must be a lot of expense [illegible] up such a lot of fowls,' he says.

"'Not such a much,' says I.

"'What's the principal item?' he wants to know.

"'Powder and shot,' I tells him.

"An', do you know, he never come back to ask no more questions? Diplomacy is a good thing to raise hens with too."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Penguin Wedding.

Dr. Charcot in a lecture on antarctic experiences referred to the amusing antics of the penguins, which, he said, were very much like human beings in their behavior. Sometimes a couple of betrothed penguins could be seen seated close together in loverlike fashion in a recess formed by blocks of ice and observation had shown that subsequently the same couple attended before a third penguin, who might be called the clergyman or the registrar, for the positions of all three were similar to those occupied by the minister and the bride and the bridegroom at a wedding.—London News.

First Mail Coach In 1784.

A theater owner was responsible for the first mail coach in 1784. John Palmer, Bath, England, saw that it took four days to get his actors from London. He went to the government authorities and persuaded them to start a number of coaches to carry the mails and that these coaches should be built for speed and drawn by the fastest animals in England. In a little while a revolution was worked.

A Gossipy Mother.

"A gossiping woman makes me tired," observed small Donald.

"What's a gossiping woman?" asked his younger brother.

"One who tells everything she knows," explained Donald. "Mamma is one. Every time we misbehave she runs and tells papa."—Chicago News.

A Mean Retort.

"If you don't stop talking," cautioned the husband, "I'll not be able to catch any fish." "That's funny," answered the wife. "When a girl angles for a husband she has to talk a great deal." "I know. But there's a difference between fish and lobsters."

Why He Escaped.

Agnes—Why didn't you arrest the burglar who was found under your bed? Gladys—He said that if I would not have him arrested he'd never tell how dusty he got.—Harper's Bazar.

You will never "find" time for anything. If you want time you must make it.—Charles Buxton.

"The Only Thing That Will Relieve Neuralgia."

The piercing pains of Neuralgia, which often follows a bad cold or La Grippe, are frequently almost unbearable and few medicines afford any relief to the sufferer.

"I am a rural mail carrier and have been a user of the Dr. Miles medicines for years.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills can't be beaten. They are the only thing I have found that will relieve my neuralgia and I have tried most everything, besides medicine from the doctor. I am willing to tell anyone what the Anti-Pain Pills did for me."

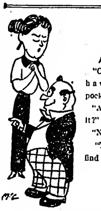
CHARLES HILDERBRANDT,
Box 205 Woodvill, Ohio

If you, like Mr. Hilderbrandt, "have tried most everything" in vain, why not do as he did, fight your aches and pains with Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. Let the pills bear the brunt of the battle. No matter how stubborn the contest, they will come out victorious.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills stand on their record, which is a long list of cures extending back a generation.

Druggists everywhere sell them. If first package fails to benefit, your druggist will return your money.
MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

* *



Always Do.

"Oh, dear, I have lost my pocketbook."

"Any money in it?"

"No."

"Then you will find it again."

* *

Purely Speculative.

"I have always been interested," said little Binks, "in the utilization of waste. Now, where do you suppose all these burst tires go in the end?"

"I don't know," said the genial philosopher, "but if they go where most people consign 'em there must be a terrible smell of rubber in the hereafter."—Harper's Weekly.

State of Ohio, city of Toledo, }
Lucas County, } ss.

Frank J. Cheney makes oath that he is senior partner of the firm of F. J. Cheney & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by the use of HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

FRANK J. CHENEY.

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1886.

(Seal) A. W. GLEASON, Notary Public.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials, free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by all Druggists, 75c.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

LUNG DISEASE

"After four in our family had died of consumption I was taken with a frightful cough and lung trouble, but my life was saved and I gained 87 pounds through using

DR. KING'S NEW DISCOVERY

[illegible] ...lton, Tex.

Bungled It.

Old Maid—I eat very little, Mr. Smith. Smith (flattered and wishing to be complimentary)—Ah, to sit next you is to lose one's appetite.—London Watch Dog.

To be seventy years young is sometimes far more cheerful and hopeful than to be forty years old.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

NEW BANK.

FIRST STATE BANK,

OF OKLEE Lambert Post Office Minn.
NEW STATION ON DULUTH SCO LINE.

Your Business Solicited.

Directors: A. P. Toupin, Pres. Samul Gileau Vic. Pis.
Larry O'Niel, Abiham Paquire, T. L. Cruzon.
J. A. DUFFY, Cashier. T. L. CRUZON, Assist. Cashier.

Let Us Tell You Something!

This Season we are offering the best line of Dry Goods that ever came into this Section of the Country.

Don't Buy Elswhare, Until You Have Seen What We Have To Offer.

No Matter What Price you pay, WE Will please YOU.

VAUGHAN BROS. & CO.

Highlanding Minn.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's $50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day

Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were piloting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory? We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.

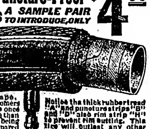
Our New Home. Capacity 20,000 Safes Annually.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars, it will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Ask for Catalogue 16 T.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.

CINCINNATI, OHIO



WANTED—A RIDER AGENT

IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the regular retail prices.

$10.00 Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof Self-healing Tires A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks, or Glass will not let the air out. A hundred thousand pairs sold last year.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D" also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

J. L. MEAD CYCLE COMPANY, CHICAGO, ILL.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

BURNING DAYLIGHT

By JACK LONDON

AUTHOR OF "THE CALL OF THE WILD," "WHITE FANG," "MARTIN EDEN," ETC.

(Copyright, 1910, by the New York Herald Company.)
(Copyright, 1910, by the MacMillan Company.)

SYNOPSIS.

Elam Harnish, known all through Alaska as "Burning Daylight," celebrates his 30th birthday with a crowd of miners at the Circle City Tivoli. The dance leads to heavy gambling, in which over $100,000 is staked. Harnish loses his money and his mine but wins the mail contract. He starts on his mail trip with dogs and sledges, telling his friends that he will be in the big Yukon gold strike at the start. Burning Daylight makes a sensationally rapid run across country with the mail, appears at the Tivoli and is now ready to join his friends in a dash to the new gold fields. Deciding that gold will be found in the up-river district Harnish buys two tons of flour, which he declares will be worth its weight in gold, but when he arrives with his flour he finds the big flat desolate. A comrade discovers gold and Daylight reaps a rich harvest. He goes to Dawson, becomes the most prominent figure in the Klondike and defeats a combination of capitalists in a vast mining deal. He returns to civilization, and, amid the bewildering complications of high finance, Daylight finds that he has been led to invest his eleven millions in a manipulated scheme. He goes to New York, and confronting his disloyal partners with a revolver, he threatens to kill them if his money is not returned. They are cowed, return their stealings and Harnish goes back to San Francisco where he meets his fate in Dede Mason, a pretty stenographer. He makes large investments and gets into the political ring. For a rest he goes to the country. Daylight gets deeper into high finance in San Francisco, but often the longing for the simple life nearly overcomes him. Dede Mason buys a horse and Daylight meets her in her saddle trips. One day he asks Dede to go with him on one more ride, his purpose being to ask her to marry him.

CHAPTER XIV.—Continued.

He hung almost gleefully upon her actions in anticipation of what the fractious Bob was going to get. And Bob got it, on his next whirl, or attempt, rather, for he was no more than half way around when the quirt met him smack on his tender nose. There and then, in his bewilderment, surprise and pain, his fore feet, just skimming the road, dropped down.

"Great!" Daylight applauded. "A couple more will fix him. "He's too smart not to know when he's beaten."

Again Bob tried. But this time he was barely quarter around when the doubled quirt on his nose compelled him to drop his fore feet to the road. Then, with neither rein nor spur, but by the mere threat of the quirt, she straightened him out.

Dede looked triumphantly at Daylight.

"Let me give him a run?" she asked.

Daylight nodded, and she shot down the road. He watched her out of sight around the bend, and watched till she came into sight returning. She certainly could sit her horse, was his thought, and she was a sure enough hummer. God, she was the wife for a man! Made most of them look pretty slim. And to think of her hammering all week at a typewriter. That was no place for her. She should be a man's wife, taking it easy, with silks and satins and diamonds (his frontier notion of what befitted a wife beloved), and dogs and horses, and such things.

But the quarry was doomed to pass out of his plans for a time, for on the following Sunday he rode alone. No Dede on a chestnut sorrel came across the back-road from Berkeley that day, nor the day a week later. As the third week drew to a close and another desolate Sunday confronted him, Daylight resolved to speak, office or no office. And as was his nature, he went simply and directly to the point. She had finished her work with him, and was gathering her note pad and pencils together to depart, when he said:

"Oh, one more thing, Miss Mason, and I hope you won't mind my being frank and straight out. You've struck me right along as a sensible-minded girl, and I don't think you'll take offense at what I'm going to say. You know how long you've been in the office—it's years, now, several of them, anyway; and you know I've always been straight and aboveboard with you. I've never what you call—presumed. Because you were in my office I've tried to be more careful than if—if you wasn't in my office—you understand. But just the same, it don't make me any the less human. I'm a lonely sort of a fellow—don't take that as a bid for kindness. What I mean by it is to try and tell you just how much those two rides with you have meant. And now I hope you won't mind my just asking why you haven't been out riding the last two Sundays?"

She played nervously with a pencil for a time, as if debating her reply, while he waited patiently.

"This riding," she began; "it's not what they call the right thing. I leave it to you. You know the world. That's the trouble. It's what the world would have to say about me and my employer meeting regularly and riding in the hills on Sundays. It's funny, but it's so. I could ride with one of the clerks without remark, but with you—no."

"Look here, Miss Mason," said Daylight. "I knew you don't like this talking over of things in the office. Neither do I. It's part of the whole thing, I guess; a man ain't supposed to talk anything but business with his stenographer. Will you ride with me next Sunday, and we can talk it over thoroughly then and reach some sort of a conclusion. Out in the hills is the place where you can talk something besides business. I guess you've seen enough of me to know I'm pretty square. I—I do honor and respect you, and . . . and all that, and I . . . ." He was beginning to flounder, and the hand that rested on the desk blotter was visibly trembling. He strove to pull himself together. "I just want to harder than anything ever in my life before. I—I—I can't explain myself, but I do, that's all. Will you—Just next Sunday? Tomorrow?"

Nor did he dream that her low acquiescence was due, as much as anything else, to the beads of sweat on his forehead, his trembling hand and his all too-evident general distress.

"Of course, there's no way of telling what anybody wants from what they say." Daylight rubbed Bob's rebellious ear with his quirt and pondered with dissatisfaction the words he had just uttered. They did not say what he had meant them to say. "What I'm driving at is that you say flatfooted that you won't meet me again, and give your reasons, but how am I to know they are your real reasons? Mebbe you just don't want to get acquainted with me, and won't say so for fear of hurting my feelings. Don't you see? I'm the last man in the world to shove in where I'm not wanted. And if I thought you didn't care a whoop to see anything more of me, why I'd clear out so blamed quick you couldn't see me for smoke."

It had been a happy day. Daylight had met her on the back-road from Berkeley, and they had had hours together. It was only now, with the day drawing to a close and with them approaching the gate of the road to

"I Could Ride With One of the Clerks Without Remark, but With You—No."

Berkeley, that he had broached the important subject.

She began her answer to his last contention, and he listened gratefully.

"But suppose, just suppose, that the reasons I have given are the only ones?—that there is no question of my not wanting to know you?"

"Then I'd go on urging like Sam Scratch," he said quickly. "Because, you see, I've always noticed that folks that incline to anything are much more open to hearing the case stated. But if you did have that other reason up your sleeve, if you didn't want to know me, if—if, well, if you thought my feelings oughtn't to be hurt just because you had a good job with me. . . ." Here, his calm consideration of a possibility was swamped by the fear that it was an actuality, and he lost the thread of his reasoning. "Well, anyway, all you have to do is to say the word and I'll clear out. And with no hard feelings; it would be just a case of bad luck for me.' So be honest, Miss Mason, please, and tell me if that's the reason—I almost got a hunch that it is."

"Oh, but that isn't fair," she cried. "You give me the choice of lying to you and hurting you in order to protect myself by getting rid of you, or of throwing away my protection by telling you the truth, for then you, as you said yourself, would stay and urge."

Daylight smiled grimly with satisfaction.

"I'm real glad, Miss Mason, real glad for those words."

"But they won't serve you," she went on hastily. "They can't serve you. I refuse to let them. This is our last ride, and . . . here is the gate."

Ranging her mare alongside, she bent, slid the catch, and followed the opening gate.

"No; please, no," she said, as Daylight started to follow.

Humbly acquiescent, he pulled Bob back, and the gate swung shut between them. But there was more to say, and she did not ride on.

"Listen, Miss Mason," he said, in a low voice that shook with sincerity; "I want to assure you of one thing. I'm not just trying to fool around with you. I like you, I want you, and I was never more earnest in my life. There's nothing wrong in my intentions or anything like that. What I mean is strictly honorable—"

But the expression of her face made him stop. She was angry, and she was laughing at the same time.

Dede Mason had quick, birdlike ways, almost flitting from mood to mood; and she was all contrition on the instant.

"Forgive me for laughing," she said across the gate. "It wasn't really laughter. I was surprised off my guard, and hurt, too. You see, Mr. Harnish, I've not been . . ."

She paused, in sudden fear of completing the thought into which her birdlike precipitancy had betrayed her.

"What you mean is that you've not been used to such sort of proposing," Daylight said: "a sort of on-the-run, 'Howdy, glad-to-make-your-acquaintance, won't-you-be-mine' proposition."

She nodded and broke into laughter, in which he joined, and which served to pass the awkwardness away. He gathered heart at this, and went on in greater confidence, with cooler head and tongue.

"There, you see, you prove my case. You've had experience in such matters. I don't doubt you've had slathers of proposals. Well, I haven't, and I'm like a fish out of water. Besides, this ain't a proposal. It's a peculiar situation, that's all, and I'm in a corner. I've got enough plain horse-sense to know a man ain't supposed to argue marriage with a girl as a reason for getting acquainted with her. And right there was where I was in the hole. Number one, I can't get acquainted with you in the office. Number two, you say you won't see me out of the office to give me a chance. Number three, your reason is that folks will talk because you work for me. Number four, I just got to get acquainted with you, and I just got to get you to see that I mean fair and all right. Number five, there you are on one side the gate getting ready to go, and me here on the other side the gate pretty desperate and bound to say something to make you reconsider. Number six, I said it. And now and finally, I just do want you to reconsider."

He was such a boy, this big giant of a millionaire who had half the rich

"I Like You, I Want You and I Never Was More Earnest in My Life."

men of San Francisco afraid of him. Such a boy! She had never imagined this side of his nature.

"How do folks get married?" he was saying. "Why, number one, they meet; number two, like each other's looks; number three, get acquainted; and number four, get married or not, according to how they like each other after getting acquainted. But how in thunder we're to have a chance to find out whether we like each other enough is beyond my savvee, unless we make that chance ourselves. I'd come to see you, call on you, only I know you're just rooming or boarding, and that won't do."

"It's getting late now, anyway," Daylight hurried on, "and we've settled nothing at all. Just one more Sunday, anyway—that's not asking much—to settle it in."

She gathered the reins into her hand preliminary to starting.

"Good night," she said, "and—"

"Yes," he whispered, with just the faintest touch of imperativeness.

"Yes," she said, her voice low but distinct.

At the same moment she put the mare into a canter and went down the road without a backward glance, intent on an analysis of her own feelings.

CHAPTER XV.

Life at the office went on much the way it had always gone.

In spite of their high resolve, there was a very measurable degree of the furtive in their meetings. In essence, these meetings were stolen. They did not ride out brazenly together in the face of the world. On the contrary, they met always unobserved, she riding across the many-gated backroad from Berkeley to meet him halfway. Nor did they ride on any save unfrequented roads, preferring to cross the second range of hills and travel among a church-going farmer folk who would scarcely have recognized even Daylight from his newspaper photographs. He found Dede a good horsewoman—good not merely in riding, but in endurance. There were days when they covered sixty, seventy, and even eighty miles; nor did Dede ever claim any day too long, nor—another strong recommendation to Daylight—did the hardest day ever see the slightest chafe of the chestnut sorrel's back. "A sure enough hummer," was Daylight's stereotyped but ever enthusiastic verdict to himself.

His lifelong fear of woman had originated out of nonunderstanding and had also prevented him from reaching any understanding. Dede on horseback, Dede gathering poppies on a summer hillside, Dede taking down dictation in her swift shorthand strokes—all this was comprehensible to him. But he did not know the Dede who so quickly changed from mood to mood, the Dede who refused steadfastly to ride with him and then suddenly consented, the Dede in whose eyes the golden glow forever waxed and waned and whispered hints and messages that were not for his ears. In all such things he saw the glimmering profundities of sex, acknowledged their lure, and accepted them as incomprehensible.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Chinese to Make History.

For the first time in the history of athletes the Chinese are to compete with other nations at the Olympic games of 1912. In the track and field sports the students of the University of Shanghai for three years have been coached by an Englishman.

POINTER HERE FOR FARMER

One Good Thing, at Least, That He May Place to the Credit of the Auto.

The farmer may not venerate the automobile, but he must admit that, although the automobile teaches others extravagance, it has taught him a very valuable lesson in economy.

Everybody knows how plant lice, or aphis, overrun and destroy plants and how the sole protection against plant lice has heretofore been patent powders more or less costly.

But of late years farmers have noticed that, while all the plants in field or garden were covered with aphis, all the roadside growths, white with dust from flying automobiles, had not a single aphis on them.

Hence an experiment. Turnips, peas and cabbages were coated with ordinary dust instead of costly powder. Result, disappearance of all insect parasites.

The automobile, in a word, has taught the farmer that dust, which costs nothing, will protect his plants from plant lice and other pests just as completely as the most expensive powder can.

WOMEN AND HEALTH.

Women are beginning to realize more fully that good health is not to be found in the use of cosmetics and face powders. The appearance of health may follow facial treatment, but health itself lies much deeper than the surface.

Most important to the health of every woman is regularity of the bowels and digestive organs. The weary eyes, bad breath, frequent headaches, pimples and general air of lassitude, is in most every case due to constipation or indigestion, or both. There are various remedies prescribed for this condition, but the easiest, most pleasant and certainly effective, is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin known to druggists as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This simple remedy is far preferable to harsh salts and cathartics and violent purgative waters that disturb the whole system without affording more than temporary relief.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a tonic laxative, mild in its action, pleasant to the taste and positive in its effect, strengthening the muscles of stomach and bowels so that after a short time these organs regain the power to perform their natural functions without assistance.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold by druggists everywhere in 50c and $1.00 bottles. If you have never tried it, write for a sample to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.; he will gladly send a trial bottle without any expense to you whatever.

Not Resentful.

"Those people say they don't believe you ever reached the pole."

"That's all right," replied the explorer, as he looked up from his manuscript. "The more doubts there are as to whether I landed or not, the longer this rather remunerative discussion is going to last."

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

In Use For Over 30 Years.

Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

What Happened?

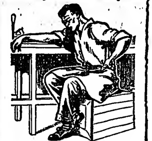
"Yes, I am going to kiss you when I go."

"Leave the house at once, sir!"

Health is the fashion. Take Garfield Tea, the herb laxative which purifies the blood and brings good health.

A woman is so used to pining things that she can't understand why a man should make so much fuss about a missing button.

"Every Picture Tells a Story"



BAD BACKS DO MAKE WORK HARD

Backache makes the daily toil, for thousands, an agony hard to endure.

Many of these poor sufferers have kidney trouble and don't know it.

Swollen, aching kidneys usually go hand in hand with irregular kidney action, headache, dizziness, nervousness and despondency.

Just try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, the best-recommended special kidney remedy. This good medicine has cured thousands.

HERE'S A TYPICAL CASE—

Henry J. White, 416 N. 3rd St., Ft. Smith, Ark., says: "I suffered everything but death from terrible kidney trouble. I had awful headaches and dizzy spells, urine scalded and my back ached constantly. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me completely and I have had no sign of kidney trouble since."

Get Doan's at any Drug Store, 50c. a Box

DOAN'S Kidney Pills

Make the Liver Do its Duty

Nine times in ten when the liver is right the stomach and bowels are right.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS gently but firmly compel a lazy liver to do its duty.

Cures Constipation, Indigestion, Sick Headache, and Distress After Eating.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

F. P. 20TH CENTURY Corset STYLE 276

The Automatic Boning gives what the 20th Century woman demands;—it yields to every movement of the body.

In bending there is a sliding movement distributing the strain.

The Automatic Steels are warranted not to break for one year, and no other corset possesses this advantage.

AT DEALERS or sent direct $1.50

BIRDSEY-SOMERS CO.
233 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM

Cleanses and beautifies the hair. Promotes a luxuriant growth. Never Fails to Restore Gray Hair to its Youthful Color. Prevents hair falling. 50c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

THE NEW FRENCH REMEDY. No.1, No.2, No.3.

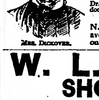
THERAPION Used in French Hospitals with great success, cures kidney, bladder diseases, piles, chronic ulcers, skin eruptions—either sex. Send address envelope for FREE booklet to DR. LE CLERC MED. CO., HAVERSTOCK RD., HAMPSTEAD, LONDON, ENG.

THOMPSON'S EYE WATER Quickly relieves weak, inflamed eyes. Sold everywhere 25c. Booklet free. JOHN L. THOMPSON SONS & CO., Troy, N. Y.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

HAPPY THO' MARRIED?

There are unhappy married lives, but a large percentage of these unhappy homes are due to the illness of the wife, mother or daughter. The feelings of nervousness, the befogged mind, the ill-temper, the pale and wrinkled face, hollow and circled eyes, result most often from those disorders peculiar to women. For the woman to be happy and good-looking she must naturally have good health. Dragging-down feelings, hysteria, hot-flashes or constantly returning pains and aches—are too great a drain upon a woman's vitality and strength. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores weak and sick women to sound health by regulating and correcting the local disorders which are generally responsible for the above distressing symptoms.



Mrs. Dickover.

"I suffered greatly for a number of years and for the past three years was so bad that life was a misery to me," writes Mrs. B. F. Dickover, of Utica, Ohio, Route 4. "The doctors told me I would have to go to a hospital before I would ever be better. A year ago this winter and spring I was worse than ever before. At each period I suffered like one in torment. I am the mother of six children. I was so bad for five months that I knew something must be done, so I wrote to Dr. R. V. Pierce, telling him as nearly as I could how I suffered. He outlined a course of treatment which I followed to the letter. I took two bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and one of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and a fifty-cent bottle of 'Smart-Weed,' and have never suffered much since. I wish I could tell every suffering woman the world over what a boon Dr. Pierce's medicines are. There is no use wasting time and money doctoring with anything else or any one else."

The Medical Adviser by R. V. Pierce, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y., answers hosts of delicate questions about which every woman, single or married ought to know. Sent free on receipt of 31 stamps to pay for wrapping and mailing only.

W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES

$2.25 $2.50 $3.00 $3.50 $4.00 & $5.00

For MEN, WOMEN and BOYS

THE STANDARD OF QUALITY FOR OVER 30 YEARS

WEAR W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES

You can save money because they are more economical and satisfactory in style, fit and wear than any other makes. W. L. Douglas name and price stamped on the bottom guarantees full value and protects the wearer against high prices and inferior shoes. Insist upon having the genuine W. L. Douglas shoes. Take No Substitute.

If your dealer cannot supply W. L. Douglas shoes, write W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass., for catalog. Shoes sent everywhere delivery charges prepaid. Fast Color Eyelets used.

STRAUS AND WIFE DROWN TOGETHER AS VESSEL SINKS

Wife Refuses to Leave Husband and Couple Die In Each Other's Arms.

ASTOR IS ONE OF HEROES

New York Millionaire Puts Bride In Boat, Then Aids Other Women—Goes Down In Ship With Other Men Without Murmur or Complaint of Treatment.

New York, April 19.—A picture of Mr. and Mrs. Isidor Straus clinging to each other after the last boat was gone was revealed by Mrs. Schabert of Derby, Conn., who, with her brother, was rescued. Mrs. Schabert had stateroom 28 on the starboard side amidships.

"It was a crash, but not a great one, it seemed to me, that awakened me," she said. "When I went on deck I said to a steward: 'Are we going down.' He answered, calmly, 'Madam, I guess we are.'

"An officer on the bridge or near it was shouting out, as the lifeboats were being got ready: 'Women and children first!'

Saves Her Brother's Life.

"They tried to get me away from my brother and put me in a boat. I refused to go without him. Finally my brother and I stood alone in our part of the ship. A boat was just leaving that had room for two more passengers. The officers in charge said to me:

"'Well, if you won't leave your brother, he may come, too.'

"We got into the boat and, by hesitating, I saved my brother's life.

"Mrs. Straus had had a chance to be saved, but she refused to leave her husband. As our boat moved away from the ship—it was the last boat of all—we could plainly see Mr. and Mrs. Straus near the rail with their arms around each other.

"The lights of the Titanic were all burning and the band was playing. To me the most affecting episode of the whole disaster was that final glimpse of this elderly couple awaiting the end together."

Mrs. John Jacob Astor.

Three sailors of the Titanic, who were standing near Mrs. Schabert, spoke up at this moment to say:

"You know the Titanic just crawled up on that iceberg and broke in two."

Astor Is One of Heroes.

"The conduct of Col. John Jacob Astor was deserving of the highest praise," said Colonel Gracie of the regular army, who narrowly escaped drowning. "The millionaire New Yorker," he said, "devoted all his energies to saving his young bride, who was in delicate health.

"Colonel Astor helped us in our efforts to get her in the boat," said Colonel Gracie. "I lifted her into the boat, and as she took her place Colonel Astor requested permission of the second officer to go with her for her own protection.

"'No, sir,' replied the officer; not a man shall go on a boat until the women are all off.'

Goes to Aid of Other Women.

"Colonel Astor then inquired the number of the boat which was being lowered away and turned to the work of clearing the other boats and in reassuring the frightened and nervous women.

"By this time the ship began to list frightfully to port. This became so dangerous that the second officer ordered every one to rush to starboard. This we did and found the crew trying to get a boat off in that quarter. Here I saw the last of John B. Thayer and George B. Widener of Philadelphia."

Mrs. Astor Not in Danger.

While utterly exhausted from her experiences, Mrs. John Jacob Astor was declared tonight by Nicholas Biddle, a trustee of the Astor estate, to be in no danger whatever. Her physicians, however, had given orders that neither Mrs. Astor nor her maid, who was saved with her, be permitted to talk about the disaster."

On landing from the Carpathia, the young bride, widowed by the Titanic's sinking, told members of her family what she could recall of the circumstances of the disaster.

Thought Husband by Her Side.

Of how Colonel Astor met his death, she had no definite conception. She recalled, she thought, that in the confusion as she was about to be put into one of the boats the colonel was standing by her side.

After that, as Mr. Biddle recounted her narrative, she had no clear recollection of the happenings until the boats were well clear of the sinking steamer.

Mrs. Astor, it appears, left in one of the last boats which got away from the ship. It was her belief that all the women who wished to go had then been taken off. Her impression was that the boat she left in had room for at least fifteen more persons.

Clear and Starlit.

Mrs. Edgar J. Meyer of New York said:

"It was a clear and starlit night. When the ship struck we were in our cabin. My husband went out on the deck to see what was the trouble. He came back and said we had hit an iceberg, but that it did not amount to much. I said I was nervous. We went on deck for a walk. More people said the accident was of no importance. It would only delay our arrival.

"I was afraid and made my husband promise if there was trouble he would not make me leave him. We walked around the deck a while. An officer came up and cried: 'All women into the lifeboats.'

"My husband and I discussed it and the officer said: 'You must obey orders.'

Decided to Separate.

"We went down into the cabin and we decided, on account of our baby, to part. He helped me put on warm things. I got into a boat, but there were no sailors aboard. We called to the ship that there were no men in the boat. They sent a sailor down.

"An English girl and I rowed four hours and a half. Then we were picked up at six o'clock in the morning. We were well away from the steamer when it went down, but we heard the screams of the people left on the boat.

"There were about seventy widows on the Carpathia and all were wonderfully brave. The captain of the Carpathia and the passengers did all they could for us. Mrs. Harris says my husband and Mr. Harris and Mr. Douglas lowered the last boatload full of women. All three were perfectly calm.

Fights to Save Wife.

Mrs. Daniel W. Marvin of this city, who was on a honeymoon trip with her husband, was almost prostrated when she reached the dock and learned her husband had not been picked up by some other boat.

"My God, don't ask me too much," she said; "tell me, have you any news from Dan? He grabbed me in his arms and knocked down men to get me into the boat. As I was put in the boat he cried:

"'It's all right, little girl; you go and I will stay a while. I'll put on a life preserver and jump off and follow your boat.'

"As our boat shoved off he threw a kiss at me, and that is the last I saw of him."

Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Allison of Montreal and their daughter were drowned, their ten-months-old baby, a boy, and his nurse were saved. Mrs. Allison was just about to jump into a lifeboat where the nurse and baby were when she discovered her husband was not with her. She went back to look for him and did not return.

Green Lantern Saves Many.

Henry Stengel of Newark said it was only the forethought of a member of the boat crew who was quick-witted enough to snatch up three green lights that saved a number of the lives of those adrift in the tiny lifeboat.

"These green lights," he said, "shining through the darkness enabled the other boats' crews to keep close together in the ice filled waters."

Mr. Stengel put his wife in a boat and then followed. He said that early the next morning, shortly after they had been picked up, they saw floating far away a gigantic iceberg, with two peaks shining in the morning sun. This was the berg that sent the Titanic to the bottom, he thought.

Jumped Into Sea; Picked Up.

E. Z. Taylor of Philadelphia, one of the survivors, jumped into the sea just three minutes before the boat sank. He told a graphic story as he came from the Carpathia.

"I was eating when the boat struck the iceberg," he said. "There was an awful shock that made the boat tremble from stem to stern. I did not realize for some time what had happened. No one seemed to know the extent of the accident. We were told that an iceberg had been struck by the ship.

"I felt the boat rise and it seemed to me that it was riding over the ice. I ran out on deck and then I could see the ice. It was a veritable sea of ice and the boat was rocking over it. I should say that parts of the iceberg were eighty feet high, but it had been broken into sections, probably by our ship.

"I jumped into the ocean and was picked up by one of the boats. I never expected to see land again. I waited on board the boat until the lights went out. It seemed to me that the discipline on board was wonderful."

Insurance Man Is Dead.

Milwaukee, April 19.—Vice President J. W. Skinner of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company of Milwaukee, seventy-four years old, died here from a stroke of apoplexy

DISORDERED DIGESTION

If Neglected May Develop into a Severe Form of Stomach Trouble.

The Best Safeguard Is to Keep the Stomach Toned Up and the Treatment Should Be Begun When the First Symptom Is Noted.

"A few years ago," says Mrs. George Falin, of Finlayson, Minn., "I began to suffer from stomach trouble. It came on me gradually and I do not know what caused it. I gave little heed to it at the time, thinking that it was merely a slight attack of indigestion. It finally developed into a severe form of stomach trouble and I suffered terribly for months.

"At the beginning of my sickness I had fainting spells and became unconscious. There was gas on my stomach, my appetite was very poor and what little I ate did not seem to be digested. I was sick at my stomach a great deal and had severe dizzy attacks. I had hot flashes when it would seem as though I was burning up. I could not sleep night or day during these spells unless I took something to ease the pain. I was very weak and was in this condition for six months. I could not do any work and was confined to bed for two or three days at a time.

"A doctor at Duluth said I had gastric fever. He did not give me much help so I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills upon my mother's advice. I gave the pills a thorough trial and unlike the doctor's medicine, they agreed with me. I took several boxes of the pills and was entirely cured. I think so much of the pills that I always keep them in the house."

The tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills by building up the blood so that it can nourish and strengthen the weakened digestive system has made hundreds of cures in the most severe stomach disorders. This record of cures should merit a trial for the remedy which is guaranteed free from opiates.

A new edition of the booklet, "What to Eat and How to Eat," is free on request. Send a postal for it today and begin to cure yourself by following the directions it contains.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are on sale at all druggists, or they will be sent to any address by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

What Make.

Tittle—Hardup bought his wife a machine.

Tattle—Touring, talking, sewing or washing?—Judge.

Cole's Carbolisalve quickly relieves and cures burning, itching and torturing skin diseases. It instantly stops the pain of burns. Cures without scars. 25c and 50c by druggists. For free sample write to J. W. Cole & Co., Black River Falls, Wis.

As the Streets Are Cleaned.

Mother—Well?

Tommy—Don't you think I might let the rain wash my face instead of removing the dirt myself?

If You Are a Trifle Sensitive

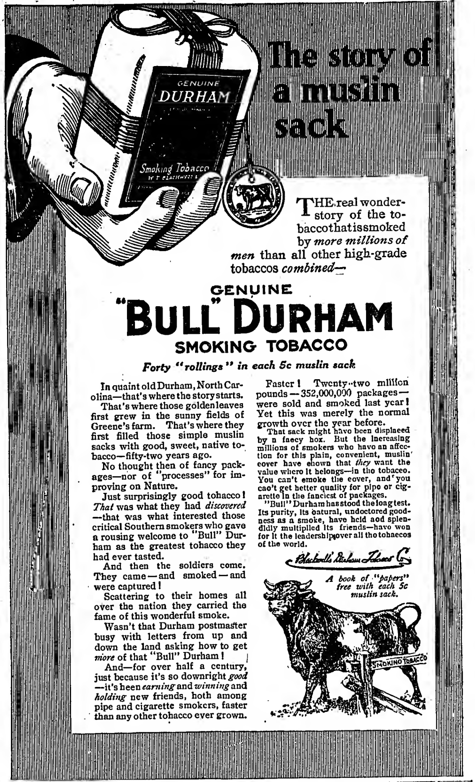
About the size of your shoes, you can wear a size smaller by shaking Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder, into them. Just the thing for Dancing Parties and for Breaking in New Shoes. Sample Free. Address Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

A man ceases to be a good husband when he begins to feel sorry for himself.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle.

Some men never brag about themselves—and don't blame them.

The man with money speaks the truth.



The story of a muslin sack

THE real wonder-story of the tobacco that is smoked by more millions of men than all other high-grade tobaccos combined—

GENUINE
"BULL" DURHAM
SMOKING TOBACCO

Forty "rollings" in each 5c muslin sack

In quaint old Durham, North Carolina—that's where the story starts.

That's where those golden leaves first grew in the sunny fields of Greene's farm. That's where they first filled those simple muslin sacks with good, sweet, native tobacco—fifty-two years ago.

No thought then of fancy packages—nor of "processes" for improving on Nature.

Just surprisingly good tobacco! That was what they had discovered—that was what interested those critical Southern smokers who gave a rousing welcome to "Bull" Durham as the greatest tobacco they had ever tasted.

And then the soldiers came. They came—and smoked—and were captured!

Scattering to their homes all over the nation they carried the fame of this wonderful smoke.

Wasn't that Durham postmaster busy with letters from up and down the land asking how to get more of that "Bull" Durham!

And—for over half a century, just because it's so downright good—it's been earning and winning and holding new friends, both among pipe and cigarette smokers, faster than any other tobacco ever grown.

Faster! Twenty-two million pounds—352,000,000 packages—were sold and smoked last year! Yet this was merely the normal growth over the year before.

That sack might have been displaced by a fancy box. But the increasing millions of smokers who have an affection for this plain, convenient, muslin cover have shown that they want the value where it belongs—in the tobacco. You can't smoke the cover, and you can't get better quality for pipe or cigarette in the fanciest of packages.

"Bull" Durham has stood the long test. Its purity, its natural, undoctored goodness as a smoke, have held and splendidly multiplied its friends—have won for it the leadership over all the tobaccos of the world.

Blackwell's Durham Tobacco Co.

A book of "papers" free with each 5c muslin sack.

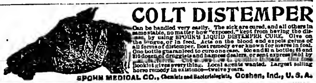
It isn't any wonder that a man is annoyed when he gets the worst of a horse trade, as that was what he was trying to hand the other fellow.

Good health cannot be maintained where there is a constipated habit. Garfield Tea overcomes constipation.

In a Restaurant.

"What will you have, sir?"

"Some kind of riotous living for two."



COLT DISTEMPER

Can be handled very easily. The sick are cured, and all others in same stable, no matter how "exposed," kept from having the disease, by using SPOHN'S LIQUID DISTEMPER CURE. Give on the tongue, or in feed. Acts on the blood and expels germs of all forms of distemper. Best remedy ever known for mares in foal. One bottle guaranteed to cure one case. 50c and $1 a bottle; $5 and $10 dozen of druggists and harness dealers, or sent express paid by [illegible] Booklet gives everything. Local agents wanted. Largest selling horse remedy in existence—twelve years.

SPOHN MEDICAL CO., Chemists and Bacteriologists, Goshen, Ind., U. S. A.

FIRST CLASS OPENING for flax, flour, oatmeal, planing mills. Soap, sash and box factory, laundry, bakery, tannery. Also retailers, wholesalers and builders with some capital. Cheap electric power, water, fuel. BOARD OF TRADE, Weyburn, Saskatchewan.

OVER 100 YEARS OLD Pettit's Eye Salve

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 17-1912.

NEVADA has "Come Back" Strong

The State that gave us the "Mother Lode" some fifty years ago is going to be one of the garden spots of America. The hundreds of millions of dollars they took from inside the earth in that Mother Lode will look like a penny-bank when they spread the irrigation waters on Nevada's sagebrush plains. Get in on the ground floor, and get in now. Don't wait; don't hesitate.

Union-Southern Pacific

STANDARD ROUTE OF THE WEST
Protected by Automatic Electric Block Safety Signals

will take you there. A Low Round-Trip Homeseekers' Excursion Fare will be in effect on the first and third Tuesdays of each month during 1912.

Land that has been begging at 25 cents an acre will, under irrigation, be worth thousands of dollars to you in a few short years.

There is no argument; there's no question about it! Idaho, and Utah, and Colorado, and a dozen other states have done it—and Nevada will. You have asked for your opportunity? Here it is. You wanted your chance? You've got it. This is the start—the beginning. It is the very bull's-eye of opportunity in a state that is comparatively new. It's the chance of little capital and shrewd brains. One dollar now will do the work of a thousand later on.

The lands listed below are owned by the Southern Pacific Company. They offer them to Homeseekers at from $2 to $6 per acre, on ten years' time; one-tenth cash, 6 per cent interest on deferred payments.

50,000 Acres of dry farming lands in Humboldt County, near Winnemucca.
23,600 Acres in Elko County, near Deeth—90 per cent. dry farming lands and the balance grazing lands.
5,000 Acres in Lyon County, near Churchill, which are subject to cultivation under dry-farming methods.

Come down to the Union-Southern Pacific today and learn about them and the wonderful irrigation projects under way.

Form a party. Tell your friends. Do it now! Or, don't ever say again that all the chances for fortune lie in the past. (102)

GERRIT FORT
Passenger Traffic Mgr., Union Pacific R. R.
No. 2 Dodge Street, Omaha, Neb.

A Robinson Crusoe of To-day

by H. J. MOORS

COPYRIGHT BY ADVENTURE

I DO NOT tell this story because either the memory or the relation of the events is pleasant to me. Indeed, it is the record of the most distressing and humiliating experience in my life. But I am impelled to relate it as a protest against the prevalent idea that the existence of a castaway on a tropic island is one of comparative comfort and ease.

In my younger days I was in the employ of a firm of merchants at Apia, Samoa, who had established in business in the Ellice islands a young man of the name of Symonds, son of a well-known missionary. His headquarters were at Funafuti, and after several successful years he had purchased from the "King" of Vaitupu the small, deserted island of Nuulakita—"Little Land." It lies some one hundred and fifty miles southeast of Funafuti, alone amidst extensive shoals. Symonds' ambition was to people and plant it, but not a native could he induce to make his home there, for the Ellice Islanders firmly believed the place was haunted by evil spirits. Not long after this, Symonds died suddenly, and I was sent to Funafuti in the company's schooner to install a new manager, with instructions to stop at Nuulakita on the homeward voyage, inspect the little island and set a value on it as an asset of Symonds' estate.

We left Funafuti with a southeast tradewind that soon died away, and for days we drifted over a glassy sea in intolerable heat. Finally, on the last day of February, we reached Nuulakita and sailed slowly along its coast, searching for an anchorage and landing.

In a short time we came to anchor in seven fathoms of water, in a convenient place on the west side of the island where we could see an opening through the reef. Four of the ship's crew and I made an easy landing, but, finding a strong shore current running, we were compelled to haul our boat up on the sands, for I intended to take at least two hours to inspect the place.

The captain advised me to examine the place hastily, for his barometer warned him of a change that was imminent, and this was the dangerous season in these latitudes.

Above the sand beach, where had formerly been a settlement, a few jackfruit trees were deteriorating, being overgrown with clinging vines and other parasites. Here I discovered some native sepulchers which, beside a well that I found later on, were the only actual signs of man's handiwork upon the island.

Pandanus, which seems to delight in sterile soil and in opposition to the elements, now predominated, stretching forth its weird branches and standing upon its singular stilt-like roots, an omen of desolation. Here and there I penetrated the bush, observing the nature of the soil and noting it in my book.

I must have been nearly opposite where our vessel lay, when I came to a beautiful lagoon, with charming vistas and lovely glades leading in various directions.

I was about to return to the beach and continue my circuit around the island, when I heard a musket shot—a signal for my return, for the sky had darkened and I felt sure that the glass had gone lower. I started directly for the boat-landing.

Towards the center of the island the trees grew less vigorously, and were fewer in number, and many old trunks lay prone on the earth. The walking became exceedingly difficult, for it was hard to penetrate this broad-leafed, stout-stemmed vinery.

I had already had several nasty falls, but had escaped actual injury, until at last I stepped on what appeared a sound tree-trunk crossing a vine-covered chasm and felt myself swiftly descending into space, clutching wildly at the vines as I passed through them

My head having come into violent contact with a jutting coral, I lay huddled and senseless at the bottom of a deep pit which in former years had been used as a well and now was partly filled by the action of the elements.

When I revived all was darkness, and rain was falling in torrents. In fact, it must have been the cool drenching I had had which brought me to my senses.

I tried to raise my arms and found them fortunately uninjured, but one knee had been severely bruised and my back was badly wrenched, while my head ached as if it were about to split in two, and a great lump explained why I had wasted hours in this situation.

Though it was very dark, with occasional flashes of lightning, I found no great difficulty, except from my own injuries, in getting upward, as these native wells are so constructed that the owners may walk down one side to dip the water with their shells. When I approached the mouth of the pit and thrust my head through the sopping vines, it seemed as if the world were at an end. I could hear the screaming wind rush through the now leafless branches, and great boughs and missiles of many sorts were flying through the air, making it hazardous to rise above the level.

I thought of our brigantine and hoped she had got away without losing her anchors. At that moment, though the tempest roared, I did not fear for her safety, for from the direction of the wind I was sure she had not been blown ashore. Such a gale would inevitably drive her far away to westward, and her return to this region of frequent calms was quite sure to be slow and tedious. And here I was, all unprovided for, and destined to pass some days in utter loneliness. In time they would come back again, and I must contrive to exist till they turned up. This would be an adventure to recount to my children as they gathered round me in the evening.

How was I then to know that this raging cyclone had utterly destroyed our ship, and that, while I sat shivering in my hole, my brave companions were in their watery graves? Never a word was ever heard from them again, and no fragment of our poor vessel was discovered to mark her loss.

When the light returned the sun was not visible. It was not safe to make my exit yet, but, thank God! I had my pipe and tobacco with me, and some matches that were not yet spoiled. Fool! Fool! Everlasting fool that I was, I wasted several of those precious matches before I lighted my damp tobacco.

It was well on in the afternoon when the pangs of hunger drove me forth to seek provender of some sort. Though the force of the gale was quite strong enough to impede me greatly, I managed to struggle through the torn shrubbery and tangled vines until I once more gained the open beach, and stood appalled before the ocean's sublime fury. Great seas hurled themselves at the trifling island, and actually threatened to engulf it.

According to my calculation I had now been above forty hours without food. Worn out by the wretched weather, and quite famished, I grasped a stick to aid my injured leg, and set out to discover food and shelter.

After a painful effort I came to the second patch of cocoanuts, and was not disappointed, for most of the fruit lay scattered on the ground, shaken down by the storm. After a bit of hard work in removing the outer husk, I regaled myself upon a ripe cocoanut and its firmer and more matured flesh, and this had to serve me, for I saw nothing else that was eatable at this time.

Night came on while I still painfully wandered in search of shelter, and I would have been glad to occupy the pit again had the difficulty of returning there been less formidable. The night proved a wild one, and I lay stretched out to leeward of a giant tree, whose out-of-ground roots and buttresses gave me just a little protection from the chilling blast. Here in this miserable situation I passed the tedious hours till day appeared.

My injured leg had grown worse and swelled to a considerable size, throbbing and alarming me thoroughly. Hunger and thirst once more assailed me, and painfully I dragged myself forward in the hope of finding some sort of sustenance. If the brigantine had been lost in the hurricane there was very little chance of another vessel's coming to Nuulakita for months and months. Possibly it might be years before the place was visited. Such despairing thoughts as these produced a sort of sinking of the soul, an apathetic sadness. Why struggle farther? But still I wriggled forward over the soft sands, which seemed barren enough. A soldier crab crossed my path, and I devoured him raw without a qualm.

Even at this early stage of my imprisonment I must have been a bit delirious, for I began to imagine I heard voices calling me, and at length I fancied I saw people quickly flitting about as if to avoid my vision.

The pain in my wounded leg was very great, but I sometimes forgot this because of mental tortures far more acute. Another horrid night, and another boisterous day without the smallest comfort, left me still more helpless. Reason, I believe, was on the verge of collapse, when my remaining physical strength suddenly gave way. Sleep, delirium, or probably prolonged unconsciousness, at length relieved me.

I awakened at last to behold the splendors of a tropic sunrise, the great orb soon shining directly in my face. My leg was much better for the enforced rest it had had, and, strangest of all, I was not so hungry as I had been.

Melancholy forebodings that perhaps I was fated to die there like a dog and lie unburied, a feast for crabs and noxious vermin, spurred me to further effort. Pride and every primal instinct urged me forward, and at length, exhausted with fatigue and in great pain, I reached the region of the fallen cocoanuts and, after resting sufficiently, food and drink were again my portion, and later in the day I was enabled to stagger along the deserted beach upon a rude crutch which I had improvised.

Onward, painfully onward, I went, craving satisfying food and rest. Eventually I passed a sandy place marked all about by turtles' flippers—a depression where eggs had surely been deposited. More than a hundred eggs were in the nest, all closely packed together and covered from marauders. Gathering some dry wood and bark, I built a little pile and drew forth my treasured matches.

What an appalling disappointment I was to suffer! The box in which they were contained was crushed quite flat, and the matches themselves were loose in my pocket. Some, being wet, had lost their black heads. I must dry the matches carefully before one of them should be risked. I did not dare to take any chances of failure, and always afterward I would have to keep a smoldering fire or lose this great necessity. A flat coral stone exposed to the sun was selected, and my treasure was spread out in the genial warmth. The ignition papers from the dilapidated box were turned and turned until quite crisp, while each individual match was given careful attention. When all was ready I tried to strike a light—tried and tried again until the whole stock was done, and this with never a glimmer of success!

Raw turtle eggs are not to be commended as a steady diet, but they will serve a turn. In due course I was able to get to the rookery, but most of the birds were gone, dispersed no doubt by the violence of the gale. None of their eggs that I could find were eatable.

I now tried ineffectually to produce fire by rubbing two sticks together as I had often seen the Samoan natives do. No, I could not do the trick.

I began to think of preparing myself some sort of shelter—at least a lodgment where I might sleep in comparative comfort. My earliest effort produced a kind of windbreak only.

Raw turtle eggs when steadily adhered to become absolutely disgusting as a diet, and on the recovery of my leg I sought many expedients that might serve my turn. Raw unsalted meat I could not abide, even when I knew that it was sweet and wholesome. So now when I caught a bird or turtle, I cut the flesh into thin strips and hung them in the sun, or placed them on heated rocks until they received a sort of natural cooking.

Dressed in a worn-out suit of thin pajamas, my only other possessions were a pocket-knife, a note-book and pencil, and a useless pipe, for the small fragment of tobacco I had been possessed of had been nibbled away as a makeshift stimulant.

A spell of wet weather set before me urgently the problem of constructing a thatched house. After many failures I at length owned a weather-proof roof, and was much pleased with my performance.

Salt, in small quantities and mixed with sand, I found in several spots, and the need of this mineral seemed so great that I set about its manufacture from sea-water, by evaporation. In this work I was fairly successful, but even this could not make me content with the raw food I was compelled to eat.

Now strongly suspecting the fate of our ship, I might have despaired, but a new idea entered my brain and for some time claimed my careful attention. Many young gannets were by this time occupying nests by the lagoon shore, and I decided to adopt several of these, bringing them up by hand, and afterward employ them to carry away letters describing my deplorable situation and praying for relief. But my first efforts were unsuccessful, and all three of my adoptions were dead birds within a few days. This set me to thinking that perhaps the food I was providing was unsuited to their immature digestions—that raw turtle meat, which they ate with avidity, was a dangerous diet.

I now enlisted another family of birds, and by stoning up several small basins near the reef at high water, I was enabled to catch a small supply of little fish, when the tides had fallen and the water had drained away into the sea. With a supply of what appeared a suitable food, I was at length able to bring up a brood of promising birds, who were taught by me to rest on the usual sort of perch provided at the other islands. When my proteges had grown, they were not long in learning to provide for themselves.

The hopelessness of my situation and my constant longing to be with my family often quite unnerved me, and surely left me less thankful than I should have been for benefits received and unacknowledged. My mind, at times thoroughly discouraged, recoiled before such an existence. Several months had elapsed and my situation was still unpromising.

The feeding of my pets had provided a certain amount of occupation, and as the birds rapidly approached maturity, I noted approvingly their greater proficiency in flight. At last all of them were able to make extended excursions. I easily taught them to return at the call of the flag. My tattered pajama coat answered as a signal.

One day while experimenting with my own birds, I called from the skies an utter stranger, who calmly perched himself and squawked loudly for attention. With avidity I searched him for communications, but evidently the animal was off on leave, for he bore no letters. I fed him slowly, and between whiles I wrote what I thought would have been anywhere construed as a touching appeal for assistance. Tearing the leaf out of my note-book I fastened the missive so that it laid flatly underneath the feathers of the back.

For several days the new bird continued to resort to my perch, always returning with my message, and it was not until I refused him food continuously that I was able to get rid of him. Then, some days later, having fastened missives to all three of my birds, I took down the perch and refused to notice them at all—a treatment they could not understand, for from their earliest recollections I had been their only parent.

Within a week after the birds had deserted the island, I re-erected the perch, and thenceforth every afternoon I waved my rotting garment, hoping that some intelligible answer would reach me. But days and weeks passed without any sign whatever and I again grew utterly despondent.

The turtle season had come and gone, and the extent of my depredations had so alarmed the island birds that I was now forced to trap those which I would use for provender, or climb the trees at night and secure my victims quietly.

One day, observing a troop of newly-hatched turtles painfully dragging themselves towards the salt water, it occurred to me that if I were to place these in the lagoon and feed them, a plentiful brood could be raised, and turtles would ever after be obtainable at all seasons.

Once more I decided to entice the distant birds to a renewed perch, and they returned upon my signals of a welcome. At last I found a bird with a letter written in the Samoan tongue and addressed to one of the teachers. Though I could not write grammatically and with precision in the native language, I was able to read sufficiently well. After divesting the missive of its religious commonplaces, which begin and end every native communication in these latitudes, I saw that the writer, living on a distant island, had no knowledge or care for me, for he addressed a fellow worker in the mission field on topics of mutual interest.

Detaining the bird for some time by such entertainment as was sure to please him and his comrades, I now prepared several messages in such Samoan as I could muster, and then, having neglected the animals to induce them to set out, I once more resumed work upon a construction somewhat resembling a monstrous top, which I proposed should spin continuously in a groove of soft dry wood until ignition would follow. It must not be supposed that this was my first effort in this line, for I can recollect at least four other constructions which were wholly useless. By my repeated failures I had at least acquired some experience. This time success crowned my efforts.

From this moment I date a comfortable change of diet, and I may say that in the completion of this labor and a contemplation of its results to me I was happier—at any rate calmer—than I had been since my arrival on the island.

My misery was soon deepened, aye, made insupportable, by the loss of my precious knife, the one invaluable treasure that yet remained. As I was stooping over my turtle cage to observe the welfare of its occupants it slipped from my pocket and dropped into the water.

For some time I had been of opinion that the bad weather would soon have its ending, and that probably a gale of wind would mark its exit. The accuracy of my calculations was justified, for after several days of great heat and unexampled calm, one of those sudden convulsions of tropic violence assailed the island with cyclonic force. My frail hut was bodily lifted by the blast as if it were a feather's weight, and no portion of it or its contents ever met my eye again. Torrential rain in blinding sheets, almost suffocating in its profusion, utterly drenched me, and the great ocean, lashed into a wild fury, seemed bent on submerging the little island, as it had done on previous occasions.

From the ending of this storm, my days were spent in searching for food and praying to the fiend, and my nights were troubled with such realistic dreams and phantoms—if such they were—as wholly to wreck my reason. Naked and unkempt, I roamed over the limited extent the land afforded; attached now to no particular place, and heedless of any attempts at rescue, I no longer kept a lookout.

Like a wild man that I was, I gleaned such food as the place afforded, untroubled by qualms of any sort.

One day while drowsily musing, new sounds assailed my ears—more intelligible, more harmonious they seemed, than the others I had been accustomed to. Though they evidently came from behind, I expected the new breed of infernals to deploy suddenly in front, as their predecessors had always done, therefore I did not turn until one of them laid a rough hand on me. This was a new experience, for till now the busy imps had under close inspection seemed intangible.

Turning to the touch, a number of figures in white garb met my astonished gaze, and though their countenances seemed pitying and beneficent, I knew them for their deceitful worth, and cursed their uncalled-for interference. I would have chased them from the island. Till now all goblins and little inquisitive imps had fled before my rage, but these new-comers closed in around me, seizing my weapon and overpowering my fiercest efforts until I lay fast in bonds, and quite insensible

The end had come. I had been rescued by an adventurous and devoted party of Samoan missionaries and their Ellice Island followers

Strange to say, nearly if not all of my messages had safely reached some inhabited island, but unfortunately none could read and understand the English words.

Paulo, the teacher on Nanomea, sent message after message through the group, and these timely explanations came to the southern teachers, enlightening them as to the real meaning of my misspelled and almost unintelligible Samoan notes which they had been getting from time to time by bird post—a letter-delivery service which was soon actively employed in my behalf.

As soon as the defective system would allow, the teachers consulted, and one bold spirit, an aged man, brave old Alemon—journeyed from Nicutao to Vaitupu, and on to Funafuti, in an open boat, to give direction to the work of rescue.

As an example of infinite unselfishness, of noble devotion to high convictions of duty, I think that the work of my difficult rescue can be favorably compared with many other shining records of Christian endeavor.

The original party of thirteen adventurers set out from Funafuti in an ordinary open boat, three oars on a side, and using a battered compass as their only guide. After a rest of several days on Nukulailai, and with increased stores of food and water, the perilous journey to Nuulakita was successfully attempted.

Who can with pen or type recount the raptures of a return such as mine turned out to be?

By kindness and generosity, my employers sought to reward the good teachers and the workers who had saved me from a living death at the imminent risk of their own lives, and my good wife and children sat down in feeling terms the heavy obligations under which they lay; but I, who more immediately knew the case, felt that a long life of thankfulness to and respect for the good people of the Ellice Group no more than paid my score.

SHRINE AT RANGOON

Edifice in Judson's Country Is Over 4,000 Years Old.

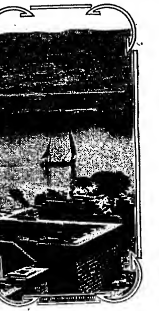
Noted Shrine Has Gilded Dome That Rises 370 Feet Above Vast Platform—Picturesque People at Worship.

Rangoon.—Beyond the silt of the hydra-mouthed Irrawaddy, as you swing in from the Bay of Bengal and churn the turgid waters of the Rangoon river, rises a slender cone of gold out of the smoke of rice mills and oil refineries. There is nothing in all the templed east, from the mosque of Sultan Hassan at Cairo to the Shogun temples of Nikko, that surpasses it, for it is one of the few great shrines that stand out in memory as a thing apart long after the others have faded in confused perspective adown the vista of forgetfulness.

That this tapering dome of gilded and bespangled handiwork rises 370 feet above the vast platform of its base and that its circumference is a quarter of a mile—all this is nothing beside the wonderful life that throbs in its shaded recesses or basks in the torrid sun. Here at Rangoon, as nowhere else—not even at Benares on the Sacred river—here in Judson's country, the most Christian of eastern lands, you may best see "the heathen in his blindness" and idolatry in its grossest and most massive form. Elsewhere you see one or a few statues of Buddha; here you count them by dozens and scores—heroic size, life-size, miniatures; Buddha seated, reclining, standing; Buddha on post card and in chromo; Buddha, Buddha everywhere.

And yet it is all so resplendent in gold-leaf and so gaudy in iridescent spangles that you feel yourself to be in some stupendous playhouse or Oriental bazar instead of in a holiest-of-all place whither the feet of the countless pilgrims have turned continuously for more than two-score centuries.

It is a long climb up the damp, dirty stone stairway that leads from the two gaudy dragons that flank the entrance at the street level. At every step as you mount, on either hand, you hear the voice of supplication—not of worshippers nor of mendicants, but of vendors of post cards and malodious gongs and of the "whacking fat cheroot" made famous by Kipling's "On the Road to Mandalay." When at last you reach the topmost stair and are confronted by the base of the golden dome—for the Shwe Dagon is an overtowering cone that uprises direct from a stone-paved platform instead of from some form of geometric walls—a surprise awaits you.



On the Irrawaddy.

This dome that you saw hours ago—for it is one of the most conspicuous landmarks that the hand of men has uplifted in the east—is not itself a temple to be entered with unshod feet and irreverent heart. It is but a gleaming tower that thrusts itself upward from a village of temples, each of which is itself a marvel of architectural beauty or a monument of tawdry ornamentation.

But the Shwe Dagon has a lovelier aspect when you turn from the pagoda-dwellers to the streams of devout visitors that empty into the square from each of its four gateways. The Burmese seem to worship in family groups and they have the pleasant habit of arraying themselves in their brightest garments before ascending to the great house of prayer. It is no uncommon sight to see a dainty little lady performing her genuflections before a shrine, with the stump of a very fat and very black cigar protruding at a nonchalant angle from her tiny mouth.

We saw much more in Rangoon—we of the "Cleveland" pilgrims to so many sacred places—but this is the one overtowering memory of Rangoon.

Every Man a Marksman.

London.—Colonel Seely, under-secretary of war, made the following striking declaration in the course of debate on the territorial army in the house of commons: "If I had my way every little boy, when he leaves school, would be physically trained, and it would be a very good thing if he were learned to aim with a gun."

THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. XII. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, MAY 3, 1912. NO. 6.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

Cat's Conduct is Up to City for Trial

NEW YORK.—Is Minnie, the feline favorite of the inmates of the Inasmuch Home for Aged Women, a roof-ripping, gravel-scratching, hole-tearing, diabolical example of what a cat should not be, or is Minnie a soft-purring, affectionate, fire-loving and milk-seeking animal, worthy of all the devotion that the women of the home and neighbors in the block can give her?

This is the vital case which is being tried in the court of public opinion in the home, in every drawing-room, in the back yards and out the windows of Garfield place.

Minnie is charged in the indictment brought by William A. Robbins in a complaint to the health department, with having feloniously, feloniously and with malice aforethought, ripped, torn, scratched and otherwise made holes in a certain tin roof, situated just over the library of said complainant. The charges, separately and collectively, Minnie indignantly denies through her friend, Mrs. Susan Lane, founder of the home. The indictment describes the roof as being an extension roof, covered with gravel, Minnie is accused of having scratched the gravel off and having torn the tin.

The defense is not insanity. Minnie offers in evidence to refute the charge, four sets of perfectly blunt claws.

The prosecution offers to prove by numerous witnesses that Minnie and another cat, "to the deponent unknown"—a sort of Mary Doe cat—can be thoroughly identified as the leader in the band of feline vandals.

The neighborhood is divided. The board of health has been drawn in and has instructed Minnie, Mrs. Lane, acting as interpreter, that she must remain within the confines of her own home. If she does not, the civil courts will take the case from the Court of Public Opinion of the Garfield place district.

Minnie, upon being asked her opinion of her ancestors and the case in general, remarked "Meiouw!" She then turned her back on the interviewer, which is supposed to be an expression of disgust with the entire proceeding.

Tasha Lama of Mongolia Buys an Auto

SAN FRANCISCO.—The Tashe Lama, emperor of Mongolia and next to the head of the Buddhist church, has never taken a bath in his life, but he rides about the streets of Urga, on the far side of the Gobi desert, in the finest limousine that money can buy. Ethan L. Le Munyon of the China-American Trading company at Tientsin, who delivered the limousine at Urga, has arrived here on the Nippon Maru.

The car was taken by rail to the edge of the Gobi desert. It made too big a package to stow aboard a camel cart, so Le Munyon filled up the gasoline tank and made the limousine do its own work for the rest of the trip. This involved a journey of 680 miles across the Gobi desert. As the contract required the car's delivery in good condition, and as the roads were rough, Le Munyon had to proceed with caution. He made the journey in ten days, which was three weeks faster than the speediest camel train had ever made it, so the natives say.

Although the lama owns two palaces—one for summer and the other for winter—he lives in a tent in the yard of his winter palace. From the cradle to the grave a Mongolian of the Buddhist faith never takes a bath. He believes that if he did he would be turned into a fish. Le Munyon was received by the lama in his tent. He describes the political head of Mongolia as the dirtiest human being he ever saw, and this in a land whose people are notorious as the most unwashed in all the world.

Fat Juror Excused; Can't Keep Awake

CHICAGO.—Only thin men and "bums" are meant for jury service. So reasons John W. White, strenuous butcher and emulator of the obesity propensities of the late "Baby" Bliss.

White struggled along for nearly a week trying to be a perfectly good juror in the Municipal court, but he failed dismally, because he couldn't keep awake.

Bailiffs stood at his side and nudged him in the ribs. "Twas like trying to tickle a rhinoceros. Then they kicked his shins, pulled his ears and, grasping firmly, shook him by the shoulders.

White would grin sleepily and try to beat his record of the first day, when he stayed awake for ten minutes. But somehow he always slipped a cog. Each time an ardent lawyer waxed eloquent the legal train of thought was wrecked by a peaceful sigh or snore.

"Z-z-z, hr-r-r-r-r, whew-ew-eww-ew!"

The lawyer usually became indignant, and then the kicking process had to be done all over.

Matters reached a climax the other day when White appealed to the one whom he blames for all his troubles—the man who impaneled him as a juror—Municipal Judge Walker.

"Jury service gives me sleeping sickness," he said.

Then he mentioned his weight—310 pounds—and the fact that he is a butcher and has spent most of his time for several months in the ice box of his brother's meat market at 26 South Fifth avenue. He said he just couldn't stand the warm courtroom any longer.

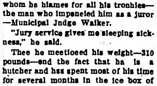
"You see, only thin men and bums are meant for jury service," said White.

Eats 360 Bananas in Month to Win Bet

CINCINNATI.—"I'll win," said the man who was eating 360 bananas on a $10 bet. "I'll win easily."

And John Breen sat down to his fourteenth dozen of bananas on an undertaking to eat thirty dozen in thirty days.

"I have not lost my appetite—eat three square meals a day—and the bananas are just a little dessert."



The wager was made several days ago at a wake, when some friends were joking Breen about his appetite. He had remarked that once he had eaten three dozen bananas in thirty-five minutes.

Breen completed his feat the night of April 11, when he topped off his last dozen with five dozen boiled eggs and two dozen raw oysters.

Every night Breen would show up at a restaurant and, after taking a couple of glasses of milk, start on the bananas. Fifteen minutes is the longest time he took to finish a dozen. The bananas range in size from seven to nine inches, and were selected.

"I [illegible] a hearty eater; I work hard all day and like to eat," he said. He weighs 190 pounds and is six feet two inches in height. "Somehow I never did get enough green peas. I ate a gallon can of them one day, and then stopped because I was afraid more would hurt me. I can eat a peck of potatoes with a little butter smeared over them; and quail—I could eat four of them every day forever."

Breen came to Cincinnati six years ago from Flemingsburg, Ky.

"John never seems to get enough to eat," sighs Mrs. O'Meara, his aunt. "At supper he eats half a dozen potatoes, goodly portions of stewed tomatoes, several large pieces of meat, a few cups of coffee and half a loaf of bread."

IN THE LIMELIGHT

RIDS HIMSELF OF MILLIONS

Henry Phipps, Sr., has divested himself of his Pittsburg realty holdings, estimated at $10,000,000, by giving it to his three sons, John S., Henry, Jr. and Howard Phippis all of Nassau county, New York. The gift includes the Fulton, Bessemer and Manufacturers skyscrapers, the McElveen Furniture company's building, the Phipps Model tenements on the North side, and other valuable parcels of property not so well known. There was also included in the gift two farms, one in Ross township and another in Jefferson township, and the only material consideration named is one dollar.

The deed is an ordinary typewritten document in which no space is wasted with recitals other than describing the properties. Nothing is said about how the three sons are to share in the ownership of the property; the $10,000,000 more or less of skyscrapers and other real estate is just given them in fee. Henry Phipps and his wife, Mrs. Annie C. Phipps, signed and acknowledged the document in New York city, the date in the transfer being March 12, 1912.

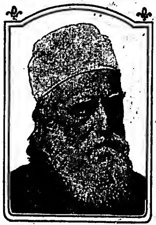
FROM COWPUNCHER TO SENATE

There has been a tradition that intermeddling from Washington never did a presidential candidate any good. The people, it was thought, wanted to be let alone while making their choice. As Woodrow Wilson would say, in writing a confidential letter to a trusted friend, that tradition has been knocked into a cocked hat.

Anyway, Washington this year has become the main show, and energetic managers at the door urge the crowds to walk right in, study the literature, gaze at the photographs and decide the matter for themselves, as patriots and intelligent men. It is a strenuous business. William Brown McKinley, manager for President Taft, tells me that his physical trainer calls him every morning at 6:30 o'clock, puts him through his gymnastics, and then strikes coffee from his breakfast and tobacco from his daily comforts. "I had to hire him," Mr. McKinley said with an apologetic tone in his voice, "to train me for the strain." Also there are managers for Roosevelt, La Follette, Cummins, Wilson, Harmon and Underwood. Foss, Gaynor, and Marshall are unrepresented at the national capital so far. They may be, however, later on. The ancient prejudice against and the fear of Washington, then, have passed away and the rhetorical and hurrying presidential propagandists are here, perhaps, to stay.

An old baseball catcher, Fred T. Dubois, of a team once celebrated at Yale, is directing the campaign of Champ Clark. Dubois, likewise, formerly punched cows from Blackfoot to Cheyenne and chased polygamous Mormons while a marshal of the United States.

LEADER OF BAHAISM IS HERE

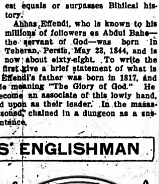


Abbas Effendi, known to his millions of followers as Abdul Baha, the leader of "Bahaism," is now on a visit to America.

Never before in recorded history has one of the founders of an Oriental religious movement—since become world-wide—visited America. The personality and life history of one who has spent sixty years of his life in banishment, imprisonment and exile from his native land makes a story of fascinating interest, vividly impressing upon the mind of the investigator the fact that the days of religious persecution are not ended, and that even in this modern age a drama has been enacted which for human interest equals or surpasses Biblical history.

Abbas Effendi, who is known to his millions of followers as Abdul Baha—the servant of God—was born in Teheran, Persia, May 23, 1844, and is now about sixty-eight. To write the history of Abdul Baha's life one must first give a brief statement of what is known as the "Babist" cause. Abbas Effendi's father was born in 1817, and was called by the Bab 'Baha'ollah," a title meaning "The Glory of God." He gave up his wealth and position to become an associate of this lowly band, and after the death of Bab was looked upon as their leader. In the massacre in 1852 he, with others, was imprisoned, chained in a dungeon as a suspect, and narrowly escaped a death sentence.

A CONSPICUOUS ENGLISHMAN



In the political arena, Ireland and Scotland long ago achieved foremost places. It has been reserved for our time to see a Welshman win his way to the front rank. Mr. David Lloyd-George is the man. He is not yet prime minister. He may never become prime minister; but he is chancellor of the exchequer, and if anything happened to Mr. Asquith, he would run Sir Edward Grey a hard race for the premiership.

No two men are more unlike. Sir Edward Grey is an aristocrat from Northumberland, cool, dispassionate, in temperament a whig, by conviction a radical, and much more of a country gentleman that either. He is above all things a man apart, reserved, free both from the defects and from the qualities of ordinary humanity. Lloyd-George is just the opposite. He is a democrat, of the democracy born and bred, intensely human, full of kindly humor and glowing enthusiasm, hail-fellow-well-met with every one. He lives [illegible] and has his being in politics.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

How Governor Hogg was Once Tricked

FLORO EL PINO — EL TORO, PUNKERINO, MUDERO
?

"IT was very seldom that any political opponent of the late Gov. Jim Hogg, the far-famed Texas statesman, ever took a trick from that wily gentleman, and yet I remember an occasion where a slick Republican bested him," said Capt. George D. Canby of Galveston the other day.

"They were having a joint debate, and Hogg was denouncing the Republicans for their policy of absorbing the Philippines. He poured in the hot shot, and the long-haired Texans gave vent to their approval by shrieks and vociferous yells. He said he knew his honorable opponent would attempt to defend his party when it came his turn to speak. The audience was then and there warned that his opponent was entirely ignorant of the subject—so ignorant that he could not name ten out of the thousand or more islands constituting the Philippine archipelago. Hogg repeated the assertion and challenged his opponent to give the names of any ten of the whole group.

"All this time the Republican had been doing some quick thinking. He did not, as a matter of fact, know the name of a single island in the Philippines, except, perhaps, Luzon, but he was also satisfied that Jim Hogg was no whit better informed. At that time the conquest of the Philippines was new and hardly anybody was enlightened regarding them. Thinking this over, our Republican orator had an inspiration. He didn't know the names, but neither did his challenger, and therefore, a bluff might go. The names of the islands were unquestionably Spanish. What was to hinder him from enumerating the names of certain brands of imported cigars that came ready to memory?

Thus it was that when his turn came to speak he met the defi of his foe with absolute serenity. Governor Hogg was the most astonished man in the big audience, while he listened to the other man rattle off, not ten, but twenty, fine-sounding Spanish words which were given as names of islands, but were in reality only brands of cigars. Being a fair and honest citizen, when the speaker finished, the governor arose, and, making a courtly bow, apologized for his mistake. 'I am sorry to have misrepresented my friend,' said Hogg. 'He has far more knowledge of the Philippines than I supposed, and I ask his pardon.'"

Starving Natives of Kiangsu Eat Bark

FOUR men dead of starvation in 55 homes visited, only one family in eight with any rice or grain, the rest living on sweet potato leaves, carrot tops and elm bark, and four months yet to harvest—such is the report of Earl H. Cressy, who was sent by the Central China relief committee to ascertain present conditions in a portion of the famine area. His report in part is as follows:

"It was thought best to investigate as closely as possible a limited area which might be taken as typical, and for this purpose the township of Lupi was selected. It is 55 li north by east from Eslegkleegpu in the northern part of the province of Kiangsu.

"The method followed was to assemble the family and count and question them, and then thoroughly to examine every part of the house, looking into the cooking vessels on the stove to see what was in preparation, and then using an electric flashlight to go through all baskets, jars and boxes where food was likely to be kept. These were all country people, who seldom have money on hand, so the supply of food actually on the premises is a good indication of their condition.

"A straw stack indicates that there has been a crop. I found straw in four yards—one in thirteen. Grain was found in only seven houses out of fifty-five, and in no place over a peck of it.

About one out of every three were eating elm bark, which they prepare by reducing it to a fine sawdust and then making it into cakes.

Cat Warns Man of Burglar's Presence

A REMARKABLE tomcat belonging to Joseph Brown, proprietor of a small merchandise store, routed a burglar from the place early one morning recently after a novel performance which proved the cat to be possessed of more than ordinary feline intelligence. The robber carried away about $15 worth of goods, but the proprietor considers himself fortunate, at that, and gives all the credit to "Tom."

Mr. Brown, his wife and several children live in the adjoining dwelling. They retired before midnight, and about half-past three the next morning, when all the occupants were asleep, somebody cut several slats out of a shutter at the rear of the house and climbed through the window. The cat was downstairs and heard the noise. It made several trips upstairs, mewing and scratching at its master's bedspread until it awakened him. Mr. Brown hesitated for a while, but finally descended the stairs with a loaded revolver, but the robber had fled through a side door opening on V street.

"The cat jumped up on my bed and awoke me," said Mr. Brown. "It mewed and scratched, but at first I paid little attention to it and dozed off again. The cat had gone downstairs, but soon came back and sprang on the bed again and went on terribly. Still I did not realize what had occurred. Tom made another trip downstairs, and came running right back, making more 'fuss' than before, and I then 'tumbled.'

"I told my wife there must be somebody in the house. Then I got up and went downstairs."

Society Girls in "First Aid" Work

AFTER a rest during Lent, and participation in the Easter season following, many of Washington's society young women have taken up "first aid" work.

Miss Helen Taft, who is practical above all things else, has joined a class of "first aid" recently organized as a sort of branch of the National Red Cross, the purpose of which is to teach these young persons emergency tactics. In fact, there are two classes, one of which meets on Tuesdays in the Armory dispensary and another on Wednesdays in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas T. Gaff. Maj. Matthew A. Delaney, U. S. A. medical corps, Mrs. Taft's physician, is instructing the Tuesday class, and Dr. Jung has the Wednesday meetings in hand.

Many of the girls have become deeply interested in Red Cross work, particularly the emergency field, and some have gone so far as to pledge their services as nurses should they be needed. Miss Laura Merriam has told her friends that if a war in which the United States is involved breaks out anywhere she will give up all the pleasures of social life and go to the front. Miss Merriam is among the most enthusiastic members of the "first aid" classes. Others who are learning how to make bandages and adjust them according to rules of medical science include Miss Dorothy Williams, Miss Jeanette Allen, Miss Julia Heyl, Miss Marion Oliver, Miss Sallie Garlington, Miss Mary McCauley and a number of others who do not confine their entire activities to the ballroom and afternoon teas.

THERE IS ONE OF THOSE RED CROSS EMERGENCY GIRLS — I'M GOIN' TO FALL AND BREAK MY ARM —

The Animal in Him.

The man who is a bear at home isn't likely to be much of a lion elsewhere.

THE SUNBEAM.

W. G. HUNT, Publisher.

SUNBEAM. - - MINN

CHORES FOR THE BOY.

The great loss of city boys is the loss of duties. Their sphere has been curtailed tremendously by the drawing of the city limit lines. When the boy lived on the farm or in the small town, he found plenty of things to do, which were sport in the doing and only incidentally work, says the St. Paul Dispatch. He went abroad on his duties, performing his chores, and on the way he found rich treasure which he brought back with him, and stored up for a lifetime's use. Did he go after the evening cattle, he left the soft earth move up between his happy toes and experienced a sensation of the composition, yes, and the poetry of the soil which the city boy can never know, however much he bares feet to the asphalt. Every turn he made in his chores, in wood or field, in barnyard or stable, he found something to make it pleasure—were it only the exercise of muscles. The country boy had his limitations, no doubt. The city boy has his advantages, if he only knew how to take them. He has vastly more material in hand out of which to stimulate his imagination, to quicken his intelligence—if only he could retain, or his parents retain for him, some of the duties of old, some of the chores which would give ballast to his life. This may be the day of the "division of labor," and the hired man of the furnace and the lawn may perhaps do his work more steadily and more explicitly than the boy of the house. But the boy should be considered in this division, and parents should not make their lives so easy that they rob him of doing his immemorial chores.

Bishop Anderson of Chicago, supported by a goodly array of pastors in other cities, has declared that the church should not celebrate marriage unless the intending bride and groom bring certificates of health and sanity. A Boston lady, the Rev. Mabel R. Witham, now purposes to subject the candidates to three other tests as well. She will require the certificate of a financier that the man is able to support a wife; one from a housekeeper that the woman is able to take charge of a household, and finally she would have evidence that the pair are supplied with "love immortal and divine which will render things glorious in their lives," says the New York World. These are hard rules. No man ever lived that was perfectly healthy and sane in the opinion of a physician. No young man was ever deemed quite competent to attend to business by an old financier. No young woman was ever adjudged a good housekeeper by a council of grandmothers. And who shall give assurance of the love immortal and divine?

A Chicago judge has decreed that a married man should either stay at home nights or take his wife out with him, and adds that neglect of wives is at the bottom of most domestic unhappiness. After hearing the arguments advanced on various phases of the woman question, it will not be remarkable if some shocked critics of this bold judicial defender of woman's rights held the doctrine that a married woman has as much right to have fun as a married man is socialistic, not to say revolutionary, and is calculated to break up the homes of the nation.

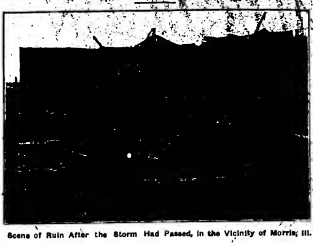
The way in which the Nobel prizes have been bestowed since their founding does not make good reading for those who believe that America is at the forefront in all forms of activity. Our country, with only two prizes to its credit, does not make a distinguished showing. At present America is decidedly in the "also-ran" class. Germany has received 16 awards. France has 10, England 7, Holland 5, and Russia, Italy, Switzerland and Sweden 4 each. The United States lines up with Denmark, Spain, Belgium and Austria, with two.

When women police are appointed one phase of their activity might be the breaking up of the annoying practice commonly known as "street mashing." They could deal more effectually than the masculine part of the force with the detection of this particular class of offenders, because more unsuspected in their sleuthing, while resistance to their authority would entail the same grave consequences.

Efforts are being made to get Chicago women to agree to have larger feet, but the attempts will probably be futile—not, we insist, because it would be impossible for Chicago women to have larger feet, as the envious ones of other places will probably claim.

A learned judge holds that a woman has a right to go through her husband's pockets. Possibly the judge does not realize that woman has exercised that [illegible] gan to [illegible]

IN THE WAKE OF THE CYCLONE



Scene of Ruin After the Storm Had Passed, in the Vicinity of Morris, Ill.

IOWA IS FOR TAFT

PRESIDENT WINS WHEN REGULAR REPUBLICANS CONTROL STATE MEET BY 761 TO 720.

26 DELEGATES FOR PRESIDENT

Rhode Island Adds Ten to Western State's 16—Senator Cummins Gets Ten—Cedar Rapids Man Heads Iowa Delegation.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., April 26.—The regular Republicans controlled the Iowa state convention last Wednesday by a vote of 761 to 720, and elected delegates-at-large to the national convention, instructed them for Taft and took revenge for the rebuff of two years ago to the president by refusing to mention the name of Senator A. B. Cummins in the resolutions.

Delegates at large selected are: Governor H. F. Carroll of Davis county, George D. Perkins of Sioux City, Luther Brewer of Cedar Rapids and James Bryan of Creston, the latter being the former secretary of ex-Congressman William P. Hepburn, and the proxy may be given to the latter.

Iowa now sends to the national convention 16 votes for Taft and ten for Cummins.

Providence, R. I., April 26.—The state Republican convention here Wednesday adopted resolutions instructing the delegates to Chicago to support President Taft's candidacy for the nomination "until released," after which the following delegates at large were chosen without opposition: United States Senator Henry F. Lippitt, R. H. I. Goddard, Jr., Herbert A. Rice of Providence, George R. Lawton of Tiverton.

Theodore Roosevelt was vigorously scored by Chairman Utter, chairman of the convention.

Concord, N. H., April 25.—Indications Wednesday were that President Taft has buried Col. Roosevelt in the state primaries. It is believed that the president has captured nearly all of the state delegates to the national convention. With considerable more than half the state heard from the vote is about 5 to 2 for Taft delegates. Two hundred of the 290 cities and towns heard from give Taft 380 delegates and Roosevelt 234 out of the total of 811 in the state convention.

CALLS FOR ARCHBALD REPORT

House Resolution Asks Taft to Transmit Copy of Charges Against Commerce Court Judge.

Washington, April 26.—Representative Norris of Nebraska introduced a resolution which would direct the president to transmit to the house a copy of any charges made against Judge Robert W. Archbald of the court of commerce.

The resolution referred to charges that Judge Archbald figured in recent negotiations with the Erie railroad, over which he had judicial supervision.

The resolution was referred to the judiciary committee.

PASSES ALASKA HOME RULE

House Also Gives Legislature of Territory Right to Extend Suffrage to Women.

Washington, April 26.—Partial home rule for Alaska, with authority in the legislature to grant to woman the right to vote, was approved by the house when it passed the bill for a local Alaskan government. Woman's suffrage scored its first victory in the house when, by a vote of 81 to 35, an amendment was adopted assuring to the Alaskan legislature the right "to modify the qualifications of electors by extending the elective franchise to women."

Girl Defeats Men Students.

Cambridge, Mass., April 27.—Miss Hetty Goldman of New York has won the Charles Eliot Norton fellowship at Harvard, triumphing over a field of competitors, many of whom were men. The fellowship is worth $800 a year.

Illinois House Adjourns.

Springfield, Ill., April 27.—With unanimous consent of the membership and with only six members present the house advanced the senate [illegible]

FEZ WOMEN TORTURE

AMAZONS LEAD IN CARNAGE AS MOORS ATTACK FRENCH.

Jewish Quarter of Capital Is Scene of Murder, Pillage and Torch—Thousands Homeless.

Paris, France, April 26.—The correspondents of the French newspapers at Fez indicate that the rebels in the recent uprising plotted to massacre the whole French mission.

This plan failed owing to the impatience of the Arabian women to begin the carnage. These women are described as creatures of terrifying appearance, who passed their time in rushing about the streets and torturing the wounded and sometimes aiding the Moorish rebels in the final mutilation and desecration of the victims.

Scenes of horror occurred in the Jewish quarter of the city, where the mob murdered, pillaged and burned all the Jews they could find, throwing their bodies from the roofs. Many young girls were carried off to suffer indescribable outrages. The Jewish quarter was set on fire and three-fourths of it destroyed, rendering more than a thousand people homeless.

GRANT BURIED WITH HONORS

Interment at West Point After Services at Governor Island—Ceremony Was Very Simple.

West Point, N. Y., April 27.—With full military honors and the salute of 13 guns, the remains of Gen. Frederick Dent Grant were lowered into the tomb here Friday. The simple services at the cemetery were preceded by more elaborate services in the chapel at Governor's Island, after which the casket, on an artillery caisson, was taken to South Ferry and thence to the Forty-second street ferry. The escort, under command of Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, included one regiment of infantry, two troops of cavalry and one battalion of artillery of the Regular army, troops from the New York National Guard, the Veteran Artillery corps and U. S. Grant post, G. A. R.

Ferry boats draped in black transported the body and its escort across the Hudson river to Weehawken, where a special train was waiting to take the members of the Grant family and prominent army and government officials to West Point.

ROOSEVELT LEADS IN KANSAS

Colonel Carries Two Congressional Districts and Probably Will Control the State Convention.

Topeka, Kan., April 24.—Theodore Roosevelt carried every county that held a convention or primary in Kansas. He now has 292 delegates—within fifty-two votes of enough to control the state convention at Independence May 8. Taft's total is 92.

The colonel carried the Fourth and Eighth congressional districts and was assured control of the Fifth district, which means he will get the six delegates to the national convention from these districts. The Second already had been carried for Roosevelt, thus giving him eight of the twenty votes from Kansas.

Lincoln, Neb., April 24.—Corrected tabulations of the Nebraska presidential preference vote, including returns from 880 precincts, give Roosevelt 31,242; Taft, 10,692; La Follette, 10,279; Clark, 14,031; Harmon, 11,241; Wilson, 9,860. It is believed that this includes 80 per cent of the vote of the state.

Repays Ten Cents After Forty Years.

Washington, April 26.—A conscience-troubled citizen of Shepherdstown, W. Va., who forty years ago used some canceled postage stamps, has sent ten cents to the federal treasury to pay the debt.

Flood Victims Still Helped.

Cairo, Ill., April 27.—More than fifty families who lost their homes by the flood in this city are still being fed by commissary. The flood gates, which shuts Cairo off from the drainage district, have been raised.

Lumbago Attacks Speaker Clark.

Washington, April 27.—Speaker Clark while in his office last Thursday suffered an attack of lumbago and later went to his home. [illegible]

BLOWN FROM TRACK

UNION PACIFIC LOCOMOTIVE AND PASSENGER CARS OVERTURNED BY THE WIND.

TELEGRAPH LINES LAID LOW

One Woman Killed and Many Persons Injured When Cyclone Hits Town of Ponca, Okla., Driving People to Refuge of Storm Caves.

Omaha, Neb., April 26.—Union Pacific passenger train No. 2 was swept from the tracks by a heavy wind storm near the town of North Loup, Neb., and 29 persons were injured, one, James Davis, probably fatally.

The entire train, the engine excepted, was blown from the track and all the cars overturned.

A mile of telegraph line was blown down, cutting off direct communication with larger outside cities and preventing a list of the casualties being sent out for several hours after the train was wrecked. Brakeman Levi Hamilton was dangerously cut and bruised.

The train, composed of a combination mail, baggage and express car and two day coaches, was running at a moderate rate when the gale struck it. The engine alone was left on the tracks, and as soon as Engineer O'Brien could realize what had happened he ran his engine to Ord and returned with a car, in which the injured were taken to Ord.

Engineer O'Brien related, according to reports received at Union Pacific headquarters in this city, that the storm did not take on the form of a tornado. The wind had been blowing a gale, and as the train reached an open stretch it was caught and overturned before O'Brien could stop. A wrecking and relief train was sent to North Loup from Grand Island with a corps of physicians.

Ponca City, Okla., April 26.—Mrs. Mary Crooks was killed, several persons were injured, none fatally, and a score or more buildings were demolished by a tornado which struck this place. Fourteen derricks in the oil field southwest of here were wrecked.

The storm made its first appearance about five miles southwest of Ponca City. It followed a northeasterly course, passed through the oil field, leveling the derricks and struck the western portion of the town. The residents, warned by the approaching cloud, sought refuge in cellars and storm caves. The wind mowed a path about 200 yards wide through the outer edge of the residence section of Ponca City.

Wichita, Kan., April 26.—Three persons are reported to have been killed in one of four tornadoes which did damage near the Kansas-Oklahoma line.

At Uncas, Okla., twenty-five miles southeast of Arkansas City, the Santa Fe station and several houses were destroyed. Another storm near Geuda Springs, twelve miles west of Arkansas City, destroyed several farmhouses. A fourth storm passed between Arkansas City and Winfield, destroying a farmhouse and doing much damage.

OPEN BIG FLORIDA CANAL

Governor Gilchrist and Many Other Notables Attend Function of the Great Everglades Ditch.

Fort Myers, Fla., April 24.—Governor Gilchrist and other state officials and trustees of the internal improvement fund were the hosts Tuesday at ceremonies marking the opening of the Gulf to Atlantic canal.

Among the guests were many prominent men and a large party of newspaper correspondents brought here on special trains.

The canal is one of the five big channels by which some four million acres of the Everglades is to be reclaimed.

After the exercises the entire party embarked on launches for a trip through the canal to its eastern terminus at Fort Lauderdale, with stops at Citrus Center and Okeechobee City.

SENATOR C. M. DEPEW IS 78

Announces His Ambition to Reach Century Milestone—Receives Hundreds Congratulatory Messages.

New York, April 26.—Senator Chauncey M. Depew celebrated his seventy-eighth birthday Tuesday and was the recipient of hundreds of congratulatory messages. In replying to them, he announced that it was his ambition to live to be a hundred years old. He attributes his splendid health to careful dieting and a judicious mixture of work and play.

Butter Famine in New York.

New York, April 27.—This city is experiencing a periodical "butter famine." Reserve stocks are nearly exhausted. One reason for the shortage is the competition of western markets, in which prices are relatively higher.

New $1,850,000 Merger.

Elgin, Ill., April 27.—A merger of the Illinois Iron & Bolt company and the Star Manufacturing company of Carpentersville was effected here Thursday. The new corporation is capitalized at $1,850,000.

Ross R. Winans Is Dead.

Baltimore, Md., April 27.—Ross Revillon Winans, the millionaire capitalist and member of the renowned Winans family, died here last Thursday, [illegible] sixty-two years of [illegible]

RAP AT ROOSEVELT

LETTERS FROM COLONEL AND KNOX SENT TO SENATE.

Ex-President's Letter Concerning Dissolution of Trust Read; Do Not File Suit Until Later.

Washington, April 26.—The senate received on Wednesday, in response to a resolution, photographic copies from the official records of the department of justice and the department of commerce and labor of correspondence which refuted certain statements which Colonel Roosevelt has made in reply to charges made by Representative Gardner of Massachusetts. The correspondence shows that Colonel Roosevelt while president in 1907 directed Attorney General Bonaparte not to file suit against the International Harvester company until he received further instructions from him. This action was taken by Colonel Roosevelt after conferring with George W. Perkins.

The senate adopted early in the day a resolution offered by Senator Johnson of Alabama, Democrat, calling for the correspondence. The attorney general submitted the photographic copies within three hours.

Aside from the instructions from Colonel Roosevelt, which forbade prosecution pending a conference between Attorney General Bonaparte and Herbert Knox Smith, chief of the bureau of corporations, and Mr. Perkins, the most striking feature of the correspondence is the report subsequently made to the president by Mr. Smith. In it, as all through the correspondence, emphasis is given to the desire of the International Harvester company to bring itself within the law.

ITALY SEIZES AEGEAN BASE

Naval Station on Turkish Island Near Entrance to Dardanelles Is Established.

Rome, April 26.—The squadron of Italian warships which has been operating recently in the Aegean sea and near the entrance of the Dardanelles has seized the Turkish island of Stampalia and has established its base there. The island has an area of about fifty square miles and a population of nearly 2,000.

Constantinople, April 26.—The Turkish government has replied to the offer of mediation by the powers in the hostilities with Italy by thanking them and accepting their offer as in the best interests of both belligerents.

The acceptance, however, the Porte points out, must be conditional on the maintenance of the effective and integral sovereignty of Turkey in Tripoli and the evacuation of that country by the Italians.

1,000 BATTLE WITH FLOOD

Water From Overflowed Sections Is Coming Back—Bodies Found Daily in Mississippi Valley.

Memphis, Tenn., April 24.—One thousand men are battling with the high water near the mouth of Red river, forty miles below Natchez, Miss., where breaks are threatening at a dozen places. Water from the overflowed sections of southern Arkansas and north Louisiana is coming back into Mississippi river. The total death list from this flood probably will never be known. Bodies are found every day. Conditions in Arkansas opposite Memphis are greatly improved. Fully two thousand refugees are at the fair grounds being cared for by the flood committee.

SAVES CHILDREN FROM PEST

New Tuberculosis Preventorium at Farmingdale, N. J., Is Formally Dedicated by Gov. Wilson.

Farmingdale, N. J., April 27.—The $150,000 tuberculosis preventorium for children was formally dedicated here Thursday by Governor Wilson of New Jersey. The services were attended by Mrs. Bordman Harriman, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Phipps, Mrs. Grover Cleveland, Mrs. Emanuel Einstein, Mayor Inlay of Farmingdale, Dr. William H. Welch, head of the department of pathology of Johns Hopkins university; Dr. James Alexander Miller, head of the New York tuberculosis clinics, and a large number of state officials, society men and women and well-known physicians.

GREAT CEREMONY IN VENICE

Campanile of St. Mark's, Restored After Nine Years of Labor, Is Dedicated.

Venice, April 27.—The city and church officials of Venice, together with thousands of tourists, including prominent men of every nationality, met Thursday to dedicate the new campanile of St. Mark's—a restoration of the old bell tower which, after standing over 900 years, an architectural wonder of the world, suddenly collapsed on July 12, 1902, and fell in a million broken fragments on the historic square.

Found Guilty of Killing Husband.

Davenport, Ia., April 26.—Mrs. Anna Kilduff, charged with murdering her husband, John Kilduff, was found guilty of manslaughter by a jury here Wednesday after about twelve hours' deliberation.

Use Wireless Phone 20 Miles.

Tokyo, Japan, April 26.—Experiments made here on Wednesday with the wireless telephone have been successful. It has been found possible to converse at a distance of twenty [illegible]

STATE TAKES HAND IN FIGHT

New Jersey Leads in Advanced Legislation Designed to Check Spread of Tuberculosis.

What is designed by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis as the most advanced legislation in the campaign against tuberculosis that has been enacted by any state in the United States, if not by any country in the world, is found in a bill recently passed by the New Jersey legislature and signed by Governor Wilson. The new law provides that tuberculosis patients who refuse to obey the regulations laid down by the state board of health concerning the prevention of their disease, and thus become a menace to the health of those with whom they associate, shall be compulsorily segregated by order of the courts, in institutions provided for this purpose. If such a patient refuses to obey the rules and regulations of the institution in which he is placed, he may "be isolated or separated from other persons and restrained from leaving the institution." The law further provides that all counties in the state of New Jersey shall within six months from April 1st make provision in special institutions for the care of all persons having tuberculosis in these counties. The state treasury will subsidize each county to the extent of $3 a week for each person maintained in these institutions, except those who are able to pay for the cost of maintenance.

Was Sure He Knew It.

The physiology class in a country school was studying about the backbone.

Teacher—What are the pieces of cartilage for between the vertebrae?

A little boy raised his hand.

"Well, Eddie, you may tell us," the teacher said.

"To take the jars off the jumps," answered the triumphant Eddie.—Norman E. Mack's National Monthly.

Explained.

"The count has a painfully snobbish air. What does he base it on?"

"Why, his father, the marquis, was the victim of a duel."

"A French duel?"

"Yes."

"Impossible!"

"Not at all. The marquis climbed a tree to get out of the way, and fell and broke his neck."

Before Publication.

"Patsy, bring me a paper when you come to work in the morning," a woman who lived at the edge of a village told her man of all work when he went home at night. "Now, don't forget it," she added.

"No, ma'am," said Patsy, "I won't. I might forget it if I left it until morning, so I'll get it tonight."

More Profitable.

Waiter—Thank you very much, sir.

Old Gent—What the deuce do you mean? I haven't given you anything.

Waiter—No, sir; but I bet No. 10 half a crown you wouldn't tip me.

Pa Knows.

Willie—Paw, what does discretion mean?

Paw—Picking out a small man when you are looking for trouble.

THE OLD PLEA

He "Didn't Know It Was Loaded."

The coffee drinker seldom realizes that coffee contains the drug, caffeine, a severe poison to the heart and nerves, causing many forms of disease, noticeably dyspepsia.

"I was a lover of coffee and used it for many years, and did not realize the bad effects I was suffering from its use. (Tea is just as injurious as coffee because it, too, contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee.)

"At first I was troubled with indigestion. I did not attribute the trouble to the use of coffee, but thought it arose from other causes. With these attacks I had sick headache, nausea and vomiting. Finally my stomach was in such a condition I could scarcely retain any food.

"I consulted a physician; was told all my troubles came from indigestion, but was not informed what caused the indigestion. I kept on with the coffee, and kept on with the troubles, too, and my case continued to grow worse from year to year until it developed into chronic diarrhea, nausea and severe attacks of vomiting. I could keep nothing on my stomach and became a mere shadow, reduced from 159 to 128 pounds.

"A specialist informed me I had a very severe case of catarrh of the stomach, which had got so bad he could do nothing for me, and I became convinced my days were numbered.

"Then I chanced to see an article setting forth the good qualities of Postum and explaining how coffee injured people, so I concluded to give Postum a trial. I soon saw the good effects—my headaches were less frequent, nausea and vomiting only came on at long intervals and I was soon a changed man, feeling much better.

"Then I thought I could stand coffee again, but as soon as I tried it my old troubles returned and I again turned to Postum. Would you believe it, I did this three times before I had sense enough to quit coffee for good and keep on with the Postum. I am now a well man with no more headaches, sick stomach or vomiting, and have already gained back to 147 pounds." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Look in pkgs. for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human [illegible]

LOOK FOR THE CAUSE

Follow the Advice of Other Women Who Have Had Experience Similar to Yours.

Heve you ever stopped to consider what is the meaning of tha various symptoms from which you are suffering? Certainly the paleness, pain in the back, headaches, loss of appetite, nervousness, shortness of breath must have some one canse. They are not diseasee in themselves hut ara complaints and warnings from the different organs of tha body thet these organs ers not being snpplied with pure hlood and cannot do thair daily work well.

To bo in good health a person must always have good rich hlood. Evary tissua of tha hody depends npon it for nourishment end strength. Knowledge of this fact makes possihle a direct trestment for the variuus disorders from which womsn suffer. They can cure their trouhles by meking the hlood pure with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pals Peopls.

Mrs. F. N. Kenning, of No. 411 Fifteenth avenus, North Minneapolis, Minn., who wss completely cured hy this remedy, says:

"For over a year I was in very poor health. I was very week end thin and had terrihle pains through my beck. I would be in bed for a week at a time. I wsa subject to dizzy spells. My limhs would saem to giva out and I would have no control of them dnring these spells. I was reduced in weight to 98 pounds snd could not do my work.

"The doctor did nut seem to help me and I quit his treatment. It waa then a cousin recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People to me nnd I geve them a trial. I soon felt much better and I now weigh 115 pounds. For years I had terrihle headaches hut since taking the pills these have disappeared. My health is better than it has been in years and I give the credit to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I wonld edvise all suffering women to take the pills for I know they will relieve them of much misery."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pala People should be used in anaemia, chlorosis or graen sickness, sick headache, and for nervonsness and a general run-down condition of the health.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills ars for sale at all druggists, or will be mailed to any address, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Our new hooklet, "Plain Talks to Women," will be sent free on request.

IF WE ONLY COULD.

"Wa all heva our enemies, yuu know."

"Bnt wa can't all huy antomobiles to run em down."

BABY'S TERRIBLE SUFFERING

"When my baby was six months old, his body was completely covered with large sores that seemed to itch and burn, and cause terrible suffering. The eruption began in pimples which would open and run, making large sores. His hair cama out and finger nails fell off, and tha sores wars over the entirs body, causing littla or no sleep for baby or mysalf. Great scabs would coma off when I removed his shirt.

"We tried a great many remedies, hut nothing would help him, till a friend indnced ma to try tha Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used tha Cuticura Soap and Ointment hut a short tima before I could see that he was improving, and in six weeks' time he was entirely cured. He had suffered ebout six weeks before wa tried the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, although we had tried several other things, and doctors, too. I think tha Cuticura Remedies will do all that is claimed for them, and a great deal more." (Signed) Mrs. Nohle Tubman, Dodson, Mont., Jan. 28, 1911. Although Cuticnra Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers averywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

They Draw Interest.

"A kiss," he said after just having had one, "is tha most precious thing, and yet women give them away."

"Yon ere mistaken," she said. "We never give them away, we marely invest them."—Fun.

The young man who tells a girl dnring leap year that he could listen to her voice all the rest of his days takes desperate chances.

A girl's kisses are like pickles in a bottle—the first is hard to get, but the rest come easy.

A man is no sooner elected to office that he begins to kick because it isn't more remunerative.

Garfield Tea, the incomparable laxative. Pleasant to take, pure, mild in action and wonderfully health-giving.

[illegible]

In BALUCHISTAN

By M. LEE

MODE OF TRAVELING IN THE DESERT

THE province of Baluchistan is divided for administrativa pnrposes into what is termed Political Agencies. Of thssa thers ara five, named, respectively, Kalat, Quetta-Pishin, Zhob, Loralai Sihi and Chagai. Tha Chagai Agency has an araa of soma twenty thonsand square miles, and lies on the map in the corner which is bounded on the north hy Afghanistan and on the west hy Persia. For the most part the country is wild and barren in tha extreme; it possesses littla cultivation and is inhahited hy nomads who snpport lifa by pasturing their flocks of sheep, goets and camels, in which consist their only wealth. Chagai is subdivided into threa districts, which are named Nushki, Chagai and tha Western Sinjarani country. The popnlation of Nnshki is a mixed one of Brahui and Baluch. The indigenous inhabitants of Nushki are Baluch; hnt some three or fonr generations sgo a hranch of the Mengal tribe migrated from near Kalat and settled in Nushki, which they made their headquarters. From thance thay spread northward, eventually covering the larger portion of that stupendous sand wasta which is known as the Registan (tha country of Reg or sand), where they sunk wells, soma of which are close on three hundred feet deep. No white man has ever penetrated into tha trua Registan, and so little is known abont it; hnt this we do know, that here are to be found sandhills larger than any others in the world. Tha word sandhill does not convay a proper meaning, as these ara not hills, hut mountains, and tha halief which now obtains is that below the Registan lies a range of lofty hills, the tops of which are huried beneath hundreds of feet of sand. One of tha photographs showa the southern edge of this sandy waste, and was taken from a point which lies about ten miles from the Afghan frontier. In summer the Registan is deserted, as the grass, which springs np in profusion in winter after tha first shower of rain, withars ewey, and the heat is so intense that even the Brahui, with his indifference to heat, cannot bear the fiery temperature which then reigns there supreme. As the summar makes itself felt, tha pastoralists slowly withdraw, part moving north to the Helmand, where they await the time when tha season will allow them to return to their haunts, and part moving sonth and, crossing tha frontier, pitching their goat-hair tents, or gedans, as thay ara called, on tha edga of the sands which are dapicted, and wait until tha hot weathar passes. Terrihla stories are told of the fata which has overcoma those who hava been so rash as to attempt to cross tha Registan in summer; and thet these stories are true is shown by tha fect that a party of Brahuis, escaping from Kandahar in 1900, took tha Registan route in tha hope of avoiding pursuit, and ont of some fifty people, all except two or three perished. Tha remains of these unfortunates were fonnd, when the raturn of the cold weathar permitted a search to be mada, on tha spot where they had fallen monthe before, some covered with sand which had drifted ovsr tham, and the rest in a circle hnddled togather just as they had waited for the death which they knew was coming, and which, no douht, was a happy release when it errived. Weird sounds are heard in these sandy wastes. Perhaps the commonest is what is called hy the inhabitants "Sultans' drums." What eppears to be tha drum-drumming of a native tomtom is heard in tha distance, it may be epproaching or it may he slowly going away. A search reveals nothing which can account for the sounds. Or it may be a man is picking his way cautiously along a ridge of sand when he is snddenly startled out of his senses hy what was apparently the beng of a drum struck hy someone only a few yards away. Let him search never so carefully, he will find nothing there. No setisfactory explanation of these sounds is forthcoming; hnt there is little douht that they have their origin in the dryness of the atmosphara and tha intense heat thet prevails.

CAMP AT ISA CHAH

BALUCHI LEVIES CARRYING WATER

ARRIVING AT NUSHKI

BALUCHI TRADERS TRAVELING ACROSS THE DESERT

In religion tha inhabitants ara Mahomedans, hnt their predilection for shrines and for sacrificing sheep and goats at these latter on every occasion which arises, tends to show that their Mahomedanism is of comparatively recent introduction. In many of their shrines will be found carefully-rounded stones, very similar to those so common in down-country Hindu temples, and which point to a religious connection that has not long been severed. They are wild, but, as might he expected, not fanatical. Their affections are easily won if they are trented well nnd with sympathy. Marvelously hardy, yet disinclined to any great physical exercise, they prefer to spend their time half esleep watching their camels and sheep graze. For their wivea they pay sums which plunge them into deht for yeers, end, indeed, sometimes until they heve dnughters of their own to dispose of in the matrimonial market. In accordance with Mahomedan usege, plurality of wives is parmissihle, hut few have the necessary amount of means to first purchase and aftarwards maintain more than one wife. They ara hrave, and hefore Great Britain took over the country, which was only in 1896, they were much addicted to raiding. Each trihe has its own feuds, and these have been in existence for generations. They pride themselves on the possession of especially fine sword-hlades, which are the fruits of successful forays into Persia. The bledes are very curved, and the hilts of thair swords are so small that a European cannot grasp them. In stature they ere, as n rule, short, with small frames, hnt very wiry. To the English eye, perheps the most striking characteristic is their cnstom of wearing their hair long. In the old deys, whan a man tilled his field it was necessary to do so under e guard, hut with English rule this has passed away.

The further wast one goes, and the further one gets from the center of Baluchistan and from its capital, Quetta, the less land is cultivated and the more marked hecomes the nomadic propensity, until on the frontier itself trihes ara met with who spend their time almost entirely in attacking their neighbors or defending themselves in turn from attack. In fact, their stata is exactly what the state of the whola of Baluchistan was.

Success Under Difficulties

Cornalius Vandarbilt, From Boatman to Railway King.

May 1, 1810, Cornelius Vanderhilt, having imhibed a strong liking for the sea, asked his mother to lend him $100 to buy a boat. The mother said: "My son, on the 25th of this month you will be sixteen years old. If by that tima you will plow, harrow and plant with corn the aight-acre lot I will advance tha money." Tha littla patch of ground on Staten Island where tha Vandarbilt family lived was not large enough to support a family and Cornalius found work among the boatman in New York harbor. But he wanted to hava his own boat and to get the necessary money to start on his own hook he plowed and harrowed that rough and stony field, and that $100 laid tha foundation of his famous fortune.

There were other boatmen in that harbor who wanted to be rich, but they were not willing to pay the price. While the other boatmen wasted their money in drink and their time in silly pleasures, Cornelius stayed on the job, slept with one eye open, looking out for the main chance. He gave the first $300 he earned to his poor parents. While other boatmen were treating their customers to liquor to get trade, Cornelius built up a reputation for integrity among that crowd [illegible] larger than his and their wharf privileges much better, but he soon ontstripped all others. He ran his boat with tha idea of helping his neighbors. He won the public confidence, he was so kind to children and so careful of their walfare that every householder felt tha whole family safa in Ferryman Vanderhilt's care. Ohliged to get larger boats, ha got the best there was. He would often work all night. He was never absent from his post hy day and he soon monopolized the trade. Ha did things.

In 1813, whan it was expected that the Naw York harbor would be attacked by tha British, all the boatmen except Cornelius put in their hids to carry provisions to the military posts all around New York. They were offering to do the work at a price for which he said it could not be done, but then the contractor was exempted from military duty. To please his father Cornelius put in a bid, but he did not go to hear the award. To his astonishment the contract was given to him at a higher price. Wondering why, the commissary said: "We have given this contract to you because we want this business done and we know you'll do it." Capital is not what a man has, but what a man is. Character is capital. [illegible] schooners in New York harbor and had a capital of $9,000. In his wife his power for work was fully doubled. She datermined to help him and tha poorly accommodeted travelers, so they opened a hotel in Elizabeth, N. J., where his wife did her full share in running the Hotel. Think of it. The great-grandmother of ona of tha wealthiest families in the United States kept a transient boarding house in Elizabeth! But she needed to eava only for a faw years hefora she wore diamonds and other precious gems worth $1,000,000.

A boat was needed to accommodate the peopla of Albany, and soon his boats floated on the Hndson, the Delaware and Long Island Sound—then ha estahlished steamboats and other connections between Naw York and California, and hy 1864 he was tha owner or controller of nearly the whole water transportation in and about New York.

But the people wanted to travel fastar. He saw his opportunity and aoted on it. In 1864 he withdrew his capital from shipping and invested it in railroads—first the Harlem road, then the New Haven, then the Hudson River, then the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern—he helped them all, until in 1877 he controlled stocks representing an aggregate capital of $150,000,000, of which he owed one half. Everybody was benefited—farmers sent their produce to market cheaper, merchants secured lower [illegible] steamship "Vanderbilt" to the government, to be used for the capture of Confederate privateers. He founded and endowed Vanderbilt University at Neshville, Tenn. He gave a church to Dr. Deems. He died January, 1877, eighty-three years old, the richest man of his day in America, his fortune being estimated at upwards of $100,000,000.—Madison C. Paters.

French Martial Enthusiasm.

Scenes of enthusiasm were witnessed in Paris one night recently, when, after twenty years, the military tattoos were revived by order of the minister of war with a view to consolidating the new patriotism in France. At 8:30 p. m. the band of the 102nd infantry regiment left the barracks and, followed by an ever-increasing crowd, marched through the streets, playing the stirring and ancient marches of the French army. On the right bank of the Seine the band of the 24th infantry carried out tha tattoo with over 6,000 people marching in step to the sound of the drums and bugles. All the windows along the route were crowded with cheering men and women, who cried "Long live the army." Henceforth there will be two tattoos in Paris every Saturday night.

Great Saving.

Aunt Dinah—Whatfoh you wears brack, Deacon Ebony? You am not a widower.

Deacon Ebony—I is economical, honey. [illegible]

IN CRITICAL CONDITION.

Spokane, Wash., Woman Endures Terrible Suffaring.

Mrs. J. A. Schoonmaker, 127 S. Pine St., Spokane, Wash., saye: "I graw so weak I could ecarcely do my houeework and was often confined to hed. There wae e bsaring-down pain through my hips end my heed ached as if it would split. I knew hy the kidnay secretiuns that my kidneys were in a terrible condition but though I doctored, I gradnally grew worsa, until in critical condition. It was then I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and was entirely cured. I have not had a sign of kidnay trouhle since."

"When Your Back Is Lame, Remember the Neme—DOAN'S." 50c all stores. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Boy's Idea.

Willie wes looking at the pictures in a magazine when suddenly he turned to his father and asked: "Pa, do cocoanuts reelly grow on trees?"

"Of course! Where did you think they grew?"

"Why, pa, I always thought the monkeys laid 'em."—Boston Transcript.

The Usual Way.

"The doctors heve finally decided what caused Smith's illness."

"Had a consultation, eh?"

"No; autopsy."—Judge.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle.

Not Telling All of It.

"Does your fiance know your age, Lottie?"

"Well, partly."

Garfield Tea keeps the liver normal. Drink before retiring.

The higher criticisms of the drama usually come from the gallery gods.

There are two kinds of amhition; one soars and the other crawls.

FREE ADVICE TO SICK WOMEN

Thousands Have Been Helped By Common Sense Suggestions.

Women suffering from any form of female ills are invited to communicate promptly with the woman's private correspondence department of the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established a confidential correspondence which has extended over many years end which has never been broken. Never have they published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the Company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.

Out of tha vast volume of experience which they have to draw from, it is more than possible that they possess the very knowledge needed in your case. Nothing is asked in return except your good will, and their advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. Address Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

Every woman ought to have Lydia E. Pinkham's 80-page Text Book. It is not a book for general distribution, as it is too expensive. It is free and only obtainable by mail. Write for it today.

A QUARTER CENTURY BEFORE THE PUBLIC

Over Five Million Free Samples Given Away Each Year. The Constant and Increasing Sales From Samples Proves the Genuine Merit of

ALLEN'S FOOT-EASE.

Shake Into Your Shoes

Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder for the feet. Are you a trifle sensitive about the size of your shoes? Many people wear shoes a size smaller by shaking Allen's Foot-Ease into them. If you have tired, swollen, hot, tender feet, Allen's Foot-Ease gives instant relief. TRY IT TO-DAY. Sold everywhere, 25 cts. Do not accept any substitute.

"In a pinch, use Allen's Foot-Ease."

FREE TRIAL PACKAGE sent by mail. Mother Gray's Sweet Powders, the best medicine for Feverish, sickly Children. Sold by Druggists everywhere. Trial package FREE. Address ALLEN S. OLMSTED, LE ROY, N. Y.

Ask for this Box

It's the goodness of this root beer as well as its tonic properties that make it so great a favorite. [illegible]

HIRES' HOUSEHOLD EXTRACT
FOR MAKING OLD FASHIONED HOME MADE ROOTBEER

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3,1879.

Eberhart is now trying to ride two horses by trying to climb on the rear of the Roosevelt band wagon. "Anything to get that Coon,"is the principal of the governor.

Taft has got eleven months more to hold down the pesidential chair. It don't matter whether he is nominated or not,he will be knocked out of the box as soon as the people get a turn at the bat.

Nels Anderson has broken the Pennington county ice by announcing himself as a candidate for Registar of deeds, in that great paper the Thief River Falls Times. Now if he can get the indorsement of U.S. Engineer Major Shunk he would have a good start in the race, and he can get it by speaking to D.N.Winton about it, as he and the Major are such warm personal friends that they fell on eachothers necks and shed tears when they met at Thief River Falls last winter.

The Thief River Falls lumber Co. has a dredge enroute to the outlet of Red Lake and will get some water in motion by cleaning out the ontlet, says the Crookston Times. Sure Mike! They can get plenty of water by clearing their logs and the sand that has drifted in between them out of the ontlet of Red Lake. That's what we have been telling them for nearly a year now but they have denied it and their government engineers that Taft appoited as their servants have backed them up in their statements. When anyone tells you that this river is under the control of the government, tell him that he is mistaken, but that it is under the complete control of the lumber corporations backed up by a government engineers outfit that Taft appointed for that express purpose, and the common people can be d—. These are cold facts right from the sholder and they are facts.

A reelection of Taft would mean a presidential veto to any act that would be passed to repeal Reciprocity even if the Republican party have strength enough to pass the bill, after the next election, but either LaFollette or Roosevelt would sign it and urge its passage. In view of this fact we do not see why there should be any bitter fight made between the supporters of LaFollette and Roosevelt, and would consider it the duty of the delegates from North Dakota and this state, also Wisconsin, to throw their votes for Roosevelt, as soon as they see that LaFaoilette stands no show of being nominated. By doing this they will be representing the best interests of the Republican party and the will of the people who sent them as delegates.

That Ismay, president of the White Star Line, should be taken out near where the Titanic went down and cast into the ocean with a 20 pound shot tied around his neck. He took good care to save his own carcas by crowding into the life boats with the women and children, after giving orders to run that ship at a dagerous rate of speed where it was well known there were icebergs. If he goes free some of the peope who lost relatives on that ship had ought to shoot him down like a dog, and those widows who lost their husbands would be justified in following his trail until they got a chance to [illegible] poison if they could not kill him any other [illegible] are mesquitoes. As they sting they put deadly malaria germs in the blood. Then follow the icy chills and the fires of fever. The appitite flies and the strength fails; also malaria often paves the way for deadly typhoid. But Electric Bitters kill and cast out the malira germs from the blood; give you a fine apetite and renew your strength. "After long suffering," wrote Wm. Fretwell, of Lucama, N.C., "three bottles drove all the malaria from my system,and I've had good health ever since." Best for all stomach, liver and kidney ills. 50 cents At all Druggists.

The Demons Of The Swamps

REPUBLICAN COUNTY CONVENTION.

Persuent to the call of the Republican State Central Committee duly communicated to the Republican County Committee for the County of Pennington, State of Minnesota, a Republican County Delagate Convention is hereby called to be held on the 13th, day of May, A. D. 1912, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon of said day at the Court house in Thief River Falls, Pennington County Minnesota, for the purpose of electing ten (10) delegates to the Republican State Convention to be held on the 16. day of May, A.D.1912, at twelve o'clock noon of said day at the Armory, in Minneapolis, Hennepin County Minnesota, for the purpose of electing six delegates at large at large and six alternates to the National Republican Convention to Nominate a president and vice-president of the United States, to be held in Chicago, Illinois, on June 18th, 1612, and to nominate twelve Republican electors for the State of Minnesota; and for the further purpose of electing 10 delegates to the Republican District Convention for the Ninth Congressional District of the State of Minnesota, to be held at the Armory in the City of Thief River Falls, Pennington County, Minnesota,on the 15th, day of May A. D.1912, at ten (10) o'clock in the forenoon of said day, for the purpose of electing two delegates and two alternates to the Nationial Republican Convention to nominate a president and vice president of the United States, to be held at Chicago Illinois, on June 18th. 1912.

The primaries for the election of delegates to the said Republican County Convention shall be held at the usual voting places in each voting precinct in the County of Pennington, State of Minnesota, on Saturday the 11th, day of May 1912, from 7 to 8 o' clock p.m.

The several voting precincts in Pennington County will be entitled to the following number of delegates in said County Convention:

Bray	2
Black River	2
Cloverleaf	2
Deer Park	2
Goodridge	2
Highlanding	3
Hickory	2
Kratka	3
Mayfield	2
Norden	2
Numedahl	2
North	4
Polk Centre	2
Reiner	2
River Falls	2
Rockesbury	4
Sanders	3
Silverton	8
Smiley	4
Star	2
Village of St. Hilaire	8
Wyendotte	4
City of Thief River Falls
First Ward	6
Second	7
Third	4
Fourth	7
Total number of delegates	79

By order of the county central committee of Pennington county, Minnesota.

DANIEL SHAW

H. G. [illegible]

Helps Judge in Bad Fix.

Justice Eli Cherry, of Gillis Mills, Tenn., was plainly worried. A bad sore on his leg had baffled several doctors and long resisted all remedies. "I thought it was a cancer" he wrote "At last I used Bucklen's Arnica Salve and was completely cured." Cures burns, boils, ulcers, cuts, bruises and piles. 25 cents at All Druggists.

NOW THE IRRIGATION CLUB

Work on Reclamation Projects Held Up Until States Send Taft Delegates.

Letters received at the Taft headquarters in Washington from some of the arid land states of the Rocky Mountain region show that the use of the Federal patronage club as a means of forcing the election of Taft delegates to the Republican national convention is only one of the schemes by which the Taft managers are seeking to bring about the renomination of their candidate, regardless of the desire of the rank and file of the Republican party. These letters report a new method of applying Federal pressure. It is an astonishing method, and it evidences a desperation on the part of the Taft managers which could hardly be believed if the evidence were not so clear.

This new method has to do with the national irrigation policy. One of the greatest achievements of Theodore Roosevelt's administration was the adoption of this national irrigation policy and the creation of the reclemation service for the establishment of irrigation works in the dry land states of the west, and the opening up of the lands thus reclaimed to farm settlement. The work has been enormously successful. Thousands of substantial farmers have found homes upon land made astonishingly fertile by irrigation, which before the adoption of this policy lay idle and unproductive. Millions of acres of sagebrush have been made productive of enormous crops. The work has been of incalculable value to the nation as a whole. Now, for purely political reasons and in the effort to force the selection of delegates to the Republican national convention who will vote for the renomination of Mr. Taft, this great irrigation work has received a tremendous check. A single illustration suffices to show: In the State of Colorado there are two irrigation projects under way, one is what is known as the Grand Valley project, the other what is known as the Gunnison Tunnel project. The Grand Valley project was started by the reclamation service in 1903, when James R. Garfield, one of Colonel Roosevelt's enthusiastic supporters, was Secretary of the Interior. The contracts were approved and the work commenced. Thirty days after the inauguration of Mr. Taft and the installation of Richard A. Ballinger as Secretary of the Interior this work was stopped. Since that time, on one pretext or another, no work has been done. There has been a long hard round of investigations, by special agents and army boards, until the whole project is wound up in red tape and delay. Thousands of acres of land that might by this time have been brought under water to furnish homes for many families, and productive farms of great value to the nation's commerce, are still idle because of the inactivity of the Interior department. At the same time, work on the Gunnison tunnel is at a standstill, and the reclamation of the great Uncompahgre valley is not completed. Two years ago Congress provided a special emergency fund of twenty-five million dollars ($25,000,000) in order that certain of these projects which had been started might be hurried through to completion. Of this fund one million five hundred thousand dollars ($1,500,000) was allotted to the Grand Valley project, but still the word was not given to commence work under this allotment and nothing is done. Words how comes to the Roosevelt headquarters in Washington that the reclamation service agents upon some of these suspended projects have received direct information from the department of the interior plainly stating that this and other irrigation projects are being held up until the different states affected report properly to Washington on the subject of delegates to the Republican national convention.

It is not a question with the Taft managers of the development of the arid lands of the west, it is not a question of the reclamation of thousands of acres of sagebrush and the opening up of hundreds of productive farms, it is not a question of the increase of the commerce of the country, it is only a question of driving through the selection of a few more Taft delegates to the Chicago convention.

The Roosevelt delegates, not the Taft delegates, will sit and vote in the Republican national convention in Chicago, because the Republican party will never stand for such methods. The Taft managers in New York and Indiana are pursuing a course which invites the destruction of the party.—New York Evening Mail.

His Part.

[illegible]

TAFT'S ADVISERS DRIVEN TO WALL

They Resort to Absurd Charges Against Col. Roosevelt.

Vituperative "Statements" Without a Scintilla of Truth, Issued by Reactionary Campaign Bureau—Vain Effort That Reacts Like Boomerang—Taft's Stand on Tobacco Trust Decree.

Washington, April 20.—Wildly vituperative "statements" sent out from the Taft national headquarters, and greedily swallowed by the despairing Tory organs, show that, with the evident approval of the president, the limit is to be taken off in the campaign of personal abuse of Colonel Roosevelt.

So desperate have the managers of the Taft collapsed campaign become —especially since the landslide in Illinois, followed by what a reactionary newspaper terms the "earthquake" in Pennsylvania, and facing similar crushing defeats wherever the voters (to quote President Taft) "are allowed" a voice, that a deliberate plan of misrepresentation and falsehood has been formulated in the vain hope of somehow checking the Roosevelt groundswell.

One of the absurd charges to be made against Roosevelt is that special privilege prefers him to Taft, and this charge is to be made by Lorimer's man, McKinley, acting as the head of the Taft forces, and by Penrose, Gallinger, Crane, Cannon and the others who are really directing the Taft campaign.

Unfortunately for the purposes of Mr. Taft, the greatest aid given special privilege and the greatest blow struck at the public interest is the recent court "dissolution" of the tobacco trust, which, preserving absolutely the monopoly which the law forbide, has so enriched the monopolists that all other special privilege beneficiaries are clamorous to be subjected to the same form of prosecution by the Taft administration. They fear that the administration will not last long enough to enable them to obtain the immunity from punishment for robbery of the American people in direct violation of the law as the tobacco trust has received.

Taft managers contend that the reorganization of the tobacco trust is entirely a matter for which the courts are responsible, and that Mr. Taft cannot be blamed. This is untrue. The decree which the court issued was framed by the lawyers of the trust and the attorney general. The court, finding both parties to the suit in agreement, acted as requested.

Nor is it possible to blame the attorney general for this, because President Taft is on record in a message to congress as heartily approving the decree, declaring it to be the most perfect enforcement of the anti-trust law, and making plain his determination to oppose any interference with the settlement of the case. Following this, with the consent and approval of Taft, the attorney general, possessing under the law the sole right to appeal to the Supreme court from the decree which he and Taft had agreed to, refused to make such an appeal and, under instructions from Taft, cut the public off from the privilege of having the farcical enforcement of the law, which he, Taft, had urged in behalf of the tobacco trust, reviewed by the Supreme court.

It needs nothing more than this to convince any sane man that Taft himself, controlling the activities of the attorney general, has been more useful to special privilege, and to the tobacco trust and the Standard Oil monopoly particularly, than all other forces that have worked against the public.

In view of these circumstances, an attack upon Theodore Roosevelt, planned by men whose service to special privilege is revealed in every action, becomes more than a deliberate policy of falsehood.

From the Taft managers such a policy might be expected. From Taft himself such a policy demonstrates a lack of regard for the place he holds and the duty he owes the American people as a whole so startling as to be absolutely deplorable. The futility of it all will increase its offensiveness to the public.

Champions of Privilege.

The chief opponents of Mr. Roosevelt at this time—aside from the postmasters—are Lorimer, Guggenheim, Cannon, Penrose, Barnes of New York, Gallinger, McKinley, et al.

In every political fight in the last ten years these men have been lined up on the side of special interests. They are fighting Roosevelt today because they know that he is the most effective national leader on behalf of the people against these interests that the country has produced.—Kansas City Times.

If your lips are not cracked it is all right for you to know that Henry W. Taft, brother of the president, is very indignant because T. R. is spending a lot of money in his campaign. Let's see, hasn't the president got another brother, C. P., who helped out a little in 1908?—Boston Globe.

An Old Saw, With A New Set.

We have now a large and complete stock of new goods at our Kratka store, and would be pleased to have all our old customers call and see us at the new store and post Office.

A FINE LINE OF BOTH HEAVY AND LIGHT SHOES.

Ask to look at our stock of Shoes. No trouble to show GOODS.

Higest market price paid for butter and eggs.

Singer Bros Kratka minn.

RHODA STORE

NEW GOODS, NEW PRICES.

A trial order will convince you, that this is the best Store to buy your goods.

I HAVE A FINE LINE OF gROCERIES.

BOOTS, SHOES, & COMPLET STOCK OF SUMMER FOOT WARE

give me a call and get prices.

GEORGE SINGER. Prop. Rhoda Minn.

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 10.00 a. m. on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m

Wm.G. Hunt, p.m.

FARM LOANS.

Made Without Delay, at reasonable rates of interest.

Be sure and see me before you place your loan.

GEORGE ELDER.
McGlnn Block,
Thief River Falls.

Anticipating Her Wants.

"I do think that Mrs. Frayle has the meanest husband in town."

"What's his latest?"

"You see, she wants to go to California this winter, so she has cultivated a consumptive cough all season."

"And the stingy thing has gone and built a sleeping porch for her on the [illegible]"

McCall's Magazine and McCall Patterns

For Women

Have More Friends than any other magazine or patterns. McCall's is the reliable Fashion Guide monthly in one million one hundred thousand homes. Besides showing all the latest designs of McCall Patterns, each issue is brimful of sparkling short stories and helpful information for women.

Save Money and Keep in Style by subscribing for McCall's Magazine at once. Costs only 50 cents a year, including any one of the celebrated McCall Patterns free.

McCall Patterns Lead all others in style, fit, simplicity, economy and number sold. More dealers sell McCall Patterns than any other two makes combined. None higher than 15 cents. Buy from your dealer, or by mail from

McCALL'S MAGAZINE
236-246 W. 37th St., New York City

Note—Sample Copy, Premium Catalogue and Pattern Catalogue free, on request.

CORN-SEEDS TREES

Our 29th Annual Catalog is now ready and free for the asking. It is a work of art and full of good things.

See King Corn on front cover.

WILL'S PIONEER SEED HOUSE and NURSERY
OSCAR H. WILL & CO.
BISMARCK, NO. DAKOTA

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

[illegible]

Scientific American.

[illegible] New York

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Call and see us, when you are ready to make your final proof.

The stock is beginning to get a good bite of green grass.

The meadows are putting on their coat of green.

Some fine light showers this week, but no heavy rain.

Henry Boss is boilding a new house on his homestead

The farmers mass meeting last Saturурday was well attended, but no proceedings are to be published.

The Clearwater river is bank full and has been all the spring, which supplies plenty of water below Red Lake Falls.

A daughter of Mr. Mrs. Gunderson liveing in the town of Kratka while playing on a ladder on Wednesday fell and broke her leg.

The Red Lake River raised four Inches last night and as there has been no rain the lumber Co. must have started to pull the cork out of Red Lake.

Our farmers seem to have the flax feavor quite bad this spring, you hear, "break it up and sow it to flax," on every hand.

Frost seems to be interfeering with ditching a goodeal as the dredge near Erie has been hung up by frost and the one west of Malone has been striking icebergs.

Now that the Red Lake River has started to raise it would be well for people who have been accustomed to fording it to watch the rise and not drive into it and drown your horses.

Edward Singer has bought him a fine bronco driveing horse which he will use on his fire patrol. He employed the services of M. E. Hyland and Sons to help him introduce Mr. Bronk into the ways and by-ways of being a respectible driveing horse.

We are afraid there will not be much interest taken by the farmers up this way to send delegats to the Republican County convention, as they all are busy, but they should remember that if they leave all the politicts to the city fellows that they will look after their own interests and not the farmers.

Remember that the Republican caucuses for the election of delegates to the County Convention will be held at the usal voting places in each township, on Saturday May 11, between the hours of 7 and 8 o'clock p.m. Turn out to these primaries and send a full delegation down to the convention.

The bridge at Roland is still in an impassiable condition, which is not worring us much as we are not so far from Highlanding. If the people in Deer Park do not care enough about mail line thru their town to fix that bridge, the mail will have to stop, that's all. If they are waiting for Sunbeam to go down there and fix their bridge they will be waiting, for the one that will never come.

Last week Stephen Singer, the merchant and post master at Kratka was taken with a mild attact of what the Doctor pronounced to be diphtheria, and placed the store and post office under quarantine. News received from Mr. Singer yesterday, states that he was not seriously ill and was on the way to recovery, and that no others in the same house had been affected, and that the quarantine would soon be raised.

It must have made a rush of work at Kuehnel post office this week to have the Kratka mail suddenly dumped onto them to handle, but you know 4th. class postmasters get such a big salery that they can afford to hire plenty of help in a case of that kind. But the 4th. class postmasters are lucky sometimes, as there was not one of them that lost his life by the wreck of the Titanic, for they didn't have money enough to buy a ticket to get on board.

Garden making is now the order of the day.

Don't allow the rats to distroy your property, but put in a supply of cats, the original and reliable rat catchers.

According to reports flax is going to be a good price this fall and the more you raise the more money you have next fall no matter who is elected president.

Escapes An Awful Fate.

A thousand tongues could not express the gratitude of Mrs. J. E. Cox, of Joliet Ills., for her wonderful deliverance from an awful fate. "Typhoid pneumonia had left me with a dreadful cough," she writes. "Sometimes I had such awful coughing spells I thought I would die. I could get no help from doctor's treatment or other medicine till I used Dr. Kings New Discovery. But I owe my life to this wonderful remedy for I scarsely cough at all now." Quick and safe, its the most reliable of all throat and lung medicine. Every bottle guaranteed. 50c and $1,00. Trial bottle free at All Druggists.

What Texans Admire.

is hearty, vigorous life, according to Hugh Tallman, of San Antonio. "We find" he writes, "that Dr. King's New Life Pills surely put new life and energy into a person. Wife and I believe they are the best made." Excellent for stomach, liver or kidney troubles 25 cts. at All Druggists.

FARM FOR SALE.

The N. E. ¼ Section 14 Township 152 N. Range 40, Town of Deer Park. Price $16,00 per acre.

Henry Rovoold,
Alsask, Sask. Canada.

DRESS MAKING.

For plain and Fancy sewing apply to Mrs. Sam McMahn Student of the America College of dress making.

Kuehnel, Minn.

Notice To Farmers.

I have an a No. Jack, nine years old which will stand for service during the season of 1912, at my farm on section 8 town of Deer Park.

M. E. Hyland.

* *

Acting Substitute.

"Are you the man of the house?"

"Yes, sir."

"Is your wife at home?"

"No, sir. That is how I come to be man of the house."

* *

Napoleon's Nicknames.

Napoleon Bonaparte had many nicknames, many of them bestowed in admiration and devotion by his soldiers, such as the playfully ironic "Little Corporal," while on the other side of the silver streak he was known by less complimentary sobriquets. "Old Boney" was then a bogy at the mention of whom more than merely children were terrified and grew pale, while many pious persons even believed that he was the "beast" mysteriously referred to in the book of Revelation under the name of "666" and many ingenious attempts were made to show that the letters of his name could be transmuted into this number.—London Globe.

Didn't Have to Obey.

On one occasion Senator Root, accompanied by two friends, a banker and a literary man, were at a theater in Boston. Directly in front of the banker was a man who was asleep and snoring vociferously, much to the annoyance of the trio. Without seeking the assistance of an usher the banker shook the sleeper by the shoulder and awakened him, only to be told to "Go to ——."

Thoroughly angered, the banker jumped up, doubtless preparing to physically resent the uncalled for remark.

"Now sit down," said the senator. "You know you don't have to go there just because he told you to do so."

Blessedness consists in the accomplishment of our desires and in our having only regular desires.—St. Augustine.

THE LIMIT OF COLD

Absolute Zero and the Way It Is Defined by Science.

POINT OF MOLECULAR DEATH

At 459.4 Degrees Below the Fahrenheit and 273 Degrees Below the Centigrade Zero There Is No Heat, No Energy and No Motion Within Matter.

Few people have any definite idea of the meaning of absolute zero. When temperatures or degrees of heat are mentioned it is natural for most people to think of these degrees as given on the household or Fahrenheit scale, with its freezing point at 32 degrees and its boiling point at 212. The space on the Fahrenheit thermometer below the freezing point of water is divided into thirty-two equal spaces down to zero. The other thermometer scale in common use is the centigrade scale, with its boiling point at 100 degrees and its freezing point at zero. The zero points on these two scales are not the zero of absolute temperature or absolute zero, but are only two relative points.

Temperature as used and spoken of in ordinary practice is only relative and is measured in reference to two points—the boiling and freezing points of water at sea level. But science and scientific investigation requires another scale for its measurements, which has a theoretically correct zero point. This scale is called the absolute scale, with its zero point 273 degrees below the zero of the centigrade scale and 459.4 degrees below that of the Fahrenheit zero. This is what is meant by the zero of absolute temperature.

Absolute temperature has been defined. According to science, all matter is composed of small particles or molecules in ceaseless vibration in the spaces between them. This molecular motion, as it is called, is much greater in gases than it is in liquids or solids, and the ultimate particles are further apart. The idea of absolute zero and the place assigned to it on the absolute scale is based on this property of matter—motion. In gaseous forms of matter the motion is greater because of the greater space between the particles.

To illustrate the meaning of this point and to explain how it was got, imagine a volume of air of 273 cubic inches at the temperature of freezing water on the centigrade scale. Heat this volume of air to 1 degree centigrade and its volume will have increased to 274 cubic inches, and if heated to 2 degrees its volume will be 275 cubic inches. Likewise, if the original volume be cooled 1 degree below the freezing point of water its volume will be decreased by one cubic inch and become 272 cubic inches. For every additional decrease of 1 degree, the volume will contract one two-hundred and seventy-third part of what it was to begin with, so that, if the cooling is carried far enough, it is easy to see that at 273 degrees below the freezing point of water the volume will become nothing.

The volume of a gas is due to the real volume of its individual particles, together with the volume of the spaces between these particles. At ordinary temperatures these particles are in swift motion. But for every degree of cooling this motion is slackened, and the paths of vibration become shorter. This motion continues down to 273 degrees below the centigrade zero, where the motion has entirely ceased and the paths of the particles are infinitely short. Of course the gas under consideration at −273 degrees will have a volume due to the sum of the volume occupied by the molecular particles themselves

This 273 degrees then is the absolute zero. It is the point of molecular death. No heat is there, no energy and consequently no motion. Matter at this point is entirely motionless within itself

The thermometer scales of the world should be based on it as the logical starting point. The freezing point of water, which is zero on the centigrade scale, referred to the absolute scale is −273 degrees, while the freezing point of 32 on the Fahrenheit scale is −459.4 degrees on it. The ordinary temperature of a room is about 68 degrees F., or 527.4 degrees on the absolute scale. On the same scale summer heat is about 558 degrees F.

The zero of absolute temperature has nearly been reached in the preparation of solid hydrogen gas and liquid helium. The temperature of liquid helium (one of the rarest of gases) is only about 4 degrees above absolute zero, so that the individual particles of liquid helium have almost become motionless. Probably in the near neighborhood of absolute zero this gas, which is the only one that has not been solidified, will become solid and represent matter in the state of molecular death. W. C. Dumas in Chicago Record-Herald.

The Longest Novel.

The "Story of the Eight Dogs" is the longest novel that has ever been published. Fortunately, perhaps, it is written in Japanese, so no one will set himself the task of reading it. It contains 106 volumes, several hundred characters and numerous dogs, all of which are successfully disposed of by the time the last chapter is reached. Just imagine reading through that one book that would last a lifetime.

[illegible]

Gunder Aabjernson of Malone made this office a plesent call today. He says they have just closed a very successful tearm of Norwegin school, which has been maintained by the generous donations of the patrons.

"Dr. Miles' Nervine Raised Me From the Grave"—Mrs. Taylor

This is a strong statement to make, but it is exactly what Mrs. Thomas Taylor, of Blum, Texas, said in expressing her opinion of this remedy.

"Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine raised me from the grave and I have much confidence in it. I can never say enough for your grand medicines. If anyone had offered me $100.00 for the second bottle of Nervine that I used I would have said 'no indeed.'"

MRS. THOMAS TAYLOR,
Blum, Tex.

Nervous exhaustion is a common occurence of modern life. The wear and tear on the nervous system is greater now than at any time since the world began. For sleeplessness, poor appetite and that "run down" feeling, nothing is so good as

Dr. Miles' Nervine

Your nerves are your life and lack of vital energy makes existence a misery. Dr. Miles' Nervine will tone up your nervous system.

Ask any druggist. If the first bottle fails to benefit, your money is returned.

MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

Took the Gift Without Thanks.

The name of W. H. Alexander is practically an unknown one in England, yet he it was who gave to the country the enormous sum of £80,000 for the purpose of building the National Portrait gallery. The only recognition he asked for this munificent gift was that he might have an autograph letter from Queen Victoria giving expression to the nation's gratitude. It is more than remarkable that up to the time of his death this modest request had not been granted, and no recognition was made of his handsome gift. It is surmised that this simple wish was never laid before the queen.—Pearson's.

THE LITTLE THINGS.

Many little things go to make up an important whole. Life is made up of little things—words, acts, duties, pleasures. They come to us one after another, calling us out of ourselves, or seem to rush hurriedly past us, and they leave an impress on our spirit, and our characters are made or marred by their influence.
—Rev. B. Lowry.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

LUNG DISEASE

"After four in our family had died of consumption I was taken with a frightful cough and lung trouble, but my life was saved and I gained 87 pounds through using

DR. KING'S NEW DISCOVERY

W. R. Patterson, Wellington, Tex.

PRICE 50c and $1.00 AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

LUMBER FOR SALE.

I will have about 60,000 ft. of lumber for sale this winter at $15.00 per thousand. Will take cattle in exchange.

Andrew Nilson.

W. G. Hunt.

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat. I can do the business by mail [illegible]

NEW BANK.

FIRST STATE BANK,

OF OKLEE Lambert Post Office Minn.
NEW STATION ON DULUTH SOO LINE.

Your Business Solicited.

Directors: A. P. Toupin, Pres. Samuel Gilean Vic. Prs.
Larry O'Niel, Abrham Parquize, T. L. Cruzon.
J. A. Duffy, Cashier. T. L. Cruzon, Assist. Cashier.

Let Us Tell You Something!

This Season we are offering the best line of Dry Goods that ever came into this Section of the Country.

Don't Buy Elswhare, Until You Have Seen What We Have To Offer.

No Matter What Price you pay, WE Will please YOU.

VAUGHAN BROS. & CO.

Highlanding Minn.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's $50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day

Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were piloting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory? We can employ only one salesman out of each locality.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars, it will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Our New Home. Capacity 20,000 Safes Annually.

Ask for Catalogue 18 T.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.

CINCINNATI, OHIO

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT

IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the regular retail prices.

$10.00 Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof Self-healing Tires A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

[illegible]

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

[illegible]

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

[illegible] All orders shipped same day [illegible] you do not pay a cent until you [illegible] FULL CASH [illegible]

[illegible] CHICAGO, ILL.

BURNING DAYLIGHT

By JACK LONDON

AUTHOR OF "THE CALL OF THE WILD," "WHITE FANG," "MARTIN EDEN," ETC.

(Copyright, 1910, by the New York Herald Company.)
(Copyright, 1910, by the Macmillan Company.)

SYNOPSIS.

Elam Harnish, known all through Alaska as "Burning Daylight," celebrates his 30th birthday with a crowd of miners at the Circle City Tivoli. The dance leads to heavy gambling, in which over $100,000 is staked. Harnish loses his money and his mine but wins the mail contract. He starts on his mail trip with dogs and sledge, telling his friends that he will be in the big Yukon gold strike at the start. Burning Daylight makes a sensationally rapid run across country with the mail, appears at the Tivoli and is now ready to join his friends in a dash to the new gold fields. Deciding that gold will be found in the up-river district Harnish buys two tons of flour, which he declares will be worth its weight in gold, but when he arrives with his flour he finds the big flat desolate. A comrade discovers gold and Daylight reaps a rich harvest. He goes to Dawson, becomes the most prominent figure in the Klondike and defeats a combination of capitalists in a vast mining deal. He returns to civilization, and, amid the bewildering complications of high finance, Daylight finds that he has been led to invest his eleven millions in a manipulated scheme. He goes to New York, and confronting his disloyal partners with a revolver, he threatens to kill them if his money is not returned. They are cowed, return their stealings and Harnish goes back to San Francisco where he meets his fate in Dede Mason, a pretty stenographer. He makes large investments and gets into the political ring. For a rest he goes to the country. Daylight gets deeper into high finance in San Francisco, but often the longing for the simple life nearly overcomes him. Dede Mason buys a horse and Daylight meets her in her saddle trips. One day he asks Dede to go with him on one more ride, his purpose being to ask her to marry him, and they canter away, she trying to analyze her feelings.

CHAPTER XV.—Continued.

But through it all ran the golden thread of love. At first he had been content just to ride with Dede and to be on comradely terms with her; but the desire and the need for her increased. The more he knew of her, the higher was his appraisal. Had she been reserved and haughty with him, or been merely a giggling, simpering creature of a woman, it would have been different. Instead, she amazed him with her simplicity and wholesomeness, with her great store of comradeliness. The latter was the unexpected. He had never looked upon women in that way. Woman, the toy; woman, the harpy; woman, the necessary wife and mother of the race's offspring—all this had been his expectation and understanding of woman. But woman, the comrade and playfellow and joyfellow—this was what Dede had surprised him in. And the more she became worth while, the more ardently his love burned, unconsciously shading his voice with caresses, and with equal unconsciousness flaring up signal fires in his eyes. Nor was she blind to it, yet, like many women before her, she thought to play with the pretty fire and escape the consequent conflagration."

"Winter will soon be coming on," she said regretfully, and with provocation, one day, "and then there won't be any more riding."

"But I must see you in the winter just the same," he cried hastily.

She shook her head.

"I've been pretty good," he declared. "I leave it to you if I haven't. It's been pretty hard, too, I can tell you. You just think it over. Not once have I said a word about love to you, and me loving you all the time. That's going some for a man that's used to having his own way. I'm somewhat of a rusher when it comes to traveling. I reckon I'd rush God Almighty if it came to a race over the ice. And yet I didn't rush you. I guess this fact is an indication of how much I do love you. Of course I want you to marry me. Have I said a word about it, though? Nary a chirp, nary a flutter. I've been quiet and good, though it's almost made me sick at times, this keeping quiet. I haven't asked you to marry me. I'm not asking you now. Oh, not but what you satisfy me. I sure know you're the wife for me. But how about myself? Do you know me well enough to know your own mind?" He shrugged his shoulders. "I don't know, and I ain't going to take chances on it now. You've got to know for sure whether you think you could get along with me or not, and I'm playing a slow conservative game. I ain't a-going to lose for overlooking my hand."

This was love-making of a sort beyond Dede's experience. Nor had she ever heard of anything like it.

"So you see," he urged, "just for a square deal we've got to see some more of each other this winter. Most likely your mind ain't made up yet—"

"But it is," she interrupted. "I wouldn't dare permit myself to care for you. Happiness, for me, would not lie that way. I like you, Mr. Harnish, and all that, but it can never be more than that."

"It's because you don't like my way of living," he charged, thinking in his own mind of the sensational joy-rides and general profligacy with which the newspapers had credited him—thinking this, and wondering whether or not, in maiden modesty, she would disclaim knowledge of it.

To his surprise, her answer was flat and uncompromising.

"No, I don't."

"I [illegible] hush on some of [illegible] into the pastures [illegible] [illegible] been traveling with a lively crowd—"

"I don't mean that," she said, "though I know about it, too, and can't say that I like it. But it is your life in general, your business. There are women in the world who could marry a man like you and be happy, but I couldn't. And the more I cared for such a man, the more unhappy I should be. You see, my unhappiness, in turn, would tend to make him unhappy. I should make a mistake, and he would make an equal mistake, though his would not be so hard on him because he would still have his business."

"Business!" Daylight gasped. "What's wrong with my business? I play fair and square. There's nothing underhand about it, which can't be said of most businesses, whether of the big corporations or of the cheating, lying, little corner-grocerymen. I play the straight rules of the game, and I don't have to lie or cheat or break my word."

"Don't you see," he went on, "the whole game is a gamble. Everybody gambles in one way or another. The farmer gambles against the weather and the market on his crops. So does the United States Steel Corporation. The business of lots of men is straight robbery of the poor people. But I've never made that my business. You know that. I've always gone after the robbers."

"I missed my point," she admitted. "Wait a minute."

And for a space they rode in silence.

"I see it more clearly than I can state it, but it's something like this. There is legitimate work, and there's work that—well, that isn't legitimate. The farmer works the soil and produces grain. He's making something that is good for humanity. He actually, in a way, creates something, the grain that will fill the mouths of the hungry."

"And then the railroads and market-riggers and the rest proceed to rob him of that same grain," Daylight broke in.

"There ain't much difference between playing halfway robber like the railroad hauling that farmer's wheat to market, and playing all robber and robbing the robbers like I do. And, besides, halfway robbery is too slow a game for me to sit in. You don't win quick enough for me."

"But what do you want to win for?" Dede demanded. "You have millions and millions, already; why can't you do good with all your money?"

Daylight laughed.

"Doing good with your money! Ain't it funny, to go around with brass knuckles and a big club breaking folks' heads and taking their money away from them until I've got a pile, and then, repenting of my ways, going around and bandaging up the heads the other robbers are breaking? I leave it to you. That's what doing good with money amounts to. Every once in a while some robber turns soft-hearted and takes to driving an ambulance. That's what Carnegie did. He smashed heads in pitched battles at Homestead, regular wholesale head-breaker he was, held up the suckers for a few hundred million, and now he goes around dribbling it back to them. Funny? I leave it to you."

He rolled a cigarette and watched her half curiously, half amusedly. His replies and harsh generalizations of a harsh school were disconcerting, and she came back to her earlier position.

"I can't argue with you, and you know that. No matter how right a woman is, men have such a way about them—well, what they say sounds most convincing, and yet the woman is still certain they are wrong. But there is one thing, the creative joy: and it's a higher joy than mere gambling. Haven't you ever made things yourself—a log cabin up in the Yukon, or a canoe, or raft, or something? And don't you remember how satisfied you were, how good you felt, while you were doing it and after you had it done?"

While she spoke his memory was busy with the associations she recalled. He saw the deserted flat on the river bank by the Klondike, and he saw the log cabins and warehouses spring up, and all the log structures he had built, and his sawmills working night and day on three shifts.

"Why, dog-gone it, Miss Mason, you're right—in a way. I've built hundreds of houses up there, and I remember I was proud and glad to see them go up. I'm proud now, when I remember them. And there was Ophir—the most God-forsaken moose-pasture of a creek you ever laid eyes on. I made that into the big Ophir. Why, I ran the water in there from the Rinkabilly, eighty miles away. They all said I couldn't, but I did it, and I did it by myself. The dam and the flume cost me four million. But you should have seen that Ophir—power plants, electric lights, and hundreds of [illegible] [illegible] a thing. I made Ophir, and she was a hummer."

"I Like You, Mr. Harnish, and That Is All."

"And you won something there that was more than mere money," Dede encouraged. "Now do you know what I would do if I had lots of money and simply had to go on playing at business? Take all the southerly and westerly slope of these bare hills. I'd buy them in and plant eucalyptus on them. I'd do it for the joy of doing it anyway; but suppose I had that gambling twist in me which you talk about, why, I'd do it just the same and make money out of the trees. And there's my other point again. Instead of raising the price of coal without adding an ounce of coal to the market supply, I'd be making thousands and thousands of cords of firewood—making something where nothing was before. And everybody who ever crossed on the ferries would look up at these forested hills and be made glad. Who was made glad by your adding four dollars a ton to Rock Wells?"

It was Daylight's turn to be silent for a time while she waited an answer.

"Would you rather I did things like that?" he asked at last.

"It would be better for the world, and better for you," she answered non-committally.

CHAPTER XVI.

All week every one in the office knew that something new and big was afoot in Daylight's mind. On Sunday Dede learned all about it.

"I've been thinking a lot of our talk," he began, "and I've got an idea I'd like to give it a flutter. And I've got a proposition to make your hair stand up. It's what you call legitimate, and at the same time it's the gosh-dangdest gamble a man ever went into. How about planting minutes wholesale, and making two minutes grow where one minute grew before? Oh, yes, and planting a few trees, too—say several million of them. You remember the quarry I made believe I was looking at? Well, I'm going to buy it. I'm going to buy these hills, too, clear from here around to Berkeley and down the other way to San Leandro. I own a lot of them already, for that matter. But mum is the word. I'll be buying a long time to come before anything much is guessed about it, and I don't want the market to jump up out of sight. You see that hill over there. It's my hill running clear down its slopes through Piedmont and halfway along those rolling hills into Oakland. And it's nothing to all the things I'm going to buy."

He paused triumphantly.

"The ferry system between Oakland and San Francisco is the worst one-horse concern in the United States. You cross on it every day, six days in the week. [illegible] days a month, or three hundred a year. How long does it [illegible] minutes grow where one grew before, knock off my head with little apples. I'll save you twenty minutes each way. That's forty minutes a day, times three hundred, equal to twelve thousand minutes a year, just for you, just for one person. Let's see: that's two hundred whole hours. Suppose I save two hundred hours a year for thousands of other folks—that's farming some, ain't it? Come on. Let's ride up that hill, and when I get you out on top where you can see something, I'll talk sense."

A small footpath dropped down to the dry bed of the canyon, which they crossed before they began the climb. The slope was steep and covered with matted brush and bushes, through which the horses slipped and lunged. Showers of twigs and leaves fell upon them, and predicament followed predicament, until they emerged on the hilltop the worse for wear but happy and excited. Here no trees obstructed the view. The particular hill on which they were, out-jutted from the regular line of the range, so that the sweep of their vision extended over three-quarters of the circle. Below, on the flat land bordering the bay, lay Oakland, and across the bay was San Francisco. Between the two cities they could see the white ferry-boats on the water. Around to their right was Berkeley, and to their left the scattered villages between Oakland and San Leandro. Directly in the foreground was Piedmont, with its desultory dwellings and patches of farming land, and from Piedmont the land rolled down in successive waves upon Oakland.

"Look at it," said Daylight, extending his arm in a sweeping gesture. "A hundred thousand people there, and no reason there shouldn't be half a million. There's the chance to make five people grow where one grows now. Here's the scheme in a nutshell. Why don't more people live in Oakland? No good service with San Francisco, and, besides, Oakland is asleep. It's a whole lot better place to live in than San Francisco. Now, suppose I buy in all the street railways of Oakland, Berkeley, Alameda, San Leandro, and the rest—bring them under one head with a competent management? Suppose I cut the time to San Francisco one-half by building a big pier out there almost to Goat Island and establishing a ferry system with modern up-to-date boats? Why, folks will want to live over on this side. Very good. They'll need land on which to build. So, first I buy up the land. But the land's cheap now. Why? Because it's in the country, no electric roads, no quick communication, nobody guessing that the electric roads are coming. I'll build the roads. That will make the land jump up. Then I'll sell the land as fast as the folks will want to buy, because of the improved ferry system and transportation facilities.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

900 DROPS
CASTORIA
ALCOHOL—3 PER CENT
A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of
INFANTS & CHILDREN
Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral
NOT NARCOTIC
Recipe of Old Dr SAMUEL PITCHER
Pumpkin Seed -
Alx. Senna -
Rochelle Salts -
Anise Seed -
Peppermint -
Bi Carbonate Soda -
Worm Seed -
Clarified Sugar
Wintergreen Flavor.
A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.
Fac Simile Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.
THE CENTAUR COMPANY,
NEW YORK.
At 6 months old
35 DOSES—35 CENTS
Guaranteed under the Food and
Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children.
The Kind You Have Always Bought
Bears the Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.
In Use For Over Thirty Years
CASTORIA
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

The Ruling Passion.

Little Willie was an embryo electrician. Anything relating to his favorite study possessed absorbing interest for him. One day his mother appeared in a new gray gown, the jacket of which was trimmed in flat black buttons showing an outer circle of the light dress material. Willie studied the gown critically for a moment, then the light of strong approval dawned in his eyes.

"Oh, mamma," he cried, "what a pretty new dress! It's all trimmed in push buttons."—Judge.

Easily Overcome by Counsel.

"The trouble is," said Wilkins as he talked the matter over with his counsel, "that in the excitement of the moment I admitted that I had been going too fast, and wasn't paying any attention to the road just before the collision. I'm afraid that admission is going to prove costly."

"Don't worry about that," said his lawyer. "I'll bring seven witnesses to testify that they wouldn't believe you under oath."—Harper's Weekly.

When Your Eyes Need Care
Try Murine Eye Remedy. No Smarting—Feels Fine—Acts Quickly. Try it for Red, Weak, Watery Eyes and Granulated Eyelids. Illustrated Book in each Package. Murine is compounded by our Oculists—not a "Patent Medicine"—but used in successful Physicians' Practice for many years. Now dedicated to the Public and sold by Druggists at 25c and 50c per Bottle. Murine Eye Salve in Aseptic Tubes, 25c and 50c.
Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago

Vary Different.

"Is it true that your daughter intends to study for the stage?"

"No, she hasn't any such ideas. What she intends to do is become an actress."

Stop the Pain.
The hurt of a burn or a cut stops when Cole's Carbolisalve is applied. It heals quickly and prevents scars. 25c and 50c by druggists. For free sample write to J. W. Cole & Co., Black River Falls, Wis.

When a bachelor is landed by a leap year girl, he can imagine about how a fish out of water feels.

The system takes kindly to nature's laxative, Garfield Tea, which is mild in action and always effective.

Even a woman never learns to sneeze gracefully.

Sweethearts are always dear, but wives are far more expensive.

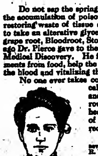
The Farmer's Son's Great Opportunity
160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE
Why wait for the old farm to become your inheritance? Begin now to prepare for your future prosperity and independence. A great opportunity awaits you in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, where you can secure a Free Homestead or buy land at reasonable prices.
Now's the Time
—not a year from now, when land will be higher. The profits secured from the abundant crops of Wheat, Oats and Barley, as well as cattle raising, are causing a steady advance in price. Government returns show that the number of settlers in Western Canada from the U. S. was 50 per cent larger in 1910 than the previous year.
Many farmers have paid for their land out of the proceeds of one crop.
Free Homesteads of 160 acres and pre-emptions of 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. Fine climate, good schools, excellent railway facilities, low freight rates; wood, water and lumber easily obtained.
For pamphlet "Last Best West," particulars as to suitable location and low settlers' rate, apply to Sup't of Immigration, Ottawa, Can., or to Canadian Gov't Agent.
Chas. Pilling, Clifford Blk, Grand Forks, N.D.
J. M. MacLachlan, Box 127, Watertown, S.D.
E. T. Holmes, 315 Jackson St., St. Paul, Minn.
Geo. A. Hall, 125 2d St., Milwaukee, Wis.

Don't Persecute Your Bowels
Cut out cathartics and purgatives. They are brutal, harsh, unnecessary. Try
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS
Purely vegetable. Act gently on the liver, eliminate bile, and soothe the delicate membrane of the bowel. Cure Constipation, Biliousness, Sick Headache and Indigestion, as millions know.
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.
SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.
Genuine must bear Signature
Brent Good

Readers of this paper desiring to buy anything advertised in its columns should insist upon having what they ask for, refusing all substitutes or imitations.

FOR SALE—For a short time I offer the following improved farms at prices much lower than adjoining land. Must be sold soon. 259 acres 1 miles town, best soil, good buildings, $32 per acre. 160, 4 miles town, $30 per acre. 160, steam plow land at $2,000. O. L. Petersen, Thief River Falls, Minn.

THE SECRET OF LONG LIFE.
Do not sap the springs of life by neglect of the human mechanism, by allowing the accumulation of poisons in the system. An imitation of Nature's method of restoring waste of tissue and impoverishment of the blood and nervous strength is to take an alterative glyceric extract (without alcohol) of Golden Seal and Oregon grape root, Bloodroot, Stone and Mandrake root with Cherrybark. Over 40 years ago Dr. Pierce gave to the public this remedy, which he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. He found it would help the blood in taking up the proper elements from food, help the liver into activity, thereby throwing out the poisons from the blood and vitalizing the whole system as well as allaying and soothing a cough.
No one ever takes cold unless constipated, or exhausted, and having what we call mal-nutrition, which is attended with impoverished blood and exhaustion of nerve force. The "Discovery" is an all-round tonic which restores tone to the blood, nerves and heart by imitating Nature's methods of restoring waste of tissue, and feeding the nerves, heart and lungs on rich red blood.



Mrs. Doxx.

"I suffered from pain under my right shoulder blade also a very severe cough," writes Mrs. W. Doxx, of New Brookland, S. C., to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. "Had four different doctors and none did me any good. Some said I had consumption, others said I would have to have an operation. I was bedridden, unable to sit up for six months—and was nothing but a live skeleton. You advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. When I had taken one bottle of the 'Discovery' I could sit up for an hour at a time, and when I had taken three bottles I could do my cooking and tend to the children. I took fourteen bottles in all and was then in good health. My weight is now 167 pounds.

"For Every Little Family Ailment"
Vaseline
"Vaseline" is the purest, simplest, safest home remedy known. Physicians everywhere recommend it for its softening and healing qualities.
Nothing so good as "Vaseline" for all affections of the skin, scratches, sores, etc. Taken internally, relieves colds and coughs. For sale everywhere in attractive glass bottles.
Accept no substitute for "Vaseline"
Our free "Vaseline" Booklet tells you many ways in which "Vaseline" may be useful to you. Write for your copy today.
Chesebrough Manufacturing Company
[illegible] (Consolidated) New York

M. E. BIG PROGRAM

SCHEDULE OF MEETINGS OF GENERAL CONFERENCE AT MINNEAPOLIS.

TAKES AN ENTIRE MONTH

First Meeting Will Be Held in Minneapolis Armory on May 1.—Many Notable Speakers Coming.

Minneapolis. — The tentative outlines of the program of the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church have been given out by the publicity committee of the local conference commission.

The general conference will open, socially, the evening of April 30, with a big public reception and program of addresses in the armory. The business sessions will begin at 8:30 a. m. May 1, in the Auditorium. These business sessions of the whole conference body will continue daily from 8:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m. throughout May.

Meetings of standing committees and boards are scheduled for three days a week each and will for the most part take up the better part of each afternoon such committees as are in session. These meetings will be in various churches and auditoriums over the city.

Bishops Report Wednesday.

The program is as follows:

Wednesday, May 1.—Report of bishops, Europe and Africa.

May 2.—Reception of fraternal delegates, British Wesleyan church, Irish Methodist church, Methodist church of Canada.

May 3.—Anniversary general deaconess board; 8 p. m., lecture, "The Puritan in Two Worlds," Rev. S. Parks Cadman, D. D.

May 4.—Reports of bishops, China and Korea.

May 5.—Memorial service, in charge of bishops.

May 6.—Anniversary board of home missions and church extension.

May 7.—Anniversary Women's Foreign Missionary society; 8 p. m., reception of fraternal delegates, Methodist Episcopal church South, Methodist Protestant church.

May 8.—Lecture, "Napoleon Bonaparte, Democrat," by Bishop Wm. A. Quayle.

May 9.—Anniversary Woman's Home Missionary society; 8 p. m., anniversary board of foreign missions.

May 10.—Anniversary board of education.

May 11.—Report of bishops, South America, Mexico and southern Asia.

Sunday School Anniversary.

May 12.—Anniversary board of Sunday schools.

May 13.—Anniversary the book concern.

May 14.—Reception of fraternal delegates, federal council Presbyterian church, Reformed Episcopal church, Evangelical association.

May 15.—Anniversary Epworth league.

May 16.—Fraternal addresses, Colored Methodist Episcopal church, African Methodist Episcopal church, Zion, African Methodist Episcopal church.

May 17.—Lecture, "Abraham Lincoln, an interpretation," by Rev. Matt S. Hughes, D. D., LL. D.

May 18.—Anniversary church temperance society.

May 19.—Evangelistic service.

May 20.—Anniversary Freedman's Aid society.

May 21.—Anniversary board of conference claimants.

May 22.—Lecture, "The Price of a Soul," William J. Bryan.

May 23.—Anniversary Anti-Saloon league, anniversary Lord's Day alliance.

May 24.—Anniversary Methodist Brotherhood, American Bible society, Methodist Federation for Social service.

In addition to the general business sessions of the general conference there will be meetings daily of the big committees and boards of the conference, for the legislative system of the general conference is very like that of congress and almost everything that is passed upon of a specific nature is referred first by the conference to its proper board or committee.

CYR FREED BY COURT

Bemidji. — George Cyr, who four weeks ago shot and killed Paul Fournier at the Cyr home in the town of Quiring, near here, was released from custody after having been arraigned before Court Commissioner Crowell. A coroner's jury previously had exonerated Cyr on the ground of self defense and the court commissioner held that there was not enough evidence indicating that a crime had been committed to bind him over to the grand jury. Fournier at one time was under life sentence on the charge of having murdered N. O. Dahl and daughter in this county five years ago.

LOST DIAMOND IS FOUND.

Ring Disappears From Purse and is Discovered in Flower Pot.

Winona.—The finding of a diamond ring in a flower pot full of earth has cleared up the mysterious disappearance of a $150 jewel belonging to Mrs. Anna Ehlers. The find was made yesterday by an officer who was working on the case. Last Tuesday evening Mrs. Ehlers on her return to her rooms [illegible]

TO SURVEY STATE SOIL

Development Committee Estimates that Work Will Cost $50,000.

St. Paul. — A comprehensive and thorough survey of the soil of Minnesota will probably be made next year. The total cost of such a survey, statewide in its scope, as estimated by a sub-committee of the joint committee of Minnesota organizations interested in state development, which met at the Minnesota club, will be $50,000. Of this sum the state legislature will be asked at the next session to appropriate $25,000. The committee has been given assurances that the federal government will contribute $25,000.

According to the plan fixed upon by the sub-committee and which the joint committee voted to adopt yesterday, the survey will be made as soon as the money is available. With authorities at the university and state farm school, the subcommittee decided to recommend to the joint committee that such a survey be carried out.

The survey, according to the present plan, will be conducted under the auspices of the state agricultural school, through the state experimental station.

MEDICAL MEN ASSEMBLE.

Dual County Convention of Physicians at St. Cloud.

St. Cloud. — The Stearns-Benton County Medical association held their regular meeting in the Commercial club rooms here, when the president's address by Dr. H. L. Lamb of Sauk Centre on "Chronic Gastritis," and Dr. S. M. White, assistant professor of medicine at the University of Minnesota, read a paper on "Arterio-Sclerosis," and Dr. A. J. Kirghis of Sauk Centre read a paper on the uses of metal in surgical operations.

Eighteen members were present at the meeting and in the evening the physicians from St. Cloud and Sauk Rapids gave a banquet to the visiting doctors and friends at the Grand Central hotel. After the banquet the election of officers for the ensuing year took place and Dr. J. H. Beaty of St. Cloud was elected president; Dr. C. F. Brigham of St. Cloud, vice president; Dr. J. C. Boehm, St. Cloud, secretary and treasurer; Dr. W. L. Beere, St. Cloud, delegate to the state convention; Dr. H. L. Lamb, Sauk Centre, alternate delegate; and Dr. M. J. Kern, St. Cloud, censor for three years.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR ELECT

George H. Stone, Wadena, is Chosen Grand Commander.

St. Paul. — The Grand Commandery, Knights Templar of Minnesota, held its forty-seventh annual conclave in Masonic Temple, St. Paul, and concluded the session with the election and installation of the following officers:

Grand commander, George H. Stone, Wadena; deputy grand commander, Nelson C. Pike, Lake City; grand generalissimo, John M. Rewley, Rochester; grand captain general, Eugene C. Bonniwell, Minneapolis; grand senior warden, Jesse Norton, Duluth; grand junior warden, Eugene W. McCord, St. Paul; grand prelate, Rev. Alfred C. Pinkham, St. Paul; grand treasurer, Charles E. Ovenshire, Minneapolis; grand recorder, John Fishel, St. Paul; grand standard bearer, Alfred C. Page, Austin; grand sword bearer, Thomas Morris, Crookston; grand warden, Charles S. Schurman, St. Paul.

The only other business was the granting of a charter to a new commandery at St. Peter. The conclave concluded with a banquet.

PLAN INTERURBANS.

Fergus Falls Local Road May Go to Two Other Towns.

Fergus Falls.—The street car company, that was granted a franchise to establish a street railway system in this city at the recent city election is now planning to build a more extensive system. The men in charge, who are all local residents, now expect to incorporate for a quarter of a million dollars and run a line to Elbow Lake on the south and to Perham on the north. They will endeavor to interest farmers along the right of way to assist in constructing the proposed road. Perham is about fifty miles from this city and Elbow Lake is about thirty miles.

CRUSADE AGAINST FLIES.

State Board of Health Says War Should Start at Once.

St. Paul.—"Kill the Typhoid Fly and Protect Your Children and Family from Disease!" is the caption of an early warning being sent out by the state board of health. Fifty-seven varieties of reasons are given why the crusade should begin at once. The warning says that the female fly lays 120 or more eggs, which will hatch in about eight hours.

Aged Sisters Are Asphyxiated.

Duluth. — Two aged sisters, Misses Pauline and Augusta Voight, aged 60 and 76 years respectively, were overcome by illuminating gas in their home at Woodland. One of the sisters was found on the floor, which leads to the belief that she had been awakened by the smell of the gas and had started to open the window, but was overcome during the effort. Little is known of the Voight sisters. They were [illegible] and came to Duluth [illegible]

TO DEVELOP STATE

REPRESENTATIVES OF ORGANIZATIONS ASK $50,000 FOR SOIL SURVEY.

CAMPAIGN IS OUTLINED.

One Mill Road Tax Amendment to Constitution is Also Urged at Conference Held at St. Paul.

St. Paul.—A resolution petitioning the legislature to appropriate $50,000 for a soil survey of the state was adopted at a conference at the St. Paul Commercial club, attended by representatives of many of the commercial and development associations of the state.

Those present regarded a soil survey as of the highest importance to the agricultural interests of the state, especially as no considerable data of this nature is now available. The survey, if approved by the legislature, is proposed to be under the direction of the University of Minnesota, through the college of agriculture. The work will involve the surveying of over 65,000 sections of land in the approximately 1,800 townships of the state. At least three years will be required for the work, it was thought.

Other resolutions were adopted on matters of state-wide interest, among them one favoring co-operation in the good roads movement. It was decided to wage an active campaign on behalf of the one-mill road tax amendment to the state constitution which is to be voted upon next November.

Another resolution recommended that the state investment board dispose of the Virginia and other outside bonds held by the state, in order to have more money available for loans to counties and school districts which now pay what they regard as unnecessarily high interest on loans.

Those attending the conference were: W. R. McKenzie and J. H. Konzen, Bemidji; L. B. Arnold, Duluth; D. Shaw, Thief River Falls; J. T. Foote, Crookston, representing the Northern Minnesota Development league; D. H. Evans, representing the Southern Minnesota Development league; D. M. Neill, Red Wing, and C. L. Mosher, Minneapolis, representing the Minnesota Federation of Commercial clubs; D. D. Kenny and Joseph Chapman, Jr., representing the Minneapolis Civic and Commerce association; E. W. Randall and J. W. Wheeler, representing the St. Paul Association of Commerce; D. E. Willard, agricultural commissioner of the Northern Pacific railroad, and Hugh J. Hughes of Minneapolis, and D. Wallace, St. Paul, representing the agricultural press.

SENT TO HOSPITAL

Congressman Anderson's Opponent to Undergo Operation.

Rochester.—Honorable J. J. McCaughey of Kasson, who has announced himself a candidate against Congressman Sydney Anderson for the first district Republican congressional nomination, has been compelled to stop his campaign work in the district for the time being, on account of his physical condition, and will undoubtedly submit to an operation in this city for gall trouble.

DOGS AS FREIGHTERS.

Used in Making Deliveries to Grand Portage.

Duluth. — The steamer Easton of the Booth line, which is cruising between Two Harbors and Grand Portage, had the unique experience of delivering the freight for Grand Portage on the ice a mile from shore, and the freight was then delivered to the shore by dog teams. The ice field at the head of the lakes is rapidly breaking up.

"Lid" on East Grand Forks.

East Grand Forks—The "lid," an object which has been treated with varying degrees of respect in East Grand Forks from time to time, is on tight at last, and the officials declare that it will stay there.

Not the least important feature of their crusade has been the rejection of eleven applications for saloon licenses, and there now are less than thirty saloons operating under new licenses, as against forty-seven previously. The raising of the liquor license to $1,000 also had its effect in reducing the number.

End of the Trail.

"The End of the Trail," a musical melodrama by William Jossey, which met with unusual success for a number of years on the popular priced circuit, will be seen for the first time in this city at the Bijou, week of May 12.

PLANT WHITE PINE SEED.

State Will Begin Reforestation in Burned Over Part of Itasca Park.

Minneapolis. — To reforest burned over ground in Itasca park, seeds of the white pine will be sowed. Students of the State University forestry school, now in the park, will plant 20 to 40 acres this spring, according to an announcement made by W. T. Cox, state forester.

LIKE THE WOLF AND LAMB

Inoffensive Creatures Most Unjustly Charged With Sudden Attack of Bloodthirstiness.

A man who was caught in the act of skinning a neighbor's sheep, covered his embarrassment by declaring that no sheep could bite him and live. The logic of this is equaled by that of the Yankee soldier who once had a narrow escape from an enraged gander. The man of a certain Maine regiment, which was in the enemy's country in 1862, considered the order "no foraging" an additional and uncalled-for hardship. One afternoon about dusk, a soldier was seen beating a rapid retreat from the rear of a farmhouse near by, closely pursued by a gander with wings outspread, whose feet seemed scarcely to touch the ground, and from whose beak issued a succession of angry screams. The fugitive was not reassured by the cries of the gander's owner: "Hold on, mun, hold on! He won't hurt you!" "Call off your gander! Call him off!" shouted the fleeing soldier. Neither man nor gander stopped until inside the camplines, when the soldier's friends relieved him of his fierce pursuer with the aid of the butt of a musket. "Did that gander think he could chase me like that and live!" the soldier exclaimed, as he surveyed the outstretched bird; but he said nothing of the baited hook, with codline attached, which might have thrown light on the unfortunate gander's strange actions.

Misunderstood.

"Your wife will be married twice. Her second husband will be handsome, wise and honorable, a man of simple tastes and refined habits with the manners of a courtier."

"Hang the old cat! She never told me she had been married before."

The Paxton Toilet Co. of Boston, Mass., will send a large trial box of Paxtine Antiseptic, a delightful cleansing and germicidal toilet preparation, to any woman, free, upon request.

The meanest trick a leap year girl can play on a man who rejects her proposal is to take him at his word.

Coated tongue, vertigo, constipation are all relieved by Garfield Tea.

The more promises a man makes the more he doesn't keep.

CALUMET
BAKING POWDER

The wonder of baking powders—Calumet. Wonderful in its raising powers — its uniformity, its never failing results, its purity.

Wonderful in its economy. It costs less than the high-price trust brands, but it is worth as much. It costs a trifle more than the cheap and big can kinds—it is worth more. But proves its real economy in the baking.

Use CALUMET—the Modern Baking Powder.

At all Grocers.

Received Highest Award World's Pure Food Exposition

W. L. DOUGLAS
SHOES
$2.50 $3.00 $3.50 & $4.00
For MEN, WOMEN and BOYS
W. L. DOUGLAS $4.50 & $5.00
SHOES EQUAL CUSTOM BENCH WORK COSTING $7.00 TO $8.00

Wear W. L. Douglas Shoes. You can save money because they are more economical and satisfactory in style, fit and wear than any other makes. W. L. Douglas name and price stamped on the bottom guarantees full value and protects the wearer against high prices and inferior shoes. Insist upon having the genuine W. L. Douglas shoes. Take No Substitute.

If your dealer cannot supply W. L. Douglas shoes, write W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass., for catalog. Shoes sent everywhere delivery charges prepaid. Fast Color Eyelets used.

FIRST CLASS OPENING for flax, flour, oatmeal, planing mills. Soap, sash and box factory, laundry, bakery, tannery. Also, retailers, wholesalers and builders with some capital. Cheap electric power, water, fuel. BOARD OF TRADE, Weyburn, Saskatchewan.

THE NEW FRENCH REMEDY. No. 1, No. 2, No. 3.
THERAPION Used in French Hospitals with GREAT SUCCESS, CURES KIDNEY, BLADDER DISEASES, PILES, CHRONIC ULCERS, SKIN ERUPTIONS—EITHER SEX. Send address envelope for FREE booklet to DR. LE CLERC MED. CO., HAVERSTOCK RD., HAMPSTEAD, LONDON, ENG.

PATENTS START FACTORIES. Send for free book how to get Patents. Patent secured or fee returned. Sues & Company, 360 7th St., Washington, D.C.

Pettit's FOR SORE Eye RED EYES Salve

MANITOBA WHEAT LANDS offer best homes and investments on earth. Not one crop failure since first settlement 25 years ago. Free information furnished by Campbell, Simpson & Gurton, Dauphin, Man.

DEFIANCE STARCH never sticks to the iron.

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 18–1912.

Proof that most men like "Bull" Durham

Fact No. 1—"Bull" Durham has outsold any other tobacco since 1859.

Fact No. 2—"Bull" Durham has been the world's standard smoking tobacco for three generations.

Fact No. 3—"Bull" Durham has increased its sale every year of its existence.

Fact No. 4—More men smoke "Bull" Durham than all other high-grade tobaccos put together.

Four tremendous facts. Four facts that are absolute proof of quality. Four facts for you to remember when you buy tobacco.

GENUINE
"BULL" DURHAM
SMOKING TOBACCO

Forty "rollings" in each 5c muslin sack

is just the sweetest, purest, finest leaf grown down on that famous sunshine belt in Virginia and North Carolina. "Bull" Durham is all tobacco—rich, mild, fragrant—just as fresh and natural as when it leaves the field—not an artificial thing about it.

"Bull" Durham is packed in plain muslin sacks, instead of in fancy tin boxes. That's why you get more value in the tobacco itself.

Join the "Bull" Durham army today—the sooner you fill your pipe with it or make yourself a fragrant "Bull" Durham cigarette—the quicker you'll get real smoke satisfaction.

A book of "papers" free with each 5c. muslin sack.

Blackwell's Durham Tobacco Co.

PUTNAM FADELESS DYES

ROMANCES near to THRONES

The First Love and the Last Love of Emperor Francis-Joseph

By STERLING HEILIG

COPYRIGHT PEARSON'S MAGAZINE

EMPRESS ELIZABETH, BEFORE the FIRST ESTRANGEMENT

EMPRESS ELIZABETH AT THE TIME OF HER FRIENDSHIP WITH THE FAMOUS CIRCUS WOMAN

MME. KATHARINA SCHRATT

EMPEROR FRANCIS-JOSEPH I.

"GENTLY, cousin. If you make Black growl you will be badly noted in this house."

He had jostled a bad-tempered old pug. Slender youth, proud, laughing, with ironic mustache, he thanked the sour Sophie for her warning, as she passed the chateau.

It was May, 1853, in the park of Possenhofen. She was the eldest daughter of Maximilian, duke of Bavaria, a crank convinced that all his dogs had souls. He was Francis Joseph, emperor of Austria, king of Hungary, Bohemia, Dalmatia, Croatia, Esclavonia—and twenty-three years old.

He had come to demand the hand of Sophie. He had seen her. She would do. The Wittelsbach, though plain home folks, were of exalted blood, fit to espouse a Hapsburg. His own mother had arranged the match. He would ask Duke Maximilian after the banquet—and make a prompt get-away to Vienna, where pleasure waited.

Alone beneath the trees, a pup came romping to him; and a fresh, sweet young voice cried: "Dick, come back!" And he marveled at the vision, a beautiful girl of sixteen, supple, slender, of proud, pure type, laughing flower on a tall forest stem. She had been running, and stopped, blushing, breathless: "Please excuse Dick, monsieur!"

"Don't apologize for Dick, mademoiselle. His friendship is a recommendation. I know the ways of the house," he answered.

"Father thinks so," she laughed.

"Your father? Then you are—"

"Elizabeth Amelia, duchess in Bavaria."

Francis Joseph had already started in for a flirtation. He stopped, troubled. Holding out his hand, he asked:

"Why have I not seen you before?"

Very young, serene and haughty, yet impulsive and tender, unafraid of the youth in tourist tweeds and struck by sudden admiration, Elizabeth held out her beautiful white hand.

"I am too young to figure at the banquet," she said. And Francis Joseph understood. His uncle wished to marry off the elder daughter first. He whispered to the younger girl, laughing, tempting:

"Be dressed, on the lawn, before the banquet. I'll arrange."

It was the first escapade of Elizabeth, and it had the excuse of love at first sight. She dressed and descended calmly, pursued by affrighted tiring women. On the lawn Francis Joseph offered her his arm. The effect was theatrical. Duke Maximilian was wild with anger. After the banquet the young emperor drew him aside:

"My uncle," he said, "I have the honor to ask the hand, not of my cousin Sophie, but of my cousin Elizabeth."

"My nephew," said the duke, "it is impossible."

"Then I'll ask for neither," said Francis Joseph.

So he quitted Possenhofen. Three months later, on the birthday of the emperor, all Ischl was en fete. To the imperial villa many great ones were invited, notably Duke Maximilian, his duchess, their three sons and four daughters.

The church of Ischl was packed for morning service. To universal surprise, as the imperial cortege entered, the proud mother of Francis Joseph humbly stood aside, and motioned young Elizabeth, the blonde Elizabeth, to pass before her.

And the young emperor took her by the hand. Approaching the altar, he said to the priest.

"My father, here is my fiancee. Bless us."

Their wedding tour passed in Moravia. It was an ideal honeymoon in a mountainous country, where the young emperor was worshiped by a loyal peasantry. They rode from town to town, almost alone, Francis Joseph triumphant, Elizabeth happy. She had found the Prince Charming of her dreams.

All changed when they returned to Vienna.

The first morning the blooming beauty was refused entrance to her husband's study. An usher in green and gold, with gold chain and ivory wand, barred her way, bowing ceremoniously: "Pardon, your imperial majesty may not enter to his imperial majesty without being announced."

As Elizabeth, simple Bavarian princess, protested that she would pass, a high officer corroborated the flunkey's words. Ashamed, wounded, angry, she was forced to wait, feeling the smiles of the courtiers behind her back, until word came that the emperor would receive her. Bitterly she complained to him, but Francis Joseph declared that etiquette must be observed.

Scarcely seventeen, Elizabeth had no experience to struggle against a hundred conspiracies of the court suggested by the brutal diplomacy of her mother-in-law.

This relentless woman had desired her son to marry Sophie, whom she could rule. Forced to yield to Francis Joseph's infatuation, she resolved that the blonde Cinderella should not long rule over the light and thoughtless heart of the emperor.

The first deceptions were wrapped in mystery. His mother feared to risk the tears of Elizabeth.

At that moment they spoke of a beautiful Italian countess. How had she entered the closed circle of Vienna? Just before the birth of Elizabeth's first child, when the mother-in-law again directed ceremonies, the Italian woman was invited to a great court ball, and Francis Joseph paid her such attentions that she was at once dubbed favorite.

Within twenty-four hours a charitable soul informed the tender Elizabeth of her misfortune. She was so stricken that she fell gravely ill, but remained faithful to her system of silent dignity.

Time passed.

The birth of a little son, Rudolph, was a great joy to Elizabeth; yet before he was six months she learned that his bringing up was to be taken out of her hands.

"But he is my son," she faltered.

"He is the heir of the Hapsburgs," replied the Archduchess Sophie.

"But the emperor has authorized me—"

"I withdraw the authorization," said the terrible mother-in-law. Tears, protests were without result; the baby boy was given a wet nurse and governess, replaced later by a tutor, the Count Bombelles, who, many years later, took part in the orgie of Meyerling which terminated Rudolph's life, which shows the character of the tutor.

And Elizabeth was only at the beginning of her troubles.

At this moment there appeared at the palace theater—directed and financed by the emperor—a Mme. Roll, actress of small talent but radiant beauty. During a whole season the court asked one question: "Who is Mme. Roll's protector?" It could not be the emperor. He was never seen with her. At vacation, when it was learned that the Roll would take a villa at Ischl, summer residence of the imperial family, everyone said, 'Now we shall know who is the protector!" The bijou town was too small to keep a secret. And within a week it was known to the general stupefaction. The phantom lover of Mme. Roll appeared unmistakably. It was the emperor!

It was too much. Never before had he flaunted a favorite so publicly. Elizabeth told him that he must choose between Mme. Roll and herself; and the emperor pretended to send away the actress. But the wife was not deceived. She waited. She had taken a resolve.

The occasion was a hunting scandal. Francis Joseph, with certain gentlemen, had gone to Murzzuschlag, and when he did not return with them a strangely piquant story was confided by one, Count K—— to his young wife, on oath of secrecy. The emperor had been struck by the beauty of a peasant girl of tender years, whose conquest had details worthy of a ruder age. Now the emperor was staying "to console the child."

The Countess K—— hurried to the tea of the empress. In a circle of spiteful young women all the details of the adventure were whispered with [illegible] that Elizabeth [illegible] every word [illegible] her hand she called her old nurse, brought from Possenhofen.

"Pack my valises," said Elizabeth, "we leave tonight.

"For long?"

"For always."

The two women slipped from the Hofburg and took the first train at the southern station. Only the next morning did her mother-in-law learn of Elizabeth's flight. An hour later the chief of police had discovered that the empress was en route for Trieste and the imperial yacht. A telegram was sent to retard its departure on some pretext, while high functionaries followed on a special train.

What they were empowered to promise is not known, but Elizabeth returned.

The scene was terrible, between husband, wife, and mother-in-law. Francis Joseph, fearing scandal, dragged himself on his knees before Elizabeth and even reproached his mother for her cruelty.

But nothing could change Elizabeth's determination. She would only consent to avoid scandal. That night Professor Skoda of the Vienna faculty, after much repugnance and long discussion, signed a bulletin declaring that the health of the empress demanded a milder climate than Vienna. The next day, accompanied by high dignitaries, she left for Antwerp, where a magnificent yacht was hired to take her to Madeira.

She tired of Madeira. The imperial yacht was put at her disposition. She visited Norway, the Mediterranean, the Adriatic. Francis Joseph came on her unexpectedly at Venice and persuaded her to return temporarily to Vienna, for the sake of appearances.

To distract her mind she spent millions on a chateau at Linz, where her great pleasure became to break in young horses. This was the period of her friendship with the famous circus woman, Eliza Renz, whom Elizabeth declared to be a better lady than any of the Vienna court. Finding Linz too near Vienna, she spent other great sums on the chateau of Goedoelloe, in Hungary, where her taming of the men-killing stallions of Count Festitics became almost a historical event.

It was whispered that Elizabeth was trying to get killed without the sin of suicide.

There were reconciliations. To return to her husband was represented to her a religious duty. Each time, however, the interest of Francis Joseph in the theater seemed so paramount that she started off again.

She returned for Rudolph's marriage, where she wept bitterly. She rejoiced a while in Rudolph's baby child. On the morning after the tragedy of Meyerling it was to her that Count Bombelles brought the awful tidings—Rudolph had committed suicide with Marie Vetschera, and it was Elizabeth who broke the news to the emperor.

Her hobby now became her palace at Corfu, the Villa Achilleion, which will remain famous in history as the greatest folly of luxury and art of a prodigal sovereign. It cost above $16,000,000.

William II. of Germany now has it.

Only a terrible craving for sleep caused Elizabeth to leave Corfu. Now commenced a round of climates and specialists. At Bath Nauheim the population so followed her about that she decided for Switzerland. Francis Joseph, who had joined her for a week, objected.

"I have bad reports on Switzerland," he said. "Full of anarchists."

"I am only a poor woman, Francis," she replied. "They will not hurt me."

Yet Luchini stabbed her as she boarded the lake steamer at Geneva—like a simple [illegible] with a single companion. [illegible] boat steamed slowly out. The Hungarian orchestra struck up a lively csardas.

Elizabeth fainted. The Countess Sztaray cut her corset strings and found a tiny triangular wound below the left breast.

"Quick, a doctor. The empress is wounded!"

There was no doctor, and the boat put back to Geneva. Opening her eyes Elizabeth asked: "What is the matter?"

"Do you suffer?" faltered the countess.

Elizabeth smiled "no" and feebly waved her hand in time to the jaunty music of the csardas. There was a melancholy smile on her face as she slowly shut her eyes.

Elizabeth had died in beauty.

An aged emperor dines alone on gold plate from the famous service whose central decorative piece is worth $15,000. There is but one guest—a general aide-de-camp or high official of the court. The proudest monarch of Europe is alone with one guest. Etiquette demands it.

Five gorgeous flunkeys in pale blue, buff, pink and gold, serve the two men. There have been no flowers on the table since the tragic death of the Empress Elizabeth; but the lights of wax candles gild the golden service and the rare wines in cut glass. They flit from historic tapestries to carved wood furniture and panels such as no museum possesses and make dancing shadows in the distant corner.

Silence.

The aged emperor is dreaming of the gorgeous gala dinners of the past. He sees the ideal throngs of other days. Again he hears the three taps of the grand chamberlain's cane to announce the entrance of their imperial and royal majesties. How lonely is the immense palace, full of hiding courtiers, functionaries, servants. It is still early, not yet seven.

Francis-Joseph rises. His guest takes ceremonious leave and the sovereign goes to his study.

His real life begins.

A confidential valet helps him into hat and overcoat. By a bijou elevator, whose door imitates a bookcase, he descends to the ground floor.

He walks twenty steps across the little courtyard to the door, where an auto-limousine awaits him. There is no special secrecy—it is to avoid ceremony merely. He gives no directions; the chauffeur knows where to go.

Quitting the frigid, solemn Hofburg, out into the bright-lit bustling early evening of Vienna, past crowds hastening to theater and music hall, into fair streets of residence, the auto stops at a comfortable villa. The old sovereign enters the gate alone. The front door opens as he mounts the three marble steps. When the door shuts he is no longer the dread lonely emperor and apostolic king, but Herr Schratt, regularly called the "colonel," careless and easy, negligent and slouchy, bright, warm, cozy, snug among old friends.

Years ago, when the Burg theater was a wing of the Hofburg, the great actress Katharina Schratt—the Sarah Bernhardt and Rejane of Vienna—was presented to Francis-Joseph by Empress Elizabeth herself. For long, she too has lived retired; and the mourning emperor found her so intelligent, so fine and also good, that old loves and sorrows having burnt out, an affectionate friendship grew up to give him a kind of peaceful solace.

Leaving crown and scepter on the hat rack, he enters the bright little cardroom that adjoins two bijou little parlors and takes the best easy chair, while Madame Katharina hastens with the foot-warmer.

Herr Schratt sprawls in unspeakable content.

The bell rings, and the partners of interminable games of tarok—a sort of Austrian bridge—arrive. They are two ancient friends of the great actress, become friends of Herr Schratt, always the same; Herr Palmer, director of the Bank des Pays Autrichiens, and an international private banker so extremely illustrious that his name is as well known as Franz-Josef's, and—a thing that never ceases to upset the court—an Israelite by race, birth and religion in the strict sense!

The Jewish banker and Monsieur Schratt—not the head of the Holy Roman empire—are fast old cronies to the sorrow and scandal of the Countess Chotek, morganatic but directing wife of Archduke Francis-Ferdinand, heir to the dual crown.

Often the emperor loses all the money in his purse—a dozen florins—at the nightly game of tarok. He plays badly. None wants him for partner; so they cut to see who takes him. He laughs boisterously. Meanwhile tea is prepared in the adjoining dining room.

At ten o'clock the auto-limousine is announced, and Madame Kathrina helps the "colonel" into hat and overcoat.

The auto rolls through the streets of Vienna, still bright and boisterous, to the cold, solemn Hofburg. It stops at the little door of the small courtyard. The old man enters, and a silent valet meets him. Up the bijou elevator they ride, to the study he had left three hours ago. The confidential valet takes his hat and coat.

The emperor has returned.

BIG COAL DEPOSITS

Russian Scientific Explorer Tells of Sakhalin.

Declares Its Agricultural Possibilities Are Small, but Says There Is Good Pasture for Cattle—Deep Borings Made for Naphtha.

St. Petersburg.—Sakhalin, the forlorn easternmost island of the Russian empire—once the grimmest of convict settlements, and now, since the Portsmouth treaty, Japanese territory in its southern part—is attracting considerable scrutiny as to its natural resources. Russia is doing much to open up her Amur territory, and the process would be helped if Sakhalin, "the cork of the Amur bottle," were to prove an economic asset. A Russian scientific explorer, M. Polovoy, has just given the St. Petersburg Geographical society an estimate of its resources.

Facade of Government Buildings.

Its agricultural possibilities he rates as low, but there is good pasture for cattle. The meat trade, however, is not organized at all. Vladivostok, close by, gets its supplies in cold storage from Australia.

Coal is probably the best of its ascertained properties. He believes that there are at least ten million poods of it in the island. It would find a good market in the western states of America, besides in Japan. Deep borings are now in progress for naphtha, which is in as good position as the Baku wells and should be able to compete with American petroleum in east Asia. Gold prospecting has not had success. There is a great supply of timber, of which no use was made until in 1906 a firm began to export railway sleepers.

The population, which a dozen years ago consisted of 20,000 Russian deported convicts, and about half as many free persons, sank to about 6,000 after the Japanese war. The convicts had got their liberty on condition they volunteer for the war. Russians sold their houses for next to nothing. A whole village was left to caretakers for 50 rubles. Last year the ex-convicts who had served in the war and returned were declared free peasants and settled near Alexandrovsk, the seat of government.

Sakhalin's weak side, as M. Polovoy found it, is in its cut off condition, not so much geographically as through want of steam navigation. Moreover, the coasting trade is closed against foreign shipping. There are very few roads into the interior, even the roads prospected by the Russian prisons department have fallen back into waste. Harbors are scarcely to be found at all. Labor is unskilled and there is no ascertainable general rate of wages. Evidently the plantlessness that has hitherto marked the administration of the important "cork of the Amur" will need to be changed if its great coal and lumber resources are to get a chance.

WON'T SELL JEFFERSON HOME

Congressman Levy, Owner for 35 Years, Announces He Will Not Dispose of Monticello.

New York.—Congressman Jefferson M. Levy has no intention of selling Monticello, once the home of Thomas Jefferson, to the government or any one else. The idea of the purchase of Monticello by the government, recently proposed by patriotic societies in Washington, is distasteful to him, he declares, in a statement given out here.

Mr. Levy has been the owner of Monticello thirty-five years and during that time the property has been scrupulously maintained. Visitors have been admitted to the estate freely, Mr. Levy explains, and the condition of the property is better than it would be if owned by the government.

Will Aid United States.

Washington.—Dr. Huebner, professor of insurance at the University of Pennsylvania, was selected by the house merchant marine committee to assist in preparing the investigation of the "shipping trust."

Paderewski Is Peeved.

Cape Town.—Ignace Paderewski, the pianist, had some unpleasant things to say about South Africa before his departure. Paderewski's tour was not a financial success.

MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. XII. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, MAY 10, 1912. NO. 7.

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

Finds $5,000 in a Shoe; Offered $1.00

HERE IS ONE DOLLAR TO REWARD YOU — THESE DIAMONDS ARE WORTH ONLY $5000 !-!-
YOUR LIBERALITY STAGGERS ME -
$1
DIAMONDS

CHICAGO.—David J. Winder, who keeps a cobbler shop near the corner of Evanston avenue and Irving Park boulevard, found a handful of diamonds, valued at $5,000, in the toe of an old shoe brought to him to repair, and for returning the jewels to the owner was offered a reward of one dollar, which he refused.

Winder and his wife were both busy in their shop when inquiries were made there.

"Oh, yes," said Winder, hanging a wooden peg into the sole of a shoe and shifting to one side a few more pegs he held between his teeth. "I found the diamonds. It was the biggest find I ever made. There's hardly a week goes by, though, but I find money and other valuables in shoes.

"Mrs. Dunn sent her old shoes over here by a girl. There were five of them in a rickety pasteboard box. My wife received them, marked them, tossed them over in a corner and gave the girl a check with a number on it.

"Well, as I commenced to straighten things up for the night my eye caught the sparkle of something on the floor. I thought it was a piece of glass at first, but then I saw some more sparkling points. I got on my knees and picked them up."

"About two days afterward a girl came in almost crying. She threw her check down on the counter.

"'My shoes! Where are my shoes? Quick! Hurry!' I looked up and smiled when my wife gave her the shoes and looked puzzled at the customer's agitation.

"'The diamonds! They are gone! Please give them back to me!' shrieked the girl.

"She became frantic when my wife told her she knew nothing about any diamonds. Then I stepped up and told her the diamonds were safe.

"Yesterday a neighbor brought me $1 as a reward for the return of the $5,000 worth of diamonds. That was about the funniest thing I ever heard of. I laughed and laughed and when I was able to stop laughing I waved my hands at him and told him to hurry back to Mrs. Dunn with the $1"

Automobile Chases Driver Up a Tree

SAN FRANCISCO.—It is scarcely becoming in an automobile to pitch its owner into the branches of a tree and then get on its hind wheels and threaten to devour him if he dares to come down.

A Texas steer or an African lion, or an orang outang might be expected to do a stunt of that kind, but not a refined motor car. And yet that is exactly the experience that Louis Degener, a coffee importer, had with his car the other evening. He painted a word picture of the affair in Police Judge Sullivan's court, where he was on trial for speeding.

Degener had just purchased the car. He was beginning to master the driving of it, as he thought. He invited a friend for a trip. Everything went smoothly until they started for home about dark. But they no sooner got into Golden Gate park than the trouble began.

"There seemed nothing to do," said Degener to the court, "but let that machine take its course. When I tried to hold it down it acted like it was going to blow up. We were going like the wind when suddenly something happened."

Just what happened was explained by Mounted Policeman Haley, who had been pursuing Degener's car for a half mile. When Haley got to the scene he found the car standing on its hind legs and pointing straight up on the side of a pine tree. The engines were still humming away. Degener's friend was sprawled out on the road, but Degener was not in sight.

"Where's the fellow that was driving?" asked Haley.

"Blest if I know," said the friend.

"Here I am, up here," said a voice from the branches.

It proved to be Degener. He had been tossed into the branches six feet overhead.

Bible Prompts a Poacher to Confess

INDIANAPOLIS.—A Hoosier, who has "seen the light of Christianity," has been impelled thereby to write to George W. Miles, commissioner of fisheries and game, "peaching" on himself for hunting on a game preserve. He has confined his operations to the pursuit of the ignominious rabbit, however, and has not assaulted the game birds placed in the preserves by the state. Therefore, he sought clemency for his "crime" and it has been meted out to him by the commissioner on the ground of lack of intent.

The letter, in part, follow:

"As I am living to all the light I have on the word of God (the Bible), I feel I ought to tell you of my hunting on one or two of the game preserves, which I was only after a rabbit. The winter of 1910 I was hunting on the reserve south of Washington, between the E. & I. railroad and the gravel pike road running from Petersburg, Pike county, to Washington, Daviess county. I tell you this so you can know the reserve.

"The reason I write this is because I believe the Lord God intends for us to do everything honestly before God and man.

Mr. Miles answered:

"Inasmuch as I am convinced that you never had any wrongful intent, it is very easy for me to forgive you for any possible infraction of the law you may have made in hunting within a game preserve."

The writer neglected to tell the commissioner whether he got the rabbit.

How a Couple Was Married by Proxy

DIS ISS A GREAT SCHEME YAH — HOLLAND

BOSTON.—Moses Pimentel, cigar maker of Boston, and Maria Johanna Liesmann of Amsterdam, Holland, have been married without either leaving home. The queen of Holland consented to their marriage by proxy.

Though marriage by proxy is not allowed in the United States, so many legal steps have been taken to bring about this union that there seems no doubt the immigration people will recognize it when the bride arrives in America.

When Moses Pimentel strolled into the office of Charles C. Dasey, acting counsul of Holland, and said he wished to be married by proxy, Mr. Dasey did not believe it could be done. However, on the insistence of the Hollander he sent a statement of the situation to the consul general at New York.

The ceremony of acquiring a bride without being present at the ceremony as gone through with Pimentel is as follows:

First, a special petition to the queen explaining the necessity for the proxy marriage. This has been done and consent obtained. Next, a power of attorney giving Hartog Pimentel, his brother, the right to act for him

Then a declaration to wed was sworn to by Pimentel before a notary. According to the Dutch custom, the notary's seal was then certified to by the secretary of the state of Massachusetts, and Consul Dasey certified to the authenticity of the seal of Massachusetts. These documents were mailed to Amsterdam. When Brother Hartog received them he went before the registry official in Holland, with the bride on his arm, and made all the answers required in the marriage ceremony.

In the PUBLIC EYE

CAPTAIN ROSTRON'S REPORT

Capt. A. H. Rostron was in command of the Cunard line steamship Carpathia, which rescued the survivors of the Titanic disaster. His ship was east bound on its regular trip when the distress signal was picked up by the vessel's wireless operator. In his official report to the general manager of the company, the captain said in part:

"I beg leave to report that at 12:35 a. m. Monday, 15th inst., I was informed of urgent message from Titanic with its position. I immediately ordered ship turned around and put it in course for that position, we being then fifty-eight miles away. Had heads of all departments called and issued what I considered the necessary orders to be in preparation for any emergency.

"At 2:40 a. m. saw flare half a point on port bow. Taking this for granted to be a ship, shortly after we sighted our first iceberg. I had previously had lookouts doubled, knowing that Titanic had struck ice and so took every care and precaution. We soon found ourselves in a field of bergs, large and small, and had to alter our course several times to clear bergs.

"We stopped at 4:00 a. m., thus doing distance in three hours and a half, picking up the first boat at 4:10 a. m.; boat in charge of officer, and he reported that Titanic had foundered. At 8:30 a. m., last boat picked up. All survivors aboard and all boats accounted for."

PRINCESS PAT IS AN ARTIST

New Yorkers are enjoying the opportunity of viewing some of the artistic handiwork of Princess Patricia of Connaught, who recently won so much popularity there.

Six of her paintings were selected from those shown at the Montreal art exhibition, and are now on exhibition in New York. As a water color painter she has few rivals in Europe, certainly none in its royal houses.

A picture, reputed to be one of the cleverest works of the princess shows King Edward, smiling in perfect content, leaving the dinner table.

"I Was Hungry" is the title of this whimsical conceit.

King Edward dearly loved his niece, Patricia, and did his best to spoil her. He used to urge her to give imitations of their kin and roared with laughter at her skill at mimicry. As she grew older it is said she exacted a promise from him that he would never use his royal prerogative to force her into a marriage she did not desire. Certain it is, if she has not been able to marry the man of her choice, she has at least remained free.

BARON HENGELMULLER ANGRY

Baron Ladislas Hengelmuller von Hengervar, Austrian-Hungarian Ambassador to this country, journeyed to the Hamburg-American line docks in Hoboken the other afternoon to meet the baroness and their daughter, who were passengers on the steamship Amerika.

Outside the docks were scores of taxicabs on which were taximeters which registered distances and the amount of change due from passengers. But the Baron passed these by and his eye lighted on a limousine car owned by Hexamer's garage and driven by Fred Volkman, one of its chauffeurs. There was no taximeter on this car, but in his pocket Volkman carries a schedule of prices.

"We'll take this," said the baron to the baroness, and he assisted his wife and daughter and the maid into the vehicle, and to Volkman remarked:

"The Hotel St. Regis, New York."

Volkman drove to the ferry and paying the passage money from his own pocket, crossed over to Manhattan. Then with all speed he drove to the St. Regis. There the Baron was informed that the charges were $6.50.

"Six dollars and a half? I'll not pay it," said the Baron, and he didn't.

WOMAN HEADS CHILD BUREAU

Miss Julia C. Lathrop of Chicago, now and for many years a colleague of Jane Addams in the work of Hull house, has been appointed chief of the recently created children's bureau of the national government. The nomination was sent to the senate the other day by President Taft.

Miss Lathrop is the first woman ever selected to direct a bureau of the federal government. Moreover, to her will be committed the foundation and development of the activities which the national government is about to undertake to further the welfare of children.

It is expected she will build up an institution which will be an important branch of the government service in the investigation of conditions of child life and in correlating and accelerating the activities of individual states in bettering such conditions.

The appointment of Miss Lathrop was urged upon President Taft by social reform organizations not only in Chicago but in other parts of the country.

The same organizations which [illegible] Miss Lathrop brought about the creation of the children's [illegible]

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

Not Seen in Congressional Record

MR SPEAKER UM - I AM TH' SEN— MR. SPEAK- -SAY YOU -TH' WOOL IS MR. SPE-

WASHINGTON.—In a way a very ludicrous thing happened in one of the committee rooms recently when the official reporter declared that the documents submitted in a certain case were fabricated, because they read "too smoothly" and that men did not talk that way. The stenographer lost his job, but the fact remains that members of congress and United States senators are absolutely dependent upon the official stenographers for decent records of the scattering and often incoherent and original speeches which they make in congress. It is positively funny to listen to some of the speeches, and then read the same speech as it is ironed out for print in the Congressional Record.

A representative, for instance, gets up and says: "Mr. Speaker—Mr. Speaker—am I recognized, Mr.—ur—Speaker—ur—ur—Speaker? I—ur—have—ur—uh been ah—ur—listening—ur with a good deal of interest, sir—I mean Mr.—ur—Speaker, to the—ur—remarks, sir—I mean—ur, Mr. Speaker—ur—Mr. Speaker—from Wayback, and—ur—I want to say, Mr. Speaker—ur—ah—uh, that, Mr. Speaker—ur, representing the constituents of a—ur—a—ur great congressional district of more than 200,000 members, sir, I mean—ur, Mr. Speaker, I cannot afford—ur to sit here and hear these constituents, sir—ur insulted, sir, by remarks, sir, I mean, Mr. Speaker, of the gentlemen from Wayback, and —ur I stand here, sir, in the presence of the great American—ur—ur people to defend, yes, sir, to defend the bringing, sir, upon my constituents, sir, that is—ur satisfactory—ur to all when I was elected—ur to this honorable body, sir. But, sir—I mean, Mr. Speaker." And about this time the gavel of the speaker comes down with a bang that rattles the modillions in the glass ceiling, and he says just as easy: "The time of the gentleman from —— has expired," and his oratory is cut short. Now, you don't suppose for once that that sort of stuff is going to appear in the Congressional Record. No, indeed. The official stenographer, has taken down every "uh and uh," and goes to the little desk at the end of his five minutes' stunts, and talks it into the dictograph just as smooth and pretty as anything you ever read in your life.

Stakes Sandwich on Seat in Congress

EXPENSE Sandwich 10 Stamps 15 25¢
I JUST WONDER IF MY EXPENSES ARE REGULAR

UNIQUE among the candidates who ran the other day in the Pennsylvania primaries is Dr. Moses Stern of Philadelphia, candidate for the Democratic nomination for congress in the Third district. Dr. Stearn filed with South Trimble, clerk of the house of representatives, a sworn statement that his expenses in the primaries amounted to 25 cents.

Dr. Stearn gave the house much information about himself and his ambitions, as well as his campaign, in the statement which he made to the clerk. Here are some choice extracts from his statement.

"I hope you have no complaint about my extravagant expense account?

"I had no kind friend to lend me $10,000 cash to help me push my campaign for congress.

"I am satisfied nearly all of my constituents are the salt of the earth.

"My friends put my hat in the ring, and they say it is constitutional.

"As a candidate I have been imploring voters to aid me to get on the public pay roll in Washington and get nice and warm in my seat in congress before the United States treasury becomes bankrupt and pawns our beautiful building, our national capitol, to my Uncle Rothschild.

"It has been my soaring ambition all this summer to be on a street corner speaking on a soap box and face a bitter contest of mollycoddlers.

"I have not bribed any voter, but did buy a small chicken sandwich for a colored gentleman."

His Bride's Name Slipped from Mind

WHO
GIMME A LICENSE TO GET MARRIED — 'ER NAME IS VERA- -U-H-U-H VERA!
MARRIAGE LICENSE

WHEN George H. Covert, a salesman, living at the Y. M. C. A., walked into the marriage license bureau in City Hall the other day to apply for the necessary paper which would enable him to become the husband of Miss Vera Ione Murray, a Washington girl, Covert was nervous—naturally. But his plunge into the matrimonial sea, clerks of experience say, affected him in a most unusual way. He forgot the name of his bride-to-be.

Covert approached Clerk Kroll shortly after three o'clock in the afternoon and applied for a marriage license. The clerk obligingly issued it, and asked no questions. Names are never questioned in the bureau, and, anyway, a young man about to take unto himself a wife is supposed to be thoroughly familiar with said wife's name and address.

However, Covert informed Kroll that his bride-to-be was Miss Vera Ione. The license was issued to George H. Covert and Miss Vera Ione, and the minister delegated to tie the knot was the Rev. Charles Wood. Not until the bridal pair reached the parsonage did they discover the grave error made by Covert, and a hurried trip was made to the home of Col. John E. Young, clerk of the court, who rectified the error, and promised to make the necessary change in the official record book as soon as he reached his office next morning.

The knot was tied immediately, and Covert attributes the mistake to the fact that he was nervous—this being his first venture. He has been exonerated by Mrs. Covert, nee Vera Ione Murray.

Sad Predicament of Two Politicians

WHAT DO YOU KNOW ABOUT - POLITICS SUH - WHO ARE YOU - YOU

WHILE Colonel Walter Watkins of Tennessee was in Washington recently he told about the sad predicament two citizens of his state got into talking politics while traveling east some years ago on a Pullman car. It was a hot night and sleep was impossible. They were in the smoking room, and fell to talking about state affairs. While thus engaged an old grizzled, gaunt man came in, clad as befitted a torrid night, and began smoking. The two politicians kept up their talk and were regretting how poorly their state was represented at Washington. They were somewhat sarcastic in referring to the senatorial delegation and declared that younger and more vigorous men were needed.

"Looking at our senators," was remarked. "They are played out. Bate is old and Harris is dried up and useless."

Just then the old stranger in the corner arose and with gestures of a prize-fighter began to abuse and scarify the two talkers, who gaped in wonderment. When the irate old man subsided the politicians exclaimed: "Who are you to be so upset about our conservation?"

"I am Senator Harris," said the stranger in tones that could be heard above the rumbling of the train, "and I have a mind to throw both of you out of the window."

They had not recognized the senator in his pajamas in the semi-darkness.

A Pistol By His Logic.

"What will the woman of tomorrow be?" sighed the pensive person. "Oh, a year or two younger than she is today," replied the one who had reasoned such things out.

THE SUNBEAM.

W. G. HUNT, Publisher.

SUNBEAM, - - MINN.

RADIUM IN HUMAN BODY?

In his investigation of the radioactivity of the organs of the human body, Dr. Albert Caan of Heidelberg has examined 41 organs from 13 different persons, and every one of them contained some substance that made the air electrically conductive, as shown by the Bercker emanometer. It was concluded that this substance must be radioactive, though possibly not radium itself. The brain, and also the lungs, proved very active; but the heart and liver were less so, and the kidneys and spleen showed only slight activity. The radioactive substance seemed to increase with age and in disease. Little effect was shown from such conditions as social position, occupation or manner of living, and even locality of living was unimportant. Radioactive substances—the effect of which on the vital activity of the body cells remains to be learned—might come from food and drink, or from the air. The testing emanometer includes a receptacle for the ashes of about 100 grains of the organ under test, and this is connected by electric wires and a rubber tube to a wire electrometer—with a microscope for fine readings—in the circuit of a storage battery.

The new Pulitzer School of Journalism at Columbia university is not to be thrown open to women, it has been decided, but the reason given is the broader ground of the university policy that does not admit women to courses, rather than the narrow principle of feminine unfitness for the vocation in question, says the Philadelphia Ledger. Some women have brilliantly succeeded as newsgatherers; a certain conscientious persistency united to the quality of human sympathy has enabled them to find their way where a man might prove a mere impatient trespasser. Both in this country and abroad there have been feminine editors who have neither sought nor required indulgence because they were not men. On the whole, the editorial rather than the reportorial capacity seems better adapted to the womanly natures of delicate susceptibilities and refinement. But women have succeeded both as reporters and as editors.

At a meeting of the Linnean society of London, Prof. Poulton presiding, a letter was read from Herr Paul Scherdlin, as follows: "For hundreds of years pigeons have nested on the spire of Strassburg Cathedral. They increased so much that many attempts have been made to extirpate them, but in vain. During the last few years there has been a sudden and startling diminution in the number of these cathedral pigeons. I am of the opinion that this manifest reduction is due to the asphalting of the streets round the cathedral. Between the stone sets of the pavement the pigeons were able to pick up food in quantity. In consequence of the asphalting and daily watering and cleansing of the places in the immediate neighborhood the birds have gone."

A Harvard professor says that every man is responsible for his own face, as it reflects the qualities most in control of the individual. Here is a scientific indorsement of the method, generally condemned as superficial, of taking every one on his face value.

The Paris police have ruled that pugilists must not hurt each other. Judging by the French duel, this is the only way boxing will ever be made popular in France.

The Georgia observer who says he saw a flock of robins that had been made drunk by eating berries failed to mention whether they were yellow or blue and pink.

A college professor tells us that it is impossible to live on less than $1,100 year. Millions of our citizens belong in the cemetery and don't know it.

The hobble skirt is to give way to a wider garment, making the sales of cloth heavier. Useful reforms have a certainty of costing somebody something.

The Wright brothers have succeeded in building a fireproof aeroplane. A gravity-proof aeroplane seems to be the kind that is most wanted.

Massachusetts legislators propose a tax on cats. Another argument against the ancient theory that music hath charms.

Massachusetts proposes to license its cats. That's all right, providing the license prohibits music after 10 o'clock.

Rochester, N. Y., has a citizen who is the proud possessor of two hearts. And this is leap year, too!

HEIR TO THE ASTOR MILLIONS

VINCENT ASTOR AND MISS FORCE

The photograph shows Vincent Astor walking with Miss Katharine Force, sister of his stepmother, the former Miss Madeline Force, on Madison avenue, New York. Miss Force had been to the Astor mansion at 840 Fifth avenue, to inquire into the health of her sister, one of the Titanic survivors. This is the first photograph taken of Vincent Astor, since the tragic death of his father, Col. John Jacob Astor.

TRUST SUIT FILED

GOVERNMENT STARTS CASE AGAINST HARVESTER COMPANY IN ST. PAUL.

HITS AT INTERSTATE TRADE

Many Charges Are Set Forth Among Which Are Restraint of Trade and Monopoly of Business in Which Company Is Engaged.

St. Paul, Minn., May 2.—The government on Tuesday instituted a suit against the International Harvester company under the provisions of the Sherman anti-trust law, by filing a petition in equity in the federal district court here.

The government asks:

That the $140,000,000 corporation be dissolved on the ground that it is a monopoly in restraint of trade.

That injunctions be issued to bar from interstate commerce the products of the International Harvester company or of the International Harvester Company of America, its selling agency.

That receivers be appointed to take charge of the property and wind up the business of the defendant, if the court finds such action compatible with public interest.

Mr. Dickey received word that Attorney General Wickersham would probably file a certificate of expedition in order that as little time as possible will be lost in bringing the suit to trial. The case by this means will be removed from the district court of Minnesota to the United States circuit court of appeals for the Eighth district, thus hastening the issue to the Supreme court of the United States.

The charges by the government against the Harvester company are:

That the company is monopolizing the manufacture and sale of harvesting machinery, has advanced prices "to the grave injury of the farmer and the general public."

That the company controls at least 90 per cent. of the trade in the United States in harvesters or grain binders, 75 per cent. of the mowers, and more than 50 per cent. of the binder twine.

That the defendants have resorted to unfair trade methods by attempting to induce agents to handle only their products.

That they have bought up patents to perpetuate the monopoly.

Students' Body Is Found.

Detroit, Mich., May 4.—The body of Leslie Butterfield, the Belfast (N. Y.) student who escaped from University hospital while delirious from typhoid pneumonia, was found in the Huron river Thursday in two feet of water.

Police Chief Is Ousted.

Decatur, Ill., May 4.—Police Chief Herman Koeppe was removed from office Thursday after an uprisal against vice conditions, and E. G. Allen, for a short time chief under the former administration, was named successor.

THOMAS DAWSON DIES

WELL KNOWN DIPLOMAT SUCCUMBS AT CAPITAL.

Resident Officer of State Department Famous for Skill in Handling Problems in South America.

Washington, May 3.—Thomas Cleveland Dawson, resident diplomatic officer of the state department, died here Wednesday after an illness of several weeks from a complication of diseases. He was forty-six years of age and a native of Hudson, Wis.

Mr. Dawson was famous for his skill in handling difficult Latin-American problems.

He began his diplomatic career in 1897, when he was appointed secretary of the legation in Brazil. After serving with marked distinction as minister to several of the Latin-American countries he came to Washington as resident diplomatic officer in 1907. Since then he had been sent to Central America on various important missions.

CLARK VICTOR IN COLORADO

Democratic State Convention Instructs Delegates—Gov. Wilson Is Sadly Beaten in Meet.

Colorado Springs, Colo., May 1.—The Colorado state Democratic convention adopted a resolution Monday instructing Colorado's delegation to the national Democratic convention to support Speaker Champ Clark until such time as he no longer should be a candidate or until released by him.

An effort to have Gov. Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey named as second choice was defeated on roll call, 676 to 372.

TEXAS SUNK BY TURK SHELL

Report From Smyrna Says Steamer Was Fired On Deliberately From Ottoman Forts.

Smyrna, May 3.—It is now alleged that the steamer Texas, which sank with considerable loss of life in the Dardanelles Tuesday, was struck by a shell instead of hitting a submerged mine, as at first reported. This shell, it is said, was fired from one of the Turkish forts after the Texas had ignored two blank shots which had been fired as a warning. The Texas had deviated from the proper channel.

Clears District Attorney.

Madison, Wis., May 3.—John F. Hooper, district attorney of Forest county, against whom removal charges were brought, was exonerated on every charge. Malfeasance in office and official misconduct were charged.

Duryea's Sweeper II. Wins Big Race.

Newmarket, May 3.—The 2,000 guineas stakes of 100 sovereigns each was won Wednesday by H. B. Duryea's Sweeper II., with Danny Maher, the American jockey, riding. The betting was 6 to 1 against the winner.

GIVES VOTES WON

ROOSEVELT DECLINES TO ACCEPT EIGHT MASSACHUSETTS DELEGATES-AT-LARGE.

PRESIDENT WINS BY 3,955

Taft and Colonel Make an Even Break in District Elections—19,719 Is Champ Clark's Majority Over Governor Wilson.

Boston, May 4.—"Presented" to President Taft by the colonel, those eight Republican delegates-at-large who were elected at the primaries for Roosevelt, have most emphatically refused to vote for the president.

After two conferences the delegates announced that they had decided not to take any joint action on the attitude of Colonel Roosevelt in releasing them from the obligation to vote for him. But in individual interviews each declared that the voters' instructions were paramount and binding.

While President Taft's managers and leading supporters made no official statement, they made clear that they would demand the seating of their eight delegates-at-large. They presented figures and assertions to prove that the "confusion" of the primary ballot cost the president 18,000 votes. These figures are doubtless exaggerated. However, the appearance of an independent candidate "pledged for Taft," it is admitted, aided in confusing some of the voters. Many men voted for nine instead of eight delegates, as the primary law directed.

There was much telegraphing between here and Oyster Bay after the colonel publicly "presented" the eight delegates to President Taft. He knew by that time that both he and Taft had won 14 district delegates. With the eight delegates-at-large Roosevelt would have had 22 of the total of 36 delegates.

The Taft supporters declare they will insist on the seating of their own "chosen eight" instead of the double quartette of rough riders offered by Colonel Roosevelt. And as the first step to prove their assertions of an unfair election the Taft league determined to demand a recount of the state vote. Each side also demanded a recount of one district.

Boston, May 4.—Massachusetts emerged from its first presidential preferential primary election to find that the Republican voters had expressed a preference for the re-nomination of President Taft, but had given Colonel Roosevelt the eight delegates-at-large to the national convention. To these eight votes Colonel Roosevelt renounced all claim. The Democratic voters of the state expressed a preference for Speaker Champ Clark, although the delegates-at-large to Baltimore will go pledged to Governor Foss.

Returns from 1,077 out of 1,080 election precincts give:

Republican (presidential preference): Taft, 74,808; Roosevelt, 71,203; LaFollette, 1,756.

Delegates-at-large: Baxter (heading Roosevelt group), 74,121; Crane (heading Taft group), 65,876.

Democratic (presidential preference): Clark, 19,903; Wilson, 9,206; delegates-at-large, Coughlin (pledged to Foss), 17,050; Williams (for preference primary), 8,256.

On the Democratic ticket, although ten of the fifteen candidates for delegates-at-large to Baltimore were either pledged to or indicated to be "for" Governor Foss, there was no Foss name in the presidential preference column. Speaker Clark, whose name appeared in the preference ballot and who defeated Governor Wilson by a vote of 2 to 1, did not have a single pledged delegate on the list. Many of the Democratic district delegates were also elected pledged to Foss.

The Republican delegates-at-large elected are Charles S. Baxter, George W. Coleman, Frederick Fosdick, A. R. Hart, O. A. La Riviere, Arthur L. Nason, Alvin G. Weeks, James P. Megennis; all for Roosevelt but announced to Taft. By districts:

First, C. C. Chesney, E. B. Binke, Taft; Second, E. P. Clark, William H. Reiker, Taft; Third, Matthew J. Whittall, Lawrence P. Kilty, Taft; Fourth, John M. Keyes, F. P. Glazier, Roosevelt; Fifth, L. S. Chapman, S. M. Decker, Roosevelt; Sixth, J. P. Ingraham, Jr., Isaac Patch, Taft; Seventh, Charles N. Cox, Lynn M. Ranger, Roosevelt; Eighth, John Read, George S. Lovejoy, Taft; Ninth, A. Tewksbury, L. L. Jenkins, Roosevelt; Tenth, H. Clifford Gallagher, Guy A. Ham, Taft; Eleventh, Grafton D. Cushing, W. Prentiss Parker, Taft; Twelfth, J. Sterns Cushing, George L. Barnes, Taft; Thirteenth, John Westall, A. P. Smith, Taft; Fourteenth, E. B. Keith, W. A. Swift, Roosevelt.

German Dirigible Wreck.

Berlin, May 4.—Germany's "last word" in dirigibles, the Siemens-Schuckert balloon, which was intended as the flagship of the modern aerial fleet being formed by the government, was wrecked near Biesdorf Thursday.

New York Death Rate Drops.

New York, May 3.—A report issued by the New York health department shows that the death rate in the metropolis is lower than it was in 1866, when the first municipal board of health was organized.

Commission Suspends Rates.

Washington, May 3.—The interstate commerce commission has suspended advances over the Norfolk & Western from Cincinnati, North and South Carolina points on class and commodity rates until November [illegible]

KILL REBEL LEADER

MEXICANS ROUTED FROM RANCH BY FIVE WOMEN.

Taft Informs Senate That There Is No Evidence of Alleged Jap Acquisition of Magdalena Land.

Bisbee, Ariz., May 3.—Five American men and five women on the Comichi ranch, the largest in the territory of Tepic, Mexico, armed with sawed-off shotguns, repulsed rebels in two attacks, April 14 and 15, killing the rebel leader in the second engagement.

Washington, May 3.—President Taft informed the senate Wednesday that the department of state has no evidence to show any acquisition of land or any intention or desire to acquire land, whether directly or indirectly, in Mexico by or on the part of the imperial Japanese government.

The president's message was in response to a senate resolution calling for information regarding an alleged purchase of land at Magdalena bay by the Japanese government or by a Japanese company.

With his brief message the president transmitted a full report from Secretary of State Knox.

"There is nothing on file in the department of state," said the secretary, "that has justified any inference that the Mexican government, or the imperial Japanese government, has been occupied with any disposition of land near Magdalena bay by which the latter government would acquire land there for any purpose."

Secretary Knox in his statement says that the American syndicate which was negotiating with the Japanese for the disposal of the Magdalena bay tract tried to ascertain the attitude of the United States government.

Secretary Knox declared:

"The department cannot assume there is any project on foot calling for action on the part of the United States."

Senator Rayner said that if Japan established a base of supply or coaling station in Mexico, he would regard the act as a declaration of war.

TEN DEAD IN TEXAS STORM

Score Are Injured, Much Property Damage Done in Cyclone and Cloudburst.

San Antonio, Tex., May 3.—Ten persons are known to have been killed, a score injured and farm buildings over a wide area destroyed by a cyclone and a cloudburst which swept over the Rio Grande river country near North Laredo Wednesday. Telegraph and telephone wires were leveled between Laredo and Green.

Among the known killed is Grover Nye, a wealthy planter of North Laredo. Three women and children, names unknown, were killed in the house adjoining Nye's property. The extensive ranch property of J. J. Davis, the millionaire onion king of Texas, was completely swept away, and several of his employes were killed or injured.

LEAVES ALL TO MRS. GRANT

Will of Late Commander of the East Is Filed for Probate in New York.

New York, May 1.—Mrs. Ida Honore Grant, widow of Gen. Frederick Dent Grant, will receive all the general's property, both personal and real, according to the terms of the general's will, which was filed for probate. The petition accompanying the will states that the property left by General Grant is worth "in excess of $10,000."

OFFICERS HELD AS SLAYERS

Briggs and Hyers Must Answer for Killing of Blunt in Nebraska Bandit Hunt.

Papillion, Neb., May 3.—Chief of Police John E. Briggs of South Omaha and Sheriff A. A. Hyers of Lancaster county were held to the grand jury Wednesday on charges of killing Roy Blunt in the battle with bandits near Gretna, Sarpy county, March 18. John C. Trouton was exonerated.

INDICTED ON BRIBE CHARGE

Member of Maryland Legislature Accused of Attempting to Buy Votes on Option Issue.

Annapolis, Md., May 2.—Thomas L. Park, member of the legislature from Baltimore, was indicted on the charge of attempted bribery in connection with the state-wide local option fight at the last session of the general assembly. He was released on $10,000 bail.

Mgr. Mooney Badly Hurt.

New York, May 3.—Mgr. Joseph Mooney, vicar general of the Catholic diocese of New York, was injured seriously in an automobile accident here on Wednesday, and his condition is declared grave.

---

200 Are Killed by Tidal Wave.

Victoria, B. C., May 4.—News of the destruction of the Fijian town of Funa Point by an 18-foot tidal wave was brought here last Thursday by the steamer Marama from Australia. Two hundred were killed.

Well Known Cartoonist Is Dead.

New York, May 4.—Homer Davenport, one of the most famous of American cartoonists, died at the age of forty-five in this city on last Thursday. He had been ill only five days and [illegible]

DOES YOUR BACK ACHE?

Aches and Twinges Point to Hidden Kidney Trouble.

Have you a lame back, aching day and night? Do you feel a sharp pain after bending over? When the kidneys seem sore and the action irregular, use Doan's Kidney Pills, which have cured thousands. L. Bonney, Eugene, Ore., says: "I contracted severe kidney trouble through heavy lifting. There was a dull ache across my hips and pains like knife-thrusts shot through me. Doan's Kidney Pills cured after doctors had failed and my back is stronger than before in years."

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

"When Your Back is Lame, Remember the Name—DOAN'S." 50c all stores. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

The man who says he would be willing to die for a girl during the courtship stunt may after marriage wish he had.

Perhaps the surest thing in this life is the friend you can't depend on when you really need him.

BACKACHE NOT A DISEASE

But a Symptom, a Danger Signal Which Every Woman Should Heed.

Backache is a symptom of organic weakness or derangement. If you have backache don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Read about Mrs. Woodall's experience.

Morton's Gap, Kentucky.—"I suffered two years with female disorders, my health was very bad and I had a continual backache which was simply awful. I could not stand on my feet long enough to cook a meal's victuals without my back nearly killing me, and I would have such dragging sensations I could hardly bear it. I had soreness in each side, could not stand tight clothing, and was irregular. I was completely run down. On advice I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am enjoying good health. It is now more than two years and I have not had an ache or pain since. I do all my own work, washing and everything, and never have backache any more. I think your medicine is grand and I praise it to all my neighbors. If you think my testimony will help others you may publish it."—Mrs. OLLIE WOODALL, Morton's Gap, Kentucky.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Constipation Vanishes Forever

Prompt Relief—Permanent Cure

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS never fail. Purely vegetable—act surely but gently on the liver. Stop after dinner distress—cure indigestion, improve the complexion, brighten the eyes.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

F. P. 20TH CENTURY Corset STYLE 210

The Automatic Boning gives what the 20th Century woman demands; it yields to every movement of the body. No bending there is a sliding movement distributing the strain. The Automatic Steels are warranted not to break for one year; and no other corset possesses this advantage.

AT DEALERS or sent direct $1.50

BIRDSEY-SOMERS CO.
233 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
Cleanses and beautifies the hair. Promotes a luxuriant growth. Never Fails to Restore Gray Hair to its Youthful Color. Prevents hair falling. 50c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

THE NEW FRENCH REMEDY. No.1, No.2, No.3.
THERAPION Used in French Hospitals with GREAT SUCCESS, CURES KIDNEY, BLADDER DISEASES, PILES, CHRONIC ULCERS, SKIN ERUPTIONS—EITHER SEX. Send address envelope for FREE booklet to DR. LE CLERC MED. CO., HAVERSTOCK RD., HAMPSTEAD, LONDON, ENG.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

Pettit's Eye Salve GRANULATED ITCHING LIDS

BURNING DAYLIGHT

By JACK LONDON

AUTHOR OF "THE CALL OF THE WILD," "WHITE FANG," "MARTIN EDEN," ETC.

(Copyright, 1910, by the New York Herald Company.)
(Copyright, 1910, by the MacMillan Company.)

SYNOPSIS.

Elam Harnish, known all through Alaska as "Burning Daylight," celebrates his 30th birthday with a crowd of miners at the Circle City Tivoli. The dance leads to heavy gambling, in which over $100,000 is staked. Harnish loses his money and his mine but wins the mail contract. He starts on his mail trip with dogs and sledge, telling his friends that he will be in the big Yukon gold strike at the start. Burning Daylight makes a sensationally rapid run across country with the mail, appears at the Tivoli and is now ready to join his friends in a dash to the new gold fields. Deciding that gold will be found in the up-river district Harnish buys two tons of flour, which he declares will be worth its weight in gold, but when he arrives with his flour he finds the big flat desolate. A comrade discovers gold and Daylight reaps a rich harvest. He goes to Dawson, becomes the most prominent figure in the Klondike and defeats a combination of capitalists in a vast mining deal. He returns to civilization, and, amid the bewildering complications of high finance, Daylight finds that he has been led to invest his eleven millions in a manipulated scheme. He goes to New York, and confronting his disloyal partners with a revolver, he threatens to kill them if his money is not returned. They are cowed, return their stealings and Harnish goes back to San Francisco where he meets his fate in Dede Mason, a pretty stenographer. He makes large investments and gets into the political ring. For a rest he goes to the country. Daylight gets deeper into high finance in San Francisco, but often the longing for the simple life nearly overcomes him. Dede Mason buys a horse and Daylight meets her in her saddle trips. One day he asks Dede to go with him on one more ride, his purpose being to ask her to marry him and they canter away, she trying to analyze her feelings. Dede tells Daylight that her happiness could not lie with a money manipulator.

CHAPTER XVI.—Continued.

"You see, I give the value to the land by building the roads. Then I sell the land and get that value back, and after that, there's the roads, all carrying folks back and forth and earning big money. Can't lose. And there's all sorts of millions in it. I'm going to get my hands on some of that water front and the tide-lands. Take between where I'm going to build my pier and the old pier. It's shallow water. I can fill and dredge and put in a system of docks that will handle hundreds of ships. San Francisco's water front is congested. No more room for ships. With hundreds of ships loading and unloading on this side right into the freight cars of three big railroads, factories will start up over here instead of crossing to San Francisco. That means factory sites. That means me buying in the factory sites before anybody guesses the cat is going to jump, much less, which way. Factories mean tens of thousands of workingmen and their families. That means more houses and more land, and that means me, for I'll be there to sell them the land. Then there's the water. I'll come pretty close to owning the watershed. Why not the waterworks too? There's two water companies in Oakland now, fighting like cats and dogs and both about broke. What a metropolis needs is a good water system. They can't give it. They're stick-in-the-muds. I'll gobble them up and deliver the right article to the city. There's money there, too—money everywhere. Everything works in with everything else. Each improvement makes the value of everything else jump up. It's people that are behind the value. The bigger the crowd that herds in one place, the more valuable is the real estate. And this is the very place for a crowd to herd. Look at it. Just look at it! You could never find a finer site for a great city. All it needs is the herd, and I'll stampede a couple of hundred thousand people in here inside two years. And what's more, it won't be one of these wildcat land booms. It will be legitimate. Twenty years from now there'll be a million people on this side the bay. Another thing is hotels. There isn't a decent one in the town. I'll build a couple of up-to-date ones that'll make them sit up and take notice. I won't care if they don't pay for years. Their effect will more than give me my money back out of the other holdings. And, oh, yes, I'm going to plant eucalyptus, millions of them, on these hills."

"But how are you going to do it?" Dede asked. "You haven't enough money for all that you've planned."

"I've thirty million, and if I need more I can borrow on the land and other things. Interest on mortgages won't anywhere near eat up the increase in land values, and I'll be selling land right along."

In the weeks that followed, Daylight was a busy man. It meant quick work on a colossal scale, for Oakland and the adjacent country was not slow to feel the tremendous buying. But Daylight had the ready cash and it had always been his policy to strike quickly. Before the others could get the warning of the boom, he quietly accomplished many things. At the same time that his agents were purchasing corner lots and entire blocks in the heart of the business section and the waste lands for factory sites, Daylight was rushing franchises through the city council, capturing the two exhausted water companies and the eight or nine independent street railways, and getting his grip on the Oakland Creek and the bay tide-lands for his dock system. The tide-lands had been in litigation for years, and he took the bull by the horns—buying out the private owners and at the same time leasing from the city fathers. By the time that Oakland was aroused by this unprecedented activity in every direction and was questioning excitedly the meaning of it, Daylight secretly bought the chief Republican newspaper and the chief Democratic organ, and moved boldly into his new offices. Of necessity, they were on a large scale, occupying four floors of the only modern office building in the town—the only building that wouldn't be torn down later on, as Daylight put it. There was department after department, a score of them, and hundreds of clerks and stenographers. As he told Dede:—

"I've got more companies than you can shake a stick at. There's the Alameda & Contra Costa Land Syndicate, the Consolidated Street Railways, the Yerba Buena Ferry Company, the United Water Company, the Piedmont Realty Company, the Fairview and Portola Hotel Company, and half a dozen more that I've got to refer to a notebook to remember. There's the Piedmont Laundry Farm, and Redwood Consolidated Quarries. Starting in with our quarry, I just kept a-going till I got them all. And there's the ship-building company I ain't got a name for yet. Seeing as I had to have ferry-boats, I decided to build them myself. They'll be done by the time the pier is ready for them."

For months Daylight was buried in work. The outlay was terrific, and there was nothing coming in. Beyond a general rise in land values, Oakland had not acknowledged his irruption on the financial scene. The city was waiting for him to show what he was going to do, and he lost no time about it. The best skilled brains on the market were hired by him for the different branches of the work. Initial mistakes he had no patience with, and he was determined to start right, as when he engaged Wilkinson, almost doubling his big salary, and brought him out from Chicago to take charge of the street railway organization. Night and day the road gangs toiled on the streets. And night and day pile-drivers hammered the big piles down into the mud of San Francisco Bay. The pier was to be three miles long, and the Berkeley hills were denuded of whole groves of mature eucalyptus for the piling.

At the same time that his electric roads were building out through the hills, the hay-fields were being surveyed and broken up into city squares, with here and there, according to best modern methods, winding boulevards and strips of park. Broad streets, well graded, were made, with sewers and water-pipes ready laid, and macadamized from his own quarries. Cement sidewalks were also laid, so that all the purchaser had to do was to select his lot and architect and start building. The quick service of Daylight's new electric roads into Oakland made this big district immediately accessible, and long before the ferry system was in operation hundreds of residences were going up. The profit on this land was enormous. In a day, his on-slaught of wealth had turned open farming country into one of the best residential districts of the city.

But this money that flowed in upon him was immediately poured back into his other investments. The need for electric cars was so great that he installed his own shops for building them. But no matter what pressure was on Daylight, his Sundays he reserved for his riding in the hills. It was not the rainy winter weather, however, that brought these rides with Dede to an end. One Saturday afternoon in the office she told him not to expect to meet her next day, and, when he pressed for an explanation,—

"I've sold Mab."

Daylight was speechless for the moment. Her act meant one of so many serious things that he couldn't classify it. It smacked almost of treachery. She might have met with financial disaster. It might be her way of letting him know she had seen enough of him. Or . . .

"What's the matter?" he managed to ask.

"I couldn't afford to keep her with hay forty-five dollars a ton," Dede answered. "My brother's expenses have been higher, as well, and I was driven to the conclusion that since I could not afford both, I'd better let the mare go and keep the brother."

"If You'd Just Let Me Buy Her Back."

"Who bought her?" he asked.

Dede's eyes flashed in the way long since familiar to him when she was angry.

"Don't you dare buy her back for me," she cried. "And don't deny that that was what you had in mind."

"I wish you would reconsider, Miss Mason," he said softly. "Not alone for the mare's sake, but for my sake. Money don't cut any ice in this. For me to buy that mare wouldn't mean as much as it does to most men to send a bouquet of flowers or a box of candy to a young lady. There's nobody I feel chummy with except you, and you know how little we've chummed—once a week, if it didn't rain, on Sunday. I've grown kind of to depend on you. If you'd just let me buy her back—"

"No, no; I tell you no." Dede arose impatiently, but her eyes were moist with the memory of her pet. "Please don't mention her to me again. If you think it was easy to part with her, you are mistaken. But I've seen the last of her, and I want to forget her."

Daylight made no answer, and the door closed behind her.

Half an hour later he was conferring with Jones, an erstwhile elevator boy and rabid proletarian whom Daylight long before had grubstaked to literature for a year. The resulting novel had been a failure. Editors and publishers would not look at it, and Daylight was now using the disgruntled author in a little private secret service system he had been compelled to establish for himself. Jones, who affected to be surprised at nothing after his crushing experience, betrayed no surprise now when the task was given him to locate the purchaser of a certain sorrel mare.

"How high shall I pay for her?" he asked.

"Any price. You've got to get her, that's the point. Drive a sharp bargain so as not to excite suspicion, but get her. Then you deliver her to that address up in Sonoma County. The man's the caretaker on a little ranch I have there. Tell him he's to take whacking good care of her. And after that forget all about it. Don't tell me the name of the man you buy her from. Don't tell me anything about it except that you've got her and delivered her. Savvee?"

But the week had not passed, when Daylight noted the flash in Dede's eyes that boded trouble.

"Something's gone wrong—what is it?" he said boldly.

"Mab," she said. "The man who bought her has sold her already. If I thought you had anything to do with it—"

"I don't even know who you sold her to," was Daylight's answer. "And what's more, I'm not bothering my head about her. She was your mare, and it's none of my business what you did with her. You haven't got her, that's sure, and worse luck. And now, while we're on touchy subjects, I'm going to open another one with you. And you needn't get touchy about it, for it's not really your business at all. It's about that brother of yours. He needs more than you can do for him. Selling that mare of yours won't send him to Germany. And that's what his own doctors say he needs—that crack German specialist who rips a man's bones and muscles into pulp and then moulds them all over again. Well, I want to send him to Germany and give that crack a flutter, that's all."

"If it were only possible!" she said, half breathlessly, and wholly without anger. "Only it isn't, and you know it isn't. I can't accept money from you—"

"Now look here, Miss Mason. You've got to get some foolish notions out of your head. This money notion is one of the funniest things I've seen. Suppose you was falling over a cliff, wouldn't it be all right for me to reach out and catch you by the arm? Sure it would. You're standing in your brother's way. No matter what notions you've got in your head, you've got to get out of the way and give him a chance. Will you let me go and see him and talk it over with him? I'll make it a hard and fast business proposition. I'll stake him to get well, and that's all, and charge him interest."

She visibly hesitated.

"And just remember one thing, Miss Mason: it's his leg, not yours."

Still she refrained from giving her answer, and Daylight went on strengthening his position.

"And remember, I go over to see him alone. He's a man, and I can deal with him better without women-folks around. I'll go over tomorrow afternoon."

CHAPTER XVII.

For six weeks hand-running Daylight had seen nothing of Dede except in the office, and there he resolutely refrained from making approaches. But by the seventh Sunday his hunger for her overmastered him. It was a stormy day. A heavy south-east gale was blowing, and squall after squall of rain and wind swept over the city. He could not take his mind off of her, and a persistent picture came to him of her sitting by a window and sewing feminine fripperies of some sort. When the time came for his pre-luncheon cocktail to be served to him in his rooms, he did not take it. Filled with a daring determination, he glanced at his note-book for Dede's telephone number, and called for the switch.

At first it was the landlady's daughter who was raised, but in a minute he heard the voice he had been hungry to hear.

"I just wanted to tell you that I'm coming out to see you," he said. "I didn't want to break in on you without warning, that was all."

"Has something happened?" came her voice.

"I'll tell you when I get there," he evaded.

She came herself to the door to receive him and shake hands with him. He hung his mackintosh and hat on the rack in the comfortable hall and turned to her for direction.

"They are busy in there," she said, indicating the parlor, from which came the boisterous voices of young people, and through the open door of which he could see several college youths. "So you will have to come into my rooms."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Selfishness of Love.

He who loves deeply finds a sweet revenge in acting so that his beloved one shall appear [illegible].

Diane's Cavalier

* * *

By LOUISE MERRIFIELD

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

"Of course, Roy and I know it isn't quite fair to trouble you with it, Uncle Otis, but you're just a darling old diplomat, and really, the situation is very delicate."

"Old lady got a hair-trigger disposition?"

"Oh, she's not an old lady," protested Evelyn mysteriously. "She's in the early forties, but very youthful in appearance. Roy says she is like some lovely French marquise with her young face, and grey hair. He is very much attached to her because she was his father's only sister."

"Married?" queried the judge.

"Dear me, no. She's very wealthy, and interested in social reforms, and taxes on bachelors, and so on."

"How about taxes on old maids?" laughed the judge.

"You'd better not start in asking her such questions. Roy says she is awfully correct. He spent all his vacations with her after his parents died, and traveled abroad after he left college. She wanted to settle an income on him, and let him go in for what she called the betterment of mankind, but Roy struck out for himself, and put up his own fight. I think it was splendidly independent, don't you, Uncle Otis?"

"The kid's got a good grip on himself," assented the judge. "Likes to make good on his own hook. When is this social adjuster arriving?"

"Oh, she's already here. That's the trouble. Roy just 'phoned that she had descended on him yesterday. He thinks she heard that he—that he—well, that he was interested in me."

"Good excuse, isn't it?"

"But he has this chance that seems to have fairly dropped out of the skies to take charge down at Perez on the canal, and it means so much for him, and he won't go unless I go too."

"Oh! She's Already Here."

The judge pursed his lips and frowned.

"But now she's come on for a visit with Roy, and expects him to rush her, you know, as the boys say; take her all around and show her the sights, and go to the opera and do the right thing."

"Well?" The judge's tone grew ominous.

"Well, don't you see what we've planned for you to do, you dear? We want you to meet her and take Roy's place, make yourself so awfully nice that she won't want Roy at all, or miss him. Then maybe when she found I had such an uncle she'd appreciate joining the family."

"Am I a sacrifice or an accessory before the fact?"

"You're an accomplice," laughed Evelyn. "And you can't get out of it. I only asked you out of remorse in a way, because, honestly, Roy and I have settled the whole thing, and we're to meet her at dinner tonight over at his hotel."

"Mind, I will not make love to her," protested the judge.

It was his final word in the matter. That evening he met Miss Diane Le Moyne. Now the judge confessed to fifty-two, and was mighty proud of his modest belt line, his handsome carriage and way with the fair sex, as he still called his undeniable chivalry. He surveyed Miss Diane in frank admiration. It seemed altogether impossible that this tall, slender figure could be Roy's old maid aunt. Clad in gray velvet she was. So much the judge guessed, but his masculine mind failed to grasp the full intent and charm of the cut steel and lace overdress, the dull silver band set with rubies in the beautiful gray waves of hair, and all the other points of interest, as Evelyn would have called them. He only saw an interesting face, full of sympathetic response, and the loveliness that comes only from the inner grace of a well-poised character.

"Do you like her, Uncle Otis?" asked Evelyn when it was over.

"Like her, my dear child?" exclaimed the judge. "Do I we talk of liking the moon or the evening star? A most exceptional woman, Evelyn. By gad, finest type I've ever met. There's a woman with all the charm of her sex and not a spark of nonsense. There's a woman that can give a man sympathetic friendship and not sue him for breach of promise the next season."

"I'm so glad you get on well together," Evelyn replied, softly. "Roy's pleased, too. He has accepted the canal appointment, and we want to be married by the end of the month so as to sail on the 5th."

"Leave it entirely to me, child," urged the judge, kindly. "I will prepare her for the shock, and fix things so there shall not be the slightest unpleasantness. She looks like a woman you can reason with, a woman of sense, by gad."

So the two went quietly ahead with the wedding preparations, and the judge kept to his part of the bargain. He showed Miss Le Moyne the city assiduously. He took her to the theaters and to concerts. He motored with her to all points of interest.

"What a delightful old cavalier he is," Diane told Roy. "It is fortunate his being able to take me around, or I know I should have been lonely, with you so very busy, Roy, dear."

Roy's conscience gave an annoying twinge. He had spent every spare moment with Evelyn.

"Aunt Diane, do you believe in love?" he asked awkwardly, leaning over her chair, and stroking the beautiful grey hair.

"Why, boy dear, you may as well ask if I believe in life or truth."

"But you've never loved, have you, I mean so everything else just slipped back into perspective and left only yourself and one other?"

"Not exactly," said Miss Le Moyne, gently.

"So the whole world would look dark if you knew you'd never see them again?" persisted Roy.

"Is it that way with you?" She turned her head up to him, her clear eyes searching his own. Roy bent his head and kissed her cheek.

"You've been awfully good to me, Aunt Diane."

"Have I, boy? Maybe I have been selfish, too."

That was all she said, and Roy let it drop. The wedding was only a week off now. That evening the judge was to be host. They motored out along the shore to a beach hotel. The balcony where dinner was served seemed to overhang the rocks and beating waves. A youthful moon gleamed in the south, silver bright against a green-gold sky. Roy and Evelyn leaned over the balcony railing after dinner, so as to give the judge his chance for a confidential tete-a-tete. It was to be surely settled tonight, he had promised them. Once or twice they looked cautiously back at the couple. Diane was listening in silence, her fingers trifling with the rose petals on the tablecloth before her. The judge seemed to be talking very earnestly, very forcibly. Once he even reached over and covered the trifling fingertips with his own hands and she did not withdraw them.

"He's such an old brick to do all this for us," whispered Roy, slipping one arm tenderly around Evelyn. "We'll never forget it, will we, sweetheart?"

"I think they'll be good friends, too, even after she finds out that it was a sort of put up affair. She's so sensible, and broadminded."

"It's over, hush," warned Roy, as the two rose slowly, and strolled towards them. "Brace yourself for the inevitable, girlie."

They waited. The judge looked very well satisfied with himself. Miss Diane was smiling slightly, her face raised towards that young silver of a moon.

"Children," began the judge, happily, "it is with the deepest feelings of happiness and pride that I am able to announce to you Miss Diane's consent."

"Oh, you darling," exclaimed Evelyn, the tears springing to her blue eyes. "And you won't mind Roy's marrying me a bit, even if he is so young?"

"Roy's marrying!" exclaimed Diane, a sudden light leaping to her eyes. She turned and looked up at the judge.

"God bless my heart," he gasped, "I forgot all about you, Roy! I asked for myself. Diane and I are to be married as soon as my fair lady says."

"Can't you come down to Perez for the honeymoon, Uncle Otis," suggested Evelyn mischievously. "We'd love to have you, Roy and I."

Forbidden Books.

Having books forbidden makes them irresistibly alluring, adds the excitement of hazard to the reading of them. Did you never sneak away to read it, prudently sliding up the other books on the shelf so that no betraying gap might show? Did you never, for instance, read Romola under the bed in the spare bedroom, dividing your righteous condemnation of Tito with your own conscientious scruples, and your fear for Romola's safety with shivers lest you yourself be caught? Did you never make your way through Vanity Fair by cautious half-hour snatches, fearful every moment lest some one in authority should interrupt?—Margaret Lynn in the Atlantic.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3.1879.

COLLINS FOR DELEGATE.

P.V.Collins, editor of the Northwest Agriculturist, has announced his candidacy as one of the four delegates at large from Minnesota to the republican national Convention. Mr.Collins is one of the staunchest supporters of Col. Roosevelt in Minnesota and is a man whose integrity and ability is undoubted, and is also a staunch friend of the farmer. No better selection could be made and he has already received many voluntary offers of support and strong endorsements. —Crookston Times.

Mr. Collins is just the proper man to be at the head of the Minnesota delegation in that Convention. With him as the leader the farming intrests of this state has a man that they can depend on to look after their end of the deal, but we suppose the twin cities will object to the farmers having their representatives in that convention and if they do they want to look out for a break to get even when that seven senator amendment is voted on this fall as the farmers want Collins as their representative

---

If Taft is nominated the farmers are likely to conclnded that they had better vote the Democratic ticket so as to get a Reciprocity reduction in price on the manufactured articles that they have to buy as well as what they have to sell.

At this season of political year the country editor does not look for copy furnished by professional writers. It usualy comes in type written copy or in printed on one ide sheets which make very good single wraps for mailing and as it undoubtly releives the senders who think they are making a wonderful campaign for their ideas, and does not do us any harm they are welcome to send them along.

The tying of the ordinary voter to any political party is as much out of date as an old fashioned stage coach. The farmers of the North West are "dead next" to Taft and will not vote for him, whether he gets the nominatin or not. The line has long since been crossed in this nomination fight by the republican newspapers that opposed reciprocity, and if they step back over that line to again indorse him president of the United States they would do him more harm than good. If a farm paper, like the North Western Agriculturlis should start in to support Taft the farmers would say that the editor had sold out; pay up their subscription and stop the paper and be sure to go to election and vote aginst him.

There has been no extension granted on ditch 47, There has been time granted to the bondsman until October to finish It. The Contract has been let to Forrestal & Foyen, who are now building a walking dredge at Plummer and will be ready to start work next month. If they are any good they will have the ditch completed so as to drain the low lands by haying time, and the road grading is to be completed this fall. County Auditor Fazel is taking an active interest in pushing the work on these ditches, but the sub contracts have been let to men who only thought they could ditch, which has made it uphill business for the contractors and officials and damage to farmers as it is stopping the improving of a lot of valuable land as soon as the ditches are completed [illegible] Northern [illegible] watchdog for the breweries, declares he will spend no money to be re-elected. Of, course, not; his owners will attend to that.

The Demons Of The Swamps

are mosquitoes. As they sting they put deadly malaria germs in the blood. Then follow the icy chills and the fire of fever. The appetite flies and the strength fails; also malaria often paves the way for deadly typhoid. But Electric Bitters kill and cast out the malaria germs from the blood; give you a fine appetite and renew your strength. "After long suffering," wrote Wm. Fretwell, of Lucema, N.C., "three bottles drove all the malaria from my system, and I've had good health ever since." Best for all stomach, liver and kidney ills. 50 cents At all Druggists.

GAVE THE VOTERS A CHANCE.

Presidential Preference Primaries Show How Roosevelt Stands With the Country.

Men who have watched campaigns for many years can recall no such reversal of conditions and prospects as that which took place practically within a few days in the contest between Roosevelt and Taft. Never before did a candidate for a presidential nomination gain such a lead as the president had and see it go to pieces in a few days as Taft's lead has crumbled and withered.

Always, heretofore, when a national pre-convention campaign has piled up an increasing majority for any aspirant for the leadership of his party, and week after week has gone by without a serious backset to his plans, the momentum gained has sufficed to maintain the advantage and make it greater. By all the logic of political history the Taft candidacy had victory within reach. There was no precedent for what has actually happened.

The explanation is the new force brought into action. The popular vote primary did the work. It carried Roosevelt forward with a rush which changed the whole complexion of the campaign in less than a week. And the only reason why the same force did not cause the same results sooner was that it is as yet given scope and effect in only a few states.—Cleveland Leader.

Taft Upon Roosevelt.

The newspapers supporting the candidacy of President Taft have enjoyed especially the quotation of eulogies delivered by Colonel Roosevelt upon Mr. Taft in the past. A reader of the New York Evening Post has been cruel enough to respond with the following quotations from Mr. Taft upon Mr. Roosevelt:

"When the friction of the last few months shall be forgotten, when the mists of momentary irritation shall have disappeared, the greatness of Theodore Roosevelt as president and leader of men in one of the great moral movements of the country's history will become clear to everyone, and he will take his place with Washington and Lincoln."

As a tribute of a judicial mind, as the judgment of a man thoroughly informed, considerate, free from passion, prejudice or exaggeration, this memorable declaration by the Post's candidate should temper even the fury and contempt into which Teddyphobia has cast that venerable contemporary.—Chicago Tribune.

"Local Conditions."

This talk of the Taft managers about "local conditions" being responsible for the Roosevelt and La Follette triumphs recall General Hancock's famous remark about the tariff being a local issue. It looks as if the Republican presidential nomination might be determined by "local conditions," the sum total of which would thus turn out to be a genuinely national condition.—Providence Journal.

"T. R."

For the benefit of those who do not understand what the T. R. buttons signify, we gladly explain that in Malden they stand for Tim Riley, and in Pennsylvania for "Taft Routed." Southern postmasters please take notice. Incidentally it stands for the same thing in all other Republican states, as evidenced by the vote in Illinois, Wisconsin, North Dakota, Maine and Missouri.—Boston Globe.

"The Sensitive Nerve."

Mr. Taft says that "the sensitive nerve of the serious minded people of the country has been touched" by the proposal to subject the courts to the rule of the people.

Considering whom the president regards as the "most serious minded people," he is probably right about it. Their most sensitive nerve is the "pocket nerve."—Kansas City Times.

His "Dictation."

Mr. Roosevelt points out that he has been accused of trying to dictate to senators and representatives, but never of trying to dictate to people.

That is just why the privileged interests, who always are well represented in congress, object to him.—Kansas City Times.

[illegible] Justice Eli Cherry, of Gillis Mills, Tenn., was plainly worried. A bad sore on his leg had baffled several doctors and long resisted all remedies. "I thought it was a cancer," he wrote "At last I used Bucklen's Arnica Salve and was completely cured." Cures burns, boils, ulcers, cuts, bruises and piles. 25 cents at All Druggists.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam May 10, 1912.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 4th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Fred A. Lane of Kratka Minnesota, who on June 24th, 1904, made Homestead Entry No. 261, Serial No. 04162, for Lots 2, 3, 4, 5 & 6, Section 24 Township 158 N Range 42 W. and Lot 8, Section 19, Township 158 N. Range 41 W.5th Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make final five year proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before William Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for the District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minnesota on the 15th day of June 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Ole M. Pederson, Lewis Stenseth, Osmund Swenson, Ole Christoferson, all of Kratka Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam May 10th, 1912.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 4th. 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Ole Christoferson, of Kratka Minn. who on June 29th, 1904, made Homestead Entry No. 300, Serial No. 04130, for Lots 9, 18 & S.W.¼ S.E.¼ Section 18 Township 158 N. Range 41 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Five Year Proof to establish claim to the land above described; before William Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 24th. day of February 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Ole M. Pederson, Krist Larson, Hans Johnson, Fred A. Lane, all of Kratka Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin,
Register.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. The Sunbeam May 10, 1912.

Department of the Interior U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 4th. 1912.

Notice is hereby given that William Parnow, of Kratka Minn. who on June 20th, 1905 made Homestead Entry No. 451, Serial No. 04161, for Lots N ½ S.E.¼ & S.E. ¼ S.E.¼ Section 23 Township 158 N. Range 41 W. Fifth Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Five year Proof, to establish claim to the land above described; before William Michelet, U.S. Commissioner, for District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 18th. day of June 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Halvor Wold, Ole Waale, Stiner Johnson, John I. Johnson, all of Kratka Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin,
Register.

MYSTIC ALGIERS.

It Is Not a City For Women Visitors to Explore Alone.

No foreigner knows what the Arab does. To few has it been given to understand what he thinks. Within his house he is as much master in Algiers as he is in Mecca, so long as he avoids the appearance of what the infidel calls evil and so long as he complies with certain demands, equally foolish and outrageous to him, in respect of registration, vaccination, sanitation and the like.

To any one who has ever seen for a moment behind the veil of native life there is something almost terrifying about the impenetrable mystery of these silent houses. Things happen there that human duties assumes aspects there of which the western world never dreams. I confess to being uneasy when I see careless and ignorant westerners—certainly when I see western women—walking alone in the native quarters of eastern towns.

Suppose one of these dark doors should open suddenly, the stranger be dragged quietly within and the door shut: That stranger might disappear forever without leaving a single trace. It would be useless to search unless the authorities were prepared to ransack every house to its most private apartments in a whole district, and to do that would be, if not to provoke a revolt, at least to stir up such dangerous unrest and hostility as to make it impossible.

What might happen to that stranger is best not considered. If his utter raptors so chose there would be no more trace than marks the spot where a stone has fallen into the sea. Such an event is, of course, very unlikely, but it has horribly happened and might happen again.—Sir Henry Norman, M. P., in Scribner's.

Too Brief.

"I dreamed last night that I had fallen heir to a million."

"That is so unsatisfactory."

"I rather enjoy it."

"But the nights are so short. One wakes up before half the money is spent."

ROOSEVELT'S VIEWS ON POPULAR RULE

Tyranny of Minorities, Not of Majorities, to Be Feared.

HAS FAITH IN PLAIN PEOPLE

They Will Make Fewer Mistakes in Governing Themselves Than Any Small Class or Body of Men—Taft's System a Mockery of Popular Government.

The majority of the plain people will make fewer mistakes in governing themselves than any smaller class or body of men.

I have scant patience with talk of the tyranny of the majority.

We are today suffering from the tyranny of minorities.

It is a small minority that lies behind monopolies and trusts.

It is a small minority that stands behind the present law of master and servant, the sweatshops and the whole calendar of social and industrial injustice.

It is a small minority that is using our convention system to defeat the will of the majority in the choice of delegates to the Chicago convention.

The trouble is there have held public office in the states and nation men who have served not the whole people, but some special class or interest.

When the majority of the people do, in fact as well as theory, rule, the servants of the people will more quickly obey, not the commands of the special interests, but those of the whole people.

No man would say that it is best to conduct all legislation by direct vote of the people.

But the initiative and referendum are needed when legislatures fail to carry out the will of the people.

The direct primary, if accompanied by a stringent corrupt practice act, will help break up the corrupt partnership of corporations and politicians.

I do not advocate the recall of judges in all states and in all communities.

But democracy has a right to approach the sanctuary of the courts when a special interest has corruptly found sanctuary there.

I urge that where the courts construe the due process clause as if property rights, to the exclusion of human rights, had a first mortgage on the constitution, the people may, after sober deliberation, vote, and finally determine whether the law which the court set aside shall be valid or not.

Those who stand against the changes I propose are champions of wrong and injustice, and of tyranny by the wealthy and the strong over the weak and helpless.

I am proposing merely that in a certain class of cases, involving the police power, when a state court has set aside as unconstitutional a law passed by the legislature for the general welfare, the question of the validity of the law be submitted for final determination to a vote of the people.

Mr. Taft's criticism is really less a criticism of my proposal than a criticism of all popular government.

The view that the constitution is a straitjacket to be used for the control of an unruly patient—the people—is false and mischievous.

Mr. Taft's position is that we have a special class of persons wiser than the people, who are above the people, but who govern them and ought to govern them, and who protect various classes of people from the whole people.

Such a system is not popular government, but a mere mockery of popular government.

I do not believe that any people, and especially our free American people, will long consent that the term "liberty" shall be defined for them by a bench of judges.

There is no danger of a revolution in this country, but there is grave discontent and unrest.

We stand against all tyranny, by the few or by the many. We stand for the rule of the many in the interest of us all.

MR. REPUBLICAN VOTER

Are You Willing to Have the Democratic Party Name the Republican Candidate for President?

This is just what the Democrats are attempting to do all over the country. The Democratic newspapers are breaking their necks to nominate Taft and are hysterical in their denunciation of Roosevelt.

WHY? Because the Democrats know THEY CAN BEAT TAFT in the election if he is nominated, and know THEY CANNOT BEAT ROOSEVELT. Every Democrat everywhere knows Roosevelt would be elected. This is why the Democratic newspapers and the Democratic politicians are breaking their necks to keep Roosevelt from getting the nomination—good business on their part.

Suppose Roosevelt would prove a weak candidate if nominated, would the Democrats oppose his nomination as they are now doing? Most certainly not. TO BEAT ROOSEVELT IN THE NOMINATION MEANS TO EVERY DEMOCRAT THAT THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY WILL WIN AT THE POLLS IN NOVEMBER. These are plain facts that you cannot get away from. Think it out for yourself.

An Old Saw, With A New Set.

We have now a large and complete stock of new goods at our Kratka store, and would be pleased to have all our old customers call and see us at the new store and post Office.

A FINE LINE OF BOTH HEAVY AND LIGHT SHOES.

Ask to look at our stock of Shoes. No trouble to show GOODS.

C.GOTZIAN&CO.

Higest market price paid for butter and eggs.

Singer Bros Kratka minn.

RHODA STORE

NEW GOODS, NEW PRICES.

A trial order will convince you, that this is the best Store to buy your goods.

I HAVE A FINE LINE OF gROCER IES.

BOOTS, SHOES, & COMPLET STOCK OF SUMMER FOOT WARE.

give me a call and get prices.

GEORGE SINGER. Prop. Rhoda Minn.

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail leaves Sunbeam, at 10:00 a. m. on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m

Wm.G. Hunt, p.m.

FARM LOANS.

Made Without Delay, at reasonable rates of interest.

Be sure and see me before you place your loan.

GEORGE ELDER.
McGinn Block,
Thief River Falls.

Built in Blood.

The winter palace of the czars was built in blood. Almost every stone of the walls and every square yard of the plaster lining them cost a life. Nicholas had given the order that the palace must be rebuilt in a year, and what was human life against the despot's will? Six thousand men were kept at work day and night, with the palace heated at 30 R. to dry the walls rapidly, while the temperature outside was often 30 degrees below zero R. The men could only work with ice packs on their heads, and, experiencing a daily change of 60 degrees, they died by the score every day. By the end of the year the death roll was some thousands, but the palace was finished.

A Wise Woman.

"Now, for $2," announced the star gazer, "I will furnish you with a philter which will make your husband love you to the exclusion of all others."

"I don't think I'll invest," decided the practical housewife. "But if you have a philter which will make him bring home some of his salary on pay day I'll allow you a percentage on all sums realized."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

McCall's Magazine and McCall Patterns
For Women

Have More Friends then any other magazine or patterns. McCall's is the reliable Fashion Guide monthly in one million one hundred thousand homes. Besides showing all the latest designs of McCall Patterns, each issue is brimful of sparkling short stories and helpful information for women.

Save Money and Keep in Style by subscribing for McCall's Magazine at once. Costs only 50 cents a year, including any one of the celebrated McCall Patterns free.

McCall Patterns Lead all others in style, fit, simplicity, economy and number sold. More dealers sell McCall Patterns than any other two makes combined. None higher than 15 cents. Buy from your dealer, or by mail from

McCALL'S MAGAZINE
236-246 W. 37th St., New York City

Note—Sample Copy, Premium Catalogue and Pattern Catalogue free, on request.

CORN - SEEDS TREES

Our 29th Annual Catalog is now ready and free for the asking. It is a work of art and full of good things.

See King Corn on front cover.

WILL'S PIONEER SEED HOUSE and NURSERY
OSCAR H. WILL & CO.
BISMARCK, NO. DAKOTA

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may [illegible] Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, [illegible] Washington, D. C.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Call and see us, when you are ready to make your final proof.

The weather has been very fine for the farmers the past week.

Mrs. Gunder Danielson of McIntosh is makeing an extended visit with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Tallak Dale and her brother Ben K. Kveste.

Mrs. H. G. Black and daughter Myrtle from Raymond Wash. arrived here last Friday for an extended visit with friends, and have decided to make their future home here.

Those who expect to make their final proof within eight years had better make their application soon or write to Steenerson and get an other eight years extension.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Kolestrand on Wednesday morning, a ten pound baby girl. Mrs. Sever Nelson was in attendance, and mother and baby are doing fine, and Dick is wareing the smile that does not fade.

As soon as we get our crops in we shall put in our telephone line to connect with the Deer Park line and then we will be in a better position to publish local news, from the different country localities.

Edward Singer was transacting business down at the county seat this week, and says that politicts are getting so warm down there that the men are so busy saveing the country that the wimen folks have to chop their own fire wood.

Walter McAndress will plant five acres of corn this year. He has the ground in fine condition and well manured; and we are looking for a test of corn as a paying crop from this piece of land, as it can not be said that the corn did not have a good chance.

Mr. and Mrs. K. Kretzer made this office a pleasant call yesterday. They are now nicely settled in their new home in the town of Deer Park and are well pleased with their Minnesota farm. Mr. Kretzers moved here last fall from the state of Washington.

There is a charge to be made in the line of mail route from Sunbeam to Lillo, and the driver will go by the way of the new steel bridge across the Clearwater near Green's place, and not go by the Roland post office, which will be served by mail on the Rudell route. This change was made necessary because the bridge at Roland across the Clearwater River is in an impassable condition.

The mail from Rudell to Lillo could not get through Tuesday owing to the broken bridge across the Clearwater River. That a whole neighborhood, a store keeper and a creamery's patrons would sit down and refuse to fix a bridge that could be easily repaired, and allow their mail service to be discontinued seems almost past belief, yet that is what the people of Roland are doing.

While we were out looking for stray cattle Webnesday morning a large timber wolf came out of the woods and trotted up to within a few feet of the buggy and showed a desire to get aqunainted with our dog, who prompty accepted the invertation and treated him as friendly as he would any neighbors dog. When we would get out of the buggy and set the dog on the wolf would run and he could not catch him, and when the dog would give up the chase and turn back the wolf would follow him back nearly to the buggy. At last we drove back near home and let the horse and buggy stand and ran to the house and got the shot gun, and discovered that we only had one shell with number six shot. When we drove back the wolf was as ready for a frolick with the dog as usal, but would come nearer than about ten roods so we tried tried to blind him with fine shot but only tickled his hide enough to make him run good and he quickly bid us adue.

FOR SALE: Five pigs, five weeks old. John Aisbrenet, Sec.18 Deer Park.

County Superintendent of schools Mostue visited with his family in Deer Park Sunday. Mr. Mostue has given very good services to this new part of the county and if he is a candidate for re-election he will have nearly the solid vote from the eleven townships.

Escapes An Awful Fate.

A thousand tongues could not express the gratitude of Mrs. J. E. Cox, of Joliet Ills., for her wonderful deliverance from an awful fate. "Typhoid pneumonia had left me with a dreadful cough," she writes. "Sometimes I had such awful coughing spells I thought I would die. I could get no help from doctor's treatment or other medicine till I used Dr. Kings New Discovery. But I owe my life to to this wonderful remedy for I scarsely cough at all now." Quick and safe, its the most reliable of all throat and lung medicine. Every bottle guaranteed. 50c and $1,00. Trial bottle free at All Druggists.

What Texans Admire,

Is hearty, vigorous life, according to Hugh Tallman, of San Antonio. "We find" he writes, "that Dr. King's New Life Pills surely put new life and energy into a person. Wife and I believe they are the best made." Excellent for stomach, liver or kidney troubles 25 cts. at All Druggists.

FARM FOR SALE.

The N. E. ¼ Section 14 Township 152 N. Range 40, Town of Deer Park. Price $16,00 per acre:

Henry Rovoold,
Alsask, Sask. Canada.

DRESS MAKING.

For plain and Farcy sewing apply to Mrs. Sam McMahn Student of the America College of dress making.

Kuehnel, Minn.

Notice To Fermers.

I have an a No. Jack, nine years old which will stand for service during the season of 1012, at my farm on section 8 town of Deer Park. M. E. Hyland.

Get the Wrong One.

Customer—Say, I found a nail in one of them cigars I bought here.

Dealer—Oh, yes! It must have been one of our prize Havanas. Some contain diamond scarfpins and some nails. You just happened to strike a nail.—New York Mail.

Kept Count.

"Willie, why didn't you come when I called you?"

"I didn't hear you, mother."

"But you must have heard."

"Honest, I did not."

"Willie Brown, it is wicked to talk that way."

"Well, I didn't hear you until you had called the third time."

It Would Keep.

The colonel beckoned to his orderly. "Smith, I wish you'd ride into that town yonder and get the correct time."

"Why, sir," Smith hesitated, "I haven't got a watch."

"A watch, a watch!" the colonel bellowed. "What in the name of sense do you want with a watch? Write it down on a piece of paper, man!"—Everybody's

CLEMENS THE BOY.

The Budding Humorist Was the Terror of His Mother.

HE YEARNED TO BE A PIRATE

Cruising the Mississippi, Fishing, Swimming and Marauding Struck Him as the Ideal Life—The Stick He Selected For His Own Whipping.

Mark Twain the boy was leader of a band of young incorrigibles, according to Albert Bigelow Paine, Twain's secretary and biographer, who in Harper's tells something of their juvenile goings on:

His mother declared that he gave her more trouble than all the other children put together.

"He drives me crazy with his didoes when he is in the house," she used to say, "and when he is out of it I am expecting every minute that some one will bring him home half dead."

He did, in fact, achieve the first of his "nine narrow escapes from drowning" about this time and was pulled out of the river one afternoon and brought home in a limp and unpromising condition. When with mullein tea and castor oil she had restored him to activity she said:

"I guess there wasn't much danger. People born to be hanged are safe in water."

She declared she was willing to pay somebody to take him off her hands for a part of each day and try to teach him manners.

Besides his mother, who had to contend with the bad boy, was his school teacher, a certain Miss Horr. Mr. Paine tells how unlike to a bed of roses was her lot.

Miss Horr received 25 cents a week for each pupil and opened her school with prayer, after which came a chapter of the Bible, with explanations and the rules of conduct. Then the A B C class was called, because its recital was a hand to hand struggle, requiring no preparation.

The rules of conduct that first day interested little Sam. He calculated how much he would need to trim in to sail close to the danger line and still avoid disaster. However, he made a miscalculation during the forenoon and received warning. A second offense would mean punishment. He did not mean to be caught the second time, but he had not learned Miss Horr yet and was presently startled by being commanded to go out and bring a stick for his own correction.

This was certainly disturbing. It was sudden, and then he did not know much about the selection of sticks. Jane Clemens had usually used her hand. It required a second command to get him headed in the right direction, and he was a trifle dazed when he got outside. He had the forests of Missouri to select from, but choice was difficult. Everything looked too big and competent. Even the smallest switch had a wiry, discouraging look. Across the way was a cooper shop with a good many shavings outside. One had blown across and lay just in front of him. It was an inspiration. He picked it up and, solemnly entering the schoolroom, meekly handed it to Miss Horr.

Perhaps Miss Horr's sense of humor prompted forgiveness, but discipline must be maintained.

"Samuel Langhorne Clemens," she said (he had never heard it all strung together in that ominous way), "I am ashamed of you! Jimmy Dunlap, go bring in a switch for Sammy." And Jimmy Dunlap went, and the switch was of a sort to give the little boy an immediate and permanent distaste for school. He informed his mother when he went home at noon that he did not care for school; that he had no desire to be a great man; that he preferred to be a pirate or an Indian and scalp or drown such people as Miss Horr.

Young Sam conceived the notion that a pirate's life would be joyous and, with a couple of pals, cruised the Mississippi.

Some of their expeditions were innocent enough. They often cruised up to Turtle island, about two miles above Hannibal, and spent the day feasting. You could have loaded a car with turtles and their eggs up there and there were quantities of mussels and plenty of fish. Fishing and swimming were their chief pastimes, with general marauding for adventure. Where the railroad bridge now ends on the Missouri side was their favorite swimming hole—that and along Bear creek, a secluded, limpid water with special interests of its own. Sometimes at evening they swam across to Glasscock's island, the rendezvous of Tom Sawyer's "Black Avengers" and the hiding place of Huck and Nigger Jim. Once, though this was considerably later, when he was sixteen, Sam Clemens swam across to the Illinois side and then turned and swam back again without landing, a distance of at least two miles as he had to go. He was seized with a cramp on the return trip. His legs became useless, and he was obliged to make the remaining distance with his arms. It was a hardy life they led, and it is not recorded that they ever did any serious damage, though they narrowly missed it sometimes.

A Close Relation

Bess—What do you think? Her aunt brought Tess only a string of cheap beads from Europe. Jess—Well, what more could she expect from a close relation?—Lippincott's.

Blessedness consists in the accomplishment of our desires and in our having only regular desires.—St. Augustine.

Take One Pill, then— Take it Easy.

Take What Pill? Why, a Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pill,

of course. Good for all kinds of pain. Used to relieve Neuralgia, Headache, Nervousness, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Kidney Pains, Lumbago, Locomotor Ataxia, Backache, Stomachache, Periodical Pains of women, and for pain in any part of the body.

"I have used Dr. Miles' medicines for over 12 years and find them excellent. I keep Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills in the house all the time, and would not think of taking a journey without them, no matter how short a distance I am going. I cannot praise them enough."

Miss Lou M. Churchill,
63 High St., Penacook, N. H.

At all druggists. 25 doses 25c.
MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

Finnan Haddie.

"You may be getting finnan haddie when you order it at your dealer's," said a buyer for a restaurant, "and you may not. Finnan haddie is smoked haddock. Haddock is of the same family as the cod. It resembles the codfish, but has a black lateral line. The lateral line of the codfish is white. The appearance of this line is not changed by the smoking, and if you take the trouble to glance down the sides of the fish that you are buying as finnan haddie you will often see that the line is white, not black. Cod may be just as good, as the dealer will perhaps tell you, but if you want finnan haddie that is doubtless what you want."—New York Sun.

Tried and Found Wanting.

"I've had so much bad luck," said the gloomy man, "that I lie awake half the night thinking about my troubles."

"The cure for that," they told him, "is to quit thinking of your own troubles. Think of other people's."

"I'll try it," he said.

Three months later they met him again.

"Well, how did it work?" they asked.

"Didn't do any good," he replied. "I lie awake all night now thinking of other people's troubles."

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

LUNG DISEASE

"After four in our family had died of consumption I was taken with a frightful cough and lung trouble, but my life was saved and I gained 87 pounds through using

DR. KING'S NEW DISCOVERY

W. R. Patterson, Wellington, Tex.
PRICE 50c and $1.00 AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

His Part.

"Who is the responsible person in this firm?" asked the brusque caller of the office boy.

"Can't tell you, sir," replied the pert lad, "but I'm the one who gets all the blame."

LUMBER FOR SALE.

I will have about [illegible] ft. of lumber for sale this Winter at $15.00 per thousand. Will take cattle in exchange.

Andrew Nilson.

W.G.Hunt.

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate Court Work.

NEW BANK.

FIRST STATE BANK,

OF OKLEE Lambert Post Office Minn.
NEW STATION ON DULUTH SOO LINE.

Your Business Solicited.

Directors: A. P. Tonpin, Pres. Samuel Giltean Vic. Pres.
Larry O'Niel, Abraham Fraquire, T. L. Cruzon.
J. A. Duffy, Cashier. T. L. Cruzon, Asstst. Cashier.

Let Us Tell You Something!

This Season we are offering the best line of Dry Goods that ever came into this section of the Country.

Don't Buy Elswhare, Until You Have Seen What We Have To Offer.

No Matter What Price you pay, WE Will please YOU.

VAUGHAN BROS. & CO.
Highlanding Minn.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's $50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day

Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were piloting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory? We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.

Our New Home. Capacity 20,000 Safes Annually.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men, who received our special selling inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars, it will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Ask for Catalogue 16 T.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.
CINCINNATI, OHIO

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT

IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonder*fully low prices* we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost.

BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the regular retail prices.

$10.00 Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof Self-healing Tires A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks, or Glass will not let the air out. A hundred thousand pairs sold last year.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D" also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

J. L. MEAD CYCLE COMPANY, CHICAGO, ILL.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

A CHECK TO RHEUMATISM

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Build Up the Blood and Overcome the Rheumatic Poisons.

Rheumatism defies any treatment that does not build up and purify the blood. The poisons of rheumatism are in the blood and it is only through the blood that the disease can be fought successfully.

Unless the blood is weak and impure, rheumatism cannot get a foothold. When it does the thin and impure blood is not strong enough to overcome the poisons alone. It must be strengthened and purified. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are the best blood-building medicine you can take. They make new blood with every dose and promptly check further progress of the disease. They make the blood so pure and strong that not the least trace of rheumatism remains.

Mr. A. Hamane, a farmer on R. F. D. No. 2, Eldridge, Iowa, says:

"I used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People for indigestion and rheumatism from which I suffered for over six years. As these attacks came on every spring, I think they were caused by impure blood. The rheumatism was always more severe in my ankles and knees and especially in my arms, when I had been husking corn or working hard. The pains were so severe that I could hardly sleep at night. I used liniments of many kinds, but they didn't do more than drive the pain to some other part of the body and I did not get any relief from the doctor's medicine.

"When I read about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in our weekly paper I made up my mind to try a medicine that had actually cured some one else. A few boxes cured me and I think so much of the pills that I keep them in the house to use as a tonic. My wife finds them strengthening and we think the pills are the best medicine for the blood."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are the blood's greatest aid in overcoming rheumatism, headaches, anemia, chlorosis, and after-effects of the grip and fevers.

A valuable booklet, "Diseases of the Blood," will be sent upon request.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes, $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

DOMESTIC AMENITIES.

Hubby—I've waited an hour for you to get your hat on straight.

Wifey—Well, I've waited longer than that for you to get your feet on straight.

FOR EVERY FAMILY MEDICINE CHEST

To the head of every family the health of its different members is most important, and the value of an agreeable laxative that is certain in its effect is appreciated. One of the most popular remedies in the family medicine chest is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin that is known to druggists and physicians as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This preparation is mild and gentle in its action on the bowels, yet positive in its effect. A dose of Syrup Pepsin at night means relief next morning while its tonic properties tone up and strengthen the muscles of stomach liver and bowels so that these organs are able in a short time to again perform their natural functions without help.

Druggists everywhere sell Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in 50c and $1.00 bottles. If you have never tried this simple, inexpensive, yet effective remedy, write to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., and ask for a sample bottle. Dr. Caldwell will be glad to send it without any expense to you whatever.

Didn't Want Him to Laugh.

Hewitt—You would make a donkey laugh.

Jewett—Cut out your hilarity.

To remove nicotine from the teeth, disinfect the mouth and purify the breath after smoking, Paxtine is a boon to all. At druggists, 25c a box or sent postpaid on receipt of price by The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass.

Murders It.

Hewitt—He never speaks correctly.

Jewett—No; he is a regular slaughter house of the English language.

Don't make shipwreck of your health when a course of Garfield Tea can cure you of indigestion.

The energy some men waste in making fools of themselves would make a fortune in any other line of endeavor.

DO YOU HAVE CREAM TO SELL? Write KIRSVOLD CREAMERY CO., Minneapolis, for prices and tags. They guarantee return of cans and satisfaction to you for every shipment.

As soon as a woman discovers that she is unable to reform her husband she begins on her neighbors.

Wrecks of the Long Island Coast

Heroic Battles of the Life-saving Service

By Percy M. Cushing

COPYRIGHT BY THE RIDGWAY CO.

FROM the door of the harbor of New York, reaching northeast into the Atlantic for one hundred and twenty miles, lies the narrow finger of Long Island. On the south side of this island, running perhaps two-thirds its length and separated from it by shallow bays, crawls a series of sand-ribbed beaches that are the graveyards of ships and men. These beaches bulwark Long Island proper from the fury of the sea in winter, and since the early days of Atlantic commerce they have been the final resting-places of countless craft and crews.

To protect the lives of seafaring men from the treachery of this coast the United States government has built and manned thirty-three life-saving stations along its length. The crews of these number two hundred and sixty-four men, seven men and a keeper, or captain, to each station.

On the eighth day of February, 1895, the thermometer at the weather bureau in New York city stood at zero. In Florida the temperature was the lowest ever recorded there. It was the coldest day of the year from the Gulf to Maine, and a screaming hurricane was raging along the entire Atlantic seaboard.

The Louis V. Place, a three-masted schooner, sailed from Baltimore for New York on January 28th. On board were Captain William Squires and seven men.

The Place left the mouth of Chesapeake Bay Monday, February 4th. The wind was strong from the southwest and a heavy swell was running. An hour after reaching the open sea the gale hauled to the northward and freshened alarmingly, while the sky became overcast and all signs of a storm were evident. At daybreak the storm had become a reality, and the sails of the Place were close reefed, with the exception of the foresail, which was so stiff with ice that it could not be handled by the sailors.

As the heavy seas drenched over the forward part of the schooner they froze to everything they touched.

Through the day and night all hands were kept on watch ready for emergency, while the vessel labored nearly helpless in the bitter tempest. On the morning of the sixth she was discovered to be leaking, and Captain Squires realized that the situation was grave. He held the craft as well as possible to her course, and on the next day she met the full fury of the hurricane, which added the last touches to her desperate condition.

By this time her crew were in a helpless condition, tottering about the decks, worn out from sleepless watching and dulled by the fearful cold.

There was but one thing left to do. Captain Squires believed his ship to be near Sandy Hook. If the water was not too deep he could anchor and chance riding out the storm. He cast the lead and found eight fathoms. Then he called the crew aft, told them his intention, gave each a double portion of grog, and sent them forward to the cables.

But the ice had bound the anchors so deep that, try as they might in their weakened condition, the men could not chop them out, and after futile attempts the captain called them aft again. Realizing now that the prospect was hopeless, he told them to shift for themselves.

They had not long to wait. Lifting above the rush of the gale, the crash of breakers soon came from ahead, and the sound told all that their fate was at hand. A moment later the Place lay hammering across the bar just east of the Lone Hill life-saving station on Great South Beach, Long Island coast. Gigantic waves combed her decks from stem to stern, and her crew fled to the shrouds for their lives.

The life-savers of the Lone Hill station had gone eastward earlier in the morning to assist the men of the Blue Point station in landing the crew from another schooner which had stranded during the night. Consequently there was no one at Lone Hill save one man, Surfman Saunders, who had been left on guard. Hardly had the Place struck, when she was discovered by Saunders. He telephoned the Blue Point station immediately, then called the Point o' Woods station to the west.

In five minutes the Lone Hill and Blue Point crews, having finished with the wreck of the first schooner, were fighting their way back westward in the face of the hurricane.

The Place lay three hundred yards from the beach on the outer bar, giant gray seas sweeping half way up her masts as they broke astern of her. At times she was invisible in the scud and the leaden rush of the snow. Through lulls in the storm the life-savers on the beach occasionally caught glimpses of her crew in the port mizzen rigging where they were clinging for their lives. There appeared to be eight in all. Two stood on the crosstrees, six in the shrouds.

The three life-saving crews at once grasped this desperate chance. A surf gun was placed in position, but before it could be fired, a cry of horror went up from those on shore. Through a rift in the whirling storm, the two men lowest in the shrouds of the doomed vessel were seen to have vanished in a mountainous sea that swept her fore and aft.

An instant later the gun was fired, carrying a line across the foretopmast stay out of reach of the men who remained in the mizzen rigging. Other lines were at once fired, falling almost within arm's reach of the shipwrecked sailors, but they made no effort to secure them. Evidently they were so stiffened from the intense cold that they were unable to move from their positions.

Noon came. The snow flung along the beach in blinding sheets. So heavy was the wind that the crews of the life-saving stations were forced to crouch down at times to keep from being blown from their feet.

At one o'clock in the afternoon another shot was fired, but the line did not fall aboard the vessel. Almost immediately the storm shut in closely, concealing the Place from view until late afternoon. When the next lull came it was seen that there were only four men left in the rigging. Two of the six last seen had gone to join those who had perished before them.

Hope of a rescue before morning was gone. The lives of the four men who still remained were in the hands of God. Could they live throughout the frightful night? None might say. The watchers on shore at intervals burned signal lights to let the miserable wretches on the Place know they had not been abandoned.

At last day came. Twenty-four hours had elapsed since the schooner stranded, and those on shore strained their eyes in the ragged light to learn the toll the night had taken.

It was soon apparent. But two men remained alive. Two others had been claimed by the storm.

The life-savers were themselves in a sad plight. For more than thirty hours they had been on the beach in clothes that were little more than masses of ice, without food save pails of coffee that were occasionally hurried from the station. Often they tottered unsteadily in their frozen oilskins as they went about their duties. But reeling, staggering, they placed the surf gun and fired a shot which fell within a few feet of the two poor fellows in the rigging of the schooner. But the men made no effort to get the line.

Still hopeful, another shot was fired, laying its line across the hull of the ship. And then the men in the rigging appeared to give heed for the first time to the efforts that were being made to rescue them. Very feebly and slowly one man descended the shrouds. The tide had fallen off, and the section of the ship where the line lay was above water. Working his way to the line, the man pulled on it weakly, but his efforts were futile. In a few moments he crawled back to the shrouds.

The breeches-buoy was then abandoned. The short daylight died. Night came on again and the gale abated slightly. There was nothing left but the surf boat. The feat was at least possible now, for the sea was lower.

It was a splendid battle and a fearful one. But grim nerve triumphed. Half swamped, the surf boat lay alongside the shattered schooner; the two men in the rigging reeled to the rail of the stranded vessel and toppled lifelessly into it. The curtain fell on one of the grimmest tragedies of the service.

The rescued men were William Stevens and Soren Nelson. They were nearly dead. Nelson's feet were frozen solid in his boots. During the forty-eight hours they clung to the rigging of the ill-fated craft, while the life-savers battled to save them, they had fought death by beating each other's faces with their fists to shake off the lethargy of the cold. Stevens recovered, but poor Nelson died after having his legs amputated and lingering miserably for six months.

The wreck of the schooner Place is a typical example of what the men in the United States life-saving service are called upon to face.

The night of February 21, 1904, was memorable because of its extreme cold and wildness. During the height of the storm, shortly before midnight, the schooner Benjamin C. Cromwell of Portland, Maine, stranded just east of the Bellport life-saving station, Great South Beach. Three crews of life-saving stations hurried to the scene to take seven men from the rigging of the wrecked vessel. All efforts to accomplish this, however, failed, and at noon of the day following the night of stranding, the vessel's masts went by the board, with the exception of the foremast, in which all the crew save one had taken refuge.

This single man who had not followed the example of his comrades was washed overboard when the after masts fell, and caught and clung to a piece of wreckage that was swept away simultaneously with himself.

At the best, the chance of the wretched sailor who had been washed away on the floating wreckage was almost hopeless. The life-savers clustered on the shore, powerless to aid, watching with eyes of horror for the moment his lifeless body should be crushed on the beach or ground to pulp in the grinding wreckage. At this critical moment when the hearts of strong men stood still, a figure sprang from the huddle of men on the beach, wrapped a line about its waist and ran to the edge of the surf. Surfman Frank Raynor of the Blue Point station was about to do what no keeper in the life-saving service would have been authorized to ask him to risk. The service demands courage, but it does not demand suicide. Keeper Rorke of the Blue Point station might have ordered Raynor back to the beach, but the venture was too heroic, too splendid; the keeper could not find it in his heart.

For a moment Raynor stood in the edge of the foaming whirl of icy spray, waiting his chance, half naked, for he had thrown off his outer clothing. Then it came. As the bit of wreckage to which the sailor clung plunged into the mass of crashing debris in the breakers, Raynor dashed forward, fighting his way inch by inch through the roaring maelstrom of water and timbers, dodging plunging beams, diving beneath shattered spars that, rising on giant combers, threatened to crush him. At times he was hidden from view for minutes.

At last he was almost within reach of the drowning sailor and in that instant he was swept beneath the wreckage by a ponderous sea. It looked as though he were lost, but at the crucial moment Albert Latham, also of the Blue Point station, went to the aid of his comrade. Before Latham could reach him, Raynor came to the surface just in time to seize the now unconscious man. The next second Latham, tearing wildly through the surf, was at his side and rendering assistance. Together the two hauled the exhausted men to the beach, while a cheer went up from their comrades on shore.

In the brief ten minutes consumed in this rescue the ill-fated Cromwell had broken to pieces, her foremast falling into the sea with the six remaining men upon it. The life-savers flew to their gun and tried to shoot a line across the wreck of the mast, but failed, and one by one the men, save one, fell exhausted from it and were drowned before their eyes.

The lone survivor held his place in miraculous fashion while the gale and current swept him down the shore at the edge of the breakers. Hope for him was given up, when again Raynor and Latham dashed to the front. Though exhausted and numbed, they plunged into the sea once more in time to reach the man just as he was torn from his grasp on the mast.

Two of the most tragic wrecks that ever occurred on the Long Island coast took place within four years of each other, one at the extreme outward end of the island, the other far to the westward.

The loss of the Italian bark Ajace on Rockaway Shoals, March 4, 1881, with all her ship's company save one, cost thirteen lives, and brought to light the story of a despair so terrible that it had driven hardened sailors to suicide. The other wreck, that of the full-rigged ship Circassian, which took place December 20, 1876, involved a loss of twenty-eight lives and was one of the saddest in the history of the service.

Long Island is but a tiny speck on the vast ribbon of sea and lake coast patrolled by the life-saving service and its wrecks compose a correspondingly small proportion of those that the life-saving crews are called upon to face each year. Some of the most tragic struggles that the service has won and that have occurred along the Jersey and Massachusetts coasts, and the lives that went out on the storm-winds in these battles have not always been those of the shipwrecked. In Washington there is a long list of the watchers of the beaches who died with their hip-boots on in the performance of duty.

20 Pretty Rooms in this FREE BOOK

—don't you want to see them?

Peep into other people's new homes and get the latest ideas for your own decorating. Our book tells about the FREE Color Plans our expert designers will send you for any rooms you wish to decorate. You will be glad to know more about

Alabastine

The Beautiful Wall Tint

so exquisite in color and quality it is used in the most expensive modern homes though it costs far less than wall paper or paint. Kalsomine colors appear harsh and crude beside the soft-hued Alabastine tints. Goes furthest on the walls and is easiest to use. Full directions on every package—simply mix with cold water and put on. Does not chip, peel or rub off. 16 Beautiful Colors and—

With our Color Plans you can easily have the most artistic home in your neighborhood.

Send for our FREE BOOK

Full 5 lb. pkg. White 50c.
Regular Tints 55c.

Alabastine Company
56 Grandville Road, Grand Rapids, Mich.
New York City, Desk 6, 105 Water St.

No, Cordelia, the grass widow is anything but green.

A pure, mild, and potent laxative, Garfield Tea! All druggists.

Fell.

Mrs. Murphy—So your son Dinnis fell from his airyoplane? Sure, Oi thought he was learnin' to fly in a corrispondence school.

Mrs. Casey—He was, but he shtopped short in the middle of a lesson.—Lippincott's.

A Quarter Century

Before the public. Over Five Million Free Samples given away each year. The constant and increasing sales from samples proves the genuine merit of Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder to be shaken into the shoes for Tired, Aching, Swollen Tender feet. Sample free. Address, Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

The Bunco Game.

"You can't fool all the people all the time."

"You don't need to; if you can fool half of the people some of the time you can make a good living."

"One ought, every day at least, to hear a little song, read a good poem, see a fine picture and, if it were possible, to speak a few reasonable words."—Goethe.

Where the Leak Was.

Boarder (excitedly)—There's a rumor afloat—"

Mistress—Jennie, turn off the water in room 4!—Judge.

Revenge is Sweet.

"The drinks is on me," said the little man with the greasy vest. "I'm feelin' good and I don't care what happens."

"What'smatter?" said the barkeep. "Birthday?"

"No," replied the little man. "I took my wife down to the river to the Echo rocks and she's so durn mad she's speechless. For the first time in her life she didn't get in the last word. Here's to the echo."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

What Every Woman Knows.

A Cleveland school teacher writes that she asked her class what was the difference between the expressions, "a while" and "a time." Nobody seemed to have any ideas on the subject. Finally the light of intelligence was seen to shine in the eyes of one little boy, and the teacher called upon him to save the intellectual honor of the class.

"I know, teacher!" he cried eagerly. "When papa says he's going out for a while, mamma says she knows he's going out for a time!"

That's one way of looking at it.

What's the Use of Cooking When you don't have to?

Post Toasties

are skillfully and fully cooked at the factory—ready to serve direct from package with cream and sugar if you like.

These thin bits of toasted corn (sold by grocers) are crisp, delicious, satisfying and convenient.

"The Memory Lingers"

Made by
Postum Cereal Company, Ltd.
Pure Food Factories
Battle Creek, Mich.

EVERY HERD CLEAN

TUBERCULOSIS STAMPED OUT OF HIGH GRADED STOCK IN MINNESOTA.

ACCORDING TO DR. WARD.

No Other State in the Union Is Able to Make so Good a Showing—Many Finn Herds are Shipped Away.

St. Paul.—Tuberculosis has been practically eliminated from every pure bred herd of cattle in the state of Minnesota, according to Dr. S. H. Ward, secretary of the live stock sanitary board and in active charge of the fight against disease among live stock of the state.

The owners of pure bred herds have been kept track of through items in the farm journals, through the records of breeding associations and in other manner so that it is not believed any herd of pure bred cattle has escaped the tuberculosis test. All of these herds have been found free this spring from the dread disease of tuberculosis.

This cannot be said of any other state in the union according to dairymen who have kept track of the progress of efforts to keep cattle free from disease. In other states the percentage of disease does not run more than 6 of 7 per cent, but no state, so far as has been discovered can claim entire elimination of the disease. This result has been obtained by constant work during the last two years and a quarter, including fights in the legislature which was asked to abolish the regulation of the tuberculosis test. Inasmuch as it is required by most states that no cattle may be imported for breeding puroses unless they are certified to be free from tuberculosis, the Minnesota authorities deemed it wise to clean up the herds in the state.

According to law a small amount is allowed the owners of condemned animals found suffering with tuberculosis and the state department has power to order the killing of animals which respond to the test. Owners of these animals, especially dairymen about the larger cities, organized a fight against which is rapidly developing into a dairy ile exhibition was held at South St. Paul at a packing plant in the presence of a legislative committee. The examination of the carcass of the animals showed that the test had been correct. The fight on the law then died out.

That farmers in the northwest, which is rapidly developing into a dairy country, realize the importance of buying their stock in a state which is free from tuberculosis in pure bred stock is shown in a recent shipment of several trainloads of tested cattle from South St. Paul for the west.

One train of 248 tested cows went to the state of Washington where they were distributed along the Yakima valley. Other consignments have gone to Nebraska, Colorado, the Dakotas and Montana. In fact New York and Pennsylvania often come to Minnesota for dairying cattle.

The fight against disease in live stock has been equally successful in the case of glanders in horses, and this disease, although not stamped out, is rapidly diminishing over the state.

The number of animals condemned on account of this disease the past year was about half the number the year before. There were seventy-three horses killed in 1911 and fifteen during the first three months of 1912.

Hog cholera is checked in the same way. The live stock sanitary board helps in the distribution of serum for hog cholera and promptly on receipt of notice of the disease anywhere in the state sends a special man to look after the trouble.

SWAMP LANDS FOR STATE

C. L. Hilton Returning From Washington With Patents to 100,000 Acres.

St. Paul.—Assistant Attorney-General Clifford L. Hilton, who has been in Washington, D. C., several weeks, is back with patents to more than 100,000 acres of swamp land located in northern part of the state. The land was turned over to the state by the government for reclamation and much of it will be dredged under contracts now awarded.

Mr. Hilton also effected a settlement of a land dispute between the state and the Land Immigration company, involving more than 3,000 acres in the Itasca state park. The park was ceded to the state by the government in 1892 and part of it was claimed by the immigration company under a grant made to the Northern Pacific railroad.

More than 100 land contests have been settled by Mr. Hilton during his trip involving the rights of squatters in Cass and Itasca counties.

SHORT SHIP FAIR DATES.

First Southern Minnesota Meeting to Open at New Ulm.

Mankato.—The dates for the county fairs in the Short Ship circuit have been fixed as follows: New Ulm September 5, 6 and 7; St. Peter, September 9, 10 and 11; Mankato, September 12, 13 and 14; Tyler, September 16, 17 and 18; Marshall, September 19, 20 and 21; Redwood Falls, September 23, 24 and 25; Canby, September 26, 27 and 28.

BANK SHORTAGE DISCOVERED

WINNEBAGO INSTITUTION ARE CLOSED BY OFFICER.

Vice President of State Bank and $2,000 Missing—Suspension May be Only Temporary.

Winnebago.—Kinsey S. Chase, of Faribault, state bank examiner, has temporarily closed the Bank of Commerce of this place and is now making an examination of its books and accounts.

This action was taken because of the absence of H. W. Parker, vice president of the bank, who left here on Friday afternoon, saying he was going to St. Paul to attend a lodge meeting. The examiner was informed that Parker just before his departure cashed a Bank of Commerce draft for $2,000 at the First National bank here and was supposed to have taken the money with him.

Whether a further shortage will be shown at the bank has not as yet been determined. Special Examiner Regan is coming tonight to assist his chief in the examination.

Inquiries have been made in St. Paul and also in Minneapolis, where Parker has a brother, but nothing has been learned of the missing man's whereabouts. The brother has arrived here to help clear the mystery.

Vice President Parker has been with the bank many years and has had the respect and confidence of all patrons. He is about 40 years of age and has a wife and three children here.

The Bank of Commerce was organized as a private bank in 1903 and became a state bank the following year. It has a capital stock of $20,000, a surplus of $3,000 and deposits of $210,000. John Sharp is president and Glenn Bassett, cashier.

It is expected the suspension will be only temporary. The bank examiner has not progressed sufficiently with the examination to be willing to make a statement and the extent of the alleged shortage is a matter only of conjecture.

BIDS FOR STATE JOBS.

Contracts for Buildings at Faribault And Owatonna to Be Let Soon.

St. Paul.—Bids were opened by the State Board of Control last week for the new administration building at the school for the deaf at Faribault and for the babies' cottage at the state public school at Owatonna. There were four concerns bidding on the general construction of the Faribault building and two on the Owatonna cottage. The mechanical equipment was sought by fourteen firms.

Because of certain reservations in some of the bids, it was not possible to award the contracts, but they will be made out soon. William A. Neill & Son, of Faribault, offered the lowest bid on the general construction of the Faribault building, $137,958. Hannel Brothers & Anderson of Owatonna were the lowest bidders on the construction of the babies' cottage. The Healy Plumbing & Heating company, St. Paul, bid the lowest on the heating, and the Gorman Electric company of St. Paul was the lowest bidder on the electrical equipment of the administration building at the school for the deaf.

CALL MARSHAL A ROBBER

Miners Allege Range Official Held Them Up With Gun.

Duluth.—Joe Graham, village marshal of Calumet, on the iron range, is under arrest, charged with having held up and robbed H. Rose and C. Anderson of $7. The robbery is alleged to have been committed at the point of a gun last night, and the arrest was made today by Sheriff Gunderson in Grand Rapids.

The prisoner denies his guilt, and says he did not see his accusers before until tonight. The men claim they were coming from work on the night shift at one of the mines when the police chief relieved them of their cash and sent them on their way, threatening them with dire results if they made an outcry.

OFFERS TO SELL PLANT.

Edison Electric Company Makes Proposition to Duluth.

Duluth.—The Edison Electric company, which furnishes electric light for Duluth, offers to sell its plant to the city. It is proposed by the electric company that a board of appraisors be selected to fix the price. The Edison Electric company will select one man, the city will select another, and the third man will be selected by the two appraisers already named. At the last municipal election the people voted to buy the present electric plant, or to build a new one. The proposition of the electric company was sent to the Common Council tonight, and probably will be accepted. It was referred to a committee.

TOO NEAR THE ENGINE.

Good Thunder Man Gets Badly Mixed With His Machinery.

Good Thunder.—Albert Jossin was engaged in operating his wood-sawing outfit, and was standing close to the engine, when a projecting set pin on one of the pulleys caught his trousers, instantly winding them tight and drawing him into the flywheel. His right leg was broken below the knee, and his hip was injured. Several fragments of bone had to be removed.

J. J. HILL WILL HELP

OFFERS $8 AN ACRE TO LAND OWNERS WHO WILL TILL SOIL UNDER EXPERT.

RAPS SCHOOL SYSTEM.

Says It Teaches Things of No Benefit in Real Life, and Cites Example—Promises Depot for Bemidji.

Bemidji.—Coming from St. Paul in a special train for the purpose of keeping a promise given last winter that he would give a public talk in Bemidji, James J. Hill told 2,000 persons in the armory here that northern Minnesota was destined to become a dairying country; that the Great Northern would erect at once a modern, brick passenger station here, and that next year he would pay a dozen different land owners in this vicinity $8 an acre to farm their own land under the direction of his experts.

Mr. Hill came alone, except for his secretary and two superintendents, who he picked up on the way. He was taken by members of the Commercial club for a ride through the farming district. He frequently had the machine stopped so that he might make a closer inspection of crops, soil and stock. He became so interested that he was late in arriving at the dinner given by the Commercial club directors.

Can Double Minnesota Yield.

In his address Mr. Hill said that he had been a resident of Minnesota for fifty-six years, and that he had long studied farming. He then repeated his warning that the soil must be conserved, or ruin or starvation itself might be the penalty. He declared that the present grain yield in Minnesota might easily be doubled, and explained that instead of his previous plan of offering prizes he had decided to pay farmers for farming correctly. He said that in twenty places in the Northwest tracts of five acres each are being tilled this year under this arrangement.

"But those fellows," said Mr. Hill, "have got to do that farming right—there is to be no ifs and ands about it. They have got to farm as we tell them, or we shall pull up stakes and move."

Mr. Hill diverted from his hobby of farming long enough to make a frank criticism of the public school system of today.

Children Being Defrauded.

"The trouble is that they are teaching them things that are going to be of no benefit to them in real life. The pupils are spending the only years of their life being taught stuff that they can't use, and so far as the children are concerned it is a fraud upon them. I said to the auditor in our auditing department the other day, where about 900 young people are employed, 'What percentage are high school graduates?' and he said he didn't know, but that there never was an over-supply, for the first thing he did with an applicant was to give them a simple problem in division, and that most of them failed on it. Why, the little red school house could do better than that."

Mr. Hill urged the construction of a road around Lake Bemidji, and congratulated northern Minnesota upon her enterprise in developing the farming industry.

ELLSWORTH ANNOUNCES.

Mankato Man Files Candidacy for a Seat in Congress.

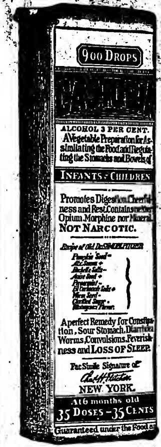
St. Paul.—Hon. Franklin S. Ellsworth, arriving in St. Paul late from his home in Mankato, filed his candidacy for the Republican nomination as representative to congress from the Second district.

Franklin S. Ellsworth.

Mr. Ellsworth ran two years ago for the position, being beaten at that time by W. S. Hammond, the only Democrat in the Minnesota delegation.

Freeborn to Vote on President.

Albert Lea.—The republican county committee has issued a call for the county convention to elect fourteen delegates to the state convention and the same number to the first district convention. The county convention will be held on Monday, May 13, the caucuses to be held on Saturday, May 11, from 5 to 9 o'clock. A motion by H. H. Dunn to adopt the Caswell plan for a preferential primary for the purpose of allowing the voters to express their choice for a candidate for president was adopted.



900 DROPS
ALCOHOL 3 PER CENT.
A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of INFANTS CHILDREN
Promotes Digestion Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral.
NOT NARCOTIC.
A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.
Fac Simile Signature of
NEW YORK.
At 6 months old
35 DOSES – 35 CENTS
Guaranteed under the Food and

Exact Copy of Wrapper.

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is Pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. It cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. It relieves Teething Troubles, cures Constipation and Flatulency. It assimilates the Food, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

In Use For Over 30 Years

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

Knew Something About It.

The small boy of the household was not notably proficient in sacred lore, but when his sister asked him, "Where was Solomon's temple?" he indignantly resented the supposed impeachment of his stock of information, and retorted:

"Don't you think I know anything?"

She assured him that she did not doubt that he knew, but urged him to state for her benefit.

Though not crediting her sincerity, he finally exclaimed, curtly:

"On the side of his head, of course, where other folk's are! D'you s'pose I'm a fool?"

ERUPTION COVERED BODY

"Three years ago this winter I had a breaking out that covered my whole body. It itched so it seemed as if I should go crazy. It first came out in little pimples on my back and spread till it covered my whole body and limbs down to my knees, also my arms down to my elbows. Where I scratched it made sores, and the terrible itching and burning kept me from sleeping. I tried several remedies all to no purpose. Then I concluded to try the Cuticura Remedies. I used the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, also the Resolvent, for about four months, and they completely cured me of eczema. I have had no return of the disease since. I never had a good night's rest after the skin eruption first broke out till I commenced using the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I had only used them a few days before I could see they were beginning to heal, and the terrible itching was gone.

"Those that lived in the house at the time know how I suffered, and how the Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured me. I never take a bath without using the Cuticura Soap, and I do not believe there are better remedies for any skin disease than the Cuticura Soap and Ointment." (Signed) Miss Sarah Calkins, Waukegan, Ill., Mar. 16, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Having Fun.

The brilliant wit of the bar looked at the moon-faced farm laborer and winked at his friends and whispered, "Now, we'll have some fun."

"Have you been married?" he began.

"Ye-e-es," stammered the laborer, "once."

"Whom did you marry?"

"A w-w-woman, sir."

"Come, my good man, of course it was a woman. Did you ever hear of any one marrying a man?"

"Ye-e-es, sir; my sister did."

Kill the Flies Now and Prevent disease. A DAISY FLY KILLER will do it. Kills thousands. Lasts all season. 15 cents each at dealers or six sent prepaid for $1.00. H. SOMERS, 150 De Kalb Av., Brooklyn, N.Y.

An Ananias.

"G. W. Smith says he loves to live in the suburbs in winter."

"Humph! And the rascal was born on Washington's birthday and named after him, too."—Judge.

Stop the Pain.

The hurt of a burn or a cut stops when Cole's Carbolisalve is applied. It heals quickly and prevents scars. 25c and 50c by druggists. For free sample write to J. W. Cole & Co., Black River Falls, Wis.

When the nervous man reaches the top, he is apt to look around for the fire escapes.

Before retiring, a cup of Garfield Tea! For good digestion and continued good health.

Don't kick till you know just where the shoe pinches.

A SURE SIGN.

Mrs. Newwed—I heard the new cook cussing and swearing something awful in the kitchen this morning.

Mr. Newwed—That's all right. She's beginning to feel at home.

Assuming That.

Brown—What reason have you for hating Blank?

Smith—Well you see, he's a relative of mine, and—

Brown—Yes, yes, I know, but what other reason?—Harper's Bazar.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle.

Many a man is kept busy during his spare time in explaining things to his wife.

Dyspeptics, despair not! While there's Garfield Tea, there's hope.

A fellow can make a hit with a girl by telling how much he misses her.

Why Rent a Farm

and be compelled to pay to your landlord most of your hard-earned profits? Own your own farm. Secure a Free Homestead in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, or purchase land in one of these districts and bank a profit of $10.00 or $12.00 an acre every year.

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Land purchased 3 years ago at $10.00 an acre has recently changed hands at $25.00 an acre. The crops grown on these lands warrant the advance. You can

Become Rich

by cattle raising, dairying, mixed farming and grain growing in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Free homestead and pre-emption areas, as well as land held by railway and land companies, will provide homes for millions. 33

Adaptable soil, healthful climate, splendid schools and churches, good railways.

For settlers' rates, descriptive literature "Last Best West," how to reach the country and other particulars, write to Sup't of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or to the Canadian Government Agent.

Chas. Pilling, Clifford Blk, Grand Forks, N.D.
J. M. MacLachlan, Box 197, Watertown, S.D.
E. T. Holmes, 315 Jackson St., St. Paul, Minn.
Geo. A. Hall, 125 2d St., Milwaukee, Wis.

IF YOU WANT TO BEGIN OR EXPAND business write the Board of Trade, Weyburn, Saskatchewan. We want industries, retailers and wholesalers. Electric power, water, fuel cheap. Builders with capital needed. Population doubled this year.

WANTED—Local Representative for "LABOR AGENCY." We want a man of ability. Must have good common school education and references as to character. National Employment Bureau, Wheeling, W. Va.

Legal Advice 50c Prompt, reliable, authentic, confidential by experienced lawyers. One question, 25 cts. Any troubles, debts, damages? Satisfaction guaranteed. Circular free. LEGAL AID BUREAU, ALLIANCE, OHIO

MANITOBA WHEAT LANDS offer best homes and investments on earth. Not one crop failure since first settlement 25 years ago. Free information furnished by Campbell, Simpson & Onrton, Dauphin, Man.

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 19--1912.

FOR THE WOMAN WHO THINKS AND FEELS.

Some women complain that they periodically suffer from dull and heavy feelings, or dizziness in the head, nervousness, pain and bearing-down feelings which should not occur to the normal healthy woman. But most every woman is subject to these pains at some time in her life, due to abnormal conditions in life, such as corsets, over-taxed strength, bad air, poor or improper food, wet feet, sluggish liver, etc. A regulator and female tonic made from native medicinal roots with pure glycerin, and without the use of alcohol, called has proven its value in thousands of cases, like the following:

DR. PIERCE'S FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION,

Mrs. Dona M. Martin, of Auburn, Nebr., Route 1, Box 84, says: "I thought I would write you in regard to what your medicines have done for me. I have used them for thirty years for female trouble and general weakness with the very best result, and they have saved me hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. I buy the 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery' and take them together. I never was disappointed in your remedies and take pleasure in recommending them to any suffering lady. I am now almost fifty years old; at forty-five I took your medicines, both kinds, and I passed that period very easily and left me fat and healthy. I feel like a young girl. "If any lady cares to write me, I will gladly tell her more about the good work of your medicines."

Mrs. Martin.

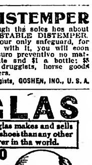
Dr. Pierce's Great Family Doctor Book, The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, newly revised up-to-date edition—of 1008 pages, answers hosts of delicate questions which every woman, single or married, ought to know. Sent free in cloth binding to any address on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps, to cover cost of wrapping and mailing only.

SPOHN'S DISTEMPER CURE

HORSE SALE DISTEMPER

You know what you sell or buy through the sales has about one chance in fifty to escape SALE STABLE DISTEMPER. "SPOHN'S" is your true protection, your only safeguard, for as sure as you treat all your horses with it, you will soon be rid of the disease. It acts as a sure preventive no matter how they are "exposed." 50 cents and $1 a bottle; $5 and $10 dozen bottles, at all good druggists, horse goods houses, or delivered by the manufacturers.

SPOHN MEDICAL CO., Chemists and Bacteriologists, GOSHEN, IND., U. S. A.



W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES

W. L. Douglas makes and sells more $4.00 shoes than any other manufacturer in the world.

$2.50 $3.00 $3.50 $4.00 $4.50 & $5.00

FOR MEN, WOMEN AND BOYS

W. L. Douglas $4.00, $4.50 & $5.00 shoes equal Custom Bench Work costing $6.00 to $8.00

One pair of W. L. Douglas $2.00 or $2.50 Boys' shoes will positively outwear two pairs of other makes.

Why does W. L. Douglas make and sell more fine shoes than any other manufacturer in the world? BECAUSE: he stamps his name and price on the bottom and guarantees the value, which protects the wearer against high prices and inferior shoes of other makes. BECAUSE: they are the most economical and satisfactory; you can save money by wearing W. L. Douglas shoes. BECAUSE: they have no equal for style, fit and wear. DON'T TAKE A SUBSTITUTE FOR W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES. If your dealer cannot supply W. L. Douglas shoes, write W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass., for catalog. Shoes sent everywhere delivery charges prepaid. Fast Color Eyelets Used.

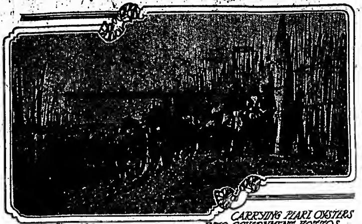
The Pearl Fisheries of Ceylon

By HUGH M. SMITH

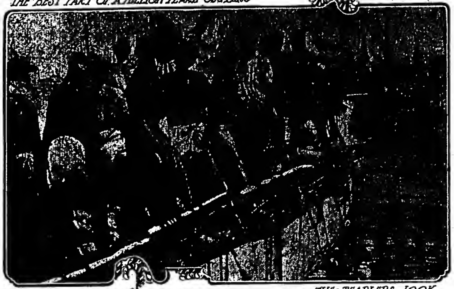
UNITED STATES DEPUTY COMMISSIONER OF FISHERIES

AN ARAB DIVER FROM THE PERSIAN GULF, WITH NOSE CLIP.

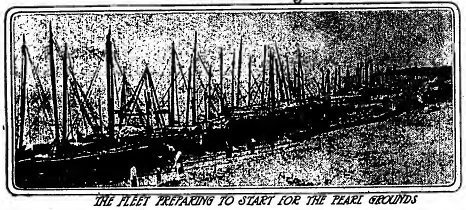
THE BEST PART OF A MILLION PEARL OYSTERS



CARRYING PEARL OYSTERS INTO GOVERNMENT KOTTOS



THE PEARLERS LOOK LIKE PIRATICAL CREWS



THE FLEET PREPARING TO START FOR THE PEARL GROUNDS

AS SOON as a traveler sets foot on the shores of Ceylon he comes under the subtle charm of the land, and is quickly imbued with the feeling that it would be most incongruous if such a climate did not produce the most luxuriant foliage, the most beautiful flowers, the most luscious fruits; if such a soil did not give forth the most wonderful profusion and variety of precious stones; if such surrounding waters did not yield the most resplendent pearls.

Ceylon has long been celebrated for its sapphires, rubies, cat's-eyes, moonstones, opals, amethysts, carbuncles, and emeralds; but none of these, nor all of them combined, have given to the island the fame and the romantic setting that have been conferred on it by the product of the limpid waters that bathe its coral strands and sandy beaches. The poetic name of Ceylon today is "The Pearl on India's Brow."

Colombo, the principal city of modern Ceylon, is a stopping place for all the steamers plying between Europe and Asia and Australia, and is therefore visited by thousands of tourists and travelers each year. But the pearl fishery is so remote from Colombo that not one visitor in ten thousand ever goes there.

The pearl fishery of Ceylon and of India and the Persian Gulf is of very great antiquity, and is thought to be the oldest established fishery now in existence. The Sinhalese records, going back to about 550 B. C., indicate that the fisheries were then well developed, and there is reason to believe that they flourished at least 500 years before. At a very early period the pearls brought the island into prominence abroad and were in great repute in Rome at the time of Pliny, who, referring to Ceylon under the name of Taprobane, wrote that it was "the most productive of pearls of all parts of the world."

From the most remote period of which there is any record, it would appear that the pearl fishery played a very important part in the history of Ceylon, having had more or less direct and intimate relations with every important aspect of the civilization of the island. The information available clearly suggests that from the earliest times the fishery was conducted in much the same way as in our own day—the same methods of obtaining the pearl oysters, of handling the catch on shore, and of extracting the pearls.

It is hardly necessary to state that the pearl oyster of Ceylon, like the pearl oyster of other lands, is not an oyster at all. It is more nearly related to the mussels than to the oysters, and it differs markedly from the latter in having a byssus, or a bundle of tough fibers, by which it attaches itself to the bottom.

There are pearl oysters and pearl oysters. There are the huge thick-shelled species of the South Seas, Australia, Philippines and Burma, that are as large as dinner plates and weigh 3 to 4 pounds as they come from the water; there are the small, thin-shelled forms of Venezuela, Japan, Persia and Ceylon, that are only a few inches in diameter and weigh only a few ounces.

The large pearl oysters produce the mother-of-pearl of commerce, which is so valuable that the fishery is profitable even when no pearls are obtained. The smaller mollusks have little value except for the pearls they yield.

The maximum size attained by the Ceylon pearl oyster is only 4 inches, and the shells are so thin that they may be crushed between the fingers of an average man.

Pearl oysters are found on all parts of the coast of Ceylon, but exist in sufficient abundance to support an important fishery only in the Gulf of Manaar, which is a large indentation between Ceylon and India, lying immediately south of the line of giant stepping-stones known as Adam's Bridge.

The area of the pearling grounds is about 200 square miles. The bottom is for the most part sand, diversified by outcroppings of calcareous rocks, which form flat or slightly inclined ledges, on which the pearl oysters grow. Aggregations of ledges constitute "paars," or banks, which centuries ago received names that are still applied.

The largest and most important of these grounds is Cheval Paar, lying from 9 to 13 miles offshore at a depth of 5 to 8½ fathoms, and extending about 6½ miles from north to south and 4½ miles from east to west.

Probably the most remarkable feature of the Ceylon pearl fisheries is the extreme uncertainty of the supply of pearl-bearing oysters, so that from early times, and doubtless from the very beginning, the fisheries have been most unreliable and intermittent.

It is a matter of record that during the nineteenth century there were only 36 years when fishing was possible. Mentioning only the longer periods of cessation, it may be noted that there were no fisheries in the years 1821 to 1828, in 1838 to 1854, in 1864 to 1873, and in 1892 to 1900.

It was this last long series of recurring failures that induced the Ceylon government to secure the services of an eminent English biologist for a comprehensive investigation of the pearl-oyster grounds and of the causes for the disastrous failures. The result was that a great deal was made known concerning the conditions of life of the pearl oyster, and for the first time information was afforded the government by which the industry might be placed on a stable basis. Forthwith, in spite of a vigorous protest, the government leased the pearl fishery to a private syndicate and retired from the business from which it had been obtaining a large but not steady income.

As we study the life of the Ceylon pearl oyster, two points of transcendent importance are disclosed: (1) The mollusk is prolific to an incalculable degree, and (2) it is subject to an overwhelming mortality, which at times completely nullifies its productiveness.

The numbers of oysters produced are absolutely beyond comprehension. A few years ago, on one paar five miles long and two miles wide, small pearl oysters were ascertained to be present to the number of 10,000 per square yard, in places forming a layer over the bottom nine inches deep; one diver, who was down only 30 seconds, brought up 3,225 young oysters by actual count. This condition of the grounds was determined in November by the government inspectors; in December of the same year no oysters whatever were found—all had disappeared as if by magic. On another bank, known as the Pariya Paar, scientific experts in the year 1902 estimated the number of young oysters at one hundred thousand million, but so insecure was their existence that on inspection a few months later it was found that all had been swept away.

This destruction is due to a variety of causes, but principally to two: physical agencies, such as the burying of the oysters by sand, which are ordinarily responsible for only 4 to 5 per cent of the mortality; and animals, particularly fishes, of which various kinds and sizes feed largely on the pearl oysters, and are so charged with fully 90 per cent of all the losses to which the young and full-grown mollusks are subject.

Up to a few years ago, and for more than a century before, the British officials in Ceylon had absolute control of the fishery, and determined when a fishery should occur and what grounds should be opened to the divers. This determination was based on an examination of the various grounds in the November preceding a fishery, and a preparatory inspection of the particular grounds selected in the following February. The advance inspection of the oyster beds on which it is proposed to permit the divers to work is for the purpose (1) of ascertaining the approximate number of pearl oysters that may be taken, (2) of marking the areas on which fishing is to be allowed, (3) of specifying the number of boats on each area and the number of days that are to be devoted to the fishery, and (4) of making an official valuation of the prospective pearls in order that the fishery may be advertised.

News that a fishery is to be held travels as by wireless telegraphy throughout Ceylon, India and other parts of the east, and at the prescribed time 30,000 to 50,000 people gather in a few days on a strip of desert sand, with the Persian Gulf on one side and the jungle on the other, at a point convenient to the pearl-oyster grounds.

It can readily be understood that the pearl town is a place of intense activity from the moment the government agent opens the fishery. The extensive business connected with the mere existence of the people would alone be sufficient to give great bustle and life; but added to this are the special industries dependent on the various phases of the pearl fishery.

As soon as the fishery is over, the entire place seems to dissolve in a day as if by magic, the people hurry to their homes, the pearl town lapses again into a solitary sandy waste, and the beasts of the jungle take possession. Marichchakaddi may spring into being the next season, but may remain non-existent for many years.

There is no particular style of vessel specially required in the pearl fishery, and consequently we find a great diversity of rigs, depending largely on the regions from which the divers come: narrow single-masted canoes with an outrigger, square-sterned luggers, large sailing lighters, three-masted canoes, and clumsy doneys. Some of the larger vessels carry 65 men, of whom about half are actual divers, and the average crew of the entire fleet is 30 to 35 men.

Owing to the boisterous seas and strong winds of this region, the fishery can be conducted only during a period of a few weeks in March and April, when the northeast monsoon has waned and the southwest monsoon has not begun. The fishery is thus of briefer duration than any other pearl fishery of importance, and is characterized by a strenuousness that is quite foreign to the east.

The fishing boats start for the grounds soon after midnight, so as to be ready for work as soon as daylight comes, about 6 a. m. They take positions about the government vessel moored over the particular ground selected, anchor, and remain actively engaged until noon, when the entire fleet sets sail and starts for the shore. As there is a crowd of pearl merchants eagerly awaiting an opportunity to speculate, there is considerable rivalry among the diving boats in the matter of reaching land and discharging their catch as soon as possible, and consequently one witnesses some wild scenes of excitement when the oysters are being unloaded in the surf and the natives are rushing into the kottus with their catch.

Except for a loin cloth, the divers are naked. Their fingers are covered by flexible leather shields to protect them from the rough corals and shells. In order to facilitate the descent, each diver employs a flat, oval stone, weighing 30 to 50 pounds. The stone is perforated at one end to receive a rope, and close to the stone a kind of stirrup is made in the rope to accommodate the diver's foot. The stone is suspended at a depth of 4 to 5 feet below the surface by means of a cord attached to an outrigger.

When ready to descend, the diver places one foot on the stone, the other on the rim of a rope basket attached to a rope, inflates his lungs, loosens the slip-knot holding the stone, and sinks rapidly to the bottom. There he at once disengages his foot and quickly crawls over the bottom, tearing loose all the oysters he can reach and putting them in the basket. When near the limit of his endurance, he gives a signal with the basket rope and is quickly hauled up by the watchful attendant, or "manduck," with whom the diver is provided. The helper has meanwhile pulled up and secured the diving stone, and when the basket is hauled in he culls the catch from the miscellaneous refuse that is attached to the oysters.

The divers usually operate in pairs, with a common attendant and diving stone. The descents occur at intervals of five or six minutes. The best divers are careful to dry their bodies thoroughly after each descent and to take sufficient rest. Between dives they often smoke a pipe or cigarette, sometimes while in the water just preparatory to a dive.

The divers have learned by experience that they may increase the length of their submergence by making a number of deep, forced respiratory efforts before taking the plunge. Most exaggerated stories have been told and are still current regarding the length of time the divers can remain under water.

The Arab divers wear nose-clasps of flexible horn attached to a cord around their neck, while the divers of other races simply compress their nostrils by hand during the descent. This practice can hardly make any difference in efficiency, and we must conclude that the expertness of the Arabs depends on an aptitude born of long experience.

Their usual time below the surface is 60 to 75 seconds, the normal maximum not exceeding 90 seconds, while the Tamil and Moormen divers range from 35 to 50 or 60 seconds, depending on the depth. There is a well authenticated case in 1887 of an Arab who remained under for 109 seconds in water 7 fathoms deep.

Under the arrangement that has prevailed for many years, the divers are allowed to retain one-third of their catch, to dispose of as they please. The government retains the remainder and sells it at auction.

It is a very difficult matter to extract the pearls from perfectly fresh oysters either by sight or by touch, or by both combined; consequently it has long been the practice to allow the decomposition of the soft parts before the search for the pearls is begun.

The oysters are piled into dugout canoes and covered with matting or else set aside in coarse sacks for 7 to 10 days. Bacterial putrefaction is supplemented by the work of blowflies and their larvae, and at the end of the period stated the disintegration, decomposition and digestion of the oysters have progressed so far that there is little left but pearls, shells, slime and foreign matter adhering to the shells, together with a large volume of maggots. The first step in the cleaning process is the flooding of the canoe to the brim; then the naked natives, ranged on either side of the vessel, remove the shells, washing and rinsing them and removing any detritus in which a pearl may lodge.

Eternal vigilance must be exercised by the owners to prevent the theft of pearls, and one of the precautions taken is to forbid the washers to remove their hands from the water except to drop at their feet the cleansed shells.

The shells having been removed, the canoe is filled with water again and again, and the gurry is kneaded and stirred in order that the lighter filth may be floated off. The water is finally decanted, and the heavier debris containing the pearls is removed with scrupulous care and wrapped in cotton cloth, undergoing a preliminary search for the largest pearls and numerous subsequent examinations in the course of drying.

The dried matter is then sifted and sorted and gone over again and again; and then, when it would appear that even the dust pearls must all have been extracted, the debris passes for a final search into the hands of women and children, whose sharp eyes and delicate touch enable them to discover an amazingly large quantity of small pearls. The material then remaining is offered for sale and always finds ready buyers.

The most productive fishery in the recorded history of Ceylon was held in 1905. Three hundred and eighteen vessels participated, and during the season that extended from February 20 to April 21 over 81,000,000 pearl oysters were landed, whereas the best previous fishery, in 1891, yielded only 44,000,000. On a number of days over 4,000,000 oysters were obtained, and one day, when 5,005,000 were taken, a record was established that may never again be equalled.

NOTED FLORIDA CITY

St. Augustine Was Once an Indian Village.

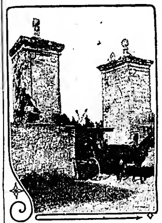
First Colony Established by French Huguenots in 1564 Was Razed by the Spaniards and Its Inhabitants Killed.

St. Augustine, Fla.—Four centuries ago an Indian town known as Seloy stood on the site of what is now St. Augustine. On Easter Sunday, 1512, Ponce de Leon, Spanish explorer, landed there in search of the "Fountain of Youth." After he and his men had floundered through the sandy swamps of the vicinity and tramped among the scrub palmetto, bathed in every stream, pool and mudhole they came across, without success, they reembarked and the Indian village remained unmolested by white men for more than fifty years.

A colony of French Huguenots landed at the same point in 1564, but soon moved on to the St. John's river. The news of their arrival reached Philip II. of Spain, and upon realizing the full import of the message—that a colony of Protestants was settling in his new world domain—he dispatched Pedro Menendez to exterminate them.

This second group of invading Spaniards landed at the same Indian village on August 25, 1565, and because that was St. Augustine's day upon the church calendar they gave the place its present name. St. Augustine is consequently the oldest permanent settlement of Europeans within the territory of the United States. The Huguenot settlement was not permanent for the reason that Menendez and his men destroyed their fort and massacred the inhabitants.

The first fort was built in octagonal form and was constructed of the trunks of pine trees. It was named San Juan de Pinos (St. John of the Pine). An engraving of the fort shows it was in this shape when Sir Francis Drake attacked St. Augustine in 1586. The fort was again attacked in 1665 by John Davis, freebooter and buccaneer. The people fled to the woods while Davis pillaged the town. Later the fort was rebuilt and named Fort Marion, now the property of the federal government and maintained chiefly as an interesting antique. Thousands of persons visit it annually.



City Gates, St. Augustine.

In its early life St. Augustine was the most cosmopolitan city in the land and all because of a mixed colony of Minorcans, Italians, Greeks and natives of southern European countries brought to the state in 1769 as laborers for an indigo plantation owned by English capitalists. They settled in New Smyrna, but soon rebelled against their English employers. That probably was the first organized labor strike in North America.

Moving to St. Augustine, where they were allotted land and given protection, the indigo plantation workers intermarried with the Spanish and English residents and their descendants form a large proportion of the population of the present city.

In 1821 the United States paid Spain $5,000,000 for the territory of Florida and General Andrew Jackson became its first governor.

Indian, pirate, Spaniard, British invader—each in turn has scourged the town, but after the passing of each it has arisen better than before, changed, but each time improved in character. From the Indian village of Seloy, through four centuries of battle and change to the quaint old town with its foreign airs, St. Augustine has become a fashionable winter resort.

Pulpit Bar to Legacy.

Boulder, Colo.—The $50,000 will of the late John L. Church, wealthy cattleman, has been filed for probate in the county court. This will include a $10,000 cash bequest to his wife and $5,000 to Mrs. A. J. Whiting, a niece. The remainder is to be divided among grand-nieces and grand-nephews after Mrs. Church's death. A peculiar provision of the will is that the nephews forfeit their shares if they become ministers of the gospel. Mr. Church had no deep-rooted feeling against the clergy, but wanted the boys to follow business careers.

Chinese Kill 3,000.

Calcutta.—The latest version of the fighting between the Chinese and Tibetans, which comes from Gyangze, is that Lhasa is besieged and is burning. Two thousand Chinese with Maxim guns mowed down 3,000 Tibetans, including many women and children.

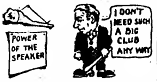
THE SUNBEAM.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

VOL. XII. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, MAY 17, 1912. NO. 8.

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

Speaker Is no Longer an Autocrat



POWER OF THE SPEAKER
I DON'T NEED SUCH A BIG CLUB ANY WAY

WASHINGTON.—It is hard for old-time politicians, who have lived their day in Washington, to realize that the speaker of the house of representatives is no longer an autocrat. Any one desiring to get anything done in the house is now advised to see the speaker and Leader Underwood. They are the two head men of the Democratic branch of the Sixty-second congress. Neither of them can do things as completely and summarily as could the autocratic speakers of old, but when both of them undertake to get something done a good start has been made.

This status does not work as much to a speaker's disadvantage as one might suppose. As far as there is satisfaction in the exercise of authority, a speaker of the house is not as contented a man as his predecessors have been. But he also has an excuse for not complying with a great variety of insistent demands. And when the house carries through a policy or a program, the speaker has the right to claim credit therefor, just as the president has the recognized right to appropriate credit for the achievements of his administration, even though the work and the responsibility were immediately shouldered by the subordinates.

As the prerogatives of the speaker have diminished in the present house, those of the chairman of ways and means have increased. This is not altogether due to the fact that this has been a tariff revision congress and that the ways and means committee has been busy with these revision bills. As chairman of the committee that selected the committees of the house (a task previously falling to the speaker), Mr. Underwood has also been recognized as the floor leader of the majority to an extent not noted before in many years. He has been the floor leader also in the party caucus.

While Leader Underwood has had numerous loyal associates and has not hesitated to take advice and counsel, he has had to face several serious problems alone and virtually unaided and to work out the solution himself. Thus there has fallen to him many of the worries and vexations, which in the times agone have fallen to the speaker.

Capital City Has a Museum of Styles

MRS. CLEVELAND has announced that she will present to the nation her wedding gown. This will indeed be historical. Mrs. Cleveland, formerly Miss Frances Folsom, was a ward of President Cleveland, and married him during the second year of his administration. The wedding took place in the famous blue room of the White House, and was the first wedding to have been solemnized in that room so far as history has made any note. Also Mrs. Cleveland was the first woman to marry a president in the White House.

Mrs. Taft will present the magnificent gown which she wore at the inaugural ball.

Martha Washington is represented in the collection by a satin gown, once white, but now yellowed by time. She wore it on occasions of state in Philadelphia and New York. The satin is brocade in garland design, and the slippers which accompany the dress are of the same pattern. These have been in the museum for many years. Mrs. Taft's gown is of white satin, embroidered in silver, in a graceful design of golden-rod. The gown that belonged to Mrs. Andrew Jackson has been contributed by her great-great-grand niece, Mary Wilcox, of Washington.

Mrs. Alexander Sharp, widow of Captain Sharp, U. S. N., who was a nephew of Mrs. Grant, has given a gown once worn by Mrs. Grant in the White House.

Mrs. Samuel L. Gouverneur of New York, whose husband was the grandson of James Monroe, has given a suit of the clothes worn by Mr. Monroe at the French court when he was American minister there.

The purpose of the National Museum in collecting the gowns is to preserve to future generations these mementos of famous women.

Uncle Sam Is the Biggest Publisher

I'M SOME PRINTER -I AM

THE government printing office at Washington, the biggest printing plant in the world, is busily engaged upon the publication of Uncle Sam's largest sets of books. These sets will comprise more than one hundred volumes, says Popular Mechanics.

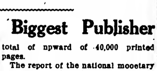
First comes the report of the immigration commission, a body which devoted several years to investigating this subject in all parts of the world. This will comprise fifty-six volumes of from 600 to 1,200 pages each, a grand total of upward of 40,000 printed pages.

The report of the national monetary commission, which is now virtually complete, comprises 24 volumes, averaging 300 pages to the volume. Despite the cost of getting out such a reference work, the government is getting out a "first edition" of about 5,000 sets.

The findings of the governmental commission that recently investigated child labor, etc., in the United States are being printed in a set of 19 volumes, ranging from 600 to 1,200 pages each.

Twelve volumes are required to tell the story of the doings of the North Atlantic coast fisheries arbitration commission, and the disclosures of the recent governmental investigation of the iron and steel industry will require a four volume set.

Little Girl Blows Cigarette Rings



OF ALL THINGS !!!

"SHE smokes cigarettes, your Honor," so spoke Miss Elizabeth McMasters, probation officer to Judge De Lacy in the juvenile court, as she pointed to a little flaxen-haired girl who was busy stretching a piece of gum to its limit.

"Why, that can't be possible," exclaimed Judge De Lacy in astonishment. "She doesn't appear to be more than ten years of age."

"She is twelve now and has been smoking for three years," continued the probation officer. "Just as soon as school is dismissed she roams the streets of Georgetown in search of butts and then retires to a woodshed in the rear of her home and consumes what she has gathered. She never smokes less than two cigarettes a day, and when the picking is good no one knows how many more."

"Yes, sir," piped the child, smiling at the judge, "I smoke, but I haven't had any today. Yesterday I got two cigarettes. The picking was poor."

"How did you come to acquire such a terrible habit?" asked the court.

"I saw lots of boys smoking and they were sending up into the air all kinds of pretty circles and wreaths. So I just picked up a cigarette from the street when nobody was looking, lit it, and after several puffs, I could make just as nice circles."

The mother of the little girl told Judge De Lacy that she had never seen her daughter smoke, but had often noticed the fragrance of cigarettes on her breath. The child was placed on probation for six months.

The girl who tells you she thinks no man is good enough for any woman is merely trying to goad you into an attempt to convince her that she is wrong.—Chicago Record-Herald.

WHO'S WHO—and Why

HAILED AS FRIEND OF PEACE

The Japanese legation in Pekin gave a dinner the other day in honor of Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard university. In welcoming the scholar, Kokichi Mizuno, charge d'affaires, said:

"Dr. Eliot as president of Harvard university rendered remarkable services to Japan by helping to educate many of the Japanese statesmen who regenerated their country. I am glad to know that an enthusiastic reception is awaiting him in Japan, and I am glad that he is going by way of Manchuria and Korea. He thus will see things as they actually are. In my four years of consular service in America I heard adverse criticisms of the Japanese activities and enterprises in Manchuria and Korea.

"These criticisms were based on misunderstandings and misrepresentations. We welcome criticism, but we desire it to be based on facts and figures. I do not think any one has the right to criticise Japanese activities simply because they are Japanese. The visit of an impartial observer like Dr. Eliot must result in the removal of the American people's misunderstandings of our activities in Manchuria and Korea.

HEADS NATIONAL TRADE BODY

Harry A. Wheeler of the Union Trust company and ex-president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, has been unanimously elected president of the National Chamber of Commerce.

This committee consists of twenty-five members from all sections of the United States, and will be the governing body of the association, having charge of practically all executive matters.

Under the organization the National Chamber of Commerce of the United States will consist of more than 600 delegates from commercial organizations of every character, including chambers of commerce, boards of trades, commercial clubs, merchants and manufacturers associations, and national associations representing several commercial interests.

The by-laws of the new organization provide for methods of disclosing through a system of referendum, the commercial opinion of the United States on questions which are deemed by the directorate to be of national importance. No matters of purely local interest will be within the scope of the interest of this new organization, and the directors state that "the power and influence of the new body will be placed behind any proposition when a substantial majority of the commercial associations of the United States have shown themselves to be in agreement."

CROWN PRINCE SHIRKS DUTY?

The article attacking the crown prince for neglect of military duties, which is attracting great attention, being reproduced in many leading newspapers, appeared originally in Der Tuermer, a monthly review, according to a Berlin dispatch. It was written by Herr Guenther von Vlebrogge, a retired officer.

The article observes that up to the time when the kaiser appointed his heir to the colonelcy of the famous Death's Head hussars at Danzig last September the crown prince had never done any military service worth mentioning. It was hoped that the command would at last fill the prince, in whose veins the blood of so many warriors flowed, with genuine enthusiasm for the profession of arms.

"Up to the present, however," continues the article, "the hopes aroused by the transfer to Danzig have remained unfulfilled. The crown prince is absent far too much on leave. Indeed, one might ask when he is at the head of his regiment at all.

"Immediately after his appointment the august young gentleman went traveling for four weeks, principally to hunt. Soon after his return we saw him in Berlin; sometimes in the reichstag, where he attended the Morocco debates; sometimes at the flying grounds."

CZAR AVERSE TO MONGOL WAR

It is stated in high official circles that Russia does not contemplate the annexation of Mongolia and does not even desire to see it established as a buffer state. On the contrary, Russia feels that Chinese suzerainty is best for the Mongols, who are unaccustomed to self government and are ignorant of statecraft.

For Russia to assist Mongolia in a war for independence would be foolish, as it would alienate from the empire the sympathies of the young Chinese republic, antagonize the other powers and necessitate stronger measures later on. Officials who have the czar's confidence say that should China succeed in making an arrangement whereby the Mongols would be satisfied, Russia would not object to Mongolia's joining the republic.

While the foregoing is undoubtedly the Russian government's attitude, it must be remembered that the Russian press and the military party favor the establishment of Mongolia as an independent buffer state and criticise the government strongly for its conciliatory attitude toward China.

Tales of GOTHAM and other CITIES

Sits on Burglar Until Police Arrive

NEW YORK.—Frederick C. Gray, hopeful nineteen, who came to the big city from Quincy, Mass., to make his fortune, was thrown downstairs and sat on, and then locked up the other day on a charge of unlawful entry.

In Gray's pocket the police found the cigarette case of James E. Bourke, former blacksmith mayor of Burlington Vt., and optimistic letters to the youth's father and others in Quincy, in which Frederick said he had married a $50,000 heiress.

Mary Smith, whose mother has a furnished room house at 935 West Fifteenth street, said she saw Gray coming downstairs carrying a suitcase.

She was aware that he did not live in the house, so she screamed for her mother. Mrs. Smith met Gray midway in his flight downstairs. They rolled together to the bottom, and then Mrs. Smith sat on the young man while her daughter went for the police.

Search by the police revealed that Gray had, besides several razors and pieces of jewelry, a handsome silver cigarette case.

It was marked "Presented to the Mayor by the Governor's House Guard at the Grand Tri-Centenary of Burlington, Vt." James E. Burke, a Democrat, was mayor of Burlington at the time of the Lake Champlain tri-centenary celebration.

Some of the jewelry found was marked "Walter and Clayton Burke," and the police believe it belongs to the former mayor's sons.

A letter, which Gray said he had written to his father to "chuck a bluff," ran as follows:

"People in Quincy thought when I left home that I wouldn't make good, but I have all right. I am having one fine time.

"I met a girl here who is worth $50,000 in her own right, and she fell in love with me and we got married. We are now living with her mother.

U. S. Army Officers Start Moro Paper

ST. LOUIS.—From Zamboanga and the domain of the sultan of Sulu, in the Philippines, come tidings of the first newspaper ever published in a Moro language. Furthermore, it is unique in that it is a government owned and operated newspaper, and among its contributors and supporters are the military authorities of the Moro province.

Prominent among the latter is Capt. William Reed, United States cavalry, who is governor of Sulu and chief of staff of Gen. John J. Pershing, military governor of the Province of Moro.

A copy of the first issue of the Sulu News has been received by J. Bissell Ware of St. Louis from Captain Reed.

The salutatory, after a timely preachment to the frisky Moro anent the blessings of peace and the delights and profits of a bucolic existence, proceeds to explain the paper's reason for existence. The editor makes apology for typographical shortcomings by explaining that the Arabic characters were purchased originally for the purpose of printing two primers for the use of the schools, that those who employed the type are no longer at hand, and that the editor had learned "to handle but awkwardly the 500 characters employed."

Train Stops When Monkey Pulls Rope

DENVER, Colo.—But for the timely discovery of the real cause of the "spook" orders they received to stop the train, the trainmen on the Rio Grande passenger to Montrose would have deserted their charge in a panic and forced the passengers to take charge.

Just after the south bound passenger left Whitewater, the first station beyond Grand Junction, the train came to such a sudden stop as to throw the passengers out of their seats. Believing that they had barely escaped a rock or landslide the passengers and trainmen tumbled out in a hurry to seek the cause of the disaster which they had so narrowly escaped.

When all was found to be in perfect shape just beyond the curve the conductor began an investigation. The engineer declared he had received orders to stop the train and had promptly applied the air brakes. Each trainman and finally each passenger was questioned in person, but no one admitted responsibility.

The train started ahead and was rapidly making up lost time, when for a second time the train stopped, the engineer again declaring that he had received a signal to stop the train. Again the trainmen denied having sent a message along the bellrope and made a round of inquiry among the passengers.

The trainmen were certain that they had been hoodooed, and some of them declared they would leave the train unless the mysterious spook materializations were stopped.

Then when a few minutes later the train was stopped for a third time, trainmen and passengers were indignant. This time they declared that they would find the culprit whoever he might be, and prosecute him as well. They then began a systematic search all through the train, not sparing even those in the Pullman car.

A few minutes later they discovered the source of all their trouble in a very unspook-like masquerade. It was a monkey. His monkeyship was contentedly pulling the bellrope, which hung very close.

In Boy's Attire, Blushes Betray Her

CHICAGO.—Two tiny tears chasing themselves over her freckled cheeks and a timid blush which crept after them, brought the career of "Jack" Wilson to an ignominious end the other day in the South Clark street police station, where she had been taken by the police as a runaway.

The night before "Jack," now self-admitted to be Sarah Wilson, 15-year-old daughter of a wealthy St. Joseph (Mo.) ranchman, tearfully told of her attempted personation of a boy; how she had her hair cut short and how she smoked a pipe, even though it made her sick.

The bluecoats at the station ruefully admitted that "Jack" put it over on them and but for the tears and blush they would never have suspected the sex of their little prisoner.

With a pipe and tobacco in her trousers pocket, "Jack" was found at the Northwestern station. She was taken to the South Clark street station. There she calmly pulled out her pipe, filled it with apparent skill, and lighted it.

Then while the admiring officers listened she told them of her trip. But one policeman sneered at her and the telltale tears and blush betrayed her. A moment later she was sobbingly admitting she was a girl.

Blushing as scarlet as did their little prisoner, the officers turned her over to the matron. She was sent back to her home as soon as her father could be communicated with.

"I was just tired of staying at home, so I ran away," said Sarah at the woman's annex at the South Clark street station.

An English judge has decided that a purchaser of forged postage stamps has no remedy against the seller.

THE SUNBEAM.

W. G. HUNT, Publisher.

SUNBEAM. - - MINN

THE COOK.

Which of the happily married couple should be the cook, assuming that the income of neither is sufficient to warrant the hire of such a necessary piece of household furniture? The question has come up before the Chicago courts and they have met it with courage, or one of them has. It seems that one Bert Harkin was charged with disorderly conduct, says the Charleston News and Courier. He had, in fact, been drunk. This he admitted, but claimed that the circumstances were of such an extenuating nature that he ought to be discharged. "For some time," said he, "I've been taking care of our house and cooking meals for my wife and myself. The work was uninteresting and it got on my nerves. I was mighty glad to get a drink and forget my troubles." The judge looked wise. "Discharged," said he laconically. A number of questions naturally arise. But the salient point is the cooking. Is there really any reason under the sun, except custom, why the men should expect his wife to be the cook? It is not recorded that Eve dressed the beef, but we do know that Adam roasted her just after the exodus from the Garden of Eden. Here was a man who plainly did not go out and work for an income. Why should he loaf about the house while his wife attempted to economize on gas? To be sure he got tired of it, but probably she was just as tired. We really fear that the judge has set a bad precedent. Suppose the women take it into their heads that they have a right to get intoxicated just because they get tired of frying codfish.

Two things with regard to wireless telegraphy have been brought into renewed prominence by the disaster to the Titanic—the inestimable value of the service as a means of summoning assistance for sinking ships, and the necessity of regulations to prevent private telegraphers from interfering with irrelevant messages. The sinking of the Titanic occurred between two and three o'clock in the morning, an hour at which it might be supposed amateur wireless operators would all be in bed and asleep, says the Evening Wisconsin. Nevertheless there are complaints that the wireless messages from the Titanic were "taken" with difficulty, because of interference. In Europe as well as in the United States there will be legislation to put down what the London Times calls "these freaks of private vanity or levity or ostentation."

In Paris, the police dogs have now been given official rank and attack on one of them is classed as resistance to lawfully constituted authority. The situation has its element of humor, but as a matter of fact, their protection as regular members of the police, has been found necessary to save them from the lawless gangs whom they help the police in restraining. Still, the spectacle of a man arrested on the charge of resisting a police dog in the discharge of his duty is novel and odd enough to have its ludicrous side.

For a wager a Cincinnati man ate 30 dozen of bananas in 30 days, drank five glasses of beer and several large portions of whisky each night of the test, and finished off with five dozen hard-boiled eggs and two dozen raw oysters. The story is vouched for, yet it is almost as hard to swallow as the wager must have been.

Possibly a few supersensitive souls may suffer at the cruelty attendant upon the slaughter of flies now being urged, but the fly is one of the busy little pests that bring a swarm of evil upon us and a vast amount of discomfort. Its extermination is problematical, but inasmuch as this is an age when exercise is extolled let the swatting go on with vigor.

A woman in New York intends to sue a doctor who performed an operation on her because he sewed up inside of her a towel a yard long with a red border and marked with the name of the hospital where the operation was performed. Such carelessness with good hospital laundry ought to be looked into. It is hardly a degree less culpable than kleptomania.

The officers of the Massachusetts Infant asylum give legal notice that they have changed its name and adopted the name of Massachusetts Babies' hospital. Boston is progressive, too.

A Cincinnati capitalist declares that a family of five could live on $15 a week and save some of it. Possibly he included hope as one of the articles of diet they could live on, if charity was out of the count.

A Harvard professor says that housework will make over a fat woman into a Venus. But in these emancipated days women cannot be forced back into the old paths of domestic servitude by such transparent bait.

STATUE OF DR. JOHN CARROLL UNVEILED

THIS fine statue of Most Rev. Dr. John Carroll, founder of Georgetown university, was unveiled recently with impressive ceremonies.

MARYLAND FOR CLARK

MISSOURIAN AND ROOSEVELT GET POPULAR PLURALITY.

Both Will Control Their Respective State Party Conventions, According to the Returns.

Baltimore, Md., May 8.—On the face of the returns Tuesday Col. Roosevelt will get Maryland's 16 votes in the Republican national convention at Chicago. With the state and city organizations against him, he defeated them both by a close margin.

Speaker Champ Clark of the National house of representatives will have a majority of the Democratic delegates to the Maryland state convention and the delegation of 16 to the Democratic national convention will be instructed to vote for the speaker for the Democratic nomination for president.

Colonel Roosevelt will have 66 votes in the state convention, just a bare one over the 65 which constitutes a majority of the 129 votes in the state convention. President Taft will have 63 votes and a further analysis of the returns may show that he may have sufficient friends among the delegates to control the personnel of the Maryland delegation. This will be important if Roosevelt cannot be nominated on the first ballot, as the state Republican leaders will then be able to throw them to Taft on subsequent ballots.

Speaker Champ Clark was backed in his fight by the entire city Democratic organization and he swept Baltimore and gets its 24 votes in the state convention. Clark was also supported by the state organization and was an easy winner over Wilson and Harmon, and will have 80 votes in the state convention. Wilson, his strongest opponent, captured 45, while Harmon received the four votes of Worcester county, the home of United States Senator John Walter Smith, who is a staunch supporter of the Ohio governor.

The total Democratic vote in Baltimore city was 29,302. Clark received 19,277, Wilson 6,573 and Harmon 3,293. There were polled 154 votes for an uninstructed delegation. Roosevelt's greatest strength was shown in Baltimore city, his vote being 12,695 to 7,263 for Taft.

Walla Walla, Wash., May 9.—The state Democratic convention in session here Tuesday, voted to indorse Champ Clark as its candidate for president. The vote stood: Clark, 455; Wilson, 165; Bryan, 135½; Harmon, 1½.

It can therefore be said definitely that Washington's 14 votes in the national Democratic convention will be cast solidly for Champ Clark.

TEN KILLED IN WRECK

Confederate Veterans' Special Enroute to Reunion at Macon, Ga., in Accident.

Hattiesburg, Miss., May 8.—The first section of the Texas Confederate reunion special, enroute to Macon, Ga., was wrecked at Gunns Mill last Monday, on the New Orleans & Northeastern railroad, six miles north of Hattiesburg, killing four trainmen and six or more passengers, and injuring at least twenty-five.

The train was from New Orleans, and was occupied entirely by the veterans and wives and families.

Foxhounds for the Kaiser.

London, Eng., May 11.—A pack of foxhounds was sent from England on last Thursday to Potsdam for the German emperor, who has made up his mind to introduce fox hunting into his domains.

Workmen Find Old Coins.

New York, May 11.—A gang of workmen at Commack, L. I., dug up a bag of old coins last Thursday and a free for all fight ensued for their possession. Some of the coins are dated 1752.

FLOOD TOLL GROWS

SIXTY PERSONS IN TORRAS REGION DEAD AND OTHER SECTIONS TO HEAR FROM.

ST. SOPHIA LEVEE GIVES WAY

Thousands of Acres Are Added to the Devastation Caused by Rushing Waters From the Mississippi—Over 105,000 Homeless.

New Orleans, May 8.—Thousands of acres were added to the flooded regions of Louisiana when the levee at St. Sophie, forty miles above New Orleans, broke Tuesday.

The country over which the water is spreading has always been regarded as absolutely safe from floods. The desperate fight for control of the situation goes on, with reports coming in of heavy loss of life and great property damage.

Sixty persons have lost their lives in the Torras region alone, and it is feared that when reports come in from the remote sections that the number will be much larger. The total area of devastation to date is 4,590 square miles. One hundred and five thousand people are homeless in the section from Rosedale, Miss., to Natchez, and from Arkansas City to the Red river, and absolutely dependent upon the government for rations. These figures exclude the greatest flood center—that from Torras, La., south.

TOBACCO USER IS BARRED

Stormy Debate Over Question in Methodist Conference at Minneapolis, Minn.

Minneapolis, Minn., May 10.—A stormy debate arose in the Methodist general conference here Wednesday over the use of tobacco by officials high in office. A resolution was presented by Dr. Robert Stephens, Danville, Ill., to the effect, "That it is the sense of this general conference that no person should be elected to any office within the gift of the conference who uses tobacco in any of its forms."

A vigorous debate ensued. Dr. Robert Watt of Delaware, while favoring the motion, declared that it was a dangerous and unwise thing to try to regulate conduct by rules. Doctor Gettys of Nebraska retorted that big corporations passed on the conduct of its employes, and the conference had the same right. Motions to defer to other committees were defeated. Dr. James Bowe of Chicago created much amusement by a motion to refer the matter to the committee on education. The motion was finally adopted by an overwhelming majority.

Recommendations were adopted, under the direction of Rev. W. S. Chinn, colored delegate from Louisiana, that the home missionary society provide aid to ministers and their people who had suffered by thousands in the recent floods in the south.

Woodticks Kill Four Children.

Moosejaw, Sask., May 11.—Four children of John Cudmore, living eighteen miles east of here, have died within a few days from spinal meningitis. The illness is declared to be due to woodticks.

No U. S. Vessel in Thames in a Year.

New York, May 11.—A report by the medical officer of the port of London, England, discloses the fact that no vessel flying the stars and stripes arrived in the Thames in the whole of last year.

Thrown From Horse; Killed.

Joliet, Ill., May 11.—Frank Viors, well-known horse and livery stable owner, of this city was instantly killed Thursday when thrown in front of an electric car by a horse which he was riding.

SEVEN LIVES LOST

NIPPERSINK LAKE SCENE OF AWFUL TRAGEDY WHEN LAUNCH SINKS.

MRS. HANSEN'S BODY FOUND

Party Was on a Pleasure Trip and Were Only Fairly Started on Journey When Disaster Occurred—List of the Victims.

Chicago, May 11.—By the sinking of a sixteen-foot steel launch during a storm Wednesday night on Nippersink lake, near Fox Lake, seven persons were drowned. The conviction that all on board were lost was strengthened by the finding of the body of Mrs. Mabel Hansen of Chicago, one of the passengers. Her body was discovered by the scores of voluntary searchers.

The victims:

Mrs. Mabel Hansen, twenty-five years old; widow; daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Colburn, 4644 Austin avenue, Chicago.

Herman Huhn, nineteen years old, restaurant keeper, Ingleside, Ill.

George Russell, thirty-five years old; liveryman at Ingleside, Ill.

Jacob Hoefer, twenty-five years old; Desplaines, Ill.

Michael Klunder, twenty-four years old, 1643 Brigham street, Chicago.

Unknown young man, twenty years old; arrived at Lox Lake, supposedly from Chicago.

A cap, Hoefer's pocket book, a book, an oil can and a number of empty bottles were found in the water near Mrs. Hansen's body.

The party of merrymakers left the Lippincott hotel on Fox lake to attend an informal dance at the Bay View hotel, on Nippersink lake, about two miles distant. As the boat, loaded so heavily that the railings were only a few inches above the water, quit the dock every member of the party was in good spirits, all of them chatting and laughing.

Ten minutes later piercing cries for help came out of the darkness that hung over the lake. Instantly boats put out from three different points.

Although the search was continued all night long, not a trace of the dance bound party or the boat they were in could be found, with the exception of a cap and later a few other articles. After the first shrill calls for aid that startled persons on shore not a sound came from the boat. It is believed that the moment the craft reached rough water it filled rapidly and sank before the passengers had opportunity to attempt to save their lives by swimming. Although it was not a large launch, it is declared possible that all of the passengers were carried down to the bottom of the lake by suction.

FIFTY KILLED BY QUAKES

Mexican Cities Are Visited by Disastrous Tremors—Volcano of Colima Becomes Active.

Mexico City, May 11.—Thirty-four persons were killed and many buildings in the city of Zapatalan, located on the slope of the volcano of Colima, were destroyed there by an earthquake Thursday. Sixteen persons were killed in the city of Ciudad Guzman and ten others were seriously injured.

In the city of Guadalajara twelve distinct shocks were felt and considerable damage was done.

More than a half million dollars of damage, including the total destruction of a Catholic church, is reported from the town of Quartel. Following the quakes, the volcano became active.

The observatory here predicts that Mexico City will be visited by a disastrous earthquake within twelve hours.

G. O. P. COMMITTEE TO MEET

Republicans to Assemble at Chicago June 6 to Decide Contests.

New York, May 10.—A call has been issued for a meeting of the Republican national committee in Chicago on Thursday, June 6, to decide contests among delegates to the Republican national convention.

It will be the earliest meeting in many years, because of the many contests. The last day for filing contests will be May 29.

CARDINAL TO BUY A YACHT

O'Connell of Boston Planning Sea Diversion for the Summer Out of Marblehead, Mass.

Boston, May 11.—Cardinal O'Connell may take up yachting as a diversion this summer. He is at present negotiating for the purchase of a fine yacht, which is stored at Marblehead. If the cardinal buys the yacht it is understood that he will pass much of his time in Marblehead waters this summer.

Carpenter Finds Murdered Woman.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 11.—With throat cut, ribs broken and clothing partly burned off, the body of an unknown woman, apparently 30 years old, was found here Thursday in a vacant house by a carpenter.

London Tailor Strike Grows.

London, Eng., May 11.—The tailors' strike has extended to the East End workers, 6,000 of whom ceased work on Thursday. The men demand an advance in wages and better workshop accommodations.

TROOPS ON THE MOVE

CAVALRY AND INFANTRY IN PHILIPPINES ORDERED HOME.

All Soldiers Acclimated to Tropics Are Being Distributed Along Mexican Border.

Washington, May 9.—The Second cavalry and the Fifth regiment of infantry now in the Philippines were ordered to embark immediately for the United States.

After arriving in San Francisco the cavalry will proceed without delay to Fort Huachuca, on the border of Mexico, in Arizona. The infantry will go to San Antonio for distribution along the Rio Grande.

It is most significant that all of the United States troops acclimated to the tropics through service in the Philippines, are now being quietly withdrawn from the islands and quietly assigned to positions on the border.

It was stated at the war department that before June 15 every cavalry regiment in the United States will be on duty on the Rio Grande.

It is confidently anticipated that within the next few days the Eleventh infantry, now stationed at Fort Russell, Wyo., will be on its way to San Antonio. Cars for the transportation of these troops have already arrived at the fort.

In explaining the preparations at Fort Russell, the war department announced that it proposed to be ready for any emergency.

The war department instructed Colonel Steever, stationed at San Antonio, to immediately investigate the shooting of Private John Baker on guard duty on the Rio Grande, near El Paso.

The bullet came from the Mexican side of that river. If this report is not satisfactory to the United States Secretary Wilson will make immediate presentation to the government of Mexico.

Escalon, Mex., May 9. — General Orozco, in command of the rebels here, has refused to recognize the provisional government established last week at Juarez.

He has sent Gomez a telegram threatening him with arrest unless he leaves Mexico. Gomez, it is understood here, is virtually a prisoner in Juarez. Orozco says he only invited Gomez to come and consult him and not to set up a government.

BLAME INSPECTORS FOR ACTS

Six Million Carcasses of Diseased Animals Passed by United States Officers.

Washington, May 9.—In the past six years no fewer than six million carcasses of meat tainted by disease have been passed as wholesome by its inspectors and sold throughout the United States officially admits the department of agriculture.

It was pointed out in Washington that ample proof of the seriousness of the charges against Secretary Wilson, Solicitor McCabe and A. D. Melvin, chief of the bureau of animal industry, contained in the resolution introduced by Representative Nelson is found in the fact that for the first time in their official lives they have been obliged to offer a defense before an official investigation is begun or one witness heard. One remarkable feature of the defense is an attack made by Secretary Wilson upon Mrs. Carolina Bartlett Crane, who first called Mrs. Nelson's attention to the secret orders issued from the department of agriculture.

It was through such secret orders, according to charges made by Representative Nelson, that inspectors employed in packing houses owned by the trust are enabled to pass upon carcasses of diseased animals and permit their distribution as wholesome food.

SHRINERS NAME OFFICERS

Council Will Meet Next Year at Dallas, Tex., on May 13 and 14—Officials Chosen.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 10.—Southern Shriners scored a decisive victory at the meeting of the imperial council here Wednesday by electing Ernest A. Cutts, potentate of the Alee temple, Savannah, Ga., as imperial outer guard by a handsome majority over all other candidates, and the naming of Dallas, Tex., as the mecca of the imperial council next year. May 13 and 14, 1913, were named as the dates for the sessions of the convention in the Texas city.

Cutts is in direct line for the office of imperial potentate, and in twelve years will automatically succeed to that position.

William J. Cunningham of Baltimore was chosen as the next imperial potentate.

Discharged Employe Kills Two.

Seattle, Wash., May 10.—George Prathy, dock master of the Puget Sound navy yard, and Lee Ditton, a clerk in the dock master's office, were shot and killed here Wednesday by J. H. Haley, a discharged employe.

Corbett Will Manage Waugh.

Fort Worth, Tex., May 10.—Jim Corbett has signed a contract to manage Bobby Waugh of this city for one year. Corbett has challenged "Knockout" Brown and several other good men for his protege.

Dinner Caused Victory.

Tacoma, Wash., May 10.—Politicians in this city attribute Colonel Roosevelt's victory in the primary election to a $30 a plate dinner that was given in Tacoma to President Taft last October.

A BLESSING IN DISGUISE

Nervous Breakdown Is a Warning That You Must Heed to Avoid Something Worse.

Nervous exhaustion, or breakdown of the nerves, is more often a blessing than anything else. The nerves have rebelled and you should be thankful it is no worse than it is. Let it serve as a sharp warning to relieve the strain and to take a treatment that will build up your nerves.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are a real nerve tonic. They supply plenty of nourishing red blood to the exhausted nerves and do not excite and urge them on to do work which they have already shown they cannot do. Medicines which whip on the tired nerves do more harm than no medicine at all. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People not only start in immediately to give relief but continue to strengthen the nerves until they are able to do their work once more.

Mrs. J. E. Udelle, whose address is Box 130, R. F. D. No. 1, Osseo, Minn., says: "I was so completely worn out from overwork and nervousness that I was unable to continue at my work as dressmaker. I was very weak and my back ached continually. My stomach was so weak that I could eat nothing but light food and even then I would have pains like cramps. Gas formed on my stomach. I was short of breath and had palpitation of the heart. I was in bed for three months. At Davenport, Iowa, I was under doctors' care but received only temporary relief so gave it up. I then used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. When I began using the pills I had no strength at all and had lost a great deal in weight. I did not have to take the pills long before I felt better. I gave the pills a fair trial and was entirely cured."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are guaranteed to be free from any harmful or habit-forming drugs. They have given the most gratifying results in nervous headaches, neuralgia, nervous dyspepsia, St. Vitus' dance, and even in partial paralysis and locomotor ataxia. Write for the free booklet, "Diseases of the Nervous System."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

Milky Way Causes Glaciers.

Another suggested cause of glacial periods is that they have been due to the shifting of the milky way, such as is known to have occurred. Assuming that much of the earth's heat comes from the stars, Dr. Rudolf Spitaler finds that the change of position in relation to the milky way might have given a different distribution of temperature from that existing at the present time. The stars are not only crowded in the region of the milky way, but many of them are of the hottest type.

Calculation.

"Going to make garden?"

"I dunno," replied the man who always looks discouraged. "I'm busy now figuring up how many toes of lettuce I'll have to raise to pay for the spade and the rake and the rest of the outfit."

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle.

We all admire a man who says just what he thinks—about other people.

"That horrible weather"—how pleasant it really is when you are well! Garfield Tea helps always.

The man who steals our thunder is naturally under a cloud.

A QUARTER CENTURY BEFORE THE PUBLIC

Over Five Million Free Samples Given Away Each Year.

The Constant and Increasing Sales From Samples Proves the Genuine Merit of

ALLEN'S FOOT=EASE.

Shake Into Your Shoes

Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder for the feet. Are you a trifle sensitive about the size of your shoes? Many people wear shoes a size smaller by shaking Allen's Foot-Ease into them. If you have tired, swollen, hot, tender feet, Allen's Foot-Ease gives instant relief. TRY IT TO-DAY. Sold everywhere, 25 cts. Do not accept any substitute. FREE TRIAL PACKAGE sent by mail.

"In a pinch, use Allen's Foot-Ease."

Mother Gray's Sweet Powders, the best medicine for Feverish, sickly Children. Sold by Druggists everywhere. Trial package FREE. Address

ALLEN S. OLMSTED, LE ROY, N. Y.

Your Liver Is Clogged Up

That's Why You're Tired—Out of Sorts—Have No Appetite.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS will put you right in a few days.

They do their duty.

Cure Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion and Sick Headache

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

UNIFORMS as made by us represent the highest standard in the art of uniform making. Don't place your order until you have received our catalogue and samples, state kind wanted. GEORGE EVANS & CO., Dept. X, 132 N. 5th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

THOMPSON'S EYE WATER Quickly relieves eye irritation caused by dust, sun or wind. Booklet free. JOHN L. THOMPSON SONS & CO., Troy, N. Y.

Get This FREE Book Before You Decorate

It shows 20 pretty rooms in modern homes and how to get the very latest designs for your home. We will send you FREE color plans made by expert designers for any rooms you want to decorate.

Alabastine

The Beautiful Wall Tint

is more fashionable than wall paper or paint and costs far less. It is too refined and exquisite in color to compare with any kind of kalsomine. Goes farther on the walls, does not chip, peel or rub off, lasts far longer. 16 Beautiful Tints. Comes all ready to mix with cold water and put on. Easiest to use—full directions on every package. Full 5-lb. pkg., White, 50c; Regular Tints, 55c.

Get the FREE Book of 20 Beautiful Rooms

Write today.

Alabastine Company

37 Grandville Road, Grand Rapids, Mich.
New York City, Desk 1, 105 Water Street

The man who wears a silk hat shouldn't butt in.

Many a fellow who puts up a good front is talked about behind his back.

Garfield Tea keeps the liver in condition, insuring a clear head and good general health. Drink before retiring.

Trouble.

"That man seems to be greatly depressed about something.

"Yes. He must live in some town whose baseball team is at the tail-end."

His Opportunity.

"Going to Wombat's wedding, over on the North side?"

"Not I. I was engaged to that girl. Wombat cut me out."

"Well, come to the wedding. You may get a chance to biff him in the jaw with an old shoe."

Oh, Learned Judge.

A California judge decided that there is no judicial authority to keep a man from making love to his wife, although it could stop his beating her. The remarkable cause of this remarkable decision was that a woman in Los Angeles had applied for an injunction to restrain her husband from insisting on being attentive to her. This judge was not a Solomon, but he realized that only a Solomon could be trusted to rule upon the whims and inconsistencies of womankind.

ALL FREE.

Mrs. New-Wed—How much did you pay the minister when we were married?

New-Wed—Nothing.

Mrs. New-Wed—How was that?

New-Wed—He didn't dare to take my money for fear that it was tainted.

KNOWS NOW

Doctor Was Fooled by His Own Case For a Time.

It's easy to understand how ordinary people get fooled by coffee when doctors themselves sometimes forget the facts.

A physician speaks of his own experience:

"I had used coffee for years and really did not exactly believe it was injuring me although I had palpitation of the heart every day. (Tea contains caffeine—the same drug found in coffee—and is just as harmful as coffee.)

"Finally one day a severe and almost fatal attack of heart trouble frightened me and I gave up both tea and coffee, using Postum instead, and since that time I have had absolutely no heart palpitation except on one or two occasions when I tried a small quantity of coffee, which caused severe irritation and proved to me I must let it alone.

"When we began using Postum it seemed weak—that was because we did not make it according to directions—but now we put a little bit of butter in the pot when boiling and allow the Postum to boil full 15 minutes which gives it the proper rich flavor and the deep brown color.

"I have advised a great many of my friends and patients to leave off coffee and drink Postum, in fact I daily give this advice." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Many thousands of physicians use Postum in place of tea and coffee in their own homes and prescribe it to patients.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

BURNING DAYLIGHT

By JACK LONDON

AUTHOR OF "THE CALL OF THE WILD," "WHITE FANG," "MARTIN EDEN," ETC.

(Copyright, 1910, by the New York Herald Company.)
(Copyright, 1910, by the MacMillan Company.

SYNOPSIS.

Elam Harnish, known all through Alaska as "Burning Daylight," celebrates his 30th birthday with a crowd of miners at the Circle City Tivoli. The dance leads to heavy gambling, in which over $100,000 is staked. Harnish loses his money and his mine but wins the mail contract. He starts on his mail trip with dogs and sledge, telling his friends that he will be in the big Yukon gold strike at the start. Burning Daylight makes a sensationally rapid run across country with the mail, appears at the Tivoli and is now ready to join his friends in a dash to the new gold fields. Deciding that gold will be found in the up-river district Harnish buys two tons of flour, which he declares will be worth its weight in gold, but when he arrives with his flour he finds the big flat desolate. A comrade discovers gold and Daylight reaps a rich harvest. He goes to Dawson, becomes the most prominent figure in the Klondike and defeats a combination of capitalists in a vast mining deal. He returns to civilization, and, amid the bewildering complications of high finance, Daylight finds that he has been led to invest his eleven millions in a manipulated scheme. He goes to New York, and confronting his disloyal partners with a revolver, he threatens to kill them if his money is not returned. They are cowed, return their stealings and Harnish goes back to San Francisco where he meets his fate in Dede Mason, a pretty stenographer. He makes large investments and gets into the political ring. For a rest he goes to the country. Daylight gets deeper into high finance in San Francisco, but often the longing for the simple life nearly overcomes him. Dede Mason buys a horse and Daylight meets her in her saddle trips. One day he asks Dede to go with him on one more ride, his purpose being to ask her to marry him and they canter away, she trying to analyze her feelings. Dede tells Daylight that her happiness could not lie with a money manipulator. Daylight undertakes to build up a great industrial community.

CHAPTER XVII.—Continued.

She led the way through the door opening out of the hall to the right, and, once inside, he stood awkwardly rooted to the floor, gazing about him and at her and all the time trying not to gaze. In his perturbation he failed to hear and see her invitation to a seat.

"Won't you sit down?" she repeated.

"Look here," he said, in a voice that shook with passion, "there's one thing I won't do, and that's propose to you in the office. That's why I'm here. Dede Mason, I want you, I just want you."

So precipitate was he, that she had barely time to cry out her involuntary alarm and to step back, at the same time catching one of his hands as he attempted to gather her into his arms.

"Oh, I know I'm a sure enough fool," he said. "I—I guess I'll sit down. Don't be scairt, Miss Mason. I'm not real dangerous."

"I'm not afraid," she answered, with a smile, slipping down herself into a chair.

"It's funny," Daylight sighed, almost with regret; "here I am, strong enough to bend you around and tie knots in you. Here I am, used to having my will with man, beast or anything. And here I am sitting in this chair, as weak and helpless as a little lamb. You sure take the starch out of me."

"I—I wish you hadn't asked," she said softly.

"Mebbe it's best you should know a few things before you give me an answer," he went on, ignoring the fact that the answer had already been given. "I never went after a woman before in my life, all reports to the

His Arms Went About Her and Held Her Closely.

contrary notwithstanding. The stuff you read about me in the papers and books, about me being a lady-killer, is all wrong. There's not an iota of truth in it. I guess I've done more than my share of card-playing and whisky-drinking, but women I've let alone. There was a woman that killed herself, but I didn't know she wanted me that bad or else I'd have married her—not for love, but to keep her from killing herself. She was the best of the boiling, but I never gave her any encouragement. I'm telling you all this because you've read about it, and I want you to get it straight from me."

"I can't marry you," she said. "I like you a great deal, but—"

He waited a moment for her to complete the sentence, failing which, he went on himself.

"I haven't an exaggerated opinion of myself, so I know I ain't bragging when I say I'll make a pretty good husband. You could follow your own sweet will, and nothing would be too good for you. I'd give you everything your heart desired—"

"Except yourself," she interrupted suddenly, almost sharply. "Don't you see?" she hurried on. "I could have far easier married the Elam Harnish fresh from Klondike when I first laid eyes on him long ago, than marry you sitting before me now."

He shook his head slowly.

"That's one too many for me. The more you know and like a man the less you want to marry him. Familiarity breeds contempt—I guess that's what you mean."

"No, no," she cried, but before she could continue, a knock came on the door.

His eyes, quick with observation like an Indian's, darted about the room while she was out. The impression of warmth and comfort and beauty predominated, though he was unable to analyze it; while the simplicity delighted him—expensive simplicity, he decided, and most of it leftovers from the time her father went broke and died.

She re-entered the room, and as she crossed it to her chair, he admired the way she walked, while the bronze slippers were maddening.

"I'd like to ask you several questions," he began immediately. "Are you thinking of marrying somebody else?"

"There isn't anybody else. I don't know anybody I like well enough to marry. For that matter, I don't think I am a marrying woman. Office work seems to spoil me for that."

"It strikes me that you're the most marryingest woman that ever made a man sit up and take notice. And now another question. You see, I've just got to locate the lay of the land. Is there anybody you like as much as you like me?"

But Dede had herself well in hand.

"That's unfair," she said. "And if you stop and consider, you will find that you are doing the very thing you disclaimed—namely, nagging. I refuse to answer any more of your questions. Let us talk about other things. How is Bob?"

Half an hour later, whirling along through the rain on Telegraph Avenue toward Oakland, Daylight smoked one of his brown-paper cigarettes and reviewed what had taken place. It was not at all bad, was his summing up, though there was much about it that was baffling. There was that liking him the more she knew him and at the same time wanting to marry him less. That was a puzzler.

Once again, on a rainy Sunday, weeks afterward, Daylight proposed to Dede. As on the first time, he restrained himself until his hunger for her overwhelmed him and swept him away in his red automobile to Berkeley. He left the machine several blocks away and proceeded to the house on foot. But Dede was out, the landlady's daughter told him, and added, on second thought, that she was walking in the hills. Furthermore, the young lady directed him where Dede's walk was most likely to extend. Daylight obeyed the girl's instructions, and soon the street he followed passed the last house and itself ceased where began the first steep slopes of the open hills. The air was damp with the on-coming of rain, for the storm had not yet burst, though the rising wind proclaimed its imminence. As far as he could see, there was no sign of Dede on the smooth, grassy hills. To the right, dipping down into a hollow and rising again, was a large, full-grown eucalyptus grove. Here all was noise and movement, the lofty, slender-trunked trees swaying back and forth in the wind and clashing their branches together. In the squalls, above all the minor noises of creaking and groaning, arose a deep thrumming note as of a mighty harp. Knowing Dede as he did, Daylight was confident that he would find her somewhere in this grove where the storm effects were so pronounced. And find her he did, across the hollow and on the exposed crest of the opposing slope where the gale smote its fiercest blows.

"It's the same old thing," he said. "I want you and I've come for you. You've just got to have me, Dede, for, the more I think about it the more certain I am that you've got a sneaking liking for me that's something more than just ordinary liking. And you don't dast say that it isn't; now dast you?"

"Please, please," she begged. "We can never marry, so don't let us discuss it."

Daylight decided that action was more efficient than speech. So he stepped between her and the wind and drew her so that she stood close in the shelter of him. An unusually stiff squall blew about them and

"Dede Mason, I Want You, I Just Want You."

thrummed overhead in the tree-tops, and both paused to listen. A shower of flying leaves enveloped them, and hard on the heel of the wind came driving drops of rain. He looked down on her and on her hair, wind-blown about her face; and because of her closeness to him and of a fresher and more poignant realization of what she meant to him, he trembled so that she was aware of it in the hand that held hers. She suddenly leaned against him, bowing her head until it rested lightly upon his breast. And so they stood while another squall, with flying leaves and scattered drops of rain, rattled past. With equal suddenness she lifted her head and looked at him.

"Do you know," she said, "I prayed last night about you. I prayed that you would fail, that you would lose everything—everything."

Daylight stared his amazement at this cryptic utterance.

"That sure beats me. I always said I got out of my depth with women, and you've got me out of my depth now. Well, you've just got to explain, that's all."

His arms went around her and held her closely, and this time she did not resist. Her head was bowed, and he could not see her face, yet he had a premonition that she was crying. He had learned the virtue of silence and he waited her will in the matter. Things had come to such a pass that she was bound to tell him something now. Of that he was confident.

"I would dearly like to marry you," she faltered, "but I am afraid. I am proud and humble at the same time that a man like you should care for me. But you have too much money. There's where my abominable common sense steps in. Even if we did marry, you could never be my man—my lover and my husband. You would be your money's man. I know I am a foolish woman; but I want my man for myself. And your money destroys you; it makes you less and less nice. I am not ashamed to say that I love you, because I shall never marry you. And I loved you much when I did not know you at all, when you first came down from Alaska and I first went into the office. You were my hero. You were the Burning Daylight of the gold-diggings, the daring traveler and miner. And you looked it. I don't see how any woman could have looked at you without loving you—then. But you don't look it now. You, a man of the open, have been cooping yourself up in the cities with all that that means. You are becoming something different, something not so healthy, not so clean, not so nice. Your money and your way of life are doing it. You know it. You haven't the same body now that you had then. You are putting on flesh, and it is not healthy flesh. You are kind and genial with me, I know, but you are not kind and genial to all the world as you were then. You have become harsh and cruel. I do love you, but I cannot marry you and destroy love. You are growing into a thing that I must in the end despise. You can't help it. More than you can possibly love me, do you love this business game. This business—and it's all perfectly useless, so far as you are concerned—claims all of you. I sometimes think it would be easier to share you equitably with another woman than to share you with this business. I might have half of you, at any rate. But this business would claim, not half of you, but nine-tenths of you, or ninety-nine hundredths. You hold back nothing; you put all you've got into whatever you are doing—"

"Limit is the sky," he grunted grim affirmation.

"But if you would only play the lover-husband that way. And now I won't say another word," she added. "I've delivered a whole sermon."

She rested now, frankly and fairly, in the shelter of his arms, and both were oblivious to the gale that rushed past them in quicker and stronger blasts. The big downpour of rain had not yet come, but the mist-like squalls were more frequent. Daylight was openly perplexed, and he was still perplexed when he began to speak.

"You've left me no argument. I know I'm not the same man that came from Alaska. I couldn't hit the trail with the dogs as I did in them days. I'm soft in my muscles, and my mind's gone hard. I used to respect men. I despise them now. You see, I spent all my life in the open, and I reckon I'm an open-air man. Why, I've got the prettiest little ranch you ever laid eyes on up in Glen Ellen. That's where I got stuck for the brick-yard. You recollect handling the correspondence. I only laid eyes on the ranch that one time, and I so fell in love with it that I bought it there and then. I just rode around the hills, and was happy as a kid out of school. I'd be a better man living in the country. The city doesn't make me better. You're plumb right there. I know it. But suppose your prayer should be answered and I'd go clean broke and have to work for day's wages? Suppose I had nothing left but that little ranch, and was satisfied to grow a few chickens, and scratch a living somehow—would you marry me then, Dede?"

"Why, we'd be together all the time!" she cried.

Then was the moment, among the trees, ere they began the descent of the hill, that Daylight might have drawn her closely to him and kissed her once. But he was too perplexed with the new thoughts she had put into his head to take advantage of the situation. He merely caught her by the arm and helped her over the rougher footing. At the edge of the grove he suggested that it might be better for them to part there, but she insisted that he accompany her as far as the house.

"Do you know," he said, "taking it by and large, it's the happiest day of my life. Dede, Dede, we've just got to get married. It's the only way, and trust to luck for it's coming out all right."

But the tears were threatening to rise in her eyes again, as she shook her head and turned and went up the steps.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

COULD HARDLY MOVE.

Kidney Trouble Caused Terrible Misery.

Mrs. J. S. Downs, 219 N. Sixth St., Chickasha, Okla., says: "My back across my kidneys became so lame I could hardly move. My limbs cramped and stiffened and I felt completely worn out. Nervousness and headaches kept me in an unstrung condition and frequent passages of the kidney secretions added to my discomfort. I was soon relieved, however, after I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills and when I had used four boxes, I felt like another woman."

"When Your Back is Lame, Remember the Name—DOAN'S." 50c all stores. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Time.

"How long have you been a widow, Mrs. Weed?"

"It will be a year the fourth of next month."

"Dear me! Is it as long as that? How time flies!"

"Oh, do you think so? Well, if you ever have to wait a year to look pleasant when men offer you attentions you'll give up the idea that time is much of a flyer."

When Your Eyes Need Care

Try Murine Eye Remedy. No Smarting—Feels Fine—Acts Quickly. Try it for Red, Weak, Watery Eyes and Granulated Eyelids. Illustrated Book in each Package. Murine is compounded by our Oculists—not a "Patent Medicine"—but used in successful Physicians' Practice for many years. Now dedicated to the Public and sold by Druggists at 25c and 50c per Bottle. Murine Eye Salve in Aseptic Tubes, 25c and 50c.

Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago

Appropriate.

Willis—Why do you call your machine a "she?"

Gillis—It is said to be the "last word" in an automobile construction.

Stop the Pain.

The hurt of a burn or a cut stops when Cole's Carbolisalve is applied. It heals quickly and prevents scars. 25c and 50c by druggists. For free sample write to J. W. Cole & Co., Black River Falls, Wis.

Cure for Insomnia.

"Dibble says he can't sleep."

"He ought to read the war news from Mexico."

Garfield Tea is unequalled either as an occasional or a daily laxative.

A friend in word is not always a friend in deed.

Sold on the Chautuqua Plan

Sent anywhere in the U. S.

On 30 Days Free Trial

We Stand the Freight

No Dealers or Agents

You may be your own dealer. YOU BUY AND SELL BOTH. Eight beautiful styles of PIANOS and PLAYER-PIANOS to select from. If after a whole month's trial in your own home you find it all or better than we claim (as you will do) you may buy it on the EASIEST POSSIBLE TERMS. We save you from $150 to $250. Keep the money in your own pocket.

No Advance Cash Payment

Small Weekly or Monthly Payments. No extras. No "strings" to this offer. Stool, scarf and book FREE.

Unlimited Warranty

not for five or ten years only, but FOR A LIFETIME—the STRONGEST guarantee given by any responsible company.

If the CHAUTAUQUA PIANO does not please and prove EQUAL or BETTER than the most famous and most costly piano made, then it comes back at our expense of freight BOTH WAYS. You are to be "both judge and jury."

FREE Fifty Music Lessons Included If You Write at Once.

Send for our large, handsomely illustrated catalogue—different from all others—telling you much that you should know before buying, of pianos in general and the CHAUTAUQUA in particular. "The Chautauqua piano" will interest you.

Chautauqua Piano Co., Inc.

New York - Chicago

Address Executive Offices: Box K. COHOCTON, N. Y.

Splendid Crops

In Saskatchewan (Western Canada)

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

800 Bushels from 20 acres of wheat was the thresher's return from a Lloydminster farm in the season of 1910. Many fields in that as well as other districts yielded from 25 to 35 bushels of wheat to the acre. Other grains in proportion.

LARGE PROFITS are thus derived from the FREE HOMESTEAD LANDS of Western Canada.

This excellent showing causes prices to advance. Land values should double in two years' time.

Grain growing, mixed farming, cattle raising and dairying are all profitable. Free Homesteads of 160 acres are to be had in the very best districts; 160 acre pre-emptions at $3.00 per acre within certain areas. Schools and churches in every settlement, climate unexcelled, soil the richest; wood, water and building material plentiful.

For particulars as to location, low settlers' railway rates and descriptive illustrated pamphlet, "Last Best West," and other information, write to Sup't of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or to Canadian Government Agent.

Chas. Pilling, Clifford Blk., Grand Forks, N.D.
J. M. MacLachlan, Box 197, Watertown, S.D.
E. T. Holmes, 315 Jackson St., St. Paul, Minn.
Geo. A. Hall, 125 2d St., Milwaukee, Wis.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3.1879.

The Pennington county convention was rather a one sided affair, being about solid for LaFoolette, with a sligh sentiment for Roosevelt and hardly a peep for Taft. If the republican party expect to make a safe landing next fall it is time to cast Jonah into the sea.

J. M. Bishop has filed for the Republican nomination for county attorney, but whether the name republican will be of any assistance or a load stone depends on who heads the State and National ticket. We extend our sypathy to any friend of ours that would be placed in the position of saying: "Taft and Eberhart are good fellows and should be elected."

The Judicial number of that "Appeal To Reason," which was sent to every editor in the U.S. is likely to make the editors sit up and take notice. The desisions are taken from the official records and discloses the astonishing facts that rapists, murderers, thieves, and tough charactors are being turned loos by our courts, if their conviction should be against the interest of some corporation. As we said before it is time that the people began to sit up and take notice. It might be your wife! It might be your daughtor! Long may the Appeal to Reason, live, and it is no wonder the Courts are trying to suppress it, as it is telling to much truth to please them. The Dred Scott decision sinks into insiginificence in comparison to some of the late and up to date decisions of our courts.

There is one importent question that should be taken up, discussed and acted upon at the annual school meetings this year, and that is the changing of a large number of our rural country schools from a five month term with almost any kind of a teacher will do, to a state graded school with a first grade teacher and an eight month term of school. Any district that has an average attendence of 12½ can draw one hundred and fifty dollars special state aid from the state which goes a long ways toward employing a teacher for the extra three months and the scholars get the benefit. Of course there will be some additional expense in putting in a heating and ventilating plant as required for special state aid, but every school room should have this anyway. Our school district No. 37, Highlanding have had a school with a first grade teacher, nearly all the time since the district has been organized seven years ago and it is a real pleasure to us to hear the new settlers talk with our school children, who they expect to find have just began to learn their A B Cs and find that they are just as far advanced in their studies as they are who have been attending school in town. Talk this over among yourselves and decide to give your children eight months school next year instead of five months and the additional expense will be so small that you will never notice it. Our County superintendent of schools E. A. Mastue will gladly give you all the necessary information, at any time how to get your school started in the new and up to date way. If you can get a first grade school in your home district you will not have to send your children away to school as they begin to get older but can keep them at home. Our Highlanding school has some large scholars who are as far advanced [illegible] any of the school children who [illegible] moving in from the older parts of the state and they got their [illegible] at our country school in [illegible] town of Highlanding.

The Demons Of The Swamps

are mosquitoes. As they sting they put deadly malaria germs in the blood. Then follow the icy chills and the fires of fever. The appetite flies and the strength fails; also malaria often paves the way for deadly typhoid. But Electric Bitters kill and cast out the malaria germs from the blood; give you a fine appetite and renew your strength. "After long suffering," wrote Wm. Fretwell, of Lucama, N.C., "three bottles drove all the malaria from my system, and I've had good health ever since." Best for all stomach, liver and kidney ills. 50 cents At all Druggists.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

I am a candidate for the office of Register of Deeds of Pennington county, and solicit the support of the voters at the Republican primaries to be held September 17th 1912. Nels J. Anderson.

Fungus Slippers.

Before the discovery of lucifer matches a large hoof shaped fungus growing on the trunks of trees was used throughout northern Europe for making amadou or tinder. The thick, brown, woody flesh of the same fungus, cut into slices and beaten until it assumes the appearance of felt, is used at the present day in some parts of Germany for the manufacture of chest protectors, caps, purses, bedroom slippers and various other articles.

The Worm Turned.

"William," said Mrs. Peckem sternly, "did you ever stop to think that some one might steal me when you were away?"

"Well," responded the poor husband with a faraway look, "I was a little alarmed when a horse thief was prowling through these parts last week."

Mrs. Peckem stiffened up haughtily. "A horse thief, eh?"

"Yes. I heard that he carried off two or three nags from this district."

And then Peckem made a bee line for the club.

The Puzzle of Living.

Religionists who do not agree might point out that they differ only in incidentals and not essentials, whereas the scientists differ on everything. Take the science of living. A week ago you would have "died if you drank water with your meals." Now they say it doesn't do any harm at all. One variety says, "Eat meat, lots of it, to build good, rich blood." Another says meat is poison; that vegetables are the only food. A third declares meat and vegetables both increase debility and that you will live twice as long on raw fruits and nuts. Some say: "Talk with your meals, laugh. It makes the food digest." Others insist silence is never so golden as at table.—Pittsburgh Press.

Effective.

At a "first night" in a Paris theater recently one of the scenes showed a funeral procession crossing the stage. As she was about to leave the wings and pass across the stage one of the "mourners," a girl, thought of something funny and her face became wreathed in smiles and she giggled happily.

The stage manager was furious.

"Take a franc off that girl's salary!" he hissed.

The startled "mourner," just making her entrance, burst into tears of dismay and sobbed lamentably all the way across the stage. The critics said it was a triumph of realism.

Not a Distinction.

The detective was trying to get a few pointers from the man who had employed him to hunt for a runaway boy.

"Has he any distinguishing marks about him?" he asked.

"Yes," said the father, frowning impatiently. "The distinguishing mark about him, sir, is that he looks like me."

"H'm!" mused the detective. "I should hardly call that a distinction. That's a handicap."—Chicago Tribune.

TRUE HEROISM.

The hero fears not that if he withhold the avowal of a just and brave act it will go unwitnessed and unloved. One knows it himself and is pledged by it to sweetness of peace and to nobleness of aim, which will prove in the end a better proclamation of it than the relating of the incident.—Emerson.

What Ailed Him.

He came creeping in at the usual hour when a man finds it convenient to enter his house with as little commotion as possible. He replied in response to the usual wifely query put to gentlemen who arrive home at that hour of the night that he had been sitting up with a sick friend. "A sick friend, indeed! And what ailed him?" "W-why, he lost $27."

[illegible] Helps Judge In Bad Fix.

Justice Eli Cherry, of Gillis Mills, Tenn., was plainly worried. A [illegible] sore on his leg had baffled several doctors and long resisted all remedies. "I thought it was a cancer," he wrote "At last I used Bucklen's Arnica Salve and was completely cured." Cures burns, boils, ulcers, cuts, bruises and piles. 25 cents at All Druggists.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam May 10, 1912.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 4th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Fred A. Lacy of Kratka Minnesota, who on June 24th, 1904, made Homestead Entry No. 261, Serial No. 04163, for Lots 2, 3, 4, 5, & 6, Section 24 Township 158 N. Range 42 W. and Lot 8, Section 19, Township 158 N. Range 41 W. 5th Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make final five year proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for the District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minnesota on June 18th day of June 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Ole M. Pederson, Lewis Stenseth, Osmond Swenson, Ole Christoferson, all of Kratka Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam May 10th, 1912.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 4th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Ole Christoferson, of Kratka Minn. who on June 28th, 1904, made Homestead Entry No. 399, Serial No. 04139, for Lots 9, 18 & S.W.¼ S.E.¼ Section 18 Township 158 N. Range 41 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Five Year Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 24th. day of February 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Ole M. Pederson, Krist Larson, Hans Johnson, Fred A. Lane, all of Kratka Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin,
Register.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. The Sunbeam May 10, 1912.

Department of the Interior U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 4th. 1912.

Notice is hereby given that William Parnow, of Kratka Minn. who on June 29th, 1904 made Homestead Entry No. 451, Serial No. 04161, for Lot 1, N ½ S.E.¼ & S.E.¼ S.E.¼ Section 23 Township 158 N. Range 41 W. Fifth Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Five year Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U.S. Commissioner, for District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 18th. day of June 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Helvor Wold, Ole Waale, Stiner Johnson, John I. Johnson, all of Kratka Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin,
Register.

The Burglar's Talisman.

Coal is used for other than heating purposes. For centuries a piece of coal carried on the person has been held to bring good luck. This belief still survives among burglars. They invariably carry a small piece of coal with them when they start out on an expedition. The more successful they are and the greater their good luck in avoiding capture the more highly do they prize their talisman. This belief in the virtues of coal is accounted for in the old superstition, traceable to sun worship, of regarding any object associated with fire as an emblem of the solar rays and a preservative against evil spirits.—London Chronicle.

Pipes and Hymns.

Rev. Dr. Parr when perpetual curate of Hatton, Warwickshire, which living he held from 1783 to 1790, regularly smoked in the vestry while the congregation was singing long hymns, chosen for the purpose, immediately before the sermon. The doctor was wont to exclaim, "My people like long hymns, but I prefer a long pipe."—London Telegraph.

The Thrifty Dutch.

The thrift of the Dutch has brought to Holland a fame of wealth that is richly deserved. Yet in spite of the wealth, taken as a whole, the Netherlands do not contain many great fortunes as fortunes are gauged in the United States. A feature of Dutch business is the number of small establishments of the great corporations in which shares are held by many people. Much of the money which the country lends abroad is the savings of the masses.

Exposed.

"The crooked politician is bound to be exposed," said a senator at a dinner in Washington. "Exposure will come even from the most improbable source. It's like the case of old man Jones.

"Jones, a hypocritical individual, was a Sunday school superintendent, and one Sunday the minister, in an allusion to the domestic cat, said to Jones' little boy:

"'Now, Tommy, tell us the name of the animal which, when all the house is dark and everybody is asleep, comes creeping softly and silently upstairs?'

"'Father,' said Tommy promptly."—Chicago Record-Herald.

[illegible] TAFT MEN OUT FOR ROOSEVELT

Leaders in Two States Explain Changed Attitude.

Tidal Wave That is Sweeping the Candidacy of the Colonel to Success is Daily Growing in Volume—Strong Declarations for "T. R."

Washington, April 27.—Many supporters of Mr. Taft have within the last few days changed their allegiance and henceforth will support Colonel Roosevelt. Leaders in two states, Kansas and New York, have declared themselves for Colonel Roosevelt, and from several of the southern states letters have been received telling of defections from the Taft forces.

The tidal wave that is sweeping the candidacy of Colonel Roosevelt to success is daily growing in volume, and no better exemplification of the sentiment felt by political leaders throughout the country is to be had than the statements in two letters received by Roosevelt leaders. One is from former Congressman Charles B. Law of Brooklyn, N. Y., now sheriff of King's county, and the other from J. M. Simpson, former United States internal revenue collector, chairman of the Kansas Republican state central committee, and for years a wheelhorse of the Republican organization in that state. Both of these men, up to a short time ago, were supporting Mr. Taft.

Former Congressman Law writes as follows:

"President Taft's pleasing personality and his undoubted honesty of mind and purity of character very naturally predisposed in his favor those of us who knew him personally and who believed generally in the policy of renominating a president who had acceptably served one term. But as the contest between the president and Colonel Roosevelt has progressed, it has become painfully apparent that there is good ground for the charge made by Colonel Roosevelt that the president does not trust the people and is unwilling to leave his candidacy in their hands. Instead of directing his appeal to the people and trusting them to find a way to accomplish their will, he has obviously been sceptical either of the good will of the people or of their ability to have their way, and has deliberately chosen to rely upon the political machines headed and controlled by men of the type of Penrose and Lorimer, to grind out delegates to the national convention.

"The logic of the situation is as clear as it is disagreeable to those who personally admire the president. If nominated, he will owe the debt of his obligation to those upon whom he relied for his delegates, and the interests they represent. Personally obnoxious as this obligation may be to the president, it will be real and he cannot escape its influence.

"Colonel Roosevelt, with characteristic courage, has gone over the heads of the big machine bosses and has made his appeal direct to the people themselves, to whom alone he will be under obligation if nominated and elected. With what effect this appeal has been made can be seen in Illinois and Pennsylvania, where it became an issue whether the machine was to have its way or whether the people were to have their way. There never can be but one result to such a contest where fair and reasonable opportunity for the expression of the popular will is afforded. This remarkable situation has developed to such an extent that even the friends of President Taft must in fairness admit that the nomination of Colonel Roosevelt would be the greatest demonstration of the reality of popular rule this country has yet seen. Unfortunately there are some good men who either fear or do not believe in genuine popular rule."

Mr. Simpson in his letter says it would be suicide for the party to nominate a man of the weakness of Mr. Taft. His letter in full is as follows:

"The success of the Republican party at the polls next November is so far reaching and means so much to the American people that no man's ambition and no man's personal interests should for a moment be considered when the party's success is in danger.

"Wherever by direct popular primary public sentiment has been uncovered, north, south, east or west, the weakness of President Taft has been undisputed.

"President Taft lost the confidence of the American farmer when he made common cause with the Democrats and used all the power of his administration to force through congress the so-called Canadian reciprocity agreement, which would have cost the producers of this country millions of dollars annually, had it been ratified by Canada.

"It is pitiful. Moreover, it is suicide for the party to go into the November elections with a man of this weakness at its head.

"I doubt if there is another American living who stands so high in the esteem of his countrymen as Theodore Roosevelt.

"I most earnestly hope that all former differences of opinion will be dropped and that Republicans of Kansas will rally to the support of Roosevelt, whose nomination will make absolutely certain the success of the party that stands [illegible] its magnificent [illegible] government."

An Old Saw, With A New Set.

We have now a large and complete stock of new goods at our Kratka store, and would be pleased to have all our old customers call and see us at the new store and post Office.

A FINE LINE OF BOTH HEAVY AND LIGHT SHOES.

Ask to look at our stock of Shoes. No trouble to show GOODS.

Higest market price paid for butter and eggs.

Singer Bros Kratka minn.

RHODA STORE

NEW GOODS, NEW PRICES.

A trial order will convince you, that this is the best Store to buy your goods.

I HAVE A FINE LINE OF gROCERIES.

BOOTS, SHOES, & COMPLET STOCK OF SUMMER FOOT WARE.

give me a call and get prices.

GEORGE SINGER. Prop. Rhoda Minn.

U. S. Mail,

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 10.00 a. m. on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 1.30 p.m

Wm. G. Hunt, p.m.

FARM LOANS.

Made Without Delay, at reasonable rates of Interest.

Be sure and see me before you place your loan.

GEORGE ELDER.
McGinn Block,
Thief River Falls.

Built in Blood.

The winter palace of the czars was built in blood. Almost every stone of the walls and every square yard of the plaster lining them cost a life. Nicholas had given the order that the palace must be rebuilt in a year, and what was human life against the despot's will? Six thousand men were kept at work day and night, with the palace heated at 30 R. to dry the walls rapidly, while the temperature outside was often 30 degrees below zero R. The men could only work with ice packs on their heads, and, experiencing a daily change of 60 degrees, they died by the score every day. By the end of the year the death roll was some thousands, but the palace was finished.

A Wise Woman.

"Now, for $5," announced the star gazer, "I will furnish you with a philter which will make your husband love you to the exclusion of all others."

"I don't think I'll invest," decided the practical housewife. "But if you have a philter which will make him bring home some of his salary on pay day I'll allow you a percentage on all funds realized."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

McCall's Magazine and McCall Patterns

For Women

Have More Friends than any other magazine or patterns. McCall's is the reliable Fashion Guide monthly in one million one hundred thousand homes. Besides showing all the latest designs of McCall Patterns, each issue is brimful of sparkling short stories and helpful information for women.

Save Money and Keep in Style by subscribing for McCall's Magazine at once. Costs only 50 cents a year, including any one of the celebrated McCall Patterns free.

McCall Patterns Lead all others in style, fit, simplicity, economy and number sold. More dealers sell McCall Patterns than any other two makes combined. None higher than 15 cents. Buy from your dealer, or by mail from

McCALL'S MAGAZINE
236-246 W. 37th St., New York City

[illegible]

CORN - SEEDS TREES

Our 29th Annual Catalog is now ready and free for the asking. It is a work of art and full of good things.

See King Corn on front cover.

WILL'S PIONEER SEED HOUSE and NURSERY
OSCAR H. WILL & CO.
BISMARCK, NO. DAKOTA

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

[illegible]

Scientific American.

[illegible] New York

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Call and see us, when you are ready to make your final proof.

At Sunbeam yesterday, Wm. G. Hunt and Mrs Harfiet G. Black were united in marriage by Rev. John Lattimore. A wedding reception will be given later, at which all friends will be invited.

One of C. F. Clarks horses was taken quite seariously sick with swamp feavor last Saturday, and Dr. Newel came out and treated him with the new remedy for this dred disease and he is on the way to recovery.

The Red Lake River is riseing every day notwithstanding we have had no rain and it will soon be time for Major Shunk to make a report that the flood is caused by Red Lake being above its normal level.

Ye editor was down to Thief River Falls Tuesday and took in the Republican convention. There was no reguiary elected delegates from Highlanding so we did the best we could to reprcent the true sentiment of the the town, and we will be darned if some of them old stand pat repupublicans diten't call us a Socialist.

Roosevelt received the indorsement of the Ninth District at the Republican convention held at Thief River Falls Wednesday. This agrees with our ideas, for we want to see Taft defeated and like to see the delegates from Northern Minnesota pushing for the man who has a show to beat him.

The Democratic County Convention is to be held at Thief River Falls May. 29. Highlanding will be entitled to two Delegates in this Convention. Deer Park 2, Mayfield 2, Hickery 2, Kratka 2, Star 2, Turn out boys and let them know that we have some live Democrats in eastern Pennington County.

As They See Us In England.

Political riots in America are carried out in a thoroughgoing fashion. Lord Rosebery tells a story of a friend of his who visited Baltimore when an election for congress was in progress. Turning in for a shave, he complained to the negro barber that his razor was very blunt. "Vurry likely, sir," was the reply. "I was out last night at an election meeting."—London Chronicle.

KNOWLEDGE.

It is the glorious prerogative of the empire of knowledge that what it gains it never loses. On the contrary, it increases by the multiple of its own power. All its ends become means; all its attainments help to new conquests.—Daniel Webster.

Cradle Robbers.

Two or three young men were exhibiting, with great satisfaction, the results of a day's fishing, whereupon a young woman remarked very demurely:

"Fish go in schools, do they not?"

"I believe they do, but why do you ask?"

"Oh, nothing; only I was just thinking that you must have broken up an infant class."—Washington Star.

Boiling Potatoes.

There is a simple way to prevent potatoes from burning and sticking to the bottom of the pot. An inverted pie pan placed in the bottom of the pot avoids scorching potatoes. The water and empty space beneath the pan save the potatoes. This also makes the work of cleaning pots easier, as no adhering parts of potatoes are left to be scoured out.

Laurel Wreaths For Athletes.

In France and other parts of the continent of Europe the sportsmen have a curious custom which is a survival of the classic days of Greece and Rome—namely, the presenting of laurel wreaths to victorious athletes in great sporting events. If a man wins some long distance running or cycling race he is loaded up with these tangible tokens of appreciation, and for the time looks like a bereaved relation hastening to a funeral in a running or cycling suit.

Degrees of Love.

"That prima donna must love music thoroughly."

"Oh, I don't know," replied the manager. "She doesn't seem to get a bit of pleasure out of hearing anybody else sing well."—Washington Star.

A Pound of Coal.

One pound of good coal has sufficient energy to lift a man fourteen miles high.

FOR SALE: [illegible] weeks old. John Aasbrener, Sec. 13 Deer Park.

Barbers in Egypt.

Many barbers in Egypt are government servants. According to an edict issued by Ibrahim Pasha in 1848, village barbers were ordered to examine all dead bodies and register the necessary particulars.

Escapes An Awful Fate.

A thousand tongues could not express the gratitude of Mrs. J. E. Cox, of Joliet Ills., for her wonderful deliverance from an awful fate. "Typhoid pneumonia had left me with a dreadful cough," she writes. "Sometimes I had such awful coughing spells I thought I would die. I could get no help from doctor's treatment or other medicine till I used Dr. Kings New Discovery. But I owe my life to to this wonderful remedy for I scarsely cough at all now." Quick and safe, its the most reliable of all throat and lung medicine. Every bottle guaranteed. 50c and $1,00. Trial bottle free at All Druggists.

What Texans Admire,

is hearty, vigorous life, according to Hugh Tallman, of San Antonio. "We find" he writes, "that Dr. King's New Life Pills surely put new life and energy into a person. Wife and I believe they are the best made." Excellent for stomach, liver or kidney troubles 25 cts. at All Druggists.

FARM FOR SALE.

The N. E. ¼ Section 14 Township 152 N. Range 40, Town of Deer Park. Price $16,00 per acre.

Henry Rovoold,
Alsask, Sask. Canada.

DRESS MAKING.

For plain and Fancy sewing apply to Mrs. Sam McMahn Student of the America College of drees making.

Kuehnel, Minn.

Notice To Farmers.

I have an a No. Jack, nine years old which will stand for service during the season of 1912, at my farm on section 8 town of Deer Park.

M. E. Hyland.

Jefferson's One Hobby.

Joseph Jefferson's one hobby was painting. In the early morning, at half past 6 or so, he could be heard calling for his coffee and for his palette and brushes. It was very hard to get any conversation out of him during the day that did not in some way lead up to painting. He would talk by the hour about the different painters and their works. He was gifted with a peculiar ability to make clear to other persons all he himself had learned.—Mary Shaw in Century.

Vary Often.

"Necessity is the mother of invention."

"So? What's the mother of matrimony?"

"Alimony."

Defined.

"What's an ideal wife?"

"Oh, the other fellow's, I suppose."

Flowers For Her

They were standing in front of a counter of fresh flowers, she with her eyes fixed longingly on the wares displayed; he jingling his change in his pocket, watching her face.

"Oh, George," she exclaimed ecstatically, "I do so adore those big lavender chrysanthemums! Don't you think them quite the loveliest of them all?" She turned beseeching eyes on him.

"Yes, they're pretty fine," he admitted, doubtfully. "But the yellow ones are more—well, sunny, don't you think?" He eyed the price tag thoughtfully. The yellow flowers were a whole dollar a dozen cheaper.

"Ye-es," she pondered, thoughtfully, "I suppose they are. But I do love those big lavender ones." She paused a moment, then she turned adoring eyes toward the yellow flowers. "Oh, I do love the yellow ones, too! Then shall we get these?" She looked at him expectantly.

"Well, now, we must look at all of them," he replied. "We mustn't hurry. I like the yellow chrysanthemums better than the lavender, but how about roses? Now, roses, I think, are a lot prettier than chrysanthemums!" He contemplated the price tags again, thoughtfully. Roses were only about half the price of the chrysanthemums.

"Oh, yes," the girl breathed, softly. "Aren't they heavenly? Those big pinkish white ones! Oh, let's get those. They look like—like—sunset, don't they?" She viewed them longingly.

"Did you see these little red ones?" he exclaimed, suddenly, as his comprehensive view took in the marvelous price marked on their tag. "Aren't they pretty?" He glanced at her cautiously.

She looked where he pointed. "Oh, they are sweet!" she admitted, delightedly. "Just like little strawberries. Oh, I almost think I like them better than the big ones! Don't you?"

"Yes, lots better!" the man replied feelingly. "But did you see those little white stars, down there!" he exclaimed as she opened her lips to ask him to buy the roses. "Aren't they the flowers, though! They look like the May flowers. Remember them? They were white and starlike, just like these, only these are lots bigger!" He noted carefully the placard announcing that they were sold by the bunch instead of by the dozen.

"Yes, and they're so cheap, too! We could get two or three bunches!" The girl had noticed the placard. "Shall we get these?" She waited, tapping her foot impatiently as he considered.

He smiled at her for lack of words. Then he had an inspiration. "Why," he said, gently reproving her impatience, "I thought you told me that there wasn't anything on earth you like so well as goldenrod, and here you never even look to see if they have it! I'm afraid you're like other women, after all. It's the showy things you like—not the things that are filled with sentiment! And you were brought up where goldenrod was thickest, too!"

The girl moved uneasily. She looked at the big bunches of goldenrod disdainfully. You could have all you could carry for 10 cents. There seemed to be as much of it as there was in the fields at home, right there on the counter!

"Oh, but—" she began rebelliously.

He checked her words, with a sad shake of his head. "There, don't say it!" he entreated her. "I want to believe that you truly love the simple things of our childhood! I want to feel that you haven't lost your charm in this big city! Take the roses or the chrysanthemums, if you wish—but don't say that you prefer them to goldenrod!"

The girl reached out a penitent hand. "Oh," she begged, "do let's get goldenrod! I'm so glad you reminded me! Oh, George, whatever should I fall into if I don't have you! I'm getting so—so—sordid, in the city!" And she buried her face in the goldenrod as he handed the clerk a dime.—Chicago Daily News.

Indian Languages.

Probably the most important and most surprising fact about American Indian languages is their enormous number. On the North American continent there were spoken probably 1,000, and possibly even more different languages and dialects. Of South America we know less, but everything points to an equal linguistic variety on that continent. The tremendous total is astounding because the aboriginal population in both continents certainly numbered fewer millions than are today found in many single European countries in which only one language prevails. The twenty-five or fifty millions of American Indians possessed as many different languages as the billion or more inhabitants of the old world.—Dr. A. L. Kroeber, in Popular Science Monthly.

The Only Way.

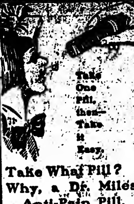
"Can you tell me the quickest way for a man of my ability to get up in the world?"

"Certainly. Take the nearest elevator."

Sympathy.

He—I feel so badly. I have such a queer empty feeling.

She—Where? In your head?



Take One Pill, then—Take it Easy.

Take What Pill? Why, a Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pill,

of course. Good for all kinds of pain. Used to relieve Neuralgia, Headache, Nervousness, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Kidney Pains, Lumbago, Locomotor Ataxia, Backache, Stomachache, Periodical Pains of women, and for pain in any part of the body.

"I have used Dr. Miles' medicines for over 12 years and find them excellent. I keep Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills in the house all the time, and would not think of taking a journey without them, no matter how short a distance I am going. I cannot praise them enough."

Miss Lou M. Churchill,
63 High St., Penacook, N. H.

At all druggists. 25 doses 25c.

MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

England and Wales.

If the land of England and Wales were equally divided there would be a little over an acre for each person.

Unimportant Man.

Many a man goes away from home for a week and imagines that he is missed by the whole community, and when he comes home he finds that there isn't a person in town that knew he had been away.

THE SMALL LIFE.

The daisy is as perfect as the flower that blossoms only once in a decade. The small life need not be less beautiful than the great.—Rev. W. J. Dawson.

A Surprise In Store.

Sweet Innocence—Papa says that you can't afford to marry. Guileful Youth—Oh, how absurd! Why, it only costs a few dollars! Sweet Innocence—Is that so? How foolish papa is! I'll tell him.

One Method.

"Mother, did you learn to cook before you got married?"

"I did not. I married first. There's no use learning a trade until you know you're going to need it."—Detroit Free Press.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

LUNG DISEASE

"After four in our family had died of consumption I was taken with a frightful cough and lung trouble, but my life was saved and I gained 87 pounds through using

DR. KING'S NEW DISCOVERY

W. R. Patterson, Wellington, Tex.

PRICE 50c and $1.00 AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

His Part.

"Who is the responsible person in this firm?" asked the brusque caller of the office boy.

"Can't tell you, sir," replied the pert lad, "but I'm the one who gets all the blame."

LUMBER FOR SALE.

I will have about 50,000 ft. of lumber for sale this winter at $15.00 per thousand. Will take cattle in exchange.

Andrew Nilson.

W. G. Hunt.

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate Court Work.

NEW BANK.

FIRST STATE BANK,

OF OKLEE Lambert Post Office Minn.

NEW STATION ON DULUTH SOO LINE.

Your Business Solicited.

Directors: A. P. Toupin, Pres. Samuel Gilteau Vic. Prs.
Larry O'Niel, Abrham Parqnize, T. L. Cruzon.
J. A. Duffy. Cashier. T. L. Cruzon, Assist. Cashier.

Let Us Tell You Something!

This Season we are offering the best line of Dry Goods that ever came into this Section of the Country.

Don't Buy Elswhare, Until You Have Seen What We Have To Offer.

No Matter What Price you pay, WE Will please YOU.

VAUGHAN BROS. & CO.

Highlanding Minn.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's $50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day

Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were piloting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory? We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.

Our New Home. Capacity 20,000 Safes Annually.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars, it will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Ask for Catalogue 16 T.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.

CINCINNATI, OHIO

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT

IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost.

BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the regular retail prices.

$10.00 Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof Self-healing Tires A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks, or Glass will not let the air out. A hundred thousand pairs sold last year.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D" also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

J. L. MEAD CYCLE COMPANY, CHICAGO, ILL.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

A Modern Wise Woman

* * *

By M. DIBBEL

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

"And you would really pine away and die of a broken heart, before giving the man you loved the least little hint—even if you knew he adored you, and it was leap year?" asked Nattie Adams disconsolately.

"Yes, indeed, I should—there would be something grand in such a sacrifice, but how could I ever look him in the face after boldly betraying my feelings?" Virtuous decision spoke in Mollie Bennet's voice, but little Nattie sighed.

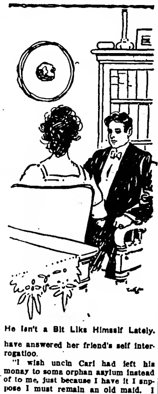
"I am afraid you have more strength of character than I have, Mollie. I am quite sure I should never have courage to live in misery when a few words might make me happy."

"But consider the principle at stake—what do one's personal desires matter when the dignity of all women is to be weighed in the balance? Would you be the one to trail that dignity in the dust?"

"I don't see how it could trail in the dust if you were weighing it, and—bother the dignity anyhow; if I haven't sense enough to take happiness when I know it is waiting for me I don't deserve it, that's all." To Mollie's intense surprise, after delivering this heretical opinion, her usually meek and unassuming friend rose and left the room, slamming the door in a most forceful manner.

"Good gracious, what has got into the child?" thought Mollie, "I never saw her act like that before, and I was only trying to give her a true idea of what counts in the character of the ideal women."

Nattie Adams walked rapidly homeward, with a bright flush on her cheeks and an angry light in her blue eyes; her thoughts, if spoken, would have answered her friend's self interrogation.



He Isn't a Bit Like Himself Lately.

"I wish uncle Carl had left his money to some orphan asylum instead of to me, just because I have it I suppose I must remain an old maid. I wish Mollie wouldn't talk such rubbish—the idea, as if it mattered when you know that some one loved you, and wouldn't tell you because you had more money than he did—but I know I shall never dare say a word now."

Six months before her uncle had made her his sole legatee, and his fortune was an ample one. At first Nattie rejoiced over the legacy, for now she thought all obstacles between herself and Wallace Kendall could be removed. But Wallace thought otherwise; he believed it to be the man's place to furnish his family's supply, and as he had not actually obtained Nattie's promise to become his wife before she was made an heiress, his sense of honor forbade his asking for it now.

Nattie's heart had given a throb of hope when she remembered that the coming year was leap year, and she had become more and more determined to take matters into her own hands and do something desperate when it arrived. And now, as if Mollie had read her unwomanly intentions, she had received a straightforward lecture on the subject.

In reality Mollie was utterly innocent of any personal application of her remarks; she had not known that anything deeper than friendship existed between Nattie and Wallace and knew nothing about the tangled state of their affairs.

Her eyes were opened shortly after the New Year arrived, in an unexpected manner. A cousin of Wallace Kendall's had been calling on Mollie with increasing fidelity since the winter set in, and one evening he seemed to feel so despondent that Mollie at last inquired:

"What makes you look so gloomy? Have you had anything dreadful happen to you?"

"No, but I'm worried about Wallace. He isn't a bit like himself lately. Blest if I would let a little money part me from the woman I loved."

"What do you mean? I did not know that Wallace was in love with anybody."

Russell Kendall seemed surprised. "Why—she is your closest friend! Do you mean to say you did not know that Wallace was in love with Nattie Adams?"

"I surely did not have any suspicion of it, why I have never thought of Nattie as anything but a child. And actually her coming into a fortune has parted them?"

"Yes, for Wallace is such a chump that he thinks the man should do all the providing, and unless he can duplicate her cash, he has no right to marry a woman with money."

Mollie had a long period of meditation after Russell's departure. To her disquietude she found that she was not so certain as to preferring to die in modest silence rather than speak the word for happiness, as when she preached that doctrine to Nattie. Suppose Russell—but Mollie hastily changed her line of thought, and began to ponder on how she could help the two who were in such an unfortunate predicament.

At last a smile came to her lips. "I am sure that will bring matters to a crisis—I mean to try anyhow."

Next evening she said to Russell, "Will you tell Wallace that I would like to see him tomorrow when he comes from the office—there is something important I have to tell him?"

Late the following afternoon Wallace Kendall stopped at Mollie's door, and the maid who admitted him informed him that Miss Bennet was expecting him and would come at once.

As Wallace seated himself, he became conscious that some one was sobbing in the adjoining room, and noticed that its door stood ajar. Before he could determine whether or not it were best to make his presence known, he heard Mollie Bennet speaking in soothing, but remarkably distinct tones:

"Don't cry, Nattie, I assure you that Wallace is not worthy of one of those tears—I am positive of what I say, that he has been paying attention to Clara Royce for several months; in fact they are reported engaged, and I thought it only right that you should know."

White with wrath Wallace strode to the partly open door and threw it wide. "It is a lie!" he fairly shouted. "I hardly know Miss Royce by sight, and I never loved anyone in the world but you, Nattie—I think Miss Bennet might be up to better business than telling you deliberate falsehoods."

Mollie gave an amused laugh and said pleasantly, "Now, will you use the common sense with which Providence provided you, and tell Nattie like a man that you want her for your wife?"

Without awaiting an answer she passed swiftly through the door Wallace had just entered, closing it tightly behind her, and leaving two very blank looking young people confronting each other. But they soon forgot everything else in the joy of being together, and Wallace followed the advice he had received.

"Goodness," thought Mollie, with a sigh of relief, as she sank into a chair in the outer room, "I hope I may be preserved from going through such an experience as that again—I should never have dared attempt it if I had not known that Wallace was like clock work in his movements, so that I could time him to the minute, and even then my hair fairly stood on end until I heard the door bell. Now I hope the two little geese will be happy—and properly grateful to their benefactress."

Later she whispered to Nattie, who clung to her lovingly, "You see, I preserved the dignity of woman after all—leap year did not have a thing to do with bringing Wallace to his senses."

Every Woman Named "Maria."

Socotra, whose sultan is to receive a visit from a cruiser as the result of the plundering of a British wreck, was for many centuries a place dreaded by the mariner. In the Tenth Century it was notorious as a pirate haunt, and one devout authority described its inhabitants as "Nestorian Christians and pirates."

In addition to its native ruffians it was also a regular station for the Indian corsairs who preyed on the trade with the far east. At an earlier date Socotra had been noted as the chief incense producing land, and as such was known to the ancient Egyptians. Among the curious customs of the Socotrans of the seventeenth century was that of naming all their women Maria.

Admitted.

Of John Masefield, the novelist, poet and playwright, of London, a journalist said at the Franklin Inn, in Philadelphia:

"I was criticising Masefield in New York the other day. I pointed out that his work, like that of Barker and Galsworthy, was in many respects amateurish. But a New York critic shouted at me angrily:

"'You don't know what you're talking about; John Masefield will one day be ranked above Emerson, above Whistler, above Henry James.'

"'Well,' said I, with a grin, 'it must undoubtedly be admitted that Masefield is a better playwright than Emerson, a better novelist than Whistler and a better poet than James.'"

Horticulture

DEAL WITH CUT-WORM PEST

Test Course Is to Plow in Fall and Renew War in Spring—Poisoned Bran May Be Used.

The test course in dealing with cutworms is to plow early in the fall and continue cultivation with a spring-toothed harrow until freezing time prevents it and then renewing the war on them by extra early spring cultivation.

There is no easy method of dealing with these pests, but they may be killed if one is willing to go after them with determination. An effective method of combating them is to use sweet and poisoned bran, says the Prairie Farmer. The method is to add one part of Paris green, by weight, to thirty or forty parts of bran, stir this together, while yet dry, and then mixing it with water that has been sweetened by the addition of strong or coarse molasses. The older and stronger the molasses, to give it color, the better it will be.

Two Species of Cut-Worms, Also Moth That Lays the Eggs.

The bran should be moistened with this sweetened water until it is made into a damp mass, just wet enough to stay in little heaps. A very small pinch of this placed at the base of each garden plant to protect it will be effectual. The cut-worms will eat it in preference to the plant.

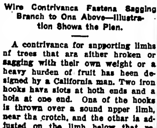
To protect corn it is advisable to drop a pinch in the corn row each step or two across the field, so that the worm will find this and eat it and let the corn remain. It would be better to put the poison out before the corn appears above ground and thus kill the worms early, than to let them remain untreated until after the corn is once cut off.

It is much better to put out the poison bran in the evening while it is damp, or on a damp day, so that it will not be dry when these pests come forth at night to seek their food. It will be found by them just about as readily if it is slightly covered with earth and for this reason, if it should become necessary to protect domestic fowls from it, one could cover it with loose earth at the time of application.

SUPPORTER FOR TREE LIMBS

Wire Contrivance Fastens Sagging Branch to One Above—Illustration Shows the Plan.

A contrivance for supporting limbs of trees that are either broken or sagging with their own weight or a heavy burden of fruit has been designed by a California man. Two iron hooks have slots at both ends and a hole at one end. One of the hooks is thrown over a sound upper limb, near the crotch, and the other is adjusted on the limb below that requires support. A piece of strong wire is then fastened to both hooks by means of the slots and perforations and pulled up till the sagging branch is in proper position. The wire is then twisted fast and there is no danger of its yielding or breaking, as rope has been known to do.



Tree Limb Supporter.

For Fence Rows.

Hollyhocks and goldenglow may be grown along the fence at the back or side of the house, and require but little room.

NATION SAVED BY A SPIDER

Scotland Profited by the Lesson the Insect Taught to Its Monarch.

Scotland has many legends that the sheepherders and highland peasants never get tired repeating. A long time ago King Bruce ruled over Scotland before that country became a part of England, and he learned a lesson from a spider that enabled him to succeed when otherwise he would have failed.

King Bruce had lost many battles. He was discouraged. He had made his final effort against his enemies and failed to vanquish them. Deep in despair he went to a lonely room in his castle. Reclining on the couch and thinking, he happened to notice a spider drop from the ceiling on a single silken cord. He watched the spider fascinatingly. It now began its ascent. It slipped. Time and time again it tried to mount, but each time it failed. The king watched intently, forgetful of all else. An hour passed. Finally the spider succeeded. It was an inspiration for King Bruce. Why should he get discouraged, having tried only a few times and failed? He made one last grand rally against his enemies and routed them, and from this incident came the old saying, "If at first you don't succeed try again."

A Lady Humorist.

"Who says there are no women humorists?"

"I don't know? Why?"

"My typewriter spells as funny as John Billings in his palmiest days."

Many a man loses time trying to explain a mistake that he might utilize in making others.

THESE POOR ARTISTS.

Tommy (aged eight)—Say, papa, what is the difference between an artisan and an artist?

Papa—One eats regularly and the other doesn't.

A Kind-Hearted Man.

"Mr. Wombat!"

"Couple of suffragettes out here throwing stones at your window," bawled the policeman.

"How long have they been doing that?"

"Oh, several hours."

"Let 'em alone. It amuses the girls and I don't believe they'll hit the window."

Innuendo.

"What's Cholly so angry about?"

"Oh, some rude girl asked him if he was a suffragette."

The dyspeptic should choose carefully what he chews carefully.

Her Little Ring.

Mary had a little ring; 'twas given by her beau; and everywhere that Mary went that ring was sure to go.

She took the ring with her one day, when she went out to tea, where she might display it to the girls, who numbered twenty-three.

And when the girls all saw that ring, they made a great ado, exclaiming, with one voice: "Has it at last got round to you?"

Competition.

"Royalty has its difficulties," remarked the lord high keeper of the buttonhook.

"Yes," replied the uneasy monarch. "It has gotten so that a court function finds it hard to compete with the scenery and costumes of a big musical show."

Safer Plan.

"I let my house furnished, and they've had measles there. Of course, we've had the place disinfected, so I suppose it's quite safe. What do you think?"

"I fancy it would be all right, dear; but I think perhaps it would be safer to lend it to a friend first."—Punch.

The One Sure Thing.

"We can always be sure of one thing," said the wise one.

"What is that?" asked the foolish one.

"That we are never sure of anything."

We Can and We Do.

"It has been demonstrated that we can have plays without words."

"Yes. Also that we can have plays without actors."

The man who wants the right of way wants it right away.

If You Like a Little Quiet Fun

Ask some pompous person if Grape-Nuts Food helps build the brain.

Chances are you get a withering sneer and a hiss of denunciation.

Then sweetly play with the learned toad.

Ask him to tell you the analysis of brain material and the analysis of Grape-Nuts.

"Don't know? Why, I supposed you based your opinions on exact knowledge instead of pushing out a conclusion like you would a sneeze."

"Well, now your tire is punctured, let's sit down like good friends and repair it."

The bulky materials of brain are water and albumin, but these things cannot blend without a little worker known as Phosphate of Potash, defined as a "mineral salt."

One authority, Geohegan, shows in his analysis of brain, 5.33 per cent total of mineral salts, over one-half being Phosphoric Acid and Potash combined, (Phosphate of Potash) 2.91 per cent.

Beaunis, another authority, shows Phosphoric Acid and Potash (Phosphate of Potash) more than one-half the total mineral salts, being 73.44 per cent in a total of 101.07.

Analysis of Grape-Nuts shows Potassium and Phosphorus (which join and make Phosphate of Potash) is considerable more than one-half of all the mineral salts in the food.

Dr. Geo. W. Carey, an authority on the constituent elements of the body, says: "The gray matter of the brain is controlled entirely by the inorganic cell-salt, Potassium Phosphate (Phosphate of Potash). This salt unites with albumin and by the addition of oxygen creates nerve fluid or the gray matter of the brain. Of course, there is a trace of other salts and other organic matter in nerve fluid, but Potassium Phosphate is the chief factor, and has the power within itself to attract, by its own law of affinity, all things needed to manufacture the elixir of life."

Further on he says: "The beginning and end of the matter is to supply the lacking principle, and in molecular form exactly as nature furnishes it in vegetables, fruits and grain. To supply deficiencies—this is the only law of cure."

Brain is made of Phosphate of Potash as the principal Mineral Salt, added to albumin and water.

Grape-Nuts contains that element as more than one-half of all its mineral salts.

Every day's use of brain wears away a little.

Suppose your kind of food does not contain Phosphate of Potash.

How are you going to rebuild today the worn-out parts of yesterday?

And if you don't, why shouldn't nervous prostration and brain-fag result?

Remember, Mind does not work well on a brain that is even partly broken down from lack of nourishment.

It is true that other food besides Grape-Nuts contains varying quantities of Brain food.

Plain wheat and barley do. But in Grape-Nuts there is a certainty.

And if the elements demanded by Nature, are eaten, the life forces have the needed material to build from.

A healthy brain is important, if one would "do things" in this world.

A man who sneers at "Mind" sneers at the best and least understood part of himself. That part which some folks believe links us to the Infinite.

Mind asks for a healthy brain upon which to act, and Nature has defined a way to make a healthy brain and renew it day by day as it is used up from work of the previous day.

Nature's way to rebuild is by the use of food which supplies the things required.

FROM THE EDITOR.

He Forgot That He Had a Stomach

Talking of food, there is probably no professional man subjected to a greater, more wearing mental strain than the responsible editor of a modern newspaper.

To keep his mental faculties constantly in good working order, the editor must keep his physical powers up to the highest rate of efficiency. Nothing will so quickly upset the whole system as badly selected food and a disordered stomach. It therefore follows that he should have right food, which can be readily assimilated, and which furnishes true brain nourishment.

"My personal experience in the use of Grape-Nuts and Postum," writes a Philadelphia editor, "so exactly agrees with your advertised claim as to their merits that any further exposition in that direction would seem to be superfluous. They have benefited me so much, however, during the five years that I have used them that I do not feel justified in withholding my testimony.

"General 'high living,' with all that the expression implies as to a generous table, brought about indigestion, in my case, with restlessness at night and lassitude in the morning, accompanied by various pains and distressing sensations during working hours.

"The doctor diagnosed the condition as 'catarrh of the stomach,' and prescribed various medicines, which did me no good. I finally 'threw physics to the dogs,' gave up tea and coffee and heavy meat dishes, and adopted Grape-Nuts and Postum as the chief articles of my diet.

"I can conscientiously say, and I wish to say it with all the emphasis possible to the English language, that they have benefited me as medicines never did, and more than any other food that ever came on my table.

"My experience is that the Grape-Nuts food has steadied and strengthened both brain and nerves to a most positive degree. How it does it I cannot say, but I know that after breakfasting on Grape-Nuts food one actually forgets he has a stomach, let alone 'stomach trouble.' It is, in my opinion, the most beneficial as well as the most economical food on the market, and has absolutely no rival." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a Reason" for

Grape-Nuts

POSTUM CEREAL COMPANY, LIMITED, BATTLE CREEK, MICHIGAN, U. S. A.

K. OF P. AT ALBERT LEA

GRAND LODGE MEETING TO OPEN TUESDAY, MAY 14—SPECIAL CARS ARRANGED.

CEREMONIAL OF D. O. K. K.

First Time in Twenty-one Years That Sessions Held Outside of the Twin Cities.

Albert Lea.—For the first time in twenty-one years the grand lodge convention of the Order of Knights of Pythias, domain of Minnesota, is being held outside of the Twin Cities. The last convention held other than in Minneapolis and St. Paul was in Duluth in 1891. The convention this week is to be the fortieth of the order in this domain and began here Tuesday, May 14. A special car was attached to the Rock Island train leaving Minneapolis at 3 p. m. on Monday and another at 3 p. m. on Tuesday, the latter being for the accommodation of the members of the D. O. K. K. The ceremonial of that order was arranged for the night of the 14th after the grand lodge convention of the first day.

The committees to serve for the convention of the Grand Lodge were announced by Grand Chancellor Attwood as follows:

Finance — Representative C. A. Greenwood, Ivanhoe No. 189; Representative L. F. Entrup, Gkoda No. 9; Representative W. H. Rahe, Mankato No. 36.

Credentials — Representative C. Butsch, Gwntonnn No. 50; Representative J. C. Ames, Biwnbik No. 146. Representative Wm. Jung, Redwood Falls No. 42.

Mileage and Per Diem—Representative T. P. Heggerty, Fairmont No. 154; Representative H. T. Heley, Dodge Center No. 180; Representative Gust Johnson, Mystic No. 20.

State of the Order—Representative C. B. Randall, Morris No. 108; Representative F. M. Smith, Pokegama No. 77; Representative A. George, Jr., Lyle No. 59.

Distribution—Representative A. L. Sturgis, North Star No. 35; Representative W. E. Lawson, Beeson No. 106; Representative John N. Loye, Laurel No. 17.

Warrants and Charters—Representative W. L. Emerson Hermione No. 18; Representative Hermann von Essee, Hohah No. 10; Representative G. W. Boutin, Kitchi Gammi No. 123.

Necrology — Representative J. N. Bothne, Elboy Lake No. 92; Representative C. C. Cadwell, Rochester No. 54; Representative N. P. Anderson, Edgerton No. 98.

Uniform Rank—Representative Col. I. T. Marsh, Minneapolis No. 1; Representative L. E. Hassinger, Tracy No. 85; Representative Thomas McLaughlin, Ely No. 173.

Publicity — Representative L. S. Whitcomb, Albert Lea No. 66.

Membership Fee Topic.

Among the important matter to come before the convention will be the consideration of a proposition laid over from the session of last year, for the holding of sessions biennially instead of annually, and a proposition to make the minimum fee for membership in Minnesota $15 instead of $25.

Officials of the Grand lodge are as follows:

Grand chancellor—Frederick S. Attwood, Lamberton.

Grand vice-chancellor — Jacob P. Peterson, Albert Lea.

Grand prelate—A. J. Bishop, St. Paul.

Grand keeper of records and seal—Pliny W. McAllister, Minneapolis.

Grand master of exchequer—Chas. W. Farwell, Minneapolis.

Grand master at arms—Clyde E. Miller, Staples.

Grand inner guard—O. J. Davidson, Wheaton.

Grand outer guard—C. M. Phillips, Duluth.

Supreme representatives — James Robertson, Minneapolis; Carroll S. Bartram, St. Paul.

Grand trustees—F. T. Wilson, Stillwater; Richard J. Angus, Fergus Falls; Charles S. Bradt, St. Paul.

Committee on law: George W. Graeger, Rochester; Grier M. Orr, St. Paul; E. M. Stanton, Thief River Falls.

Grand Tribunal—Benjamin F. Fowler, Two Harbors; Percy D. Godfrey, St. Paul; A. J. Praxel, Lamberton.

Recorder—R. C. Neuenchwandar.

The Grand Temple Pythian Sisters met in Albert Lea at the same time as the Knights.

League for Better Roads.

St. James.—A mass meeting of citizens of this city and Madelia was held here to talk over the "good roads" question and map out a program. There was a good attendance of business men, farmers and others, and committees were appointed to solicit funds and attend to other details.

Want Rural Routes Changed.

Washington.—Representative Steenerson of Minnesota today received from citizens of Clay county a petition asking for a readjustment of the rural mail routes in that county in order to improve the service. Many farmers assert that by a readjustment they could be given much better delivery. It is alleged that the present plan of the routes was established under the first "county rural route" system put into operation and has never been readjusted in spite of changed conditions.

KELLER AGAIN ST. PAUL MAYOR

REPUBLICANS WIN VICTORY AFTER HOT FIGHT.

Majority Over Democratic Candidate About Four Hundred Votes.

St. Paul. — Mayor Herbert P. Keller of St. Paul was re-elected by the narrow margin of 423 votes over Otto Bremer, his democratic opponent. The vote was: Keller, 16,206; Bremer, 15,783. Keller still will be hampered by an adverse common council. Returns show the election of five democrats and four republicans in the assembly, and seven democrats and five republicans on the board of aldermen.

Three amendments to the city charter were adopted, one providing a new form of government similar to the commission plan.

S. A. Farnsworth, republican, was re-elected city treasurer over Otto Rohland, democrat, and Major W. C. Handy, republican, is elected controller over D. J. Sullivan, by a plurality of 267.

Mayor Harbart P. Kallar.

Elected to the assembly are T. R. Kane, Frank Yoerg, Winn Powers, Henry G. Haas and Charles Gerber, democrats, and Oscar Keller, R. L. Ware, D. H. Michland and E. C. Mahle, republicans.

Aldermen elected are: First ward, C. A. Gberg, (rep.); second, William Baumeister, (rep.); third, Henry McGoil, (dem.); fourth, E. J. Murnane, (dem.); fifth, Fred Murnane, (dem.); sixth, J. D. Hyland, (dem.); seventh, Leavitt Cornieg, (rep.); eight, Joseph Rosenthal, Jr., (rep.); ninth, W. J. Troy, dem.); tenth, C. P. Montgomery, (rep.); eleventh, J. C. Gtis, (dem.); twelfth, W. S. Stieger, (dem.).

SOCIALISTS NAME TICKET

Party Again Makes Thomas Van Lear Candidate for Mayor.

Minneapolis, Minn. — The Public Ownership (Socialist) party entered the Hennepin county and city of Minneapolis political arena with a corps of nearly 50 aspirants for office, to lead it on in the battle which ends November 11. Through the medium of a nominating convention, at Federation hall, it placed its leaders in the field. Thomas Van Lear, whose run two years ago almost gave the Socialists a mayoralty victory, was unanimously named to head the city ticket in the coming fight. Party enthusiasm reached its climax when nominations were called for mayor, and the name of Van Lear rode to Chairman Mayo's position on the platform on the crest of an uproar which would listen to no other name for the office.

Former Luverne Official Accused.

Luverne.—E. C. Schwartz, late recorder of this city, who was defeated for re-election, has been called upon to face an alleged shortage of $220 in his accounts. This money was received as license fees and it is charged it was never paid over to the city treasurer or otherwise accounted for. An expert accountant will be employed and a thorough investigation made of the recorder's books.

FOUL PLAY DISPROVED.

Farmer's Body Cremated in Lightning Fire Which Destroyed House.

Harman. — Martin Christenson, a farmer living seven miles southwest of this place, was struck by lightning while near a window in his house. The building caught fire and Christenson's body was cremated. "At first it was supposed he had been fatally dealt with, but as the window frame was thrown upon the ground outside, this theory was dismissed.

ROOSEVELT IN LEAD

HEAVY MAJORITIES FOR COLONEL IS RULE IN MINNESOTA G. O. P. CAUCUSES.

1 TOWN FOR LAFOLLETTE

Vote is Extremely Light So Far, Save in Anoka County—General Lack of Interest in Primary.

Nine out of the 89 counties of Minnesota, representing the First, Second, Fourth, Fifth, Seventh, Eighth and Ninth congressional districts, in their Republican primaries, gave evidence of a desire on the part of the Republicans of these sections of the state of Minnesota to support Theodore Roosevelt for president, despite the fact that a light vote was polled in many of the country districts, and there seemed little effort on the part of any of the candidates' enthusiasts to get the voters out to the polls. In some of the farming districts caucuses were abandoned without a vote being taken, owing to the lack of attendance while in other sections heavy rains prevented the caucuses.

Colonel's Majorities Heavy.

In every county but one heard from Roosevelt was the favorite by a heavy majority. The exception was Swift county, where La Follette carried the town of Kerkhoven, the vote however being very light.

Evidence of strong organizations on the part of any of the candidates was lacking everywhere, although it seemed the Roosevelt men got out to the polls in many of the precincts where the Taft and La Follette adherents remained at home, as was evidenced in several of the smaller towns where the entire vote was solid for the colonel.

Perhaps the strongest turnout for the former president outside the city of Minneapolis was made in Anoka county, which is the home of I. A. Caswell, clerk of the supreme court, who is managing the Roosevelt campaign. This was one of the first counties heard from, and the Roosevelt men in Anoka went to bed happy before midnight, assured that the colonel had carried 71 of the 114 delegates of that county with several more of the strong Roosevelt districts to be heard from.

At New Ulm, the Republicans got together in informal caucus and mutually agreed that the entire delegation from that city to the state convention should support the man from Sagamore hill.

This gave the colonel 27 votes in the Brown county convention out of 110 delegates and Roosevelt leaders in New Ulm predicted that Brown county would send a solid delegation to the state convention instructed for Roosevelt.

Down in former Congressman Tawney's district, notably in Wabasha county, so little interest was shown in the primaries that at midnight everyone in town had gone to bed, and the sleepy operator simply gave the information that Roosevelt had carried the day.

Possibility of a dark horse nomination in the Chicago convention was reflected in the fact that several of the precincts gave Justice Charles E. Hughes scattering votes, one town giving him 11.

Believe Letter Helped.

How far Colonel Roosevelt's open letter to the voters of Minnesota effected the results can only be conjectured, but some asserted last night that this had much to do in getting out the strong Roosevelt aggregation, which in many cases outnumbered the Taft supporters six to one.

La Follette's alleged strength, which members of both the Roosevelt and Taft factions declared might make serious inroads on their final results, did not show itself.

BURIAL MOUND OPENED.

More Skulls and Pottery Found in the Trempealeau Mountains.

Winona. — The Indian mounds at Trempealeau have from time to time attracted attention and another visit of exploration was made last week by Rev. F. A. Gilmore of Madison, E. F. Hensell of Whitehall and E. D. Pierce of Trempealeau. They opened one of the mounds near the summit of Trempealeau mountain and found that it was a Cairn mound, with the sides built of stone, a rare variety of construction.

At a depth of two feet a femur bone in a good state of preservation, was found, and under the edge of the stone wall a skull was unearthed intact. In all, the excavators exhumed six skulls and innumerable bones.

No ornaments were found and no trinkets of adornment, but a few pieces of pottery were dug up.

To Discontinue Show This Year.

St. Paul. — The Northwestern Live Stock and Grain show which has been held at the stockyards in South St. Paul the past five years will be discontinued for the year 1912. It was the unanimous sense of the meeting that it would be quite a hardship to the farmers to fit stock for the show this year on account of the high prices of feed and livestock. As soon as conditions will warrant, it will likely be resumed and given regularly each year.

FOUGHT HIS WAY TO FREEDOM

The Emperor of Rome Admired the Courage and Pluck of Caractacus.

One of the most unique captives ever brought home to Rome by Julius Caesar was Caractacus of the early Britons. This great chief lost everything in fighting to drive out the Romans and was taken prisoner with his wife and children. When brought before the Roman emperor the proud ruler of the primitive people never showed the least fear. His arms were chained, and the emperor roared to try to frighten Caractacus, but the brave chief never so much as quaked. Instead he looked the monarch in the eye and said:

"You fight to gain the whole world and to make everybody your slaves. I fought to keep my own land and for freedom."

The great courage the chief showed finally touched the heart of the emperor, and the ruler of the Romans resolved to see if Caractacus would be as brave when facing warriors. On one of the great holidays in Rome Caractacus was taken to the great open-air amphitheater where the populace gathered. He was told that if he could defeat the bold knight that would be sent against him he could go back to his home. Caractacus fought as he never had before; for something sweeter than his life was at stake—that of his wife and children. Justice seemed to have tempered the metal of his weapons, and when he struck the strong armor of his antagonist gave way before his fearful blows. The result was that Caractacus and his family returned to Britain and to happiness.

MRS. SELBY AND PRIZE BABY

"I have always used Cuticura Soap and no other for my baby and he has never had a sore of any kind. He does not even chafe as most babies do. I feel sure that it is all owing to Cuticura Soap, for he is fine and healthy, and when five months old, won a prize in a baby contest. It makes my heart ache to go into so many homes and see a sweet-faced baby with the whole top of its head a solid mass of scurf, caused by poor soap. I always recommend Cuticura, and nine times out of ten the next time I see the mother she says: 'Oh! I am so glad you told me of Cuticura.'" (Signed) Mrs. G. A. Selby, Redondo Beach, California, Jan. 15, 1911.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Surgeon in Ancient Times.

High honorariums were paid surgeons in ancient times. When Darius, the son of Hystaspes, sprained his foot Damocedes was called in, another surgeon of renown having failed to effect a cure. Damocedes was successful, and the king took him to his harem and introduced the doctor to the ladies of the court. The ladies filled a vase of gold with money and precious pearls, which a eunuch was ordered to carry to the doctor. The eunuch let fall the vase, and the careful historian tells us that slaves gathered up the pearls.

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.
In Use For Over 30 Years.
Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

Something Just as Good.

Barber—Getting pretty thin on top, sir. Ever use our Miracle Hairgrowine?

The Chair—Oh, no! It wasn't that that did it.—Judge.

Paxtine Antiseptic sprayed into the nasal passages is a surprisingly successful remedy for catarrh. At druggists, 25c a box or sent postpaid on receipt of price by The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass.

The woman who doesn't care who knows her age is never over twenty-five.

Every man has some good in him, but sometimes it takes a lot of coaxing to bring it out.

Unsightly eruptions disappear after a course of Garfield Tea.

Even the absent-minded man may have a good presence.

New York Journalists.

"Here's a man who claims to understand birds?"

"Well?"

"Can't we feature it?"

"We might," replied the editor of the New York paper, "if it were played up properly. Send him out to get an interview with the first robin, and let's see what he makes of it."

Boston Pun.

"Let me see, was Rome founded by Romeo?"

"No, it was Juliet who was found dead by Romeo."

ONE BOX MAKES 5 GALLONS
HIRES' HOUSEHOLD EXTRACT
FOR MAKING OLD FASHIONED HOME-MADE ROOTBEER

Every home should make rootbeer in springtime for its deliciousness and its fine tonic properties.

One package makes 5 gallons. If your grocer isn't supplied, we will mail you a package on receipt of 25c. Please give his name.

Write for premium puzzle.

THE CHARLES E. HIRES CO.
255 N. Broad St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Before Allowing an Operation

Please Read These Two Letters.

The following letter from Mrs. Orville Rock will prove how unwise it is for women to submit to the dangers of a surgical operation when it may be avoided by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She was four weeks in the hospital and came home suffering worse than before. Then after all that suffering Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored her health.

HERE IS HER OWN STATEMENT.

Paw Paw, Mich.—"Two years ago I suffered very severely with a displacement—I could not be on my feet for a long time. My physician treated me for several months without much relief, and at last sent me to Ann Arbor for an operation. I was there four weeks and came home suffering worse than before. My mother advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I did. To-day I am well and strong and do all my own housework. I owe my health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and advise every woman who is afflicted with any female complaint to try it."—Mrs. Orville Rock, R. R. No. 5, Paw Paw, Mich.

"THERE NEVER WAS A WORSE CASE."

Rockport, Ind.—"There never was a worse case of women's ills than mine, and I cannot begin to tell you what I suffered. For over two years I was not able to do anything. I was in bed for a month and the doctor said nothing but an operation would cure me. My father suggested Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; so to please him I took it, and I improved wonderfully, so I am able to travel, ride horseback, take long rides and never feel any ill effects from it. I can only ask other suffering women to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation."—Mrs. Margaret Meredith, R. F. D. No. 3, Rockport, Ind.

We will pay a handsome reward to any person who will prove to us that these letters are not genuine and truthful—or that either of these women were paid in any way for their testimonials, or that the original letter from each did not come to us entirely unsolicited.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine, made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health.

Write to LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO. (CONFIDENTIAL) LYNN, MASS., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

For Rheumatism, Gout, Lumbago, Use

Camphorated Vaseline

Camphorated Vaseline gets right to the seat of the trouble.

Gives quick and grateful relief from rheumatic and similar pains.

Put up in neat, metal-capped glass bottles.

Every mother should know all about the different "Vaseline" preparations. They are just what she needs for the minor family ailments and accidents.

Send a postal to-day for 32 pp. illustrated booklet—free prepaid. Address Dept. H.

Chesebrough Manufacturing Company
17 State Street (Consolidated) New York

W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES

W. L. Douglas makes and sells more $3.00, $3.50 and $4.00 shoes than any other manufacturer in the world

$2.50 $3.00 $3.50 $4.00 $4.50 & $5.00

FOR MEN, WOMEN AND BOYS

W. L. Douglas $3.00 & $3.50 shoes are worn by millions of men, because they are the best in the world for the price. W. L. Douglas $4.00, $4.50 & $5.00 shoes equal Custom Bench Work costing $6.00 to $8.00

Why does W. L. Douglas make and sell more $3.00, $3.50 and $4.00 shoes than any other manufacturer in the world? BECAUSE: he stamps his name and price on the bottom and guarantees the value, which protects the wearer against high prices and inferior shoes of other makes. BECAUSE: they are the most economical and satisfactory; you can save money by wearing W. L. Douglas shoes. BECAUSE: they have no equal for style, fit and wear. DON'T TAKE A SUBSTITUTE FOR W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES.

If your dealer cannot supply W. L. Douglas shoes, write W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass., for catalog. Shoes sent everywhere delivery charges prepaid. Fast Color Eyelets Used.

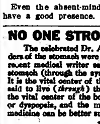
NO ONE STRONGER THAN HIS STOMACH.

The celebrated Dr. Abernethy of London was firmly of the opinion that disorders of the stomach were the most prolific source of human ailments in general. A recent medical writer says: "every feeling, emotion and affection reports at the stomach (through the system of nerves) and the stomach is affected accordingly. It is the vital center of the body * * * *." He continues, "so we may be said to live (through) the stomach." He goes on to show that the stomach is the vital center of the body. For weak stomachs and the consequent indigestion or dyspepsia, and the multitude of various diseases which result therefrom, no medicine can be better suited as a curative agent than

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.



Mrs. Murken.

"Several months ago I suffered from a severe pain right under the breast-bone," writes Mrs. G. M. Murken, of Corona, Calif. "Had suffered from it, off and on, for several years. I also suffered from heart-burn, did not know what was the matter with me. I tried several medicines but they did me no good. Finally, I was told it was my liver. I did not dare to eat as it made me worse. Whenever I swallowed anything it seemed that I would faint—it hurt so. I grew very thin and weak from not eating. Was told to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I took five bottles of it, and could feel myself getting better from the first dose. I could eat a little without pain and grew strong fast. To-day I am strong and well and can do a big day's work with ease. Can eat everything and have put on flesh wonderfully. I will say to all sufferers write to Dr. Pierce. He has my undying gratitude."

DAISY FLY KILLER PLACED ANYWHERE, ATTRACTS AND KILLS ALL FLIES. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts all season. Made of metal, can't spill or tip over; will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. 15 cts. each at dealers or 6 sent prepaid for $1.00.
HAROLD SOMERS, 150 DeKalb Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

THE NEW FRENCH REMEDY. No. 1, No. 2, No. 3.
THERAPION Used in French Hospitals with GREAT SUCCESS, CURES KIDNEY, BLADDER DISEASES, PILES, CHRONIC ULCERS, SKIN ERUPTIONS—EITHER SEX. Send address envelope for FREE booklet to DR. LE CLERC MED. CO., HAVERSTOCK RD., HAMPSTEAD, LONDON, ENG.

IF YOU WANT TO BEGIN OR EXPAND business write the Board of Trade, Weyburn, Saskatchewan. We want industries, retailers and wholesalers. Electric power, water, fuel cheap. Builders with capital needed. Population doubled this year.

PATENTS START FACTORIES. Send for free book how to get Patents. Patent secured or fee returned. [illegible] & Company, [illegible] St., Washington, D.C.

EYE ACHES Pettit's Eye Salve

PUTNAM FADELESS DYES

Color more goods brighter and faster colors than any other dye. [illegible] Write for free booklet—How to Dye, Bleach and Mix Colors. MONROE DRUG COMPANY, Quincy, Ill.

LOOKING FOR TROUBLE

Being Some Real Stories from the life of a Master Adventurer

by Captain George B. Boynton

COPYRIGHT BY THE RIDGWAY CO.

(EDITOR'S NOTE—Captain George B. Boynton, who died recently in Brooklyn, actually lived such pages of thrilling fiction to be found only in the adventures as are usually Blockade runner, filibuster, revolutionist, sea-rover, counselor of South American dictators, soldier and sailor of fortune the world over, such was this master adventurer. His exploits have been fictionized into a score of the best sellers of recent years. For the first time Captain Boyntoe's own story, told by himself, is offered in print. Its truth is attested alike by its evidences and by affidavits of the author.)

THROUGHOUT my life I have sought adventure over the face of the world and its waters as other men have hunted and fought for gold or struggled for fame. Whether through the outcropping of a strain of buccaneer blood held in subjection by generations of placid propriety or as a result of some freak of prenatal suggestion, the love of adventure was born in me, deep-planted and long-rooted. Excitement is as essential to my existence as air and food. Through it my life has been prolonged in activity and my soul has been perpetuated in youth; when I can no longer enjoy its electrification, death, I hope, will come quickly.

I have served, all told, under eighteen flags, and to each I gave the best that was in me. In following my natural bent, it perhaps will be considered by some people that I have gone outside of written laws. To such my answer is that I have always been true to my own conscience and to my country.

Red-blooded love of adventure, free from any wanton spirit and with the prospect of financial reward always subordinated, has been the driving force in all my encounters with good men and bad, with the latter class much in the majority. The name by which I am known is one of the contradictions of my life. Save only for my father, who sympathized with my adventurous disposition at the same time that he tried to curb it, I was at war with my family almost from the time I could talk. When I left home to become an adventurer around the globe I buried my real name, and I do not propose to uncover it, here or hereafter.

In the course of my activities I have used many names in many lands, but that of Boynton, which had been in the family for years, stuck to me until I finally adopted it, prefixing a George and a B., which really stands for Boynton.

I was born May 1, 1842, on Fifth avenue, New York, not a long way north of Washington Square. My father was a distinguished surgeon and owned a large estate on Lake Champlain, where most of my youthful summers were spent.

After a somewhat scattered series of escapades, which increased the ire of the family and intensified my dislike of their prosaic protestations, my father solemnly declared his intention of sending me to the United States Naval Academy. I was delighted. The machinery to procure my apointment had been set in motion and I was ready to take the examination when the opening gun of the Civil war was fired at Fort Sumter, April 12, 1861.

I was immediately seized with a wild desire to be in the fight. My father would not consent to it, on account of my age, but promised that if I would wait a year, he would try to get me a commission. My sympathies were with the South, but it was more convenient to take the other side, and at that moment I was not particular about principles. The family were duly horrified one evening when I went home and told them I had enlisted. The next day my father bought my discharge and hustled me out to Woodstock, Ill., where I was placed in charge of an uncle.

He prevented my joining an infantry regiment, but I got away with a cavalry regiment some months later and was made one of its officers. We went to Cairo, Ill., and from there by transport to Pittsburg Landing, where we arrived just in time to take part in the battle fought on April 6 and 7, 1862. I was severely wounded in that engagement.

When I was discharged from the hospital I was sent into the Tennessee mountains in charge of a detachment to intercept contraband which was being sent into the south from Cincinnati.

Soon after my return to headquarters I contracted a bad case of malaria and was sent home, which meant back to Woodstock, where I had eloped with a banker's daughter just before going to the front. I was disgusted with the war and I expressed myself so freely and was so outspoken in my sympathy for the South, that I made myself unpopular in a very short time.

At any rate the people set their hearts on hanging me for being "a —— copperhead," and they might have done it if old man Wellbrrn, the proprietor of the hotel at which my wife and I were staying, had not helped me to stand off a mob that came after me.

That experience intensified my dissatisfaction with the whole business and I sent in my resignation. It was accepted, and when I had thought it all over I considered that I was lucky to have escaped a court-martial.

I had heard that Carlos Manuel de Cespedes was fomenting a revolt in Cuba, which afterward was known as the "Ten Years War," and had conceived the idea of taking a hand in it.

While I was wondering how I could get into communication with Cespedes by interest was aroused by a newspaper story of the new blockade-runner Letter B. There was so much money in blockade-running that the owners could well afford to lose her after she had made three successful trips.

In five minutes I decided to become a blockade-runner and to buy the new and already famous ship, if she was to be had at any price within reason. I bought a letter of credit and took the next ship for Bermuda. On my arrival there I found that the Letter B had been expected in for several days from her second trip and that there was considerable anxiety about her. I also learned that her owner was building a second ship on the same lines and for the same trade. A fresh cargo of munitions of war was awaiting the Letter B, and a ship was ready to take to England the cotton she would bring.

I got acquainted with the agent for the blockade-runner, and offered to buy her and take the chance that she might never come in. He wanted me to wait until the arrival of her owner, Joseph Berry, who was expected daily from England.

After waiting several days I said to him one morning: "It looks as though your ship has been captured or sunk. I'll take a gambler's chance that she hasn't and will give you $50,000 for her and $25,000 for the cargo that is waiting for her; you to take the cargo she brings in. I'll give you three hours to think it over."

It looked as though I was taking a long chance, but I had a "hunch" that she was all right, and I never have had a well-defined "hunch" steer me in anything but a safe course, wherefore I invariably heed them. At the expiration of the time limit there was not a sign of smoke in any direction and the agent accepted my proposition. In half an hour I had a bill of sale for the ship and the warehouse receipts for the cargo of war supplies.

On the third day the Letter B came tearing in, pursued at long range by the U. S. S. Powhatan, which proceeded to stand guard over the harbor, keeping well off shore on account of the reefs and shoals that were under her lee.

The Letter B discharged a full cargo of cotton and was turned over to me. She was unloaded in twelve hours, and all of her cargo was safely stowed in another forty-eight hours. I took command of her, with John B. Williams, her old captain, as sailing master, and determined to put to sea at once.

I knew the Powhatan would not be looking for us so soon, and planned to catch her off her guard.

The Powhatan saw us sooner than I had expected, and started, but she was not quick enough. She fired three or four shots at us, but they fell far short.

At sunrise we had the ocean to ourselves.

I started in at once to master practical navigation, the theory of which I knew, and to familiarize myself with the handling of a ship.

We arrived off Charleston late in the afternoon and steamed up close inshore until we could make out the smoke of the blockading fleet, which was standing well out, in a semicircle. Then we dropped back a bit and anchored. All of the conditions shaped themselves to favor us. It was a murky night with a hard blow, which came up late in the afternoon, and when we got under way at midnight a good bit of a sea was running.

With the engines held down to only about half speed, but ready to do their best in a twinkling, we headed for the harbor, standing as close inshore as we dared go. We passed so close to the blockading ship stationed at the lower end of the crescent that she could not have depressed her guns enough to hit us even if we had been discovered in time. But she did not see us until we had passed her. Then she let go at us with her bow guns and, while they did no damage, we were at such close quarters that their flash gave the other ships a glimpse of us as we darted away.

They immediately opened on us, but after the first minute or two it was a case of haphazard shooting with all of them. The first shells exploded close around us, and some of the fragments came aboard, but no one was injured. When I saw where they were firing I threw my ship further over toward Sullivan's Island, where she could go on account of her light draft, and sailed quietly along into the harbor at reduced speed. At daylight we went up to the dock and were warmly welcomed.

Before the second night was half over we had everything out of her and a full cargo of cotton aboard, and we steamed out at once. I knew the blockaders would not expect us for at least four days, and we surprised them just as we had surprised the Powhatan at Bermuda. It was a thick night, and we sailed right through the fleet at half speed, but prepared to break and run for it at the crack of a gun. Not a shot was fired or an extra light shown.

As soon as we were clear of the line we put on full speed, and three days later we were safe at Turk's Island, the most southerly and easterly of the Bahama Islands.

I made two more trips to Charleston without any very exciting experiences, though we were fired on both times, and then sold the ship to an enterprising Englishman at Turk's Island.

Having succeeded as a blockade-runner, I was ambitious to become a filibuster, which kindred vocation I thought offered even greater opportunities for adventure, and immediately after the sale of the Letter B, in the latter part of 1864, I returned to New York, in the hope that the Cespedes revolution in Cuba would have been sprung and a junta established with which I could work. I found that the revolt was still hatching and that no New York agent had been appointed, so, for want of something better to do, I bought from Benjamin Wood, editor of the New York News, the old Franklin avenue distillery in Brooklyn.

CAPT. GEO. B. BOYNTON

This venture resulted in an open and final rupture with my family.

I had been in the distillery business only a few months, during which time the property had shown a large profit, when, while attending a performance at the old Grand Opera House, I met "Jim" Fisk, with whom I had become acquainted in my boyhood days, when he was running a gaudy peddler's wagon out of Boston.

Fisk asked what I was doing that I looked so prosperous. I told him briefly and he said he wanted to buy a half interest in the distillery and asked me to put a price on it. I told him I did not want a partner. He insisted and said he had influence at Washington—which he afterward proved—and that it would be valuable to us.

"We will make a good team," he said. "Here,"—and he scribbled off a check for $100,000 and tossed it over to me—"now we are partners."

"Not much!" I said, as I tossed it back to him. "I am making too much money for you to get in at that price, even if I wanted you as a partner."

"All right, then," he replied as he wrote out another check, for $150,000, and handed it to me; "take that; I am in half with you now."

Before I could enter another objection he stalked out of the room and I let it go at that, for I had a scheme in mind and figured that his influence, if it was as powerful as he claimed, would be useful.

Then followed a year or more of prosperity, flavored with complications with the government, and we finally quit the business with a profit of about $350,000.

Fisk and I continued in partnership and in the summer of 1866 we bought the fast and stanch little steamer Edgar Stuart, which had been a blockade-runner. We bought a cargo of arms and ammunition and were just putting it on board when the first Cuban junta came to New York and opened offices on New street. They sent for me and wanted to buy our cargo.

The Spaniards were not so watchful then as later and the arms were delivered without much trouble at Cape Maysi, at the extreme eastern end of Cuba.

The junta then engaged us to deliver several cargoes of arms to the rebels. I was always in command of these expeditions, with a sailing master in charge of the ship, while Fisk stayed at home and attended to the Washington end of the business.

Along about 1868, after it had run half its length, the Ten Years War began to hog down. There was nothing else doing in this part of the world, so I decided to go to Europe, being attracted by the prospect of war between France and Germany.

During the Cuban filibustering days I gained more notoriety than I desired, and as I did not wish to be known as a trouble-maker on the other side, where the laws against the carrying of contraband were being rigidly enforced on account of the recent Alabama affair, I lost my identity while crossing the Atlantic. When I reached London in the latter part of 1868 I was George MacFarlane, and in order that I might have an address and ostensible occupation I established the commercial house of George MacFarlane & Co., at 10 Corn Hill. My partner, who really was only a clerk, was a young Englishman named Cunningham, for whom I had been able to do a good turn while living in Chicago. I opened an account in the London & Westminster bank with an initial deposit of close to £75,000, which gave me a financial standing.

Fate was kind to me in throwing in my way the little steamer Leckwith, which I bought at a bargain.

Don Carlos, the Spanish Pretender, was just then, in 1869, preparing to make his last fight for the long-coveted crown of Spain. His chief agent had bought all of the arms and ammunition he could pay for from Kynoch & Co., at Birmingham, and had contracted with Nickell & Son for their delivery on the northern coast of Spain. They had lost one cargo through the watchfulness of a Spanish warship, and had nearly come to grief with another.

The Pretender's agent then proposed that Don Carlos pay for the arms when they were delivered, instead of at the factory, as before. Old man Nickell was considering this proposition when I met him, and he told me about it, after we had come to know and understand each other a bit, and it was agreed that Nickell should buy the arms while I would furnish the ship and deliver them.

It was stipulated that the first consignment should be delivered to Don Carlos himself at his headquarters near Bilbao.

Only a small and light-draft ship could get up the river, and I did not care to try it with the Leckwith, so I chartered a smaller steamer which greatly resembled the Santa Marta, a Spanish coastwise ship. To avoid suspicion, the rifles and cartridges were shipped to Antwerp and I picked them up there.

As soon as we were out of sight of land I repainted my ship and made some slight changes until she looked almost exactly like the Santa Marta.

We got over the bar at Bilbao with very little to spare under our keel and went on up the river to the appointed place. A band of Gypsies—Gitanos—were camped close by, and in ten minutes they were all over the ship. Among them was a singularly beautiful girl to whom I was strangely drawn. She followed me around the ship, which did not annoy me at all, and insisted on telling my fortune. When I consented she told me, among a lot of other things, that I would be paid a large sum of money in the mountains and assassinated.

The Carlist camp was located well up in the mountains, nearly twelve miles away. After a short wait I was ceremoniously ushered into the august presence of the Pretender. He greeted me with frigid formality in contradiction to the warm welcome I had expected, as due a savior of the Carlist cause, and his first words, spoken in fair English, were a curt statement that he had no money but would pay for my cargo through his London agent within two months.

I pointed out to him, as discreetly as possible, what the result of such a course would be. Failure to keep the agreement made by your agent would destroy your excellent credit with all dealers in revolutionary supplies, and that, of course, is not to be thought of. On the other hand, by paying for this cargo you will establish your credit more firmly than ever. I know that your majesty is not only very honest, but very wise."

This argument appeared to convince him and, with a smile as though he had really been only joking, he summoned a venerable Jew, evidently his treasurer, who looked like the original of all pictures of Shylock, and ordered him to pay me £28,000, the amount called for by the manifest. The Jew returned in a few minutes with the exact amount. With the transaction completed, Don Carlos dramatically waved me out.

The officer who had piloted us to the camp suggested that we could find our way back to the ship without any trouble, as the trail was clearly defined, and we started back alone. Before we had gone twenty steps Brown, my sailing master, asked whether I had been paid in cash. I pointed to my bulging pockets and told him I undoubtedly had. He then confessed that he thought we were "in for it." Six cavalrymen, he said, had started down the trail not long before I left Don Carlos' tent, and he believed they had been sent out to waylay, rob and probably murder us in the deep canyon into which the ravine from the camp turned.

In a flash I recalled the prediction of the Gypsy girl. I laughed at myself for the spasm of something like fear that came into my mind, yet I was undeniably nervous, for Brown was not a man to form foolish fancies or become unduly alarmed about anything. And none of us was armed.

We had turned a corner that put us out of sight of the camp, when I saw a dark face peering at us through the underbrush that matted the trail on both sides. At the first glance the face looked like nothing but one of the troopers we had been talking about, but in an instant I recognized the Gitano girl who had told my fortune and begged me not to go into the mountains. She beckoned to us and, without saying a word, plunged off into deep woods, in which we, unguided, would have been hopelessly lost in ten minutes.

She led us over a hill and across a wide depression and then over another much higher mountain. There was not so much as a suggestion of a path and it was hard going, yet none of us complained. She brought us out to the trail at the point where we had made our first turn into the foothills. From there it was a straight road to the ship with no fear of ambuscade or attack.

The rest of the cargo was jerked out with all speed and as soon as the last box was on the bank we got under way. Greatly to my surprise we were not even hailed by the fort at the mouth of the river, where I had looked for some serious business, and we continued happily on our way to London.

MAKES DARING TRIP

W. P. Edwards of Reclamation Service Has Thrilling Adventure.

Government Enabled to Build Huge Tunnel Five Miles Long from Gunnison Canyon as Result of Remarkable Feat.

Denver, Colo.—One of the most daring feats that has been accredited to the men of the reclamation service in their battles of converting the deserts of the west into productive farms was the original trip through the swift waters of the Gunnison canyon.

In the years previous to the time when the reclamation service went into Colorado and determined upon the diversion of the waters of the Gunnison river, that the arid lands of the Uncompahgre project might be reclaimed, man had never passed alive through the Gunnison canyon. There were many tales of adventurous Indians and white men who had attempted the dangers of this canyon, but none of them had succeeded and lived to tell the tale.

W. P. Edwards was the first man to accomplish this feat. He did it on a rubber mattress, inflated with air. Boarding his raft at the headwaters of the Gunnison, he started on the wild ride through its canyon with the idea of prospecting for a possible opportunity to divert its waters and get them upon the desert.

This raft of air and rubber was believed to be immune to the shocks that it would meet in plunging headlong down the currents of this stream. To a large extent, it proved worthy of the confidence that was placed in it. To be sure, it lost upon occasion much of the form which it had in the beginning. It was punctured and mended and reinflated on many occasions. At times it became merely a flabby bag that was thrown over the shoulder of the voyager as he waded down stream over the rapids. At other times it became merely a life-preserver that kept him afloat in deep eddies.

At still other times the raft and its operator clung to the sides of rocks and fought the currents in the face of the danger of going over a cataract into sudden death. But in the end, after passing many dangers, W. P. Edwards and his raft came out of the mountain gorge to where the river spreads out into a quiet stream on the plains below.

West Portal of the Great Gunnison Tunnel.

When Edwards reached the habitations of man he had with him the data which was the foundation upon which has been based one of the most spectacular engineering feats on record. For the reclamation service has built wagon roads into this precipitous canyon and from a point at its bottom has driven a great tunnel for five miles through solid rock and through that tunnel has diverted the frothing waters and set them to the business of making crops grow upon the desert.

WOMAN LOSES HER VOICE

Trainer of Wild Beasts in Terror When Caged Grizzly Bear Attacks Her Husband.

San Francisco.—Mme. Ricardo, a lion trainer, known as the "singing girl in the tiger's den," is speechless as the result of an attack upon her husband by a bear at Oakland. The woman was one of the few in the gathering at the circus who realized her husband's peril.

When the grizzly bore her husband to the ground the woman screamed for assistance. Ricardo remained quiet, covering his head and face with his arms.

Mme. Ricardo attempted to sing the next day, but found that she had lost her voice. Physicians fear it may not return. Ricardo escaped injury.

Yale Receives a Prehistoric Chair.
New Haven, Conn.—Yale university museum has received from Ecuador, South America, an interesting prehistoric relic in the shape of a large stone chair, carved as a crouching human figure holding up a stone seat. The chair is of a kind of stone found nowhere in the world except on some of the Ecuador hills. The donor is Charles C. Brown, Yale, 1903.

THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. XII. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, MAY 24, 1912. NO. 9.

MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

Two Warriors Taken; Fight Plans End

NOPE
DO YOU SEE TH' MEXICANS YET ?

CHICAGO. — American reinforcements for the rebel Mexican troops set sail for the southern republic from Dundee, Ill., on the Fox river, the other night.

"Captain Unafraid" Merle Farmsworth, thirteen years old, was in command of the good ship Ferber, while General Do Or Die Charles Martz, fourteen years old, commanded the troops.

The skipper and the general were the crew and the general and the skipper were the troops. Their transport was a twelve-foot skiff, owned, until they seized it as contraband of war, by Lyman Andrews of Dundee.

The young soldiers of fortune made up for their lack of numbers in the strength of their armament. Each wore a belt strapped around his waist carrying 110 rounds of ammunition, while in their holsters were revolvers.

Dangling from their hips were huge two-edged dirks in scabbards, almost a foot long.

The expedition was halted at Aurora, Ill., after a two days' sail.

The skipper and general were captured by the Aurora police.

They had covered not more than thirty miles when they were taken at North Aurora.

The boys were seen navigating the Fox river, the boat rocking and bobbing about on the swollen stream.

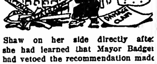
Observers thought the lads would be drowned and the police were notified. They seized the boys. The lads made a desperate kicking and scratch-leg resistance for a minute, then, realizing the futility of giving battle to superior forces, capitulated.

After their surrender they were taken to the Aurora jail, carrying with them their provisions—six leaves of bread and two cans of tomatoes.

The police seized their munitions of war. The boat was tied up and the former owner sent for it.

Fenced in by iron bars, the boys became lamblike. They declared for peace and the calm of home life again.

Woman's Will Stops Administration



I'LL FIX THAT BUNCH OF GOOD-FOR-NOTHINGS !!!
CITY HALL
DAMAGE CLAIM

PORTSMOUTH, N. H.—One determined woman, Mrs. Ellen Quinn of Washington street, showed what she could do the other day with a city government that held up her claim for damage to property through the overflowing of a sewer.

She tied up the City hall with attachments, tied up the police station with attachments, tied up the water department and the street department and every other thing about departments with the same manner of legal documents until the city officials threw up their hands and were humbled before her.

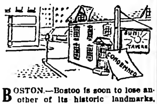
Then she agreed to let the garbage still continue to be removed, and the city horses came forth from the private stables where she had placed them and the typewriters in the city building get to clicking again, after Mayor Daniel W. Badger had passed out his personal check of $3,000, as bondsman for the city to insure the payment of her claim in case the courts support her contention that $300 is not too much to be awarded for having a fine hot-air furnace ruined by a pesky sewer backing up.

Mrs. Quinn got Sheriffs Spinner and Shaw on her side directly after she had learned that Mayor Badger had vetoed the recommendation made by the committee on claims to pay her the money. They appeared just after the city hall opened and attached everything the place contained, chairs, tables, desks, typewriters and all manner of furnishings.

Then they went over to the police station and attached everything there save the astounded officials and the prisoners. It was the same thing in the rooms of the water department attachments being handed out right and left.

When they found no more inside the city buildings to levy upon they went out upon the streets and attached the street-sweeping machines and the garbage carts and the horses that dragged them.

Boston's Historic Landmark Condemned



BOSTON.—Boston is soon to lose another of its historic landmarks, what is claimed to be one of the oldest structures in the city—the Sun tavern, in Dock square.

Some time ago there was a fire in the rear of the building, and it is understood the fire commissioner condemned the set of buildings at that point, owned by the C. W. Galloupe estate, which also includes the old Bite tavern, in the angle made by South Market street and Faneuil Hall square. Orders have been given to remove the structures within the next three months. It is understood a modern brick building will replace both structures.

The rough-hewn oaken beams of the Sun tavern seem as sound today as when they were placed in position upon the hewed and shouldered uprights which support them. The loss of this historic group of buildings will bring great regret to many interested in the early days. The Sun tavern boasts on its Faneuil Hall square face a tablet stating that the building was erected in 1690, and the date has never been disputed as far as is known. In fact, there is a tradition to the effect that its timbers were cut in Cornhill. This story is not generally known, as it is known Cornhill was built upon in 1690. Of course the oak could have been cut there prior to that and stored, but it is more generally believed the heavy beams were cut near Cornhill, as was entirely possible at that date.

The tavern is older by half a century than Faneuil hall, which faces it.

Priest Converts Hundred to Marriage

FATHER DALTON IS FINE !!!!

KANSAS CITY. — Forty-eight engagements and one marriage are the fruitage thus far of the matrimonial guild of Father William J. Dalton of the Church of the Annunciation.

"I am expecting London and Kansas City to span the ocean and join hands in the culmination of a romance started a quarter of a century ago," he said, "and if the hearts that were estranged then are united now it will mean that our little efforts here have been responsible for a well-known professional man of Kansas City marrying his boyhood sweetheart.

"It happened this way," Father Dalton continued. "I received a letter from a woman in London soon after the papers there contained an account of our little venture, asking if I could find a man of a certain name in Kansas City. She said they had been engaged more than twenty-five years ago; that an estrangement had come and that he had departed for America. She said that she still loved him and asked me to find him for her. I found him. I am hoping soon to hear of their marriage."

Each day Father Dalton's mail grows larger. He has had letters from every big city in the United States; from nearly every state; from foreign countries; from one man worth $2,000,000; from Indian girls of Oklahoma and Texas; from bankers, judges, lawyers, physicians and farmers.

In the local classes—those which meet every week at Father Dalton's home—there are twenty couples who are expected to embark within the next few months. Several of these already have announced their engagement, while the rest are understood.

PROMINENT PEOPLE

SAYS SHE'S ALL AMERICAN

Oscar Hammerstein had the proudest moment of his life recently when King George gave him a handshake in the beautiful vestibule of the London opera house. It was his majesty's first visit to the opera house, to which he went to attend a concert in aid of the League of Mercy.

The king, accompanied by Queen Mary, Princess Mary and Prince Albert, was received there by Prince and Princess Alexander of Teck, Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein, the Earl of Chesterfield, Lord Farquhar and the Countess of Chesterfield.

After the ladies had been presented to their majesties, the dowager Countess of Chesterfield introduced Mr. Hammerstein to Prince Alexander, who presented him to King George.

The king, grasping Mr. Hammerstein's hand, said:

"I am delighted with the effort you are making here today and it gives me great pleasure to come to your house."

The star item in the program was an abbreviated garden scene from "Faust," sung by four Americans—Fanny Lyne, Lydia Locke, Orville Harrold and Henry Weldon.

At the close of the performance the queen summoned Miss Lyne, who still was in costume as Marguerite, to the royal box, saying:

"I must compliment you upon your beautiful voice. I understand you are half American."

Miss Lyne archly replied: "No, your majesty, I am all American."

MAY SOON BE MAJOR-GENERAL

Brig. Gen. Frederick Funston, commander of the Department of California, who at any time may be promoted to major general, is one of the "fightingest" little man in Uncle Sam's army, and a general who was not turned out in the polishing mill at West Point. He jumped into the fighting game from the seemingly innocuous calling of a government botanical explorer—and made good.

Fred Funston, the captor of Aguinaldo and the conqueror of the Philippines, comes of a fighting family, being the son of Edward Hogue Funston, a captain in the Union army during the Civil war, and Ann Elizabeth Mitchell Funston, a descendant of Daniel Boone. The elder Funston served three terms in congress, was for many years a Kansas legislator and speaker of the house.

The son of this hardy Kansan left his father's farm in his teens and went to Mexico. There he picked up Spanish and sufficient American dollars to come back home and enter the Kansas State university in his early twenties.

GEN. BARRY SUCCEEDS GRANT

Maj. Gen. Thomas H. Barry, U. S. A., superintendent of the United States Military Academy at West Point, has been appointed commander of the Eastern division of the army with headquarters on Governor's island, as successor of the late Gen. F. D. Grant.

General Barry's tour of duty at West Point still had more than two years to run, but the fact that he has long been known as one of the officers to whom active command of troops particularly appeals makes it quite certain that he welcomes the command.

General Barry was born in New York city, and may be termed "a typical product of New York city." He was born and reared in the old First ward, and there are men in that city with whom he played and fought as a boy, who still love to tell stories of General Barry's boyhood.

In July, 1873, Barry entered West Point. He graduated in 1877, and was assigned as a second lieutenant to the Seventh cavalry, Custer's old command.

On September 1, 1910, General Barry succeeded Col. Hugh L. Scott, of the Third cavalry, as superintendent of West Point.

WU TING-FANG COMING BACK

If he still retains one-half the enthusiasm for which he is famous in America Dr. Wu Ting-fang will have the time of his life when he returns to Washington to enter upon his third term of service as Chinese minister to the United States. His many friends in official and in private life are already planning to give him such a welcome as has never been accorded another returning diplomat. His capacity for enjoyment when it comes to banquets and dinner parties and his power of endurance when it comes to pink teas will in all probability be taxed to the utmost. The more strenuous the program, however, the more gleeful will probably be the indefatigible Wu Ting-fang.

With the announcement that Dr. Wu will come to this country as representative of Yuan Shih Kai, president of the Chinese republic, society at the national [illegible] has shaken off [illegible] springtime lassitude. Stories of the famous Chinaman's sayings have been revived. Anecdotes concerning his eccentricities, his sparkling originality and his sharpness of tongue are numerous. He is [illegible] the interrogation point famous.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

Taking a Census of the Water Wells

EH?
MADAM— I AM TAKING A CENSUS OF WELLS— HAVE YOU ONE ?? ?!!

WASHINGTON.—Prof. W. J. McGee of the department of agriculture has been at work upon a curious sort of census for some months. This census is not the counting of souls, but of the wells of water upon which souls are nourished. He has secured data concerning the wells of the country, and they are bearing on the national water supply and incidentally upon the ultimate food resources of the nation. This well enumeration has already reached 35,000, and covers the states and practically every country of the United States. Records are compiled, so far as possible, showing the depth of the well and the depth of the water and the variation of water level from year to year. The significant part of the showing is that the water level in the wells of the country is decreasing at the rate of a foot and a half for each decade. Some of the records go back for 20 years and some to the first settlement of the country.

The average reduction in level of the "ground water" is shown to have been 14 feet since its first settlement. This is regarded as a serious condition, because the food-producing possibility of the country depends eventually on the water supply.

One group of 10 states was taken in the rectangle inclosed by Minnesota, Ohio, Tennessee and Iowa. It was found that this was representative of the general condition. It was shown that the water level was gradually but steadily falling all over the country, so that the ultimate outlook, not next year, but in a few centuries, will be for a vanishing drinking supply not only on the farms, but in urban communities where the water supply is drawn from lakes and rivers.

Prof. McGee says that the supply could be increased by digging the wells deeper, but that this would be merely a palliative measure. The real remedy is in changing the system of farm cultivation so as to conserve the water supply.

He explains that when the country is in a state of nature all the rainfall and the melting snowfall sinks into the ground and the rivers run clear. With settlement and cultivation the ground is broken up so that it is washed into the streams and the rivers run muddy in the spring, and there are intervals of disastrous floods and bad drouths.

First Giant Wireless Towers Erected

THESE WILL MAKE 'EM SIT UP 'AN TAKE NOTICE ALRIGHT !!!

THE first of three giant steel towers to be used by the bureau of yards and docks of the United States navy as wireless telegraph stations has been erected on a high hill overlooking the Potomac river at Arlington, Va. Two of the towers are 450 feet high, while the third is 600 feet high, the latter being the highest in the world built for use as a wireless telegraph station.

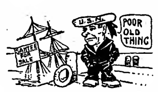
When the other two towers are erected the three will be capable of sending a wireless message a distance of 3,000 miles over the sea and almost that distance over land. Had they been completed and in working order at the time direct communication could have been established between Arlington, Va., and any of the vessels within hundreds of miles of the ill-fated Titanic.

The 600-foot tower, when erected, will contain an elevator, and the steel work on the two smaller towers has been so arranged that elevators can be placed in them at any time. However, for a while at least, persons will ascend from the bottom to the top of the smaller towers by means of a stairway.

A power and engine house, transmitter and receiving buildings are being erected at Arlington. These, with the three huge towers, which, when erected, will be visible from any point within many miles of the nation's capital, will constitute the most powerful wireless station in the world.

When completed the station will be able to communicate over the seas with the Azores in the Atlantic, all West Indian ports and South American coast towns as far south as the mouth of the Amazon river. Aerial disturbances, which are greater over land than over sea, will, it is expected, make transmission over land more difficult, but it is said that after allowances for impediments in transmission over land wireless communication from this station will extend over half of North America.

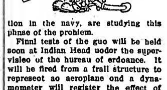
Historic Ship Is Abandoned by Navy



THE historic old ship Santee, which recently sank at her dock at the Annapolis Naval Academy, has been abandoned by the naval authorities and will be sold to the highest bidder with the understanding that he remove her at his own expense. An inspection of the vessel shows that she is waterlogged and beyond repair for naval purposes. She rests on the muddy bottom of the Severn with the water about twelve feet above her water line and probably never will float again.

Naval officers have an affection for the old Santee, based on recollections of their student days at the academy. For many years she was used as a practice ship by the midshipmen, and when no longer able to navigate, was transformed into a prison ship for the embryo admirals who transgressed the rules. In more recent years she was used as a garrison for marines and sailors on that station. A few days ago a large section of her bottom gave way and she sank slowly to the bed of the river.

Aeroplane Gun Fires from Both Ends



U.S. HAS NEW AEROPLANE GUN SHOOTS FROM BOTH ENDS EUROPE
THAT UNCLE SAM IS ALWAYS DOIN' SOMETHIN !!

TESTS of another invention designed to make "war in the clouds" possible are being prepared by the United States. It consists of an aeroplane gun that discharges a projectile from each end. One of the projectiles is designed for destructive work and the other as a dummy, to neutralize the recoil. Commander Cleland Davis, U. S. N., is the inventor.

The practicability of the weapon has been partially demonstrated in tests at Fort Wright. Two light canvas wings, corresponding to those of an aeroplane were rigged up close to the gun. Delicate springs and recoiling discs were placed under the stanchions to record the vibration and concussion and recoil. The results indicated that its use on an aeroplane hundreds of feet above earth is practicable.

As the two projectiles weigh about fifty pounds it is acknowledged that the sudden loss of weight might affect an aeroplane greatly. Now the inventor and Captain Washington I. Chambers, U. S. N., in charge of aviation in the navy, are studying this phase of the problem.

Final tests of the gun will be held soon at Indian Head under the supervision of the bureau of ordnance. It will be fired from a frail structure to represent an aeroplane and a dynamometer will register the effect of the discharge.

Successful Man's Policy.

I have tried to make all my acts and commercial moves the result of definite consideration and sound judgment. There were never any great ventures or risks. I practiced honest, slow-growing business methods, and tried to back them with energy and good system.—Marshall Field.

THE SUNBEAM.

W. G. HUNT, Publisher.

SUNBEAM. - - MINN.

EDUCATE AGAINST SELFISHNESS.

Recently addressing a body of New England students, Richard Olney, secretary of state under President Cleveland, urged them to the duty of subordinating interests of their respective future crafts to the highest claims of citizenship. Which is only another way of saying, that in educating our young people we should teach them first the art of living, and second, whatever art by which they are to live; that is, that living comes before getting a livelihood. The claims of citizenship are above those of any trade or profession. Our schools that go in for the vocational training, eminently good in itself, need to look out lest they lay the chief stress upon the matter of getting hold of technical knowledge as the means of making a living. The schools, none of them, are teaching too much about how to become good and worthy citizens, how to make dynamic men and women out of ordinary boys and girls. There is the place for the stress. That, we think, is what Mr. Olney had in mind when he urged those students to sink selfish plans for immediate aggrandizement in the larger purpose of doing good and being good for their country, says the Omaha Bee. For as sure as they do they will have no difficulty in picking up a livelihood somewhere. So if our curriculums could be made to teach and throw their weight against selfishness in education our educational system would be improved right here.

From Copenhagen comes information which will be received with interest by all who are alert to electric progress. Professor Hannover, president of the Polytechnic academy of that capital, is asserted to have invented an electrical accumulator that has five times the capacity of the accumulators now in existence without any increase over them in size and weight. He uses porous lead alloy sheets, the capacity of which is increased by perforating them with millions of microscopic holes. Professor Hannover's accumulator, while it is likely to be more expensive than those now in use, will be most valuable for aeroplanes and submarine boats and in lighting railroad trains.

In more hardy days than these snuff was used as an eye liniment. "The Complete Housewife, or Accomplished Gentlewoman's Companion," which had run into 16 editions by 1758, extols its virtues, says the London Chronicle. Accomplished gentlewomen who find their sight failing with advancing years are advised to rub "the right sort of Portugal snuff into the eyes night and morning, and take it also through the nose." This treatment, it is asserted, "cured Sir Edward Seymour, Sir John Houblon, and Judge Ayres, so that they could read without spectacles after they had used them many years." Some people would prefer spectacles.

A Chicago boy carried away a model aeroplane prize with a machine which had curved wings like a letter U. They gave his model a stability which carried it beyond all rivals, and a professional aviator who witnessed the exhibition declared that the lad had discovered a principle which would undoubtedly be adopted by the builders of aeroplanes. After the boys have been experimenting a few more years it is possible that we shall have a really safe flying machine.

"The words of harmless banter," according to the New York Herald, addressed by a man to two young women, led to his being knocked down by the women's escort, the fall fracturing his skull. As the two words were "Hello, kids!" the New York idea of harmless banter is thus exemplified. It is unfortunate the fellow died because he deserved to be knocked down.

Some men have such a trust in fate that the things they do, trusting to immunity, make this trust really pathetic. Such a man in a New York town lately tried to start a balky mule by giving the animal ammonia to smell. It may be difficult to make him realise how exceptionally lucky he was in merely being carted off to a hospital instead of to an undertaker's.

One of our historians arises to remark that the temple of Solomon cost $5,000,000,000. As it was a government job, we are tempted to wonder what politicians, or set of politicians, got away with the $4,999,000,000.

A man in Chicago complains that he is continually being identified by the police on account of his gold teeth. He must belong to the numerous class who are always getting into trouble because they cannot keep their mouths shut.

Meat eaters, according to a college professor, are more active than vegetarians. Possibly it is because the prices makes the meat eaters hopping mad.

FIGURES IN GOVERNMENT'S SUIT AGAINST STEEL TRUST

THIS photograph, taken on the steps of the New York custom house, shows several of the leading figures in the suit of the federal government to dissolve the United States Steel corporation. From left to right they are: B. A. Reed; Henry B. Colton, assistant to Jacob M. Dickinson; Henry P. Brown, special master appointed by the United States circuit court to take testimony in the suit; Jacob M. Dickinson, ex-secretary of war, who appears for the government as a "trust buster," and R. V. Lindabury, chief counsel for the Steel corporation.

HELPS MRS. DURAND

FORMER ASSISTANT INSPECTOR AT ARMOUR PLANT SUPPORTS HER STORY.

SECRETARY WILSON ACCUSED

Head of Agricultural Department Charged With Using Frank to Stop Beef Charges—Very Abusive Language is Quoted in Statement.

Washington, May 16.—Congress will receive a resolution in which an investigation will be demanded into the allegation that Secretary Wilson, Solicitor McCabe and Dr. A. D. Melvin of the bureau of animal industry, are illegally employing the government frank and government stenographers in an attempt to stifle the inquiry into the beef situation. Not only are these officials conducting a campaign of personal defense at government expense, but they are using department facilities to frame personal attacks on members of congress and witnesses summoned to testify before the committee conducting the present investigation.

Many members of the house, among them members of the committee on rules, and Representative John M. Nelson, whose resolution precipitated the present inquiry, are thoroughly aroused over the situation.

In support of the charge of Mrs. Scott Durand, society leader of Chicago, that Arthur Meeker, general manager of Armour & Co., made use of the government meat inspectors at the Chicago stock yards to condemn certain of her prize cattle, indicating a significant understanding between the packers and the inspectors, Marion B. Adams of 508 East Forty-sixth place, Chicago, has filed a statement with Representative Nelson, who is pressing his resolution for an investigation of the meat inspection service.

Adams was an inspector's assistant at the Armour plant. Although he was not present at the test of Mrs. Durand's cows, he was in a position to know of the consternation among the inspectors when it was learned that Mrs. Durand had secretly shipped the condemned cattle to the Armour plant, and the inspectors, not knowing they were hers, found no disease and passed them for food.

Furthermore, he was told by a friend of Dr. Bennett, inspector in charge, that Bennett had used abusive language in referring to Mrs. Durand after she had trapped him into a demonstration of incompetency. Adams will be subpoenaed as a witness.

Bandits Hold Up Train.

Hattiesburg, Miss., May 17.—Two men escaped with $140,000 early Wednesday morning after holding up New Orleans-New York limited train on the Queen & Crescent railroad eight miles from this city and dynamiting the safe and express car.

Passengers were not molested and no one was injured. The men escaped on horses, evidently toward the Alabama state line. Posses started in pursuit after the train came to this city.

Only 3,000,000 Bushels Left.

Duluth, Minn., May 18.—Of the 15,000,000 bushels of bonded Canadian grain handled by local elevators this spring, there are only 3,000,000 bushels left. This means that the business in Canadian grain is well cleaned up.

Leaps From Ferry to Death.

New York, May 18.—A well dressed man of foreign appearance jumped to his death Thursday from the upper deck in the North river. His [illegible]

TAR FOR REITMAN

EMMA GOLDMAN AND MANAGER WAITED ON BY VIGILANTES.

"I. W. W." Branded on Manager of Noted Anarchist—Forced to Kneel and Kiss American Flag.

San Diego, Cal., May 17.—The free speech fight here took another serious turn when Emma Goldman, the "queen of the anarchists," was driven from the city after a near-riot, and Dr. Ben Reitman, Miss Goldman's manager, was tarred and feathered Wednesday.

A vigilance committee of citizens played a large part in the affair, making such a demonstration that Miss Goldman had to be spirited away from the Grant hotel, where she had rooms, to a train waiting at the Santa Fe station. She left immediately for Los Angeles.

Reitman was taken to Las Penasquitas ranch, twenty miles north of town, by a party of citizens in automobiles and tarred and feathered and branded with "I. W. W."

Reitman was forced to kneel and kiss the American flag and to promise that he would not return to San Diego.

Barred from the use of e hell, warned by the police and hooted and jeered by crowds wherever she appeared, Emma Goldman canceled her speaking dates in San Diego and under cover of darkness stole out of the city, going by automobile to Oceanside, where she boarded the owl train for Los Angeles.

RUMORED THAW HAS AN HEIR

Story That His Wife Evelyn is Mother of Boy Baby Is Not Confirmed.

New York, May 15.—Close friends of Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw announce that she is the mother of a nineteen-months boy baby. The baby is said to have been born near Hamburg, Germany, where the mother was temporarily sojourning.

In contradiction of these statements representatives of the Thaw family denied the paternity of the child and even questioned its existence.

DIRECT VOTE BILL SIGNED

In Absence of Chief Executive Vice-President Sherman Affixed Signature to Measure.

Washington, May 16.—In the absence of the president, Vice-President Sherman signed the resolution submitting to the states an amendment to the Constitution providing for the election of United States senators by popular vote. It will now be sent to the state department, and from there notice of the resolution will be sent to all the states.

Confesses to Paris Police.

Paris, May 17.—Mme. Vuillemin, the companion of Octave Garnier, made a complete confession to the police and laid bare all of the secrets of the terrible auto band which, within five months, has committed twenty-three murders, secured a fortune in money and jewels and held Paris and its environs in a state of semi-siege.

Italians Refuse Woman's Suffrage.

Rome, May 18.—The Italian chamber of deputies defeated the woman suffrage bill by an overwhelming vote here Thursday. Premier Giolitti opposed the measure, as did many others on the floor.

Butt's Name Off Army Roll.

Washington, May 18.—The name of Maj. Archibald W. Butt, President Taft's aid, who went down with the Titanic, was formally dropped from the United States army roll on [illegible]

IOWA IS FOR CLARK

MONTANA REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION FAVORS TAFT WITH 8 ADHERENTS.

WEST VIRGINIA FOR COLONEL

Minnesota G. O. P. Indorses Roosevelt For President—T. R. and La Follette Men Wrangle Over Resolutions—Former Win Out.

Burlington, Ia., May 18.—On Thursday Iowa joined the states in the Clark column when the Democratic state convention sent 300 delegates to Baltimore instructed to vote as a unit for the nomination of Champ Clark as president of the United States. Eight delegates at large, each with half a vote, are bound by these instructions, as also are the 22 district delegates.

The Clark delegation from Iowa to Baltimore will consist of eight delegates at large, each with half a vote and 22 district delegates.

Helena, Mont., May 18.—The Republican state convention here on Thursday selected eight delegates to the national convention, which is to be held in Chicago, and while the delegates are vested with discretionary power in the matter of voting on the presidential nominee they are requested by resolutions adopted to use all honorable means to bring about the renomination of President Taft.

Huntington, W. Va., May 18.—The Republican state convention, which met here Thursday, with scarcely a dissenting vote selected six delegates at large to the Chicago national convention and instructed them to vote for the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt. Gov. William E. Glasscock heads the list of delegates at large.

Minneapolis, Minn., May 18.—The Minnesota state Republican convention of Thursday indorsed the candidacy of Theodore Roosevelt for president. I. A. Caswell won the fight for national committeeman. The principal fight in the convention was over the report of the committee on resolutions. The Roosevelt people insisted on bringing Roosevelt resolutions and La Follette men insisted on recognition of their resolutions. The Roosevelt people were in the majority and won out.

Bay City, Mich., May 17.—Champ Clark will have 22 of the 30 Michigan delegates to the Democratic national convention and Woodrow Wilson the other eight. If when the delegation reaches Baltimore it should decide to vote as a unit, Clark will have all.

San Francisco, May 17.—Returns from Tuesday's state presidential preference primary show Champ Clark leads Woodrow Wilson by probably 20,000. Theodore Roosevelt carried the state by from 60,000 to 65,000.

Provo, Utah, May 17.—The Republican state convention here named eight delegates to Chicago and instructed them for Taft. The convention gave the Taft administration a warm indorsement.

Columbia, S. C., May 17.—The state Democratic convention decided Wednesday to send its 18 delegates to Baltimore uninstructed.

Big Road Reform in Kansas.

Junction City, Kan., May 17.—Three hundred citizens from every walk of life, by working all day Wednesday, turned 100 miles of bad highways into 100 miles of good roads. The women served dinner to the workers.

Mexico Rebel Leader Dying.

El Paso, Tex., May 17.—Mrs. Ines Salazar, wife of General Salazar, with Orozco's army south of Chihuahua, received a telegram from Jiminez Wednesday notifying her that her husband was dying.

WILL BE DICTATOR

MADERO TO MAKE MOVE IF MEXICAN REVOLT IS NOT CRUSHED.

Unless Revolution Ends Before Last Sunday in June, He Will Assume Full Powers of Government.

El Paso, May 18.—Francisco I. Madero, president of Mexico, will declare himself dictator if the present revolution is not crushed before the last Sunday in June. This is the statement in a dispatch received here from Mexico City. The president has decided this step, it is asserted, in order to insure holding the congressional elections.

The last day on which the congressional elections can be held is the last Sunday in June. Unless the revolution is ended before that time Madero will assume the full power of the government, taking over legislative and judicial as well as executive authorities. This will permit him to suspend personal guarantees and enforce such regulations as he sees fit until the country is tranquil and he chooses to order a congressional election.

Jiminez, Mexico., May 18.—Fourteen federal soldiers were killed and two machine guns were captured by the rebels in an attack upon 300 federals under General Sanjines at Coyame, 130 miles northeast of here, according to dispatch received at Orozco's headquarters. The rebels were commanded by Colonel Gambo and lost only one man, the dispatch concluded.

Important News Items

Chicago, May 18.—The Republican National committee moved into the Coliseum, where it will maintain quarters until the national convention is over. The committee is ready to begin the work of hearing delegate contests.

Los Angeles, May 18.—Dispatches from this city say that the bungalow mystery woman was an heiress and was robbed of $3,000. She is said to be Miss Vlue Keller of Los Angeles.

San Francisco, May 18.—Three privates committed suicide on the army transport Thomas on its cruise from Portland, Ore., to San Francisco.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 18.—James M. Lynch, of Syracuse, N. Y., was reelected president of the International Typographical Union on Thursday.

Jefferson City, Mo., May 17.—The clerk of the supreme court received a check for $50,000 from the Standard Oil company Wednesday to pay a fine of that company in the ouster proceedings.

New York, May 17.—Brigadier-General J. H. Allen, U. S. A., chief of the signal and aviation corps of the army, had a narrow escape from death Wednesday when a hydro-aeroplane in which he was riding as a passenger with Aviator C. C. Witmars fell fifty feet into New York bay.

San Antonio, Tex., May 16.—Gen. Joseph W. Duncan, U. S. A., commanding the department of Texas, died here Tuesday of heart failure. General Duncan was fifty-eight years old.

Stamford, Conn., May 16.—George S. Wilson, manager of the Stamford Trust company, and De Forest Moores, teller, are under arrest accused of defalcations of nearly $58,000.

Washington, May 16.—Contributions of one dollar each are coming in rapidly to the committee in charge of the Woman's Titanic Memorial, which was organized here a few days ago. Mrs. John Hay is the honorary chairman, and the secretary.

DELEGATES ARE TO BLAME

President White of United Mine Workers Says Men Were Not Prepared for Strike.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 18.—Declaring for peace in the anthracite field and staking his future upon the result of his efforts, President John P. White of the United Mine Workers addressed the tri-district convention here Thursday in support of the tentative agreement rejected in New York by the full scale committee.

After asserting that he had discharged his duties with fidelity and had been faithful to every trust, he declared that the union is unprepared for a strike at the present time, and put the responsibility for a strike directly up to the delegates.

SEEKS TRUST'S DISSOLUTION

President in Speech at Newark, O., Says He Will Spare No Effort to Crush Combine.

Newark, O., May 18.—President Taft spoke from the courthouse steps here on Wednesday and served notice on the harvester trust that he would spare no effort to cause its dissolution.

"If Perkins says the division of the trusts is a good thing," said Mr. Taft, "then I'm going to do my best to divide the harvester trust."

Mark Twain's Home to City.

Hannibal, Mo., May 16.—The boyhood home of Mark Twain was presented to the city of Hannibal by George T. Mahan. The home will be preserved by the city. The presentation exercises were impressive.

Morocco Rebel Chief Killed.

Gibraltar, May 18.—News has been received here that Mizzian, chief and leader of the Riff tribes, was killed by the Spaniards during recent severe fighting. Both sides are reported to have lost heavily.

WHEN A TONIC IS NECESSARY

If You Are Run Down and Debilitated the Health Can Only Be Restored by Building Up the Blood.

When the body is weak and the blood thin it is sometimes difficult to find the cause unless a wasting illness has preceded the decline in health.

Obscure influences, something unhealthful in one's surroundings or work, may lead to a slow impoverishment of the blood and an enfeeblement of the whole body. When a serious stage has been reached there seems to be nothing that will account for it.

In such cases a complete change of climate or of work will sometimes effect a cure. It takes a long time, however, and for the great majority of sufferers is out of the question.

Mrs. G. P. Boutwell, of Clear Water, Minn., whose husband is a hardware merchant there, says:

"About two years ago, when I was living at West Union, Iowa, I was all run down through hard work and worry. I called a doctor who said I was suffering from general debility. He treated me for some time but was unable to do much for me. I had cold chills all of the time and seemed to be nearly bloodless. I could not keep anything on my stomach and lived on eggs and milk for some time. My stomach was sour and the gas on it kept me from getting much sleep at night. The doctor's medicine made my stomach feel worse.

"My father had used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills with benefit and advised me to try them. After a week or so I could notice a change. I soon became stronger, my appetite came back and the headaches disappeared. I was then able to eat without distress and began to do my work. I had a good color and gained in flesh. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cannot be praised too highly."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a general tonic and are useful in all diseases arising from poor blood or weakened nerves, such as sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, pale and sallow complexions and many forms of weakness.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y. A booklet, "Diseases of the Blood," will be sent free upon request.

Cuts Down Sentence.

Silicus—Do you believe in long engagements?

Cynicus—Sure. The longer a man is engaged the less time he has to be married.

To stay young or to grow young, Garfield Tea can help. It rejuvenates both in looks and energy.

Even when a bill collector finds a man in he is apt to find him out.

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

44 Bu. to the Acre

is a heavy yield, but that's what John Kennedy of Edmonton, Alberta, Western Canada, got from 40 acres of Spring Wheat in 1910. Reports from other districts in that province showed other excellent results—such as 4,000 bushels of wheat from 120 acres, or 33 1-3 bu. per acre. 25, 30 and 40 bushel yields were numerous. As high as 132 bushels of oats to the acre were threshed from Alberta fields in 1910.

The Silver Cup

at the recent Spokane Fair was awarded to the Alberta Government for its exhibit of grains, grasses and vegetables. Reports of excellent yields for 1910 come also from Saskatchewan and Manitoba in Western Canada.

Free homesteads of 160 acres, and adjoining preemptions of 160 acres (at $3 per acre) are to be had in the choicest districts.

Schools convenient, climate excellent, soil the very best, railways close at hand, building lumber cheap, fuel easy to get and reasonable in price, water easily procured, mixed farming a success.

Write as to best place for settlement, settlers' low railway rates, descriptive illustrated "Last Best West" (sent free on application) and other information, to Sup't of Immigration, Ottawa, Can., or to the Canadian Government Agent. (30)

Chas. Pilling, Clifford Blk, Grand Forks, N.D.
J. S. MacLachlan, Box 197, Watertown, S.D.
E. T. Holmes, 315 Jackson St., St. Paul, Minn.
Geo. A. Hall, 125 2d St., Milwaukee, Wis.

F.P. 20TH CENTURY Corset

STYLE 270

Made of good quality steam shrunk coutil that will not stretch. Automatic Boning, warranted not to break for a year. Bones constructed with a patented automatic system that gives a sliding movement in bending, distributing the strain, and making them impossible to break.

AT DEALERS $1.50 or sent direct

BIRDSEY-SOMERS CO.
233 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

The Wretchedness of Constipation

Can quickly be overcome by CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Purely vegetable—act surely and gently on the liver. Cure Biliousness, Headache, Dizziness, and Indigestion. They do their duty.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

FOR SALE—160 A. IN MAN., CAN.; WITHIN [illegible] of Winnipeg; 160 a. cult., [illegible] bldgs, [illegible] POST, [illegible]

BACKACHE AND ACHING JOINTS.

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

Together Tell of Weak or Disordered Kidneys.

Much pain that masks as rheumatism is due to weak kidneys—to their failure to drive off uric acid thoroughly. When you suffer achy, bad joints, backache, too, with some kidney disorders, get Doan's Kidney Pills, which have cured thousands.

John T. Scantling, Trinidad, Colo., says: "I was confined to bed with rheumatism, so helpless, I had to be fed. My back ached acutely and kidney secretions broke my rest. Nothing helped until I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they did me a world of good. I have never missed a day's work since."

"When Your Back Is Lame, Remember the Name—DOAN'S." 50c all stores. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

ONLY ONE OF EACH.

Howell—I don't see why Tom Watson always has "of Boston" after his name.

Powell—Neither do I; it is no more necessary than it was in the case of John L. Sullivan.

PHYSICIAN ADVISES CUTICURA REMEDIES

"Four years ago I had pieces break out on my wrist and on my shin which would itch and burn by spells, and scratching them would not seem to give any relief. When the trouble first began, my wrist and shin itched like poison. I would scratch those places until they would bleed before I could get any relief. Afterwards the places would scale over, and the flesh underneath would look red and feverish. Sometimes it would begin to itch until it would waken me from my sleep, and I would have to go through the scratching ordeal again.

Our physician pronounced it "dry eczema." I used an ointment which the doctor gave me, but it did no good. Then he advised me to try the Cuticura Remedies. As this trouble has been in our family for years, and is considered hereditary, I felt anxious to try to head it off. I got the Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills, and they seemed to be just what I needed.

"The disease was making great headway on my system until I got the Cuticura Remedies which have cleared my skin of the great pest. From the time the eczema healed four years ago, until now, I have never felt any of its pest, and I am thankful to the Cuticura Soap and Ointment which certainly cured me. I always use the Cuticura Soap for toilet, and I hope other sufferers from skin diseases will use the Cuticura Soap and Ointment." (Signed) Irven Hutchison, Three Rivers, Mich., Mar. 16, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Not Serious.

"I met a man today," said the popular author to his wife, "who wanted to take my life."

"Good heavens," she cried. "Did he try to murder you?"

"No, indeed, my dear. Merely asked some notes to write a biography of me."

To be sweet and clean, every woman should use Paxtine in sponge bathing. It eradicates perspiration and all other body odors. At druggists, 25c a box or sent postpaid on receipt of price by The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass.

The Exception.

"In one respect, a man is unlike a conflagration."

"What is that?"

"When they put him out he is full of fire."

Use Allen's Foot-Ease

The antiseptic powder to be shaken into the shoes for tired, tender, smarting, aching, swollen feet. It makes your feet feel easy and makes walking a Delight. Sold everywhere, 25c. For free trial package, address Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

Equivocal.

"What's in that report about private still in the mountains near your place?"

"Oh, that's all moonshine."

Stop the Pain.

The hurt of a burn or a cut stops when Cole's Carbolisalve is applied. It heals quickly and prevents scars. 25c and 50c by druggists. For free sample, write to J. W. Cole & Co., Black River Falls, Wis.

Probably there is nothing more expensive than the things we get for nothing.

Their Service
By Bayard Taylor

This they have done for us, who slumber here—
Awake, alive, though now so dumbly sleeping;
Spreading the board, but tasting not its cheer;
Sowing, but never reaping;
Building, but never sitting in the shade
Of the strong mansion they have made;
Speaking their word of life with mighty tongue,
But hearing not the echo, million-voiced,
Of brothers who rejoiced,
From all our river vales and mountains flung.
So, take them, heroes of the songful past!
Open your ranks, let every shining troop
Its phantom banners droop,
To hail earth's noblest martyrs, and her last.
Take them, O Fatherland!
Who, dying, conquered in Thy name;
And, with a grateful hand,
Inscribe their deeds who took away Thy blame—
Give, for their grandest all, Thine insufficient fame!
Take them, O God! our brave,
The glad fulfillers of Thy dread decree;
Who grasped the sword for peace and smote to save,
And, dying here for freedom, died for Thee!

NATION'S DAY of REVERENCE

DAYS there are that stand heroic upon the calendar for all time. These are days honored in common by races and nations. They are days that enlist the particular respect of nations because they perpetuate the memories of persons famed for what they have done in one or another walk of life. The tendency of mankind is to seek to have the fame of the great ones equal in duration with their bestowing upon their fellow-men. There is one day for the American people that stands alone in solitary grandeur, separated in the high flights of glory that encircle it, isolated, yet majestic, in the pathos which will ever attend its celebration. That day is Decoration day. In these times, when the peace pipes are as soundful as the pipes of Pan, when the bugle is becoming hoarse, while the herald's trumpet announces general arbitration treaties to the ends of the earth, in these times, when the progress of mankind appears to be set toward the fulfillment of the far-off prophecy that swords shall be turned into plowshares and spears into pruning hooks, it is well to lay emphasis upon the day that has the most distinctive glory of any peculiarly American holiday. The glory of Decoration day is that it holds in national hallowing the mighty deeds of brave men. Their deeds will be immortal, who fought, not because they had spleen toward their brethren—now united in the bonds of a common home, endeavor and destiny—but because they saw a shattered nation wrecked upon the shoals of sectionalism. They will be immortal because the tendency of mankind is to have the fame of the doers of great deeds conterminous with the benefits conferred. The benefits will be everlasting and augmenting, so that Decoration day, far from having diminished glory when the last of the soldiers of the nation shall have passed away, will have even more honor paid it. The growth of the nation, the working out of its destiny, the recession of sectionalism, the magnifying of the incidents of national progress and national purpose—these are all factors in the march of progress that shall forever make hallowed the day sanctified by memories of the blood of the nation's defenders. Sad, indeed, the occasion for fratricidal strife, but the working out of the national issues from the glorious battlefields of the nation in its great domestic contest make even the pathos of the warfare eloquent with brotherhood, unity and a common devotion.

The time may come when war will be regarded as barbarism outright, when the closeness of the nations and the identical interests of the powers will be such as to obviate warfare, when the tribunals will exist for the support of all international causes without recourse to war. But the time can never come when the laurels of the warrior will be dimmed. No iconoclast will ever arise who will seek to tear down the monuments of the men who molded the world's destinies, using the blood of the battlefield as the cement for their constructive efforts.

Indeed, it is conceivable that the day may come when there can no more be opportunity for military distinction, but this very fact will increase the glory of the ages of heroism. Then the nation will look back to the deeds of the heroes who saved the Union, and they will be honored as living in an age, the majesty of which cannot be underrated by any change of ideas as to the utility of warfare. Hence the tribute paid the dead heroes of the nation's strife will be a less tribute than any to follow, for every year the meed of praise and the warmth of encomium will be increased, as the widening vista of the past lends additional enchantment to the theme. The time will come when every part of the nation, without disparagement to the men who fought on the other side, will unite in acclaiming the men who preserved the nation and made it the mighty leader in all movements for the peace and honor of mankind.

War may be all that it has been painted and its horrors cannot be too gravely set forth, but there is a profound religion in the warfare that reconstructs a nation, that re-establishes justice, that sets men free and liberates the intellect from shackles that fetter progressive thought and prohibit the full expression of progressive conduct. The south is blossoming today in its national fervor and industries teem throughout its domain. The north is clasping hands with all other sections in the movement of the American brotherhood toward the highest pinnacle of lofty ethics and serviceable achievement. The organ roll of American sentiment is heard with deep and resonant melody. All the nations of the earth are learning from the united American state, the great federated people of the American republic, the righteousness that exalteth a nation. American statesmen, American educators, American theologians—all have done mightily toward giving this country its position of prestige in the realm of world affairs, its reputation for probity and honesty. But the men who gave their lives for the nation made all this possible. They exalted an ideal that has placed upon the American people the destiny of necessity to support every oppressed people and to uplift the standard of freedom and moral right. Out from the furnace of the war came the gold of American ideals, out from the blood and strife came the type of American statesmanship and the type of American sentiment that have caused the republic to be looked up to by the people of Europe and Asia as the moral mentor and the efficient ideal for all of them. The work of the men who are honored upon Decoration day is not concluded, will never be. Their souls move majestically onward with the movement of the race, of the age, of the universe. Some day there will be a general roll call, when those who have deserved well of mankind will pass in the review of the eternal ages, and the men who did the deeds honored upon Decoration day will not miss the tribute of the wider effects of their mission to preserve the American political tie unbroken. United, glorious and peaceful, with undimmed vision and with unshaken faith in their primary principles, the American people are one in heart and one in spirit in their purpose to have the illustrious ideals of the nation made increasingly glorious for the blessing of mankind.

It is easy enough after a war has been fought to prove the uselessness of it. It has often been shown how the difference between the north and the south might have been adjusted with such a terrible waste of life and treasure. Grant that within the devices of political expediency these preventions were possible, the fact still remains that the wars were fought, that great moral faults were purged, and the God of battles enforced his ancient law of eye for eye and drop of blood for drop of blood. Children are always bearing the faults of their fathers, and the men and women of '60 to '65 poured out of their own veins and out of their own souls an equal portion of blood and misery that their fathers drew from the veins of an enslaved race. No moral debts long remain unpaid.

What if the purging was drastic and the throes suffered by the warring elements brought it staggering to its knees, was not the cleansing complete? The nation stands today the stronger and the sweeter for that conflict. For it was not merely the quarrelsome distemper of war that afflicted the people, but a score of diseases; not human slavery alone, but factional jealousy, greed, selfishness, state misgovernment and federal abuses. How vastly these have been eliminated can be appreciated only by a study of the injustices of that ante-bellum period. The nation in that memorable struggle was expected by cynical observers in Europe to crumble and fall. But these observers failed utterly to grasp the significance of the struggle that was being fought for national purity and national unity. Instead of perceiving a giant rending himself, as they thought, they were watching a giant wrestling with the evil that was within him.

As the day of that conflict ever recedes, and the din grows less strident to the ear, its better significance makes itself felt. The broad page of history teaches a lesson that participation in the actual war itself might not have taught. If any soldiers stood in the trenches unmindful of the significance of the struggles in which he was a part, he is not unmindful now as he measures his step to the beat of the muffled drum today. For time has shown all wherein lay the universal meaning of that conflict. The nation was being bled of its distempers, even through his veins. And it rose up, weakened and saddened, but with the courage of the victor and the resolution of the chastened.

The Real Test.

Diogenes was searching for the honest man.

"Find a suburbanite who will tell you his real opinion of country life in winter," he advised.

Herewith he departed to apply the greatest test of all.—Harper's Bazar.

A man cannot possess anything that is better than a good woman nor anything worse than a bad one.—Simcoe [illegible]

MINNESOTA BRIEFS

Week's History in Gopher State Told in Paragraphs.

Hibbing.—Mary Bilis, aged 12, was arrested, charged with forging checks totaling $16.75.

Spring Valley.—Ira Hare, was convicted of selling liquor and a fine of $50 and costs were imposed.

Mankato.—The summer meeting of the Second District Editorial association will be held at Windom the third week in June.

Winona.—Inspectors J. R. Methven and Ralph Smith have arrived in Winona for the purpose of checking up weights and measures.

Red Wing.—An inspection of weights and measures in the city is being made by Inspectors D. S. Evans and W. H. Morrow of the state department.

Stillwater.—The May term of the district court, convened here. The grand jury after a session of 10 minutes with nothing to do, was discharged.

St. Paul.—Damages in the sum of $50,000 for breach of promise to marry are asked from Freeman P. Strong, St. Paul, capitalist and clubman, in a suit by Caroline P. Vallee.

Minneapolis.—Four persons were drowned in the Twin Cities Sunday while boating, two in Minneapolis, one in St. Paul and one in South St. Paul. The bodies have not been recovered.

Virginia.—The Virginia Electric Power and Water Company will make improvements that will cost nearly $50,000. The new work will be in extensions and additions to the water mains and in the sinking of a third deep well.

Minneapolis.—The Republicans of Minnesota, in state convention, selected a straight Roosevelt delegation and named Irving A. Caswell, the Roosevelt manager in Minnesota, as national committeeman to succeed Frank B. Kellogg.

Mankato.—Miss Mamie A. Carlson, who has been deputy clerk of the United States court for six years, has resigned, and C. E. Bredeson, a divinity student, was appointed to fill the vacancy. Miss Carlson and Mr. Bredeson have been united in marriage, and the office will continue in the family.

Winona.—At the annual meeting of the Wenonah chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, committees were appointed to decorate the grave of Stephen Taylor, whose remains rest in Woodlawn cemetery here. This is said to be the only grave of a revolutionary soldier in the state of Minnesota.

St. James.—A convention of citizens of the county has been called by J. E. Hoycraft and C. N. Sonnesyn, members of the district committee of the Southern Minnesota Better Development association for this city on May 18, to discuss measures for advancing Watonwan county in agriculture, good roads, etc. The commercial club will entertain those attending.

Winona.—The Green Bay & Western railway has started Sunday train service, running a train here from Merillen to give visitors an opportunity of seeing the ball game between the Winona league team and a picked team. It is probable trains will be run into Winona one Sunday and out of here the next Sunday, alternating in the service as was done last year.

Belle Plaine.—A meeting of representatives of most of the river towns from Mankato to Minneapolis was held here to lay plans for establishing and improving a highway from Mankato to Minneapolis, to be known as the Minnesota valley scenic highway. Most of the representatives motored to the city. The matter met with general favor and active work will be undertaken.

Mapleton.—The annual meeting of the Mankato conference of the Congregational church will be held here May 21 and 22. The district comprises the churches in Blue Earth, Nobles, Freeborn, Faribault, Pipestone, Le Sueur, Martin and Nicollet counties. Among the speakers will be Dr. D. J. Cowling of Carleton college, Northfield, and Miss Emily Hartwell, a missionary from Cuba.

Minneapolis.—The G. A. R. department encampment of Minnesota, will be held in Minneapolis on June 12 and 13. The encampment itself will be held in the assembly hall of the courthouse. The annual camp fire meeting, at which all the old soldiers of the state gather each year, will take place on the evening of June 12, the first day of the encampment, at the First Baptist church.

Washington.—A $3,000,000 claim of the Mille Lacs Indians of Minnesota, on account of losses sustained by them through the opening of their reservation to public settlement, was approved by the United States court of claims. Chief Justice Beelle and Judge Howe dissented from the majority of the court and indorsed the contention of the federal department of justice that the law did not intend to give the Indians a valid claim against the United States.

Winona.—Struck a terrific blow in the abdomen by a sweep of a patent stump-puller with which he was working upon his farm in Houston county, Andrew Denstad, a prominent Southern Minnesota farmer, died yesterday, just a day after the accident. The body was sent back to Houston for burial. He was 61 years old.

International Falls.—A successful sale of state land was conducted by Theodore Nelson, sales manager of the state land department; 4,254 acres were sold at an average price of $5.80 per acre. A few pieces sold as high as $35 per acre.

Write For This Free Book—Shows 20 Beautiful Modern Rooms—

tells how you can get the very latest effects on your walls.

Contains a sample of the Color Plans our artists will furnish you, FREE, for any rooms you wish to decorate.

Alabastine

The Beautiful Wall Tint

comes in 16 exquisite tints. More artistic than wall paper or paint at a fraction of the cost. Kalsomine colors are harsh and common beside the soft-hued water color tints of Alabastine. Absolutely sanitary—easiest and quickest to use, goes furthest and will not chip, peel, or rub off.

Doesn't need an expert to put on. Easy directions in every package. Full 5 lb. Pkg., white, 50c; regular tints, 55c.

Alabastine Company
58 Grandville Road, Grand Rapids, Mich.
New York City, Desk 8, 105 Water Street

DON'T FAIL to WRITE FOR THE FREE BOOK

REAL MISTRESS OF HOUSE

In Olden Days, Among Other Accomplishments, Woman Was Required to Be Expert Carver.

In the matter of old time etiquette at the table one recalls the port played by the lady of the household. In the eighteenth century she was mistress of the ceremonies—she carved and she dealt the while her lord merely "pushed" the bottle.

She was also the menu, for if she gave a dinner of several courses it was her duty to announce to the guests, seated expectantly, what was due to appear at table. A dinner of one course and she remarked that "they saw their dinner."

Then her powers of gentle persuasion came into play. A guest when he had stuffed sufficiently placed the handles of his knife and fork into his plate, and the sight of a knife in position was the signal for the hostess to inquire "if he would please to have something more."

In the art of carving, of course, the mistress of any country house was a past mistress. One recalls Lady Mary Montagu's flight after perfection under the wing of a professional carving master: "She took three lessons a week, that she might be perfect on her father's public days; when, in order to perform her functions without interruptions, she was forced to eat her own dinner alone an hour or so beforehand."

Decorations of the Daughters.

The aggregate value of the jewels worn by the Daughters of the American Revolution at a recent reception in Washington is said to have exceeded $500,000. Estimates of jewels are always liable to large deductions, but it may be said that if the fathers of the revolution could at certain periods of the struggle have had $50,000 worth of ammunition at their command they could have shortened the war by two years or more.—Boston Transcript.

Divination.

"I am very observant, sir, and from the way you winced when I stamped on your foot, I conclude you have a pedal affliction."

"Say no more. I acknowledge the corn."

It is just as well to remember that a woman's shoe laces are almost as easily broken as her heart strings.

When the Appetite Lags

A bowl of

Post Toasties

with cream hits the right spot.

"Toasties" are thin bits of corn; fully cooked, then toasted to a crisp, golden-brown.

This food makes a fine change for spring appetites.

Sold by Grocers, and ready to serve from package instantly with cream and sugar.

"The Memory Lingers"

Made by
Postum Cereal Company, Ltd.
Pure Food Factories
Battle Creek, Mich.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3,1879.

We wonder if that special session of the legislature will get a new supply of jack knives.

One of the late candidates for nomination for sheriff on the republican ticket is Julious Halverson, who was one of the early homesteaders in Highlanding township.

The Indorsment of Congressman Steenerson at last week's Conventions was the proper thing to do, and shows that the people are strictly onto their job and know who are giving them a square deal and who is not.

What is the matter with Eberhart? We guess he heard something drop last week and has called a special session of the legislature. The governor has discoverd that the rank and file of the people are beginning to get woke up.

Even if P. V. Collins editor of the Northwestern Agriculturist was not elected as a Delegate at large to the Chicago convention he has the satisfaction of knowing that his paper was one of the leading factors in causing the state to go so strong for Roosevelt as it stirred up the farmers and caused them to turn out to the Caucuses.

We hope to see that special legislature get down to business when they meet. If they start that old time jangle, of the regular session the next house will need a committee of introduction when they meet as the people will speak in November. Get down to business gentlemen, and show the people of this state that you can do something besides row it, as you did in the regular session.

Lorain, Ohio May 17. —Taft was full of fight when he spoke to a crowd here to day. His friends laughed at the story that he would withdraw, and intimates that he will stay in the race, to the end, and if he can't be nominated he will throw his strength to anyone but Roosevelt.—Crookston Times.

This had ought to dispose of the claims made that Taft and Roosevelt were united.

The Roosevelt victory is a great victory for the progressives in Minnesota and a bad defeat for the "old guard." But although routed at this week's conventions the latter will no doubt make a strong fight to control the convention to nominate state officers, and the contest will be much closer, with the result in doubt.—Ada Index.

The people did well at the last conventions to control them and they must keep up the fight until they put that state machine out of business.

A Costly Kitchen.

It cost a barrel of money to furnish the kitchens of the shah of Persia, but should the shah desire to pledge his kitchen requisites he might realize a couple of million dollars. Every saucepan of this monarch is gilded inside, and the dishes which appear on the table are of solid gold, as well as the spoons, knives and forks. The handles of the latter, moreover, are ornamented with costly stones, and some are worth as much as $500 each. In preparing lunch for the shah none but silver spoons can be used, and any covering used for keeping cold meats must also be of silver. His majesty has a staff of over thirty chefs, and altogether his kitchen workers number 120.

Genius and Eccentricity.

"You can't have genius without eccentricity."

"That may be so, but I've noticed that it's possible to have a good deal of eccentricity without much genius."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Demons Of The Swamp are mosquitoes. As they sting they put deadly malaria germs in the blood. Then follow the icy chills and the fires of fever. The appetite flies and the strength fails; also malaria often paves the way for deadly typhoid. But Electric Bitters kill and cast out the malaria germs from the blood; give you a fine appetite and renew your strength. "After long suffering," wrote Wm. Fretwell, of Lucama, N.C., "three bottles drove all the malaria from my system, and I've had good health ever since." Best for all stomach, liver and kidney ills. 50 cents At all Druggists.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

I am a candidate for the office of Register of Deeds of Pennington county, and solicit the support of the voters at the Republican primaries to be held September 17th 1912. Nels J. Anderson.

ROOSEVELT'S HIGH STANDARD COSTS EIGHT DELEGATES

Colonel Yields Claim to Bay State's Quota at Large.

HIS STAND UPON PRINCIPLE

"In This Fight," Says the People's Champion, "I Am Standing for Certain Great Principles. . . . Foremost Among These is the Right of the People to Rule."

Washington, May 4.—If there existed in the mind of any American citizen—Progressive or Reactionary—any doubt as to the loftiness of purpose which has characterized Theodore Roosevelt's course since he consented to stand for the Republican nomination to the presidency, that doubt was dissipated by Colonel Roosevelt's action in voluntarily releasing from their pledge to support him the eight delegates-at-large elected in the presidential primary in Massachusetts. This action on the part of Colonel Roosevelt was taken by him immediately upon learning that Mr. Taft, although defeated in the fight for delegates, had received a majority of ballots in preferential expression on presidential candidates. Mr. Roosevelt did not lose a moment in letting the Bay State delegates and the whole people understand just where he stood in the matter. To each of the delegates at large elected in Massachusetts the Colonel telegraphed the following statement:

"In Massachusetts the ballot contained the names of eight candidates for delegates-at-large, printed under each the words, 'pledged to Theodore Roosevelt,' and it also contained a column in which the voter was to express his preference as to whether I or Mr. Taft should be nominated as president. It would seem unlikely that a majority of the voters could both vote for the delegates pledged to me and at the same time express preference for Mr. Taft, but apparently this is what has happened. Such being the case, and on the assumption that the preferential vote is for Mr. Taft, I hereby announce that I shall expect these delegates-at-large to disregard the pledge to support me and to support Mr. Taft, and if any one of them hesitates so to do, I shall immediately write him and with all emphasis and insistence in my power to take the course indicated and to support Mr. Taft in the convention.

"In this fight I am standing for certain great principles, which I regard as vital to the present and future welfare of the nation. My success is of value only as an incident to securing these principles. Foremost among these principles is the right of the people to rule and the duty of the representatives really to represent in the nominating convention no less than in executive or legislative offices.

"If the majority of the rank and file of the Republican party do not want me nominated, then most certainly I don't wish to be nominated. My aim has been to get a genuine expression of their genuine desire. Precisely, sir, if nominated, I should desire to get at the polls the genuine expression of the majority of the whole, because my only purpose in being elected president would be to put into effect certain principles and policies in which I ardently believe, and which I could not forcibly put into effect unless I leave behind me the hearty support of the majority of our citizens."

[illegible]

Justice [illegible] of [illegible] Tenn., was plainly worried. A bad sore on his leg had baffled several doctors and long resisted all remedies. "I thought it was a cancer," he wrote. "At last I used Bucklen's Arnica Salve and was completely cured." Cure burns, boils, ulcers, cuts, bruises and piles. 25 cents at All Druggists.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam May 10, 1912.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 4th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Fred A. Lane of Kratke Minnesota, who on June 24th, 1904, made Homestead Entry No. 361, Serial No. 04102, for Lots 2, 3, 4, 5, & 6, Section 24 Township 153 N. Range 42 W. and Lot 3, Section 19, Township 153 N. Range 41 W. 5th Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make final five year proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for the District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minnesota on the 15th day of June 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Ole M. Pederson, Lewis Stenseth, Osmond Swenson, Ole Christoferson, all of Kratke Minn.

Aurthur P. Tonpin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam May 10th, 1912.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 4th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Ole Christoferson, of Kratke Minn. who on June 28th, 1904, made Homestead Entry No. 399, Serial No. 04189, for Lots 9, 13 & S. W. ¼ S. E. ¼ Section 18 Township 153 N. Range 41 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Five Year Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 15th day of June 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Ole M. Pederson, Krist Larson, Hans Johnson, Fred A. Lane, all of Kratka Minn.

Aurthur P. Tonpin,
Register.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. The Sunbeam May 10, 1912.

Department of the Interior U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 4th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that William Paragw of Kratka Minn. who on June 29th, 1904, made Homestead Entry No. 451, Serial No. 04161, for Lot 1, N ½ S. E. ¼ & S. E. ¼ S. E. ¼ Section 23 Township 153 N. Range 41 W. Fifth Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Five year Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 18th day of June 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Helvor Wold, Ole Waale, Stiner Johnson, John I. Johnson, all of Kratke Minn.

Aurthur P. Tonpin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Jan. 26, 1912.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 18th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Charles D. Henry, of Kratka Minnesota, who on June 28th, 1904, made Homestead Entry No. 407, Serial No. 04148, for Lots 10, 18, & E. ½ N. W. ¼ Section 31 Township 153 N. Range 41 W. Fifth principal Meridian has filed notice of Intention to make Final five year proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 25th day of June 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Dave Ross, Peter Liedeboja, Jacob R. Hesby, Peter Paulson, all of Kratke Minn.

Aurthor P. Tonpin,
Register.

VISION.

(Lines suggested by the address of ex-President Theodore Roosevelt at Carnegie Hall, March 20, 1912.)

Friend of the People,
Purposeful and strong,
You, who would right their wrong—
You of the ardent eyes
That woo the glory of the farther skies
For the glad answer of a new sunrise,
Must you then wait so long?

Oh! Man of Vision,
Though the rest be blind,
You, who do love mankind,
You, who believe
That our fair country
Shall, indeed, retrieve
The promise of the ages—
You shall find
Your heart's reprieve.

With your own motto—
"Spend, and be spent,"
Your high intent
Make of yourself
A willing instrument.
With heart and soul afire,
You do aspire,
But to be broken,
Should the cause require
An arrow shattered
E'er the bow be bent.

What though the sordid [illegible]
They may not hear
The cry of [illegible]
Who [illegible] the [illegible]
Of [illegible]
[illegible]
Your [illegible] of the [illegible]
Follow your beacon light
Away from their dark night.

And, in the end,
Though you be spent,
You, who were glad to spend—
Who would not be
A Seer and Prophet
With the eyes to see
[illegible] of the Promised Land
[illegible] would not understand
[illegible]
[illegible]
Who would not even crave
[illegible]
[illegible] to brave
A Nation's cause to save?
—New York Evening Mail.

WHERE ROOSEVELT STANDS IN FIGHT

He Is the Leader In Your Cause, Not His Own.

Against the Bosses and Their Machine—For the Genuine Rule of the People—For Human Rights and An Equal Chance for Every Man—Where Are You?

"THE LEADER FOR THE TIME BEING, WHOEVER HE MAY BE, IS BUT AN INSTRUMENT, TO BE USED UNTIL BROKEN AND THEN TO BE CAST ASIDE; AND IF HE IS WORTH HIS SALT HE WILL CARE NO MORE WHEN HE IS BROKEN THAN A SOLDIER CARES WHEN HE IS SENT WHERE HIS LIFE IS FORFEIT IN ORDER THAT THE VICTORY MAY BE WON."

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

He is the leader in your cause, not his own.

He stands for the rule of the people. Do you?

He stands for his seven years' record as president against every crooked interest and every crooked political boss. Do you?

He stands for rigidly enforcing the pure food laws he enacted—not for driving out of office those who, like Dr. Wiley, would enforce them. Do you?

He stands for driving out of public life those who "have ruled and legislated and decided as if in some way they had a first mortgage on the United States, while the rights of the people are merely an unsecured debt." Do you?

He stands for party organization; but against the worn-out political convention in which the voice of the party boss is the only voice heard. Do you?

He stands for virile, human, helpful laws for bettering the condition of men, women and children, and safeguarding their interests against every other interest. Do you?

He stands for laws that protect the workingman's health and that compensate him for injuries. Do you?

He stands for an equal chance for every man's voice in the party and in the government. Do you?

He stands for a return of the glorious days of victory and achievements for the Republican party—the return of Republican governors, senators, congressmen and local officers swept from power since 1908. Do you?

Who but Theodore Roosevelt can regain the magnificent Republican majorities throughout the land during his seven years at Washington now turned to minority in almost every state?

Who but Theodore Roosevelt can thrill the Republican party with hope of success, with strong purpose to do the things the people want, with determination that the evils of "privilege" and "selfish interests" shall be swept out of public office?

Your active support is vital to the cause of honesty in politics.

Roosevelt's friends in this contest are volunteers, they have no machine. Every man is on duty because he wants the Republican party to win and to have a candidate with courage and conscience—one who inspires and commands the faith of the people.

Will you stand with Roosevelt?

ROOSEVELT'S WORK IN OFFICE

List of Most Important Achievements During His Term as Nation's Chief Executive.

In the three years that have elapsed since Roosevelt became a private citizen the memory of his administration has naturally become somewhat blurred. It may be worth while to give a brief summary of the important achievements of his seven years as President. The first three years, it must be borne in mind, were devoted avowedly to carrying out the McKinley policies with the McKinley cabinet. Most of the events cited in the chronicle that follows were compressed within the four years that followed the overwhelming indorsement of Roosevelt at the polls in 1904:

General Industrial Policies.

Settlement of anthracite coal strike of 1902 by presidential intervention.

National employers' liability act.

Safety appliance act.

Pure food and drug act.

Federal meat inspection and packing house inspection act.

Organization of department of commerce and labor.

Abolishing of rebating and establishing of control of railroads by interstate commerce commission.

National Defense.

Navy made adequate.

Militia co-ordinated with regular army.

Law Enforcement.

[illegible] prosecution [illegible] movement to control of railroads and industries in the hands of a few men through the device of the "holding corporation."

Beginning of prosecution of Standard Oil company and tobacco trust with the object of preventing the monopolistic evils of great corporations.

Numerous prosecutions [illegible] for thefts of public lands for [illegible] in the [illegible]

Conservation of [illegible]

The whole [illegible]

Forest reserves extended.

An Old Saw, With A New Set.

We have now a large and complete stock of new goods at our Kratka store, and would be pleased to have all our old customers call and see us at the new store and post Office.

A FINE LINE OF BOTH HEAVY AND LIGHT SHOES.

Ask to look at our stock of Shoes. No trouble to show GOODS.

Higest market price paid for butter and eggs.

Singer Bros. Kratka minn.

RHODA STORE

NEW GOODS, NEW PRICES.

A trial order will convince you, that this is the best Store to buy your goods.

I HAVE A FINE LINE OF gROCERIES.

BOOTS, SHOES, & COMPLET STOCK OF SUMMER FOOT WARE.

give me a call and get prices.

GEORGE SINGER. Prop. Rhoda Minn.

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 10.00 a. m. on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m

Wm. G. Hunt, p.m.

FARM LOANS.

Made Without Delay, at reasonable rates of interest.

Be sure and see me before you place your loan.

GEORGE ELDER.
McGinn Block,
Thief River Falls.

Very Evident.

Mrs. Suffragette—Everything I take up I believe in doing [illegible] thoroughly.

Mr. Suffragette—Right. There was only a dime left out of $10 I had in my trousers last night before retiring.—New York Mail.

[illegible]

Barber—Do you know anything about betting on horse races? Customer—[illegible] know all about it. I've quit.

McCall's Magazine and McCall Patterns

For Women

Have More Friends than any other magazine or patterns. McCall's is the reliable Fashion Guide monthly in one million one hundred thousand homes. Besides showing all the latest designs of McCall Patterns, each issue is brimful of sparkling short stories and helpful information for women.

Save Money and Keep in Style by subscribing for McCall's Magazine at once. Costs only 50 cents a year, including any one of the celebrated McCall Patterns free.

McCall Patterns Lead all others in style, fit, simplicity, economy and number sold. More dealers sell McCall Patterns than any other two makes combined. None higher than 15 cents. Buy from your dealer, or by mail from

McCALL'S MAGAZINE
236-246 W. 37th St., New York City

Note—Sample Copy, Premium Catalogue and Pattern Catalogue free, on request.

CORN-SEEDS TREES

Our 29th Annual Catalog is now ready and free for the asking. It is a work of art and full of good things. See King Corn on front cover.

WILL'S PIONEER SEED HOUSE and NURSERY
OSCAR H. WILL & CO.
BISMARCK, NO. DAKOTA

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS

[illegible]

Scientific American

[illegible] New York

[illegible]

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Call and see us, when you are ready to make your final proof.

A good big shower of rain is badly needed.

Miss Dona and Palmer Wold made this office a plesant call last evening.

C. L. Clark started leveling on the grade north from Highlanding yesterday.

Guy Melues was down and diminited three large boulders for Walter McAndress yesterday.

Wanted: To let 40 or 50 acres of breaking at once.
George Leimers, Sec.11 Town of Deer Park.

The steam plows and all the available teams in the country are busy rushing the breaking plows.

The price of realestate is advanceing in proportion to the rapid develovement of the country.

Vaughn Bros. & Co. are useing diniminite to remove stumps from their farm, and we understand that is a valuable assistant.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Hunt and daughter Myrtle called on Mr. and Mrs. George Singer at Rhoda on Sunday afternoon.

Every resident farmer is increasing his acreage all he can this year which show that they are satisfied with their homes and the future of the country.

The Red Lake Riever raised about four inches last night and no rain raised it either, so we gueas the lumber companys are pulling the calk out of the Red Lake.

The town of Highlanding is badly in need of a hall that would be suitable for holding public intertainments, so we may have to build a bowery when the leaves get a little bigger.

Marshell Shedd, who is working on the floating dredge near Malone, wes over here Sunday. He says the dredge is likely to be hung up by lack of water. Floating dredges are surely going out of date in this part of the country.

Simon Solberg is busy building a new house on his farm that he bought of Frank Jeffers. He also has teams breaking and men grubbing and will make other extension improvements this summer.

The state examination of schollars in rural schools employing a first grade teacher is being held at the Highlanding school house to-day, and will be continued on Monday and Tuesday. Miss Dena Wold is conducting the examinations.

How long since you paid any subscription to THE SUNBEAM? Remember that it takes money to run a newspaper and every issue received by you is so much cash from our pocket. If you have been receiving it for a number of years without paying a cent, remit a few dollars which will be credited to your account with our thanks.

Judging by the returns some smooth politicians in Kratka had a "finger in the pie" of locating the Commissioner of the 5th, district so far west that the only time he hear's of the town of Hickory is when he sees it in print.

We heard what sounded like a walking dredge Tuesday and drove over Wednesday afternoon to the head of ditch #7 to investigate, but found the old setting floater doing business at the old stand. However there soon will have to be some digging done on that ditch, if the bond companys are any good, as it must be completed this year. No extension of time is the rule on this ditch, but get there and dig.

Roosevelt got 31 out of the 42 Delegates to the Chicago convention in the Ohio election Tuesday. Another boost for "Teddy" who is now nearly at the top of of the ladder, and stands a good show of landing the nomination as the first ballot at Chicago.

A game of base ball was played last Sunday afternoon nerr the residence of Sam Swanson in the town of Deer Park, btween the Erie and Lillo base ball clubs, which resulted in a score of 8 to 7 in favor of the latter.

The New Commissioner.

The Township chairmans of the towns of Hickory, Deer Park, Mayfield, Kratka, Smiley and Wyndotte, of the 5th, district met at the County Auditors office last Saturday to appoint a sucessor to Peter Hedeen, who has resigned as County Commissioner of that district.

The first ballot:

George Leimers	3.
Oscar Peterson	2.
Stephen Singer	1.

Second ballot, same result.

Third ballot;

Leimers.	3
Peterson	3

Peterson and Leimers then withdrew and John R. Larson, of the town of Wyndotte was nominated.

The next ballot resulted as follows;

Larson	5
Singer	1

Wile we know nothing about Mr. Larson, his location leaves the eleven townships with only one County Commissioner, and there must have been some scientific log rolling done to accomplish this result. Now if Thief River Falls will just let the people know which one of their citizins they want in the place of Peter Wold, we might as well elect him so they will have the whole hog.

Howevor all the people will soon get a chance to speak and the location of that Commissioner will get a hoist eastward.

Escapes An Awful Fate.

A thousand tongues could not express the gratitude of Mrs. J. E. Cox, of Joliet Ills., for her wonderful deliverance from an awful fate. "Typhoid pneumonia had left me with a dreadful cough," she writes. "Sometimes I had such awful coughing spells I thought I would die. I could get no help from doctor's treatment or other medicine till I used Dr. Kings New Discovery. But I owe my life to to this wonderful remedy for I scarsely cough at all now." Quick and safe, its the most reliable of all throat and lung medicine. Every bottle guaranteed. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free at All Druggists.

What Texans Admire.

is hearty, vigorous life, according to Hugh Tallman, of San Antonio. "We find" he writes, "that Dr. King's New Life Pills surely put new life and energy into a person. Wife and I believe they are the best made." Excellent for stomach, liver or kidney troubles 25 cts. at All Druggists.

FARM FOR SALE.

The N. E. ¼ Section 14 Township 152 N. Range 40, Town of Deer Park. Price $16,00 per acre.

Henry Rovoold,
Alsask, Sask. Canada.

DRESS MAKING.

For plain and Farcy sewing apply to Mrs. Sam McMahn Student of the America College of dress making.

Kuebnel, Minn.

Notice To Farmers.

I have an a No. Jack, nine year-old which will stand for service during the season of 1912, at my farm on section 8 town of Deer Park.

M. E. Hyland.

Haroun-al-Raschid to Charlemagne.

The only sovereign of the time who could compare with Charlemagne was the famous Haroun-al-Raschid who as the head of the Moslem world sent the keys of Jerusalem to the head of the Christian world, besides a striking clock, an ape and an elephant—things which impressed the imagination of those times as typifying that Charlemagne had been invested with the sovranty of Jerusalem and the lordship of the world.—R. A. Cook in "Old Provence."

It Made a Difference

"Here!" burst out the young man suspiciously after his sister had knocked at his door the sixth time to ask if there wasn't something she could do to help him get ready for the party to which he was going. "What's the matter, anyhow, Em? Do you think I'm so decrepit that I'm not able any longer to attire myself or is it that you love me so you can't keep away from me?"

"I think you're horrid and rude," said the young man's sister, opening the door and entering. "Of course, I'm fond of you, Jimmy. Fonder than you realize. I always have your best interests at heart—"

"Is it a touch?" he asked surprisedly.

"Jimmy," said his sister, seating herself and shaking her head at him sorrowfully, "you haven't a bit of sentiment or any of the finer emotions, have you? I don't want a thing! I just wanted to talk to you. Why in the world don't you get married?"

The young man laid down the clothes brush he was using and, leaning toward her, stared. "Don't you feel well?" he asked with solicitude in his voice.

"Do you think you are funny?" she asked, indignantly.

"Mostly," said the young man, going on with his brushing, "a fellow's mother and sister throw spasms if he suggests matrimony for himself and the whole family has hysterics, so I don't understand you."

"I'd just love to see you married, Jimmy," his sister declared, eagerly. "Honestly! Nothing would please me more than to have you pick out the right sort of girl and settle down in your own comfortable little home. Think how nice it would be for me to have a sister and what fun she and I could have together and how glad I would be for you—"

"Would you really feel that way, sis?" the young man asked, with interest. "I hadn't any idea—I thought you'd cut up a terrible row if I did such a thing!"

"That's all you know about me, Jimmy," his sister insisted, sweetly. "You don't appreciate the depth of my affection in the least! Why, I would be a selfish, horrid creature if I didn't want you to be happy! I can't imagine why you should have got such an idea in your head! And you're all around fine boy, too, that you deserve a mighty fine girl, let me tell you!"

"I am astonished," declared the young man, seriously. "All these revelations are overwhelming. Particularly after the years of sisterly lectures on which I have been brought up! I thank you!"

"Oh, he mean if you want to," said his sister. "Only I hope you'll be on your best behavior the next two weeks, because I have a guest coming. Of course, I don't expect you to give up your own engagements to help me out, but if you could find time to be a little nice to Harriet I'd be obliged. You've heard me talk of her—tall and a raving beauty, and the family has heaps of money and she refused a millionaire the year she—"

"I see it all," said the young woman's brother. "You want me to fall in love with Harriet and merry her!"

"Now, Jimmy!" protested his sister. "How absurd of you! As though I didn't think you could manage your own affairs without my help! You'll be perfectly crazy about her complexion and she is the sweetest—but I wouldn't have you think, not for worlds, that I had any notion like that in mind. I was just speaking in the abstract. Just in a general way. You are such a suspicious person!"

"I see," said her brother, searching out his dress muffler. "It is merely that you feel it is time for me to marry and settle down and you have no ulterior motives—you'd be perfectly happy if you could be sure that I was happy—is that it?"

"Of course," said his sister. "I'm surprised that you could think anything else. Harriet certainly has a way with her. And they have I don't know how meny automobiles and a place on Long Island and she'd be the loveliest sort of a girl to have in the family—"

"You don't know how relieved I am," interrupted the young man, reaching up for his silk hat box, "to find you have such warm-hearted sympathy and so much interest in my future. It makes it easier to tell you that I've just got engaged to Marion Brooks—the one we went to school with!"

"James Henry Ward!" gasped his sister, as she fumbled for her handkerchief. "That girl! That insignificant, poor as poverty, ordinary girl, when—and I don't see why you want to get married, anyhow—aren't you perfectly comfortable here at home? Men are such idiots!"

Analysis of Motives.

"Don't you think our friend's belief that no one except himself can save the country denotes great patriotism?"

"Not exactly," replied Senator Sorghum. "It's rather a case of egoism rushing to the rescue of pessimism."

Pessimistic.

"Cheer up. Opportunity may yet knock on your door."

"Shucks! If she ever does, it will be just my luck for her to knock when I am taking a bath."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

"The Liver Pills act So Naturally and Easily."

Such a statement, coming from the cashier of a bank, shows what confidence responsible people have in these pills. Mr. A. L. Wilson after trying them wrote:

"I have used Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills and also your Anti-Pain Pills, on myself, with good results. The Liver Pills act so naturally and so easily that I scarcely know that I have taken a pill. Frequently being troubled with headache I take an Anti-Pain Pill and get immediate relief in every case."

A. L. Wilson, Sparta, Ill.

Mr. Wilson was for a number of years cashier of the First National Bank of Sparta.

Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills are different from others. Many kinds of liver pills are "impossible" after one trial on account of their harshness. Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills do not act by sheer force but in an easy, natural way, without griping or undue irritation. They are not habit forming.

If the first bottle fails to benefit, your druggist will return the price. Ask him.

MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

The Famous Ride.

Paul Revere had finished his famous ride and given the alarm which sounded the downfall of British power in this country.

"Ha!" he said, with the prophetic instinct of all great men. "Where would this country have been if I had been arrested for exceeding the speed limit?"—Baltimore American.

Had a Kick.

"How are the fish biting?"

"Fine."

"Then what is he kicking about?"

"Because he cannot pull them out all cleaned and fried."

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

LUNG DISEASE

"After four in our family had died of consumption I was taken with a frightful cough and lung trouble, but my life was saved and I gained 87 pounds through using

DR. KING'S NEW DISCOVERY

W. R. Patterson, Wellington, Tex.

PRICE 50c and $1.00 AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

His Part.

"Who is the responsible person in this firm?" asked the brusque caller of the office boy.

"Can't tell you, sir," replied the pert lad, "but I'm the one who gets all the blame."

LUMBER FOR SALE.

I will have about 50,000 ft. of lumber for sale this winter at $15.00 per thousand. Will take cattle in exchange.

Andrew Nilson.

W. G. Hunt.

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate [illegible]

NEW BANK.

FIRST STATE BANK,

OF OKLEE Lambert Post Office Minn.

NEW STATION ON DULUTH SOO LINE.

Your Business Solicited.

Directors: A. P. Toupin, Pres. Samuel Gilbeau Vic. Prs.
Larry O'Niel, Abrham Purquize, T. L. Cruzon.
J. A. DUFFY. Cashier. T. L. CRUZON, Assist. Cashier.

Let Us Tell You Something!

This Season we are offering the best line of Dry Goods that ever came into this Section of the Country.

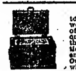
Don't Buy Elswhare, Until You Have Seen What We Have To Offer.

No Matter What Price you pay, WE Will please YOU.

VAUGHAN BROS. & CO.

Highlanding Minn.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's $50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day



Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were piloting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory? We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.

Our New Home. Capacity 20,000 Safes Annually.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars. It will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Ask for Catalogue 16 T.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.

CINCINNATI, OHIO

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT

IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost.

BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the regular retail prices.

$10.00 Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof Self-healing Tires A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

[illegible]

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

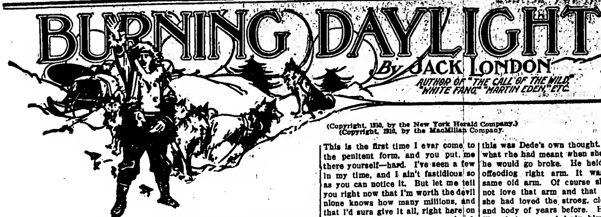
NAILS, Tacks, or Glass will not let the air out. A hundred thousand pairs sold last year.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. [illegible]

[illegible]

DO NOT WAIT [illegible]

J. L. MEAD CYCLE COMPANY, CHICAGO, ILL.



BURNING DAYLIGHT

By JACK LONDON

AUTHOR OF "THE CALL OF THE WILD," "WHITE FANG," "MARTIN EDEN," ETC.

(Copyright, 1910, by the New York Herald Company.)
(Copyright, 1910, by the MacMillan Company.)

SYNOPSIS.

Elam Harnish, known all through Alaska as "Burning Daylight," celebrates his 30th birthday with a crowd of miners at the Circle City Tivoli. The dance leads to heavy gambling, in which over $100,000 is staked. Harnish loses his money and his mine but wins the mail contract. He starts on his mail trip with dogs and sledge, telling his friends that he will be in the big Yukon gold strike at the start. Burning Daylight makes a sensationally rapid run across country with the mail, appears at the Tivoli and is now ready to join his friends in a dash to the new gold fields. Deciding that gold will be found in the up-river district Harnish buys two tons of flour, which he declares will be worth its weight in gold, but when he arrives with his flour he finds the big flat desolate. A comrade discovers gold and Daylight reaps a rich harvest. He goes to Dawson, becomes the most prominent figure in the Klondike and defeats a combination of capitalists in a vast mining deal. He returns to civilization, and, amid the bewildering complications of high finance, Daylight finds that he has been led to invest his eleven millions in a manipulated scheme. He goes to New York, and confronting his disloyal partners with a revolver, he threatens to kill them if his money is not returned. They are cowed, return their stealings and Harnish goes back to San Francisco where he meets his fate in Dede Mason, a pretty stenographer. He makes large investments and gets into the political ring. For a rest he goes to the country. Daylight gets deeper into high finance in San Francisco, but often the longing for the simple life nearly overcomes him. Dede Mason buys a horse and Daylight meets her in her saddle trips. One day he asks Dede to go with him on one more ride, his purpose being to ask her to marry him and they canter away, she trying to analyze her feelings. Dede tells Daylight that her happiness could not lie with a money manipulator. Daylight undertakes to build up a great industrial community. He is insistent that she marry him and yet hopes to win her.

CHAPTER XVIII.

When the ferry system began to run, and the time between Oakland and San Francisco was demonstrated to be cut in half, the tide of Daylight's terrific expenditure started to turn. Not that it really did turn, for he promptly went into further investments. Thousands of lots in his residence tracts were sold, and thousands of homes was being built. Factory sites also were selling, and business properties in the heart of Oakland. All this tended to a steady appreciation in the value of Daylight's huge holdings. But, as of old, he had his hunch and was riding it. Already he had begun borrowing from the banks. The magnificent profits he made on the land he sold were turned into more land, into more development; and instead of paying off old loans, he contracted new ones. As he had pyramided in Dawson City, he now pyramided in Oakland; but he did it with the knowledge that it was a stable enterprise rather than a risky placer-mining boom.

Work on Daylight's dock system went on apace; yet it was one of those enterprises that consumed money dreadfully and that could not be accomplished as quickly as a ferry system. Not content with manufacturing electricity for his street railways in the old-fashioned way, in power-houses, Daylight organized the Sierra and Salvador Power Company. This immediately assumed large proportions. Crossing the San Joaquin Valley on the way from the mountains, and plunging through the Contra Costa hills, there were many towns, and even a robust city, that could be supplied with power, also with light; and it became a street-and-house-lighting project as well. As soon as the purchase of power sites in the Sierras was rushed through, the survey parties were out and building operations began. And so it went. There were a thousand maws into which he poured unceasing streams of money.

In the spring of the year the Great Panic came on. The first warning was when the banks began calling in their unprotected loans. Daylight promptly paid the first of several of his personal notes that were presented; then he divined that these demands but indicated the way the wind was going to blow, and that one of those terrific financial storms he had heard about was soon to sweep over the United States. How terrific this particular storm was to be he did not anticipate. Nevertheless, he took every precaution in his power and had no anxiety about his weathering it out.

And in the end, when early summer was on, everything began to mend. Came a day when Daylight did the unprecedented. He left the office an hour earlier than usual, and for the reason that for the first time since the panic there was not an item of work waiting to be done. He dropped into Hegan's private office, before leaving, for a chat, and as he stood up to go, he said:—

"Hegan, we're all hunkadory. We're pulling out of the financial pawnshop in fine shape, and we'll get out without leaving one unredeemed pledge behind. The worst is over, and the end is in sight. Just tight rein for a couple more weeks, just a bit of a pinch or a flurry or so now and then, and we can let go and spit on our hands."

For once he varied his programme. Instead of going directly to his hotel, he started on a round of the bars and cafes, drinking a cocktail here and a cocktail there, and two or three when he encountered men he knew. It was after an hour or so of this that he dropped into the bar of the Parthenon for one last drink before going to dinner. By this time all his being was pleasantly warmed by the alcohol, and he was in the most genial and best of spirits. At the corner of the bar several young men were up to the old trick of resting their elbows and attempting to force each other's hands down. One broad-shouldered young giant never removed his elbow, but put down every hand that came against him. Daylight was interested.

"It's Slosson," the barkeeper told him, in answer to his query. "He's the heavy-hammer thrower at the U. C. Broke all records this year, and the world's record on top of it. He's a husky all right all right."

Daylight nodded and went over to him, placing his own arm in opposition.

"I'd like to go you a flutter, son, on that proposition," he said.

The young man laughed and locked hands with him; and to Daylight's astonishment it was his own hand that was forced down on the bar.

"Hold on," he muttered. "Just one more flutter. I reckon I wasn't just ready that time."

Again the hands locked. It happened quickly. The offensive attack of Daylight's muscles slipped instantly into defence, and, resisting vainly, his hand was forced over and down. Daylight was dazed. It had been no trick. The skill was equal, or, if anything,

"We're Pulling Out of the Financial Pawnshop in Fine Shape."

the superior skill had been his. Strength, sheer strength, had done it. He called for the drinks, and, still dazed and pondering, held up his own arm and looked at it as at some new strange thing. He did not know this arm. It certainly was not the arm he had carried around with him all the years. The old arm? Why, it would have been play to turn down that young husky's. But this arm—he continued to look at it with such dubious perplexity as to bring a roar of laughter from the young men.

This laughter aroused him. He joined in it at first, and then his face slowly grew grave. He leaned toward the hammer-thrower.

"Son," he said, "let me whisper a secret. Get out of here and quit drinking before you begin."

The young fellow flushed angrily, but Daylight held steadily on.

"You listen to your dad, and let him say a few. I'm a young man myself, only I ain't. Let me tell you. several years ago for me to turn your hand down would have been like committing assault and battery on a kindergarten."

Slosson looked his incredulity, while the others grinned and clustered around Daylight encouragingly.

"Son, I ain't given to preaching. This is the first time I ever come to the penitent form, and you put me there yourself—hard. I've seen a few in my time, and I ain't fastidious so as you can notice it. But let me tell you right now that I'm worth the devil alone knows how many millions, and that I'd sure give it all, right here on the bar, to turn down your hand. Which means I'd give the whole shooting match just to be back where I was before I quit sleeping under the stars and come into the hen-coops of cities to drink cocktails and lift up my feet and ride. Son, that's what's the matter with me, and that's the way I feel about it. The game ain't worth the candle. You just take care of yourself, and roll my advice over once in a while. Good night."

He turned and lurched out of the place, the moral effect of his utterance largely spoiled by the fact that he was so patently full while he uttered it.

Still in a daze, Daylight made to his hotel, accomplished his dinner, and prepared for bed.

"The damned young whippersnapper!" he muttered. "Put my hand down easy as you please. My hand!"

He held up the offending member and regarded it with stupid wonder. The hand that had never been beaten! The hand that had made the Circle City giants wince! And a kid from college, with a laugh on his face, had put it down—twice! Dede was right. He was not the same man. The situation would bear more serious looking into than he had ever given it. But this was not the time. In the morning, after a good sleep, he would give it consideration.

CHAPTER XIX.

Daylight awoke with the familiar parched mouth and lips and throat, took a long drink of water from the pitcher beside his bed, and gathered up the train of thought where he had left it the night before. He reviewed the easement of the financial strain. Things were mending at last. While the going was still rough, the greatest dangers were already past.

His mind moved on to the incident at the corner of the bar of the Parthenon, when the young athlete had turned his hand down. He was no longer stunned by the event, but he was shocked and grieved, as only a strong man can be, at this passing of his strength. He had always looked upon this strength of his as permanent, and here, for years, it had been steadily oozing from him. As he had diagnosed it, he had come in from under the stars to roost in the coops of cities. He had almost forgotten how to walk. He had lifted up his feet and been ridden around in automobiles, cabs and carriages, and electric cars. He had not exercised, and he had dry-rotted his muscles with alcohol. And was it worth it? What did all his money mean after all? Dede was right. It could buy him no more than one bed at a time, and at the same time it had made him the abjectest of slaves. It tied him fast. Which was better? he asked himself. All this was Dede's own thought. It was what she had meant when she prayed he would go broke. He held up his offending right arm. It wasn't the same old arm. Of course she could not love that arm and that body as she had loved the strong, clean arm and body of years before. He didn't like that arm and body himself. A young whippersnapper had been able to take liberties with it. It had gone back on him. He sat up suddenly. No, he had gone back on it! He had gone back on himself. He had gone back on Dede. She was right, a thousand times right, and she had sense enough to know it, sense enough to refuse to marry a money-slave with a whisky-rotted carcass.

His Arms Went Out and Around Her.

He got out of bed and looked at himself in the long mirror on the wardrobe door. He wasn't pretty. The old-time lean cheeks were gone. These were heavy, seeming to hang down by their own weight. He looked for the lines of cruelty Dede had spoken of, and he found them, and he found the harshness in the eyes as well, the eyes that were muddy now after all the cocktails of the night before, and of the months and years before. He looked at the clearly defined pouches that showed under his eyes, and they shocked him. He rolled up the sleeve of his pajamas. No wonder the hammer-thrower had put his hand down. Those weren't muscles. A rising tide of fat had submerged them. He stripped off the pajama coat. Again he was shocked, this time by the bulk of his body. It wasn't pretty. The lean stomach had become a paunch. The rigid muscles of chest and shoulders and abdomen had broken down into rolls of flesh. And this was age. Then there drifted across the field of vision of his mind's eye the old men he had encountered at Glen Ellen, coming up the hillside through the fires of sunset, white-headed and white-bearded, eighty-four, in his hand the pail of foaming milk and in his face all the warm glow and content of the passing summer day. That had been age. "Yes siree, eighty-four, and spryer than most," he could hear the old man say.

Next he remembered Ferguson, the little man who had scuttled into the road like a rabbit, the one-time managing editor of a great newspaper, who was content to live in the chaparral along with his spring of mountain water and his hand-reared and manicured fruit trees. Ferguson had solved a problem. A weakling and an alcoholic, he had run away from the doctors and the chicken-coop of a city, and soaked up health like a thirsty sponge. He sat down suddenly on the bed, startled by the greatness of the idea that had come to him. He did not sit long. His mind, working in its customary way, like a steel trap, canvassed the idea in all its bearings. It was big—bigger than anything he had faced before. And he faced it squarely, picked it up in his two hands and turned it over and around and looked at it. The simplicity of it delighted him. He chuckled over it, reached his decision, and began to dress. Midway in the dressing he stopped in order to use the telephone.

Dede was the first he called up.

"Don't come to the office this morning," he said. "I'm coming out to see you for a moment."

He called up others. He ordered his motor-car. To Jones he gave instructions for the forwarding of Bob and Wolf to Glen Ellen. Hegan he surprised by asking him to look up the deed of the Glen Ellen ranch and make out a new one to Dede Mason's name. "Who?" Hegan demanded. "Dede Mason," Daylight replied imperturbably—"the 'phone must be indistinct this morning. D-e-d-e M-a-s-o-n. Got it?"

Half an hour later he was flying out to Berkeley. And for the first time the big red car halted directly before the house. Dede offered to receive him in the parlor, but he shook his head and nodded toward her rooms.

"In there," he said. "No other place would suit."

As the door closed, his arms went out and around her. Then he stood with his hands on her shoulders and looking down into her face.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

CAMPAIGN IS HAVING EFFECT

Already the Death Rate From Tuberculosis Is Showing a Gratifying Decrease.

In certain cities, such as New York, Boston, Cleveland and Chicago, and in states like Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut, the decline in the death rate from tuberculosis is more marked than in the country at large, which declined 18.7 per cent. in the ten years from 1901 to 1910. The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis says that there are many factors working together to cause the decline in the tuberculosis death rate, such factors as the change in the character of our urban population, increased sanitation, and better housing, but probably as potent a factor as any has been the nation wide anti-tuberculosis campaign. "It may be foretold with considerable certainty," the association says, "that when the effects of the present rapidly increasing provision for the care of tuberculosis patients shall have become evident, the decline in the death rate from consumption in the coming decade will be even more marked than that in the last one."

Her Natural Protector.

"O, Clara, we had a dreadful scare this morning, a burglar scare!" said Mrs. Fink. "There was a frightful noise about two o'clock, and I got up. I turned on the light and looked down, to see a man's legs sticking out from under the bed."

"Mercy, how dreadful! The burglar's?"

"No, my dear, my husband's. He had heard the noise, too."—Youth's Companion.

Business Excuse.

"Why did you steal this young lady's chatelaine watch?" asked the magistrate, severely.

"From quite a usual motive," replied the thief. "I had been very busy and I only wanted to take a little time off."

Fitting for the Occasion.

"You need to put more ginger in your dinner stories."

"How would Jamaica ginger do?"

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle.

A man may not know who his friends are, but he usually has his enemies spotted.

That irritable, nervous condition due to a bad liver calls for its natural antidote—Garfield Tea.

Tact sometimes consists of knowing enough not to know too much.

WOMAN SICK TWELVE YEARS

Wants Other Women to Know How She Was Finally Restored to Health.

Louisiana, Mo.:—"I think a woman naturally dislikes to make her troubles known to the public, but complete restoration to health means so much to me that I cannot keep from telling mine for the sake of other suffering women.

"I had been sick about twelve years, and had eleven doctors. I had dragging down pains, pains at monthly periods, bilious spells, and was getting worse all the time. I would hardly get over one spell when I would be sick again. No tongue can tell what I suffered from cramps, and at times I could hardly walk. The doctors said I might die at one of those times, but I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got better right away. Your valuable medicine is worth more than mountains of gold to suffering women."—Mrs. BERTHA MUFF, 503 N. 4th Street, Louisiana, Mo.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

THE NEW FRENCH REMEDY. No.1, No.2, No.3.
THERAPION Used in French Hospitals with GREAT SUCCESS, CURES KIDNEY, BLADDER DISEASES, PILES, CHRONIC ULCERS, SKIN ERUPTIONS—EITHER SEX. Send address envelope for FREE booklet to DR. LE CLERC MED. CO., HAVERSTOCK RD., HAMPSTEAD, LONDON, ENG.

Your Eyebrows—Eyelashes—Mustache
How to make them grow long and beautiful. Free Booklet to all who send their name and address. Write today. The LaHoage Co., Station "C", Chicago, Ill.

TRUTHS ABOUT GULF-COAST COUNTRY of Texas, by Wisconsin Farmer with five years experience. Regardless realty companies or railroads. Send 25c stamps or money order W. h. Scribner, Alvin, Tex.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

Pettit's BEST FOR Eye EYE ACHES Salve

900 DROPS
CASTORIA
ALCOHOL—3 PER CENT
A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of
INFANTS & CHILDREN
Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral
NOT NARCOTIC
Recipe of Old Dr SAMUEL PITCHER
Pumpkin Seed -
Alx. Senna -
Rochelle Salts -
Anise Seed -
Peppermint -
Bi Carbonate Soda -
Worm Seed -
Clarified Sugar
Wintergreen Flavor.
A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.
Fac Simile Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.
THE CENTAUR COMPANY,
NEW YORK.
At 6 months old
35 DOSES — 35 CENTS
Guaranteed under the Food and
Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children.
The Kind You Have Always Bought
Bears the Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.
In Use For Over Thirty Years
CASTORIA
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

SPOHN'S DISTEMPER CURE
INFLUENZA CATARRHAL FEVER PINKEYE, SHIPPING FEVER, EPIZOOTIC
And all diseases of the horse affecting his throat, speedily cured; colts and horses in same stable kept from having them by using SPOHN'S DISTEMPER AND COUGH CURE. 3 to 6 doses often cure. One bottle guaranteed to cure one case. Safe for brood mares, baby colts, stallions—all ages and conditions. Most skillful scientific compound. 50c BOTTLE, $5 DOZ. Any druggist, or delivered by manufacturers. SPOHN MEDICAL CO., GOSHEN, INDIANA

W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES
W. L. Douglas makes and sells more $3.00, $3.50 and $4.00 shoes than any other manufacturer in the world
$2.50 $3.00 $3.50 $4.00 $4.50 & $5.00
FOR MEN, WOMEN AND BOYS
W.L.Douglas $3.00 & $3.50 shoes are worn by millions of men, because they are the best in the world for the price
W. L. Douglas $4.00, $4.50 & $5.00 shoes equal Custom Bench Work costing $6.00 to $8.00
Why does W. L. Douglas make and sell more $3.00, $3.50 and $4.00 shoes than any other manufacturer in the world? BECAUSE: he stamps his name and price on the bottom and guarantees the value, which protects the wearer against high prices and inferior shoes of other makes. BECAUSE: they are the most economical and satisfactory; you can save money by wearing W. L. Douglas shoes. BECAUSE: they have no equal for style, fit and wear. DON'T TAKE A SUBSTITUTE FOR W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES
If your dealer cannot supply W. L. Douglas shoes, write W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass., for catalog. Shoes sent everywhere delivery charges prepaid. Fast Color Eyelets Used.

DENMARK'S NEW RULER

KING CHRISTIAN X.

PRINCE CHRISTIAN PROCLAIMED KING

Officially Made Ruler of Denmark By Cabinet Council.

GREAT BRITAIN IN MOURNING

Flags Throughout Europe Are at Half-Mast in Memory of Danish Monarch, Who Succumbs in Hamburg.

Copenhagen, May 17.—Crown Prince Christian was officially proclaimed king of Denmark by the cabinet council at Copenhagen Wednesday upon the receipt of the news of the death of his father, Frederick VIII.

The body will lie in state in the chapel of Christianborg palace at Copenhagen. The funeral will take place on May 24, the services being conducted in the cathedral at Roskilde, which is 19 miles from Copenhagen. The cathedral contains the tombs of most of the Danish kings.

Warship Escorts Body.

Hamburg, Germany, May 17.—Accompanied by Dowager Queen Louise and three of her children, the body of King Frederick VIII. of Denmark, who dropped dead in the street here Tuesday night, was shipped for Lubec on a special funeral train. The bereeved queen was prostrated with grief and was under the care of two physicians. The entire royal suite was in mourning and showed evidences of deepest grief.

The three royal children who accompanied the queen were Prince Gustav and Princesses Tagmar and Thyra. They were inconsolable over the death of their father and insisted that the private coach in which the coffin was carried should be strewn with white roses.

Warship Acts as Escort.

From Lubec the body was carried to Trovemuoda, which is nine miles north of that city on Neustadt bay. There it was taken on board the Danish ship Danoebrog, which, convoyed by a Danish warship, will carry the remains of the late monarch to Copenhagen.

The coffin containing the royal body was carried from the Hamburger Hof hotel to the railway station early in the day as the train was scheduled to leave at 9 o'clock. The hotel was draped in black and at a very early hour a crowd of curious had gathered to see the cortege leave for the railway station. The members of the royal family and the suite were conveyed in closed carriages. Dowager Queen Louise was dressed entirely in black and held a handkerchief to her face.

Telegrams of condolence from all parts of the world poured in here. Those that came after the departure of the Danish royal party were forwarded to Copenhagen.

The queen mother and her children will accompany the remains to Copenhagen on the Dannebrog.

Troops Act as Escort.

Frederick's body was conveyed from the Hamburg Hof hotel to the railway station with full military honors. A company of the Seventh Imperial German infantry had been provided for an escort and the soldiers were accompanied by the regimental band. The troops carried cased colors of the regiment in honor of the dead. The streets were lined with solid masses of humanity. Many stood with bowed heads as the cortege passed.

Flags upon all the buildings in the city were at half-mast.

The king's body had been inclosed in a coffin of steel and oak, in keeping with the simplicity of his life.

King Frederick VIII., accompanied by Queen Louise and their aides and attendants, was on his way to the Riveria, where physicians had advised him to go to recuperate from the effects of a severe attack of influenza and incipient pneumonia, of which he was recently the victim.

A long motor ride through the damp air is believed to have brought on a relapse, and his insistence on walking through the streets in the chill night air, despite the entreaties of his attendants, is thought to have aggravated his condition.

Queen Louise Hysterical.

When Queen Louise was informed that the body of a man of rank, richly dressed, had been found near the water front she became hysterical and, with a strange premonition of evil, declared that it was the king. No description of the body had been given and members of the suite ridiculed the idea that the body found almost at the entrance of the docks was that of their sovereign.

The body had been carried to a public hospital ward, and after life was declared extinct a search revealed documents identifying it as that of Count Kronberg. This, although the local authorities did not know it, was one of the king's titles and was adopted by him as an incognito.

The instant that the queen entered the barely furnished ward she recognized the corpse as that of her husband, and in a paroxysm of grief threw herself across the cot on which the body lay.

Physicians hastened to her side and she was led, sobbing, from the room. Restoratives were applied and when she became more calm she ordered that the body be removed to the Hamburg Hof hotel with all possible dispatch.

Great Britain in Mourning.

London, May 17.—Flags on all public buildings and government offices are at half-mast in memory of the king of Denmark. This is the second time this year the British court has been plunged into mourning, and the social season, now in full swing, will be seriously affected.

Hit by 11,000 Volts; Lives.

New York, May 17.—Samuel Ehrhardt, a porter connected with Buffalo Bill's Wild West company, was walking on top of one of the animal cars in the Mount Vernon freight yards when his head came in contact with one of the feed wires which furnish the electricity for trains. There was a blinding flash and Ehrhardt was hurled from the car to the road bed. Eleven thousand volts had struck him. He was taken to the Mount Vernon hospital.

Urge Woman Be Beatified.

St. Louis, May 17.—The madames of Sacred Heart convent have commissioned Theophile Papin, Jr., of 3765 Lindell boulevard to go to Rome to present the testimony of certain members of old families here before the commission of Rev. Mother Duchesne, founder of the Sacred Heart order in America.

This commission of cardinals' consideration of the beatification of Mother Duchesne is the second step in the long process in canonization.

"ONE MILLION LEAGUE FOR MANITOBA."

The purposes of the "Million for Manitoba League" are set out in the fact that Manitoba wants more people. Today the population is less than five hundred thousand, and the determination of the representative men of the Province to devote their best energies to increasing this to a million is a worthy one. There is already a widespread interest in every municipality; committees are appointed, whose duties are to secure such a thorough knowledge of local conditions that, whether the applicant for information be a laborer for the farm, a would-be tenant, a probable homesteader, the buyer of a small improved farm or the purchaser of a large tract for colonizing farmers, the information is at hand, free.

The advantages that Manitoba possesses are many, and with the exploitation that will be given them by the birth of this new acquisition to the settlement and immigration propaganda that is being carried on by the Dominion Government, there is no doubt that the establishment of the bureau will very soon bring about the results looked for. Manitoba is practically the gateway of the great grain belt of the West. Its farm lands have demonstrated time and again that they have a yielding value that practically makes them worth over one hundred dollars per acre. Added to the yielding value of the land, there is an increased value on account of its nearness to markets, and the matter of freight rates is carefully considered by the cautious buyer. But the information more valuable to the incoming settler is that it still has an immense amount of vacant fertile land open for homesteads. This dispels the idea that free homesteads in Manitoba are about exhausted. In addition to this, the territory recently added to the Province will open up a homesteading area which when filled should fully satisfy the "Million for Manitoba League." Within the old boundaries there is an area of 47,360,000 acres, less than six million acres of the 16½ million acres occupied being under cultivation. At present there are over 20 million acres of available land capable of being put under the plough. If in every one of the 195,000 vacant quarter sections of the Province an average family of four persons were placed, there would be added a rural population of nearly 800,000. So there is room for additional hundreds of thousands on the farms of Manitoba, without any possibility of congestion. The population per mile in Iowa is 39.4, in Minnesota it is 23.5. That to Manitoba is only 7.1.

A glance at the map, copies of which will be forwarded upon application to any Canadian Government Agent, shows that Manitoba is wonderfully well supplied with railways. There are but few farms that are more than ten or twelve miles from a railway line: elevators are convenient, and markets are always good. The growing of grain, while a big feature in the inducements held out, is well reenforced by the great possibilities that exist in all portions of the Province, for the raising of stock, for dairying, for hogs, and for a successful class of mixed farming, and what gives additional interest is the fact that there is so much land in the Province open for free homesteading that improved farms in almost all of the 98 municipalities can be purchased at very low figures. Many of the owners of these have made sufficient upon which to retire and are becoming residents of the cities. In addition to the export market for the produce of the farm, Manitoba has a number of large cities and towns providing a splendid local market. Truck and garden farming are highly profitable branches. Winnipeg is a city bordering on 200,000. Brandon is a splendid centre, Portage la Prairie is the hub of an excellent district, and Yorkton, Minnedosa, Dauphin, Morden, Manitou and a dozen other towns are important help as consumers.

The Dominion and Provincial immigration officials are working in strong sympathy with the "Million for Manitoba League," and in addition to the general literature sent out by the Government, the League has prepared pamphlets giving useful and concise information, which on addressing the Secretary, Million League, Winnipeg, Manitoba, will be forwarded free.

His Veracity.

Jim Slocum of Montgomery county, avers the Kansas City Journal, was called as a witness to impeach the testimony of a man in that county. Jim was asked if he was acquainted with the reputation of the witness for truth and veracity. Jim said that he guessed maybe he was.

"Is it good or bad?"

"Well," said Jim, "I don't want to do the man no injustice, but I will say that if his neighbors were to see him looking as if he was dead they would want some corroboratin' evidance before they would be willing to bury him."

Irrelevant Reasons.

"Why is Jones making his girl take music lessons? She'll never learn if she practices for a million years."

"Jones says he knows she has no talent, and he can ill afford the expense, but that he hates the people so on the next floor."

The quarrelsome man should bear in mind that a chip on the shoulder never won a jackpot.

Garfield Tea helps clear a muddy complexion, dispel foul breath and sweeten the temper.

A true friend [illegible] to your troubles.

HEALTH FOR THE CHILD.

The careful mother, watching closely the physical peculiarities of her children, soon learns that health is in great measure dependent upon normal, healthy, regular bowel action. When the bowels are inactive, loss of appetite, restlessness during sleep, irritability and a dozen and one similar evidences of physical disorder are soon apparent.

Keep the bowels free and clear and good health is assured. At the first sign of constipation give the child a teaspoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at bed-time and repeat the dose the following night, if necessary. You will find the child will quickly recover its accustomed good spirits, and eat and sleep normally.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is far preferable to salts, cathartics and purgative waters which are harsh in their action. Syrup Pepsin acts on the bowels easily and naturally, yet positively, and causes no griping or discomfort. Its tonic properties build up the stomach, liver and bowels, restoring their normal condition.

Druggists everywhere sell Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in 50c and $1.00 bottles. If you have never tried this remedy, send for a sample to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. He will gladly send a trial bottle without any expense to you whatever.

The Real Cause.

The temperance orator was waxing eloquent.

"What," he demanded, "what causes more misery than liquor?"

"Thirst," responded a husky voice from the rear of the hall.

Special Status.

"Why does that fellow put on so many airs among his companions?"

"'Cause he's near-society, he is. He was once run over by a multi-millionaire's motor car."

A Hint.

He—I don't approve of tips.

She—It has been noticed that you do not even tip your hat.

DO YOU HAVE CREAM TO SELL? Write AINSVOLD CREAMERY CO., Minneapolis, for prices and tags. They guarantee return of cans and satisfaction to you for every shipment.

Some people lead such placid lives that nothing ever seems to happen to them, not even the unexpected.

For liver or kidney troubles, nothing is quite so reliable as Garfield Tea.

The fellow who depends entirely upon luck isn't to be depended upon.

Here's The Road to Comfort

A vanished thirst—a cool body and a refreshed one; the sure way—the only way is via a glass or bottle of

Coca-Cola

Ideally delicious—pure as purity—crisp and sparkling as frost.

Free Our new booklet, telling of Coca-Cola vindication at Chattanooga, for the asking.

Demand the Genuine as made by
THE COCA-COLA CO.
ATLANTA, GA.
1-J

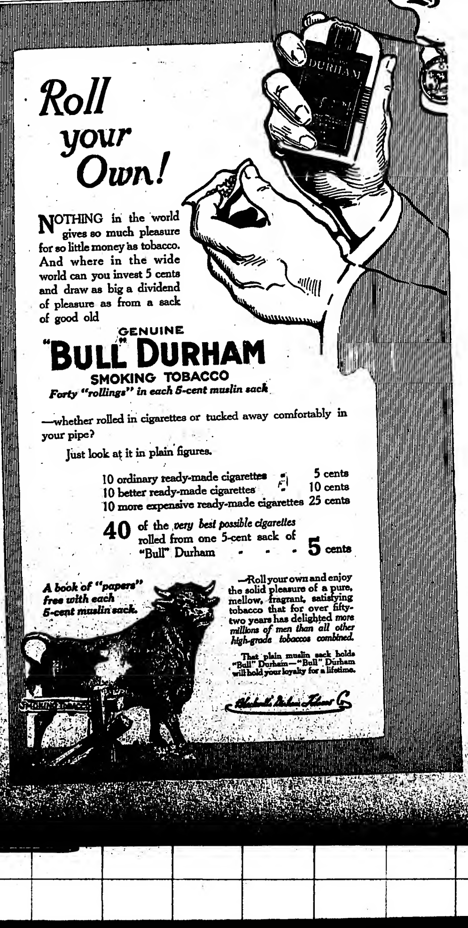
Whenever you see an Arrow think of Coca-Cola.

THE DELINEATOR
EVERYBODY'S MAGAZINE and ADVENTURE want a local Representative. You can earn a salary every month. Write to-day to:
The Butterick Publishing Co., Butterick Bldg., New York City

DAISY FLY KILLER PLACED ANYWHERE, ATTRACTS AND KILLS ALL FLIES. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts all season. Made of metal, can't spill or tip over; will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. 15 cts. each at dealers or 6 sent prepaid for $1.00.
HAROLD SOMERS, 150 DeKalb Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
Cleanses and beautifies the hair. Promotes a luxuriant growth. Never Fails to Restore Gray Hair to its Youthful Color. Prevents hair falling.
50c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

IF YOU WANT TO BEGIN OR EXPAND business write the Board of Trade, Weyburn, Saskatchewan. We want industries, retailers and wholesalers. Electric power, water, fuel cheap. Builders with capital needed. Population doubled this year.



Roll your Own!

NOTHING in the world gives so much pleasure for so little money as tobacco. And where in the wide world can you invest 5 cents and draw as big a dividend of pleasure as from a sack of good old

GENUINE "BULL" DURHAM SMOKING TOBACCO
Forty "rollings" in each 5-cent muslin sack

—whether rolled in cigarettes or tucked away comfortably in your pipe?

Just look at it in plain figures.

10 ordinary ready-made cigarettes	5 cents
10 better ready-made cigarettes	10 cents
10 more expensive ready-made cigarettes	25 cents
40 of the very best possible cigarettes rolled from one 5-cent sack of "Bull" Durham . . .	5 cents

A book of "papers" free with each 5-cent muslin sack.

—Roll your own and enjoy the solid pleasure of a pure, mellow, fragrant, satisfying tobacco that for over fifty-two years has delighted more millions of men than all other high-grade tobaccos combined.

That plain muslin sack holds "Bull" Durham—"Bull" Durham will hold your loyalty for a lifetime.

Blackwell's Durham Tobacco Co.

THE PEST OF THE ENGLISH SPARROWS

By N. DEARBORN

THE English sparrow among birds is comparable to the rat among mammals. It is cunning, destructive, and filthy. This sparrow was introduced into America about 60 years ago, and is now distributed generally over the eastern half of the United States and southern Canada and locally westward to the Pacific coast. This rapid increase is a result of the bird's hardiness, extraordinary fecundity, diversity of food, aggressive disposition, and almost complete immunity from natural enemies through its sagacity and its preference for thickly settled communities.

Its natural diet consists of seeds, but it eats a great variety of other foods. While much of its annual fare consists of waste material from the streets, in autumn and winter it consumes quantities of weed seed, and in summer numerous insects. Aside from the destruction of weed seed, there is very little to be said in the sparrow's favor.

It destroys small fruits, as cherries, grapes, pears and peaches. It also destroys buds and flowers of cultivated trees, shrubs, and vines. In the garden it eats seeds as they ripen, and nips off tender young vegetables as they appear above ground, peas and lettuce being especially subject to attack. It damages wheat and other grains when newly sowed, ripening, and in shocks. It reduces the numbers of some of our most useful native species, such as bluebirds, house wrens, purple martins, tree swallows, cliff swallows, and barn swallows, by destroying the eggs and young and by usurping the nesting places. It attacks other familiar native birds, as the robin, wren, rey-eyed vireo, catbird and mocking bird, causing them to desert parks and shady streets of towns. Unlike our native birds whose places it usurps, it has no song, but is noisy and vituperative. It defiles buildings and ornamental trees, shrubs, and vines with its excrement and with its bulky nests.

The evidence against the English sparrow is overwhelming, and the present unfriendly attitude of the public toward it is reflected in our state laws. Nowhere is it included among the birds that are protected. In response to frequent inquiries for means of abating the sparrow nuisance received by the United States Biological Survey, a few approved methods applicable to different conditions are here described.

Sparrows frequently give annoyance by roosting in ornamental vines and in crevices about buildings. If driven out late at night, several nights in succession, they will usually desert the roost. A jet of water from a garden hose is a potent disturber, particularly on frosty nights. Where water is not available, small Roman candles may be employed.

Though sparrows may be driven from a given neighborhood, the relief thus obtained is only temporary, and has the further objection that the nuisance is simply transferred elsewhere. More drastic action is therefore preferable.

The most effective method of preventing the increase of sparrows in a locality is to destroy their nests at intervals of ten or twelve days throughout the breeding season. Occasionally they build large covered nests in trees, but as a rule they build open nests in bird-houses, electric-light hoods, cornices, water-spouts, and similar places. While it is often difficult to reach nests with the hand, they can usually be torn down by means of a long pole having an iron hook at the tip. By a concerted and continued movement to destroy every nest after the eggs are laid, English sparrows in any locality may be gradually reduced without resorting to shot or poison.

The sparrow's habit of nesting in cavities can be turned to account against it. By providing one-room bird-houses, or even packing boxes or tin cans, and putting them in trees or on poles or buildings at a height of about ten feet, the birds may be captured after dark with the aid of a long-handled net. This net should have a deep bag and a small hoop made to fit the front of the boxes closely. After the net has been quietly placed over the entrance, a few raps on the box will send the tenant into it. Dilapidated buildings may sometimes be fitted up for catching sparrows in this way, as well as for destroying their nests and eggs. The illustration herewith shows how this can be done. An ordinary wooden box may be nailed to the inside of the building over a hole made to admit the sparrows. The box should be arranged so that the top or upper part of the back can be lifted to gain access to the inside.

The box, also illustrated on this page, is designed to be hung on a building or a tree. Its floor should be about six inches square and its height at the eaves about eight inches. The roof should be hinged at the top for removing the eggs or young. Such boxes may be built of rough boards at slight cost. By distributing a number of them about orchards, shade trees, and out-buildings, and catching the sparrows that occupy them, or by destroying eggs, the work of extermination may be carried on at a season when other methods are least effective.

Preliminary to the following destructive measures, sparrows should be baited until they are attached to the spot selected for their execution. Seeds, grain, or waste from the table, if supplied regularly, will soon establish a feeding place. If a general campaign is to be undertaken, enough such feeding places should be maintained to attract to them practically all the English sparrows in the neighborhood. This can easily be done in winter when food is scarce. After thus baiting the sparows they may be trapped, shot, or poisoned.

Traps alone are inadequate to exterminate sparrows, but a reduction of numbers can be effected by using a shallow box not less than four feet square, open on one side and covered with woven wire on the other. One side of this trap rests on the ground, while the opposite side is supported by a stick [illegible] inches long. Near the upper end of this stick [illegible] long cord, and between the top of it and the edge of the trap is placed a chip. By setting the trap over bait and pulling the cord from a sheltered point of observation when a flock of sparrows is beneath it, numbers of them may be caught. Instead of the box described above, by which the birds are taken alive an old door or some other similar device may be employed to advantage as a deadfall. In either case the trap should be kept set and baited until the sparrows are not afraid to go under it. The best time for trapping is just after a snowstorm, when the birds have been fasting. Then, if the ground be cleared and chaff and grain be put under the trap, the birds will crowd in and enable the trapper to secure nearly all of the local flock. If any escape they will spread the fear of traps, and before long very few of the birds can be induced to go into one.

Sparrows are accustomed to feed in close flocks, and when thus assembled a large number can be killed by a charge of No. 10 shot. The best way is to scatter grain over long, narrow areas and shoot the sparrows at these baiting places. Where sparrows infest poultry yards, the bait may be placed on a horizontal board, supported at such an elevation that the birds can be shot without danger to the poultry.

Since English sparrows are a pest and a reduction of their numbers is important on economic grounds, there would seem to be no reason why the birds, when trapped or shot, should not be utilized for food in this country, as they have been in the Old World for centuries. Their flesh is palatable and nutritious, and in city restaurants they are often served under the name of reed birds.

Where the use of poison is not prohibited by law, it may be effectively used to reduce the number of sparrows. Of the different poisons tested, the most satisfactory is strychnia sulphate. It is easily prepared and acts quickly. Wheat has proved to be a good bait, as well as an excellent vehicle for administering the poison. The grain should be regularly supplied at the baiting stations until the birds have become accustomed to resort to the place. A good time to put it out is early morning, as the birds are sure to be hungry for breakfast. The capacity of the sparrow's crop and stomach is about 30 kernels of wheat, varying according to size of the kernels.

In deciding the amount of poisoned wheat to put out at one time, it is well to estimate the number of sparrows frequenting a feeding place and to allow about 20 kernels for each sparrow. Although two kernels of wheat coated with the solution described below have been known to kill a sparrow, six or seven kernels are required to insure fatal results. Only as much poison should be put out as is likely to be eaten in one day, as exposure to moisture reduces its virulence. Furthermore, sparrows that take less than a fatal quantity, or that become frightened by the death of comrades, will forsake a feeding place if poison is kept there constantly. It is better, therefore, to supply unpoisoned wheat after each poisoning until the birds have recovered confidence. An important advantage in having several feeding grounds is that they may be used in rotation; the sparrows forgetting their fear of one while the others in turn are receiving poison.

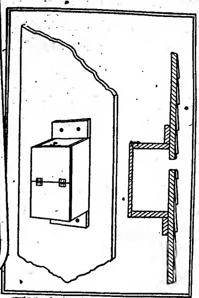
A poison mixture that has proved very effective is prepared as follows: Put one-eighth ounce of strychnia sulphate into three-fourths of a gill of hot water and boil until dissolved. Moisten one and one-half teaspoonfuls of starch with a few drops of cold water, add it to the poison solution, and heat till the starch thickens. Pour the hot poisoned starch solution over one quart of wheat and stir until every kernel is coated. Small-kerneled wheat sold as poultry food, if reasonably clean, is preferable to first-quality grain, being cheaper and more easily eaten by the sparrows. A two-quart glass fruit jar is a good vessel to mix in, as it is easily shaken and allows the condition of the contents to be seen. If the coated wheat be spread thinly on a hard, flat surface, it will dry enough for use in a short time. It should be dried thoroughly if it is to be put into jars and kept for future use. Dishes employed in preparing poison may be safely cleansed by washing.

The poison should be well scattered, so that many birds may be able to partake at the same time, since after a few are affected their actions excite the suspicion of their comrades. Usually a few sparrows get only enough strychnine to paralyze them for a few hours, after which they recover. It is important, therefore, to visit the feeding places two or three hours after distributing poison to prevent such birds from escaping. It is well also to remove dead birds promptly to avoid exciting the suspicions of those that are unaffected. In northern latitudes the best time to put out poison is just after a snowstorm, when other food is covered. The feeding place should be cleared of snow and the poison laid early in the morning.

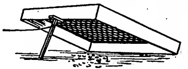
Sparrows should be baited in secluded places, safe from interruptions and where doves and poultry are not endangered. Roofs, back yards, and unused poultry runs are favorable situations. Proximity to low trees, grape arbors, and similar retreats has the advantage that sparrows go to such places between meals, and many dead birds will be found there well away from the bait. If undisturbed, poisoned birds will usually be found within a few feet of where the bait was spread, death occurring in from three to twenty minutes. Where doves or poultry are likely to be poisoned, the sparrow, after being baited, may be induced to feed in small covered pens made of coarsely meshed wire netting and having the sides raised about an inch and a half above the ground. There is practically no danger that cats or other animals will die from eating sparrows that have been poisoned. Any wheat coated by the above process, which is overlooked by the birds, will become harmless after a few rains.

Sparrows can be reduced locally to almost any desired extent by the methods outlined above, but it should not be forgotten that such reduction can be made permanent only by systematic and continued efforts.

ENGLISH SPARROW, MALE AND FEMALE

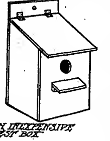


PERSPECTIVE AND SECTIONAL DRAWINGS OF AN IMPROVISED NESTING-BOX



A SPARROW TRAP

YOUNG SPARROW



AN INEXPENSIVE NEST BOX

Freedom for Jews in Russia

At Times Their Condition Has Improved, but Not Steadily.

In connection with the celebration of the Passover the American Hebrew published accounts of the experiences of the race in securing a greater or less degree of emancipation in various countries.

"Despite the reactionary measures against the Jews in Russia," it says, "their status in that country has for the past 100 years from time to time been more or less improved. During the reign of Alexander I., from 1801-1825, the first steps toward emancipation of the Jews were taken by affording them educational opportunities.

"Alexander I. directed the minister of education to draw a plan for promoting education among the Jews. When the said minister remarked that such a plan might prove a costly one to the government of Russia Alexander replied, 'If their means should produce one Mendelssohn the expense would be justified.'

"Nicholas I., known as the enemy of the Jews, nevertheless officially encouraged them to take up agriculture. Jewish farmers were, for a certain period, to be exempt from military service and taxation in land. Jews wishing to enter the field of agriculture in Russia were practically to enjoy equal rights.

"During the early part of the reign of Alexander II., when the serfs were emancipated, it looked as if freedom would be granted to the Jews of Russia as well. Restrictionary laws concerning the Pale of Settlement were not enforced and schools were practically opened to the Jews. Such was the [illegible] status of the Jews for a period of about eighty years, ending in 1881 with the assassination of Alexander II.

"During the quarter of a century that followed this period the condition of the Jews in Russia changed for the worse. Pogroms and riots took place. The well known May laws were enacted and enforced. The Jews were driven back to the 'Pale,' which resulted in a large emigration of Jews from Russia to different countries of the world, especially to America. The Kishineff and other massacres that followed were the climax of the terrible conditions.

"Though nothing was directly done in favor of the Jews in Russia in the beginning of the reign of Alexander II., and the worst edicts were issued during his regime, still the desperate struggle which the people of Russia made for freedom has indirectly benefited the Jews. The struggle of the Russian people for liberty resulted in the creation of the duma, and in what is known in Russia as religious liberty, which means allowing one to return to the faith one had formerly abandoned and the abolition of the censorship of the press.

"The Jews have indirectly benefited by each of these concessions of the government to the people. Although the government resorts to means of disqualifying the Jews from being elected to the duma, yet the fact remains that the Jews are eligible for election to the duma and reactionary as the present duma may be there are ten Jews who hold seats there. This is because the manifesto of Czar Nicholas II. granting a parliament to the people of Russia, did not contain the famous phrase, 'except the Jews.'"

Card Playing is Injurious

Narcotizing Influence is Exercised if Indulged in Too Often.

Dancing is all right; yes, indeed, dancing is fine. It rounds out the limbs and produces a perfect figure and all that sort of thing; but as for card playing, why, that is dissipation of the worst kind; mental dissipation, of course. So says the official voice of the medical profession, the New York Medical Journal, in its latest issue. The Journal appears to regard even turkey trotting with a lenient eye compared to the awful glare that it bestows on card playing, remarks the New York Morning Telegraph. Strange to say, card playing among the aged and middle aged is not regarded as a vice by the physicians, but as a valuable distraction. But in the young it's terrible, terrible.

"Card playing," avers the Medical Journal, "is a pure and simple mental dissipation that grows upon the victim, like all other dissipations, to the eventual exclusion of logical and close thinking. A valuable distraction for the elderly once a week, say, if indulged in oftener, especially by the young, it exercises its narcotizing influence with irresistible force. Skill counts for only 3 per cent. even in the most scientific of card games, much less in the popular gambling forms.

"We have," declares the Medical Journal, "nothing but approval for dancing, an admirably graceful and strength giving exercise adapted to produce physical perfection and devoid in its essence of the disgraceful characteristics imposed upon it recently by certain leaders, blind or worse. It is an art, perfection in which requires study and practice and leads to a healthy fatigue which prevents excesses."

PLAN AIR ROUTE

Prince Suggests Peking-Paris Line, and It Is Adopted.

Journey of Aeronauts Will Be Made Partly Over Great Desert of Gobi—Stations Will Be Laid Along the Trans-Siberian.

Paris.—After taking the advice of leading experts on climatic and other conditions likely to affect the Peking-Paris air race, Prince Borghese being among those consulted, a meeting was held at the offices of Le Matin recently, at which the first definite official program was drawn up.

The scheme submitted by Prince Borghese has been adopted. It has been settled that the race shall begin next September, at about the beginning of the month, when, according to the data received from the weather bureau of Russia, the Siberian rainy season is well over, not only along the Trans-Siberian, but in China, and when other weather conditions are also favorable.

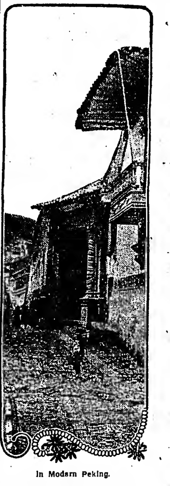
The suggestion of Prince Borghese that the Great Desert of Gobi be traversed, the route being Peking to Kolgan, Tuerin, Urga, Kokhto and Lake Baikal, was adopted, as not only offering the best means of arriving at Siberia, but as being admirably suited for landings. Other reasons are that it is frequented by caravans and that a telegraph line gives an ideal indication of the route.

The rest of the journey will be made by way of Irkutsk, Omsk, Kazan, Moscow, Warsaw, Vienna, Triest, Genoa, Avignon and Lyons, as already announced in these columns.

Stocks of petrol and spare parts are to be spread along the Trans-Siberian, also across the Gobi desert at short distances, while the food question meets its solution by the fact that the route follows railway stations and inhabited districts throughout.

Each entrant will be required to pay a deposit of $1,000, which will be refunded if he makes the proper start from Peking, but will, if forfeited, be added to the amount of the prizes.

In an interview Prince Borghese stated that, in his opinion, the Gobi desert presented the only practical means for the airmen to reach Lake Baikal, as the Mukden-Harbin route taken by the railroad involves surmounting the high Khingan chain of mountains as well as over 400 miles of mountainous country just before reaching the lake.



In Modern Peking.

Names continue to be sent in for the race, among the latest being those of two young French pilots, who, although they have only recently obtained their diplomas, are confident of success.

Gets $1,000 for Dog's Bite.

Mineola, L. I.—Mrs. May Miller, housekeeper for George Wintjen, taught his pet collie to jump and seize dainties on her shoulder. Last year the dog jumped on the shoulder of Miss Minnie Stockton, a laundress who lived across the street, and, finding no dainties there bit her on the shoulder, forearm and knee, so that she could not leave her bed for four months. She was awarded $1,000 damages from Wintjen.

From Pulpit to Poverty.

Springfield, Mass.—Rev. William O. Peterson, seventy-nine years old, has been taken to the almshouse. He has been a clergyman 70 years, but lately has not been actively engaged in pulpit work.

THE SUNBEAM.

MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

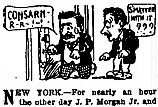
VOL. XII. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, MAY 31, 1912. NO. 10.

Tales of GOTHAM and other CITIES

Millionaires Held Prisoners an Hour



CONSARN R-R-!-!
SMATTER WITH IT ???

NEW YORK.—For nearly an hour the other day J. P. Morgan Jr. and Robert Bacon, former ambassador to France, were held prisoners on the thirty-first floor of the Bankers' Trust building.

It was nearly luncheon time when Mr. Morgan and Mr. Bacon fumed and fussed in the elaborate suite on the thirty-first floor of the Bankers' Trust building which has been set aside for J. P. Morgan Sr. for holding secret conferences.

Mr. Morgan went up to the thirty-first floor for a conference with Mr. Bacon. First they took an express elevator to the twenty-ninth floor. An auxiliary runs up to the private suite, but it was broken, so the two men walked up.

They then turned the knob of the door which leads to the suite, slammed it and proceeded to get down to business. The conference did not last long and at its conclusion Mr. Morgan went to the door.

There was no knob on the inside. A steel bar ran in from the outside knob.

When Mr. Morgan saw the bar he gazed blankly at Mr. Bacon and Mr. Bacon gazed blankly at Mr. Morgan.

"Jailed!" exclaimed Mr. Bacon.

After they had waited and waited, with no signs of rescuers, they set to work at the door again. Mr. Bacon used his pocket knife this time and, after much laborious effort, managed to loosen the screw and shove the steel bar out of its groove.

Then the handle of the knife was inserted into the groove and it opened the door. Mr. Morgan will probably take a fire axe with him when he again holds a conference in the private suite.

Two Utah Girls Hold Up a Stag Car

ANY NOBLES HERE?

SALT LAKE CITY.—Two unmarried young women, masked and heavily armed, robbed the stag car on the Shriners' special train at 2 o'clock the other morning a few minutes after the train pulled out at Salt Lake City. Several shots from revolvers were fired at each entrance to the car and fifteen badly frightened men on the inside began a mad scramble to find their revolvers and to conceal their purses. Their revolvers, however, had been taken from the car while they were uptown celebrating. As the men made a dash to get out of the car they were met at the doors with threats and a liberal display of revolvers.

"We are not looking for money. We are looking for bachelors," the two women explained.

Dr. L. A. Corwin of Goffs, Kan., and A. L. Swearingen of Kansas City, Kan., the only two bachelors on the car, pleaded. "Save us, men. It's leap year and we are in Utah, too."

"Come with us," the two train robbers demanded. The two bachelors were led to the observation car, where several of the unmarried young women were assembled. Dr. J. F. Hereford, the official auctioneer, mounted a box. He placed his hands on Doctor Corwin's shoulder.

"This is to be a bargain day in bachelors, young women," Doctor Hereford explained. "This handsome noble has a kiss as sweet as the perfume of any orange blossom. I guarantee he can weather the storm of the roughest marital sea as he crossed successfuly the hot sands of the desert to the mystic shrine. It's true he never paid grocery bills and probably never will. How much am I bid?"

To the disappointment of the two bachelors, there was not a bid.

The two bachelors, heart-broken and dejected, were placed in seclusion on the train.

Rebel and Federal Meet After Battle

KANSAS CITY.—A message telling how Tracy Richardson, a Kansas City boy, met the Mexican federal soldier who fired the bullet that wounded him at the battle of Villa Lopez, was received the other day from Addison Hughes, a correspondent with the rebel army of General Orozco. The dispatch, which is dated from Jiminez, Chihuahua, Mexico, reads as follows:

This morning a wounded federal was laid on an adjoining cot. The federal prisoner was moaning. Richardson awoke, peered through the dim candle light and said in Spanish: "Hello, are you badly hurt?"

"Pretty badly," answered the man.

"Federal or rebel?" queried Richardson.

"Federal," replied the other. "And you?"

"Rebel," said Richardson. "I've a bullet through my body from a federal gun. I wish I had the man here who topped me over."

"What were you doing when you fell?"

"Working a machine gun."

"By the adobe house to the right of the church?" queried the federal.

"That was the position. How did you know?" Richardson asked.

"How did I know," the federal asked. "Well, I guess I'm the hombre who got you. After I located you, some one of the rebels got me twice, once through the head and once through the stomach. It's all off with me."

"I'm practically well," said Richardson. "I'm sorry, old man, I'm sorry." He reached over and grasped the federal's hand. "Brace up and get well." Then he lay back and went to sleep.

When Richardson awakened the sun was up. He turned toward the federal and greeted him:

"Buenos dias."

There was no reply. The federal was dead.

Cyclone a "Scenic Railway" for Horse

ST. LOUIS.—As the shock caused by the appalling loss of life from the recent cyclone in southern Illinois disappears, people are beginning to remember the strange things it did.

As the twister swept on its course about a half a mile from Dale it playfully picked up a dwelling belonging to Isaac Harwood and set it down beside the foundation, performing the feat so neatly that it did not stop the family clock or jar vases off of shelves.

A horse belonging to a farmer named Erby, living near Dale, was tracked for some distance by the places where its feet occasionally hit the ground. It finally was found flattened against a tree and partly wrapped around it.

The cyclone in and around Willisville was more destructive than at Dale and equally freakish. Approaching the town it bounced over the ground like a ball, tearing holes in the earth where it struck [illegible] David Thompson, James Thompson and Mrs. Rhoda Haskins were lost it ripped up about a dozen houses and then rose and passed over several blocks before it touched again.

The escape of ten families from death in their demolished houses was marvelous. They were carried along with the flying timbers and rolled over and over in the wreckage. Some were found clasped in each other's arms several hundred feet from where their homes had stood.

The path of the cyclone was about 300 yards wide. Those who saw the approach of the funnel-shaped cloud in time were able to save themselves by running to one side or the other of the path.

IN THE LIMELIGHT

MAJ. RHOADES SUCCEEDS BUTT

Maj. Thomas L. Rhoads, who has succeeded the late Maj. Archibald W. Butt as the president's chief military aid, was chosen from the medical branch of the army service. He is 42 years old and unmarried, like all his predecessors. Serving as the president's aid is one of the most exacting occupations known, and for that reason a bachelor is invariably given the post.

Until recently Major Rhoads served on the medical staff of the Walter Reed General hospital, near Brightwood, a suburb of Washington city. His duties there naturally kept him from mingling much in the social life of the capital and restricted the range of his acquaintances. But that restriction has now been removed, and Major Rhoads is making friends rapidly. He has always been well liked in army circles. He is somewhat older in appearance than Major Butt, and has more gravity of manner. Major Rhoads has been discharging "Archie" Butt's duties since the latter left for Europe several months ago. Major Rhoads had been assigned as the president's physician, and when Major Butt left the president selected him to fill the aid's post temporarily.

SHE'S MRS. JOHN ASTOR NOW

Although Ava Willing Astor has proclaimed herself a resident of England, and has announced her intention of rearing her daughter Muriel abroad, no intimation has come as to when she will start back to London.

Society is waiting impatiently for this announcement, as from it a fairly definite answer may be gleaned to the one big question which is agitating the four hundred now:

Will Mrs. Ava Willing Astor try to resume her place in society here and become the recognized feminine head of the Astor family?

Public discussion of this phase of the complicated Astor family situation is considered out of the question during the present period of mourning; but private speculation upon it is rife in all circles of society.

The fact that Mrs. Astor, immediately upon her arrival here, took pains to identify herself to interviewers as Mrs. John Astor is taken by many to indicate that she aspires for reception here as THE Mrs. Astor. That her experience in society would give her a considerable advantage over the youthful Mrs. Madeline Force Astor is conceded. Doubts, however, exist at present as to whether either of the Mrs. Astors will ever be able to grasp the scepter held by Mrs. William Astor, the colonel's mother.

Had Colonel Astor lived, it is probable that his bride eventually would have been accepted in his set as a leader. But as the colonel died before she could be established in that position, and as before her marriage she starred on tennis courts, rather than in ball rooms, it is considered doubtful whether she can ever become the social celebrity that she surely would have become had her husband lived.

WEYLER MAKES NO APOLOGIES

"I glory in the insults leveled at me by the Americans and the Cubans," declared Gen. Valeriano Weyler, he who was the grim Spanish commander of the Spaniards in Cuba—he who built the "trocha," drove within his lines the hordes of starving Cuban "reconcentrados," and was largely responsible, in the minds of many, for the Spanish-American war.

He makes the statement in the fifth volume of his book, "My Command in Cuba," which has just been published in Madrid. It is the last of the series of volumes, the four previous ones having followed each other at intervals during the past two years.

Weyler makes no apologies for the acts that caused his name to be execrated here and in Cuba, except in so far as to state that he believes in justice tempered with severity and never treated his opponents with unmerited cruelty.

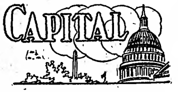
In the "epilogue," which sums up his work he confidently maintains that, if he had been in command of the Spanish forces in Cuba when the Americans under Gen. Shafter invaded that island, he would have driven the invaders into the sea and caused the war to go down in history as a Spanish, and not an American, triumph.

DEPEW, 78, STILL SPRIGHTLY

Chauncey M. Depew, seventy-eight years old, stepped into the reception room of his wide, high-ceilinged house at No. 27 West Fifty-fourth street, with the same springy, erect carriage which has distinguished him always. With his same old genial smile and hand clasp he demanded to know of a reporter if he were not as young looking as ever. He appeared to be.

"Well," said Mr. Depew, "I suppose you want to know the secret of youth? What? Most wealthy Americans don't know it? So, so. Well, they use their acquisitive faculties so much that they forget how to play. I always mixed work with play in physician-like quantities. It's the secret of health, wealth and pleasure. But I fear it has won me the reputation of being a frivolous person," Mr. Depew shook his head.

"A frivolous person," [illegible] meditatively. [illegible]



NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

Opposition to Frats in High Schools

THEY DON'T SEEM TO CARE FOR ME —
KEEP AWAY
HIGH SCHOOL FRAT

WASHINGTON.—Twenty-five states are represented in a crusade which the lawmakers and school authorities of the country are waging against the high school fraternities, according to the United States bureau of education. Of these, 13 states have passed legislative enactments hostile to the secret orders, while the school boards of important cities in the other 12 states have adopted like measures within their own jurisdiction.

All states having laws on the subject provide a penalty of suspension or expulsion from school for all those who join these orders. The most drastic laws were passed by Iowa, Minnesota and Nebraska, whose legislatures made it a misdemeanor for any one even to solicit members to these organizations. Michigan and Ohio made it a misdemeanor for a school officer to fail or refuse to carry out the anti-high school fraternity law. Other states which prohibit these orders are California, Indiana, Kansas, Mississippi, Oregon and Vermont. Massachusetts empowers the Boston school committee to deal with the secret society problem in its own way, while Washington gives the same latitude to the school boards of its larger cities.

The more important cities whose school boards have passed regulations restricting or forbidding high school fraternities, are Denver, Meriden, Chicago, Covington, New Orleans, Lowell, Waltham, Worcester, Kansas City, Mo.; St. Joseph, Butte, Oklahoma City, Reading, Salt Lake City, Madison, Milwaukee, Racine and Superior. The commonest penalties are suspension, expulsion, or debarment from school athletic or other teams.

The United States bureau of education's report also cites some of the more important court decisions, every one of which upholds the school authorities in dealing rigorously with the high school fraternity, on the ground that the measures so taken are authorized as a part of the school board's discretionary powers. Most courts cited, however, will not allow the offending pupils to be barred from classroom exercises, although they can be barred from participating in all athletic or other contests.

Intruder in Girl's Room Is Routed

AWAKENED by a cold hand on her bare ankle, Mildred Bromwell, eleven years old, turned over in bed the other morning shortly after three o'clock and whispered to her sister Louise, fifteen years old:

"There's some one in the room, Louise, for I can feel their hand on my ankle."

"Be quiet," cautioned Louise, in a low tone. "I can smell whisky."

Louise raised herself to a sitting posture, and by a dim light which came through the window from a lamp in the alley in the rear of the house saw the face of a negro looking directly into her eyes. So close was the dark face that the girl could smell the odor of alcohol in his breath.

Their father, James E. Brownwell, was awakened. As he left his bed he grabbed two revolvers and started to the aid of his daughters, who were in the rear room on the second floor of their home.

The negro ran downstairs, with Bromwell, clad only in pajamas, snapping his revolvers as he pursued. Bromwell had center-fire cartridges in his rim-fire revolvers, and no explosion followed the snapping of the hammers. The negro opened the front door, ran down a flight of iron steps and started across the lawn. Again Bromwell pulled the trigger and this time there was an explosion.

When the report rang out the fugitive jumped high in the air as though he had been struck and developed remarkable speed. The neighborhood was aroused, windows flew open, and shouts filled the air. The intruder fled around a corner into Corcoran street, and after running half a block, with Bromwell, barefoot, in hot pursuit, the negro disappeared in an alley.

Spain Establishes Tourist Courses

IT is announced by the United States bureau of education that to acquaint the hurried traveler with the glories, culture and progress of Spain, the Spanish government has established a holiday lecture and travel course for the especial benefit of foreigners.

The course is separated into two divisions. The first part, which is under the management of Prof. Ramon Menendez Fidal, will afford the foreigner an opportunity to acquaint himself with the fundamental ideas of the Spanish culture. The second part of the course consists of excursions to public, historical, architectural and art monuments, under the conduct of scholars whose demonstrations, according to Senor Don Juan Riano y Gayangos, the Spanish minister, "cannot but be incomparably superior to those offered by professional guides." The course will be held in Madrid as a headquarters from June 15 to July 24. Those who enroll are expected to have some knowledge of Spanish.

The lectures will give especial attention to the Spanish epic, to the lyric as developed in various provinces, to the picaresque and regional novel and to Cervantes. Other lectures will deal with the relations of the Spanish language to the French and Italian; with Iberian, Mozarabic and "Mudejar" art and with the political and social life of Spain in the nineteenth century. There will also be two illustrated lectures surveying Spanish art.

Chinese Sending Many Fake Antiques

RICH Americans are being fooled on Chinese antiques, according to tips sent to Washington by United States consuls at Hongkong and other Far East ports. Since the revolution began there has been a craze in America and Europe for souvenirs, and the fad has been fed on the stories that royal and other Chinese palaces were being looted.

The chief imitations are in porcelains and brass, ancient Chinese and Japanese armor and weapons, old Corean carved chests and old carved furniture. Seven large new shops dealing exclusively in fakes have been opened in the last year in the principal shopping thoroughfare of Hongkong. There are now regular auction sales of bogue porcelains. Similar imitations of ancient brasses and bronzes, ivories, lacquers and other art objects are sold. The tourists are cheated even when they go to buy modern oriental art goods. The bronzes are base alloys; the silver is pewter; the silk is filled with powdered clay.

Silk goods, according to Consul Anderson at Hongkong, are being adulterated to an extent and in a way never allowed before, and Japanese and Chinese goods supposed to be made from native-worked Japanese or Chinese silks are partly of American cotton. Silk hosiery is sold which is not only not all silk, but is undersized and otherwise unwearable. Ivories are of bone or other imitation. Embroidered screens are made of the flimsiest materials glued to last but a day.

Man's Weakness.

The weakness of man is a lesson which we learn only to forget; and the instability of human affairs is a fact too familiar to remain impressive.

THE SUNBEAM.

W. G. HUNT, Publisher.

SUNBEAM. - - MINN

WALKING ARIGHT.

There is a way in which every creature should walk. The right way. It should be the chosen way—the preferred way. There should be a longing for this way and a seeking after it, and it is the way in which each life should be found. There is such a way and it was the life plan for each of us. Look at nature. Everything from the most minute atom as well as the vast ocean has its course marked out—the way before it. Nothing left to chance, says the Charlotte Observer. No haphazard in nature. Did God intend that man—the greatest result of his creative genius—should be left without definite course? Surely not. Many lives already have told the same story—from them we learn the lesson. Their lives were ordered by the Creator and they met the requirement. No greater joy could be experienced than that of knowing that we are walking in the way in which God would have us walk. All of the difficulties and sorrows of life can be borne if we know that we are in the right way. It is not always easy to discover the right way. In fact, it is easier to do right than to know what is right. Many perplexing problems beset the man or woman who is endeavoring to discover the right in life. Self-will often preverts one's judgment. It is not always wise to depend on others. The popular idea is not always the right way. The voice of the people is not every time the voice of God. It is oftentimes necessary to stand alone if one would stand for the right.

A young laundry girl addressing the Twilight club upon the conditions under which her comrades live and work said: "Sometimes college girls work in the shops for a couple of weeks, and then go back and report that it is all nonsense for working girls to say they can't get along on the wages they get. But it is a different thing to get along on $4 a week when you know you can quit at any time." In the truth of that saying lies the chasm that separates the well-to-do from the very poor. By most men and women of means every effort to assist or even to understand the problems of the poor is made under an impulse of sentiment, says the New York World. But to the poor themselves the problem is one of dire struggle for existence, including in its scope the life not only of the body, but of the brain and the soul. A working girl no more than a millionaire's daughter can live by bread alone. The fragrance of white hyacinths smells as sweet in the slums as on the mountain heights of fortune. Why should the worker of the slums be judged solely by economic tests?

The smallest republic in the world without contradiction is that of Tavolara, a little island situated about a dozen kilometers (seven and a half miles) from Sardinia. It is a little more than a mile in length, and has a population of 55. The sovereignty of the island was accorded in 1886 by King Charles Albert to the Bartoleoni family. Up to 1882 Paul I. reigned peaceable over his little island kingdom, but at his death the islanders proclaimed a republic, says the London Globe. By the constitution of the republic the president is elected for ten years and women exercise the franchise.

A Paris soothsayer announces that Prince Victor Napoleon is going to be acclaimed president of the French republic, after which he will declare himself emperor, this to be followed by an era of great prosperity for France. Now, if she had been satisfied to announce a future cabinet crisis for France she might have been sure that her prediction would have come true. Some soothsayers are very shortsighted in their soothsaying.

Common sense applauds the French for numbering the hours consecutively from 1 to 24. It would sound a little odd at first to speak of "19 o'clock," and so on, but we should soon get used to it and then the convenience would begin to emerge. Another beneficial change would be to make the months of equal length and have them begin and end invariably on the same day of the week, says the Portland Oregonian. This is practicable and some time it will be done.

It does not require any official forecasts or any expert knowledge to be assured in advance that this is going to be a hot summer. Nor is it any secret that the highest temperatures of the season will be recorded at Chicago and Baltimore.

An American recently attracted attention by throwing money away in the streets of London. He must have been a lazy person who did not wish to have to undergo the trouble of passing it around in tips.

CHAMPION RUNNERS TRAINING FOR OLYMPIC GAMES

THE photograph shows four of the leading runners of the United States, training at Celtic Park, L. I. Reading from left to right they are Bonhag, Kiviat, Mel Shepard and Gissing. The four men are the fastest three-mile relay team in the world and are looked upon to shatter all records at the coming Olympic games at Stockholm, Sweden. They sail on June 15.

LORIMER REPORT IN

MAJORITY OF INVESTIGATORS SUSTAIN SENATOR'S TITLE TO SEAT ON EVIDENCE.

O. K. RES ADJUDICATA PLEA

Minority Members Declare That Ten Votes Were Secured Illegally and Money Was Corruptly and Fraudulently Used in Election.

Washington, May 21.—Senator Lorimer's vindication by the majority members of the senatorial committee which investigated his election was written into the official records of the United States senate.

Senator Dillingham, chairman of the committee, presented the report, signed by five members of the committee—Dillingham, Gamble, Jones, Johnston and Fletcher. It is a document of 91 printed pages, detailing at length the evidence upon which the committee found that there had been no corruption in the election of the Illinois senator.

Three members of the committee—Senators Lea, Kenyon and Kern—later presented a minority report, opposing the views of the majority and insisting that corruption had been proved. They presented a resolution declaring Senator Lorimer's election invalid and his seat vacant.

The minority report holds that Mr. Lorimer's election was obtained by fraud and improper use of money. It is declared that ten of the votes cast for Mr. Lorimer were obtained by corrupt methods and that Edward Hines, the millionaire Chicago lumber man, was influential in "putting Lorimer over."

The majority report sustains the plea of res adjudicata, which is in effect that the case, having once been decided by the senate, cannot again be brought into issue upon the same evidence. In this connection it is strongly pointed out that the claim of newly discovered evidence was not substantiated.

BAR WOMEN FROM PULPITS

Presbyterian General Conference Opposed to Fair Sex Even as Candidates for Ministry.

Louisville, Ky., May 24.—Women will not be allowed as ministers to fill the pulpits of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America. The commissioners of the general assembly so decided by vote. In fact, they put themselves on record as being opposed even to the consideration of woman as candidates for the ministry.

Appreciation of the work of women for the church was expressed in the resolution adopted.

Colorado Bank Suspends.

Durango, Colo., May 23.—The La Plata County bank of Durango has suspended business. Liabilities of $102,633, capital $25,000, and deposits $56,977 were announced. Directors said depositors would be paid.

F. D. Hill Killed by Fall.

Frankfort-on-the-Main, Germany, May 25.—Frank D. Hill, United States consul general to this city, was instantly killed by falling over the railing of a staircase in a hotel here Thursday. His skull was fractured.

Stockle in Butt's Position.

Washington, May 25.—Maj. George H. Stockle, Ninth cavalry, has been detailed to the quartermaster's department, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Maj. Archibald W. Butt, President Taft's military aide.

FREDERICK IS BURIED

REMAINS OF DENMARK'S LATE RULER PLACED IN VAULT.

Ceremony Held in the Roskilde Cathedral—Royalty Well Represented—Sisters at Funeral.

Copenhagen, May 25.—For the first time in ten centuries the three Scandinavian kings of Denmark, Norway and Sweden met at the same time Friday upon friendly terms, the occasion being the burial of the late King Frederick VIII of Denmark, who died suddenly in the streets of Hamburg, Germany. After the funeral ceremonies King Christian, the new Danish monarch; King Haakon of Norway and King Gustav of Sweden dined together.

About 2,000 notables were present at the obsequies which were held in the Roskilde Cathedral. Many royal and noble houses of Europe were represented. After the ceremonies the casket was interred in the royal tomb of Roskilde Cathedral, where the former kings of Denmarks rest in final repose.

Simplicity marked the ceremonies in accordance with the known wish of the dead king. Special choral services by the royal opera singers and by the students of the choral union were given. The interior of the ancient cathedral was draped in black and white.

Among the attendants were Dowager Queen Alexandra of England and Dowager Empress Marie of Russia, sisters of the dead monarch.

IMPORTANT NEWS ITEMS

Baltimore, Md., May 25.—Convalescent after an operation for intestinal trouble, George Walter Stevens of Richmond, Va., president of the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad, is a patient in the Johns Hopkins hospital here. His condition was reported as improved.

Washington, May 25.—Thousands of applications for pension increases under the recently enacted Sherwood "dollar a day" law are pouring into the pension office.

Boston, May 25.—By the favorable action of the senate on Wednesday, Massachusetts is placed in line as the first state in the Union to ratify the amendment to the federal Constitution for the direct election of United States senators.

Philadelphia, May 25.—It was announced on Tuesday by Ban Johnson that all those of the Detroit players who signed the dispatch to Johnson, notifying him that they would strike if he did not reinstate Cobb, were fined $100 each.

Harrisburg, Pa., May 24.—Warren S. Stone of Cleveland, O., grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, was re-elected Tuesday for a term of six years.

Neenah, Wis., May 25.—A severe hail and rain storm here Thursday did many thousands of dollars' damage to fruit trees and growing grain. Several buildings were struck by lightning.

Operate on General Booth.

London, May 25.—Gen. William Booth, venerable leader of the Salvation Army, underwent a serious operation for the removal of a cataract in his left eye here Thursday. The operation was satisfactory.

Soap Man Leaves $2,150,000.

New York, May 25.—The estate of Alexander E. Kirkman, soap manufacturer, who died on February [illegible], amounts to $2,150,000, according to the official appraisal. All [illegible] goes to [illegible] widow and children.

REBELS LOSE FIGHT

GENERAL OROZCO IS BEATEN BY THE FEDERALS AND RETREATS.

BOTH SIDES LOSE HEAVILY

Insurrectos Driven From Forts Near Rellano After Fierce Battle Lasting 24 Hours—Flee Before Cavalry—May Crush Rebellion.

El Paso, Tex., May 25.—Believed to mark the turning point in the Mexican revolution a great and decisive battle on Thursday brought victory to the federal forces after twenty-four hours of constant battle in and around the village of Rellano, Mexico.

The losses have been heavy on both sides.

The government had 4,000 men in the engagement, under General Huerta, but they were outnumbered by the rebel army under General Orozco, who kept 5,000 man in action. Both generals directed the opposing forces in person and Orozco was frequently under fire from the long range artillery of the federal forces. His lieutenants pleaded with him time and again to retire to safer grounds.

Thursday night the federal cavalry pursued the fleeing rebels north of Rellano. The rebels made a stand at Corralitos, fourteen miles away, but a flank movement executed by the federals caused them to retire a few miles.

Severely handicapped by a lack of artillery, the rebels were kept retreating. They made a few spirited stands in the trenches under fearful artillery fire until the federal infantry came within rifle range, but were forced to leave their redoubts under the galling crossfire.

The rebels have been forced back 114 miles from Torreon, the great railway gateway to northern Mexico, which was made the objective point of their campaign against the government.

During the battle of Thursday Gen. J. J. Campo turned the federal column to the left. He reported the capture of two cannon and one machine gun. This news was cheered by the rebels in the trenches, for they were in sore need of big guns. This advantage, gained during the morning, was lost before nightfall, however.

The rebels will give no figures on the losses sustained, but claim that at least 150 federal cavalrymen were slain.

SENATOR CRANE TO RETIRE

Declares He Will Give Up Public Life at End of Present Term.

Washington, May 23.—Senators Winthrop Murray Crane of Massachusetts, one of the three acknowledged leaders of the senate, the richest member of that body, and the one living senator who never made a speech in his life, announced that at the end of his present term he will retire from public life for all time.

Postoffice at Cook, Minn., Robbed.

St. Paul, Minn., May 25.—The postoffice at Cook, Minn., 100 miles north of Duluth, was burglarized and $1,800 in stamps and money taken last Thursday. The safe was blown open with nitroglycerin.

U. S. Ships in Canal Free.

Washington, May 25.—By a vote of 147 to 126, the house Thursday reaffirmed its decision that no toll should be charged American vessels engaged in coastwise trade for passage through the Panama canal.

TO END CUBAN WAR

750 MARINES AND GUNBOAT SENT TO ISLAND REPUBLIC.

Self-Government Will Be Terminated Washington Believes, and Soldiers Will Be Kept There Indefinitely.

Washington, May 25.—The gunboat Nashville received orders Thursday to hurry from Santo Domingo to Guantanamo, where she will reinforce the Paducah and the Eagle, now at that point.

Seven hundred and fifty marines were hurriedly embarked aboard the transport Prairie at the Philadelphia navy yard and are now on the Cuban coast.

An army of 5,000 men thoroughly equipped for an arduous campaign in the tropics is being made ready to embark aboard five transports at Newport News.

In a statement issued here Thursday the state department expresses the belief that the negro insurrection was organized for the express purpose of provoking intervention by the United States. It states further that the Cuban military authorities admit that the situation is serious.

Convinced that the American government will be forced to intervene the army war college and the general staff is now hard at work upon a plan of campaign that embraces the entire eastern end of Cuba.

The plan being drawn by the war college contemplates landing 2,000 troops of the first expedition at Havana and 3,000 at Santiago.

It is stated in Washington that if United States troops go into Cuba they will remain there indefinitely and perhaps for all time.

Havana, May 25.—A report has reached here that Gen. Evaristo Estenoz and General Ivonet, leaders of the insurgent negroes, have sent emissaries to the camp of the commander of the government troops near Guantanamo for terms of peace.

The Cuban government is determined not to accept anything less than an immediate and unconditional surrender. Throughout Oriante a condition of panic prevails. The white planters and storekeepers and their families are taking refuge in the cities.

SEVEN KILLED IN RIOTS

Socialists in Buda Pesth Proclaim General Strike Against Election of Count Tisza.

Buda Pesth, Hungary, May 24.—The Socialist proclamation of a general strike as a protest against the election of Count Tisza as president of the lower house had the most serious sequel in rioting, which resulted in the killing of seven persons and wounding of about 150 others, some of them severely.

The rioters stopped all traffic, formed barricades of street cars and demolished hundreds of gas lamps, and came into constant collision with the police and troops.

A second proclamation was issued by the Socialists, however, calling on the strikers to stop rioting and resume work.

AGREE ON SIX-YEAR TERM

State Judiciary Committee Reports Favorably on Bill to Lengthen Tenure of President.

Washington, May 22.—The constitutional amendment for a six-year term for president with ineligibility for reelection was favorably reported to the senate from the committee on judiciary. The report was written by Senator Cummins, a candidate for the nomination. It was devoid of arguments for the resolution and was sufficient only to put the proposal before the senate in the ordinary parliamentary channel.

BODY OF RICHESON BURIED

Former Boston Minister Lies Beside Remains of Paternal Grand Parents in Amherst, Va.

Amherst, Va., May 24.—The body of Clarence V. T. Richeson, who paid the penalty in Boston for the murder of Avis Linnell, was buried at the old Richeson home at the foot of the Blue Ridge mountains, five miles' distant from the grave of his mother. The body was placed alongside the bodies of his paternal grand parents in a little burial plot. Only the immediate family witnessed the burial.

HOUSE PASSES PANAMA BILL

Doremus Amendment, Providing for Free Toll of American Coastwise Vessels, is Adopted.

Washington, May 25.—After adopting the Doremus amendment providing that American owned vessels engaged in the coastwise trade shall not be required to pay tolls for the use of the Panama canal, the house passed by a viva voce vote the Panama canal bill.

General Carter for Chicago.

Washington, May 24.—Maj. Gen. William H. Carter, now assistant chief of staff, will be appointed commander-in-chief of the central division, with headquarters at Chicago, according to information obtained here.

Michigan Storm Does Damage.

Escanaba, Mich., May 24.—A heavy rain and electrical storm swept over this city and upper bay town Wednesday, causing heavy damage. The Escanaba Traction company's plant was put out of commission.

WHITE PLAGUE LESS DEADLY

Decrease in Death Rate From Tuberculosis Means Saving of 27,000 Lives in Ten Years.

In the decade from 1901 to 1810, the death rate from tuberculosis in the United States declined from 196.9 for each 100,000 persons living to 160.3, a decrease of 18.7 per cent, while the general death rate, including all causes of death, declined only one-half as fast, or at the rate of 9.7 per cent, from 1655.0 to 1495.8, according to figures given out by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. The figures are based on data abstracted from the reports of the United States Bureau of the Census, and cover the registration area in this country. According to the statement, the tuberculosis death rate has declined steadily since 1904, when it was 201.6. On the other hand, the general death rate shows a fluctuation downward in general trend, but not as steady as the tuberculosis rate. The decline in the tuberculosis death rate in the last ten years means a saving of 27,000 lives at the present time.

BABY'S ECZEMA AND BOILS

"My son was about three weeks old when I noticed a breaking-out on his cheeks, from which a watery substance oozed. A short time after, his arms, shoulders and breast broke out also, and in a few days became a solid scab. I became alarmed, and called our family physician who at once pronounced the disease eczema. The little fellow was under treatment for about three months. By the end of that time, he seemed no better. I became discouraged. I dropped the doctor's treatment, and commenced the use of Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and in a few days noticed a marked change. The eruption on his cheeks was almost healed, and his shoulders, arms and breast were decidedly better. When he was about seven months old, all trace of the eczema was gone.

"During his teething period, his head and face were broken out in boils which I cured with Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Surely he must have been a great sufferer. During the time of teething and from the time I dropped the doctor's treatment, I used the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, nothing else, and when two years old he was the picture of health. His complexion was soft and beautiful, and his head a mass of silky curls. I had been afraid that he would never be well, and I feel that I owe a great deal to the Cuticura Remedies." (Signed) Mrs. Mary W. Ramsey, 224 E. Jackson St., Colorado Springs, Col., Sept. 24, 1910. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

The Negative.

The Questioner—But, really, Mr. Smith, if, as you say, you knew I didn't love you, I don't see why you expected me to marry you?

The Rejected—Well, I know you're frightfuly modern and cosmopolitan and all that sort of thing, don't you know; and so, of course, I thought I should come in on the "marriage de convenence" rump.—The Sketch.

The Suffragette's Answer.

"And where, my fellow citizen," appealed the political speaker, "can we find an instrument so fit, so delicate, so adjustable, and at the same time so unassuming and popular that it will unlock every department of state for the benefit of its readers?"

"The hairpin!" shrieked an enthusiastic suffragist in the audience.—Judge.

If You Are a Trifle Sensitive

About the size of your shoes, you can wear a size smaller by shaking Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder, into them. Just the thing for Dancing Parties and for Breaking in New Shoes. Sample Free. Address Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

Judged by the Wires.

Hostess (to her little guest)—So you don't burn gas up at your house at all?

Dorothy—Oh, no, indeed; every bit of light we use is sent by telegraph.

The Paxton Toilet Co. of Boston, Mass., will send a large trial box of Paxtine Antiseptic, a delightful cleansing and germicidal toilet preparation, to any woman, free, upon request.

A Cold Day.

Hewitt—So Gruet is to marry a Boston girl this week?

Jewett—Yes, he is harvesting an ice crop.

Cole's Carbolisalve quickly relieves and cures burning, itching and torturing skin diseases. It instantly stops the pain of burns. Cures without scars. 25c and 50c by druggists. For free sample write to J. W. Cole & Co., Black River Falls, Wis.

Paw Knows Everything.

Willie—Paw, what is a family circle?

Paw—A wedding ring, my son.

More important than the choice of President is the selection of Garfield Tea as the remedy for constipation and biliousness.

The chronic borrower discovers that some people are so close you can't touch them.

While it is good fun to sow wild oats, the reaping, paradoxical as it may seem, is harrowing.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle.

Physical culture doesn't necessarily make a woman strongminded.

BURNING DAYLIGHT

By JACK LONDON

AUTHOR OF "THE CALL OF THE WILD," "WHITE FANG," "MARTIN EDEN," ETC.

(Copyright, 1910, by the New York Herald Company.)
(Copyright, 1910, by the MacMillan Company.)

SYNOPSIS.

Elam Harnish, known all through Alaska as "Burning Daylight," celebrates his 30th birthday with a crowd of miners at the Circle City Tivoli. The dance leads to heavy gambling, in which over $100,000 is staked. Harnish loses his money and his mine but wins the mail contract. He starts on his mail trip with dogs and sledge, telling his friends that he will be in the big Yukon gold strike at the start. Burning Daylight makes a sensationally rapid run across country with the mail, appears at the Tivoli and is now ready to join his friends in a dash to the new gold fields. Deciding that gold will be found in the up-river district Harnish buys two tons of flour, which he declares will be worth its weight in gold, but when he arrives with his flour he finds the big flat desolate. A comrade discovers gold and Daylight reaps a rich harvest. He goes to Dawson, becomes the most prominent figure in the Klondike and defeats a combination of capitalists in a vast mining deal. He returns to civilization, and, amid the bewildering complications of high finance, Daylight finds that he has been led to invest his eleven millions in a manipulated scheme. He goes to New York, and confronting his disloyal partners with a revolver, he threatens to kill them if his money is not returned. They are cowed, return their stealings and Harnish goes back to San Francisco where he meets his fate in Dede Mason, a pretty stenographer. He makes large investments and gets into the political ring. For a rest he goes to the country. Daylight gets deeper into high finance in San Francisco, but often the longing for the simple life nearly overcomes him. Dede Mason buys a horse and Daylight meets her in her saddle trips. One day he asks Dede to go with him on one more ride, his purpose being to ask her to marry him and they canter away, she trying to analyze her feelings. Dede tells Daylight that her happiness could not lie with a money manipulator. Daylight undertakes to build up a great industrial community. He is insistent that she marry him and yet hopes to win her. Daylight falls back into his old drinking ways. There is a flurry in the money market.

CHAPTER XIX.—Continued.

"Dede, if I tell you, flat and straight, that I'm going up to live on that ranch at Glen Ellen, that I ain't taking a cent with me, that I'm going to scratch for every bite I eat, and that I ain't going to play any a card at the business game again, will you come along with me?"

She gave a glad little cry, and he nestled her in closely. But the next moment she had thrust herself out from him to the old position at arm's length.

"How is this possible? How can you leave your business? Has anything happened?"

"No, nothing's happened yet, but it's going to, blame quick. I've taken your preaching to heart, and I've come to the penitent form. I've taken my last drink. You're marrying a whisky-soak, but your husband won't be that. He's going to grow into another man so quick you won't know him. A couple of months from now, up there in Glen Ellen, you'll wake up some morning and find you've got a perfect stranger in the house with you, and you'll have to get introduced to him all over again. You'll say, 'I'm Mrs. Harnish, who are you?' And I'll say, 'I'm Elam Harnish's younger brother. I've just arrived from Alaska to attend the funeral.' 'What funeral?' you'll say. And I'll say, 'Why the funeral of that good-for-nothing, gambling, whisky-drinking Burning Daylight—the man that died of fatty degeneration of the heart from sitting in night and day at the business game.' 'Yes, ma'am,' I'll say, 'he's sure a gone coon, but I've come to take his place and make you happy. And now, ma'am, if you'll allow me, I'll just meander down to the pasture and milk the cow while you're getting breakfast.'"

"But you haven't answered my questions," she reproached him, as she emerged, rosy and radiant, from the embrace that had accompanied the culmination of his narrative.

"Now just what do you want to know?" he asked.

"I want to know how all this is possible? How you are able to leave

"Dear Elam," She Whispered, "Dear Elam."

your business at a time like this? What you meant by saying that something was going to happen quickly?"

"Let's go and get married," he urged, [illegible]

duplicated in his eyes. "I've been working like forty horses ever since this blamed panic set in, and all the time some of those ideas you'd given me were getting ready to sprout. Well, they sprouted this morning, that's all. I knew I wanted to ride in the hills with you just about thirty million times more than I wanted to go to the office. And I knew all the time it was impossible. And why? Because of the office. The office wouldn't let me. And then I made up my mind that I was to the dividing of the ways. One way led to the office. The other way led to Berkeley. And I took the Berkeley road. I'm never going to set foot in the office again. That's all gone, finished, over and done with, and I'm letting it slide clean to smash and then some. I'm wiping the slate clean. I'm letting it all go smash. When them thirty million dollars stood up to my face and said I couldn't go out with you in the hills today, I knew the time had come for me to put my foot down. And I'm putting it down. I've got you, and my strength to work for you, and that little ranch in Sonoma. That's all I want, and that's all I'm going to save out, along with Bob and Wolf, a suit case and a hundred and forty hair bridles. All the rest goes, and good riddance. It's that much junk."

A knock at the door interrupted him, and he was left to stare delightedly at the Crouched Venus and on around the room at Dede's dainty possessions, while she answered the telephone.

"It is Mr. Hegan," she said, on returning. "He is holding the line. He says it is important."

Daylight shook his head and smiled.

"Please tell Mr. Hegan to hang up. I'm done with the office and I don't want to hear anything about anything."

A minute later she was back again.

"He refuses to hang up. He told me to tell you that Unwin is in the office now, waiting to see you, and Harrison, too. Mr. Hegan said that Grimshaw and Hodgkins are in trouble. That it looks as if they are going to break. And he said something about protection."

It was startling information. Both Unwin and Harrison represented big banking corporations, and Daylight knew that if the house of Grimshaw and Hodgkins went it would precipitate a number of failures and start a flurry of serious dimensions. But Daylight smiled, and shook his head.

He caught her by the hand and drew her to him.

"You let Hegan hang on to that line till he's tired. We can't be wasting a second on him on a day like this."

"But I know something of the fight you have been making," Dede contended. "If you stop now, all the work you have done, everything, will be destroyed. You have no right to do it. You can't do it."

Daylight was obdurate. He shook his head and smiled tantalizingly.

"Nothing will be destroyed, Dede, nothing. You don't understand this business game. It's done on paper. All I stand for is paper. I've got the paper for thousands of acres of land. All right. Burn up the paper, and burn me along with it. The land remains, don't it? Nothing is going to be lost—not one pile out of the docks, not one railroad spike, not one ounce of steam out of the gauge of a ferry-boat. The cars will go on running, whether I hold the paper or somebody else holds it."

By this time Hegan had arrived in an automobile. The honk of it came in through the open window, and they saw it stop alongside the big red machine. In the car were Unwin and Harrison, while Jones sat with the chauffeur.

"I'll see Hegan," Daylight told Dede. "There's no need for the rest. They can wait in the machine."

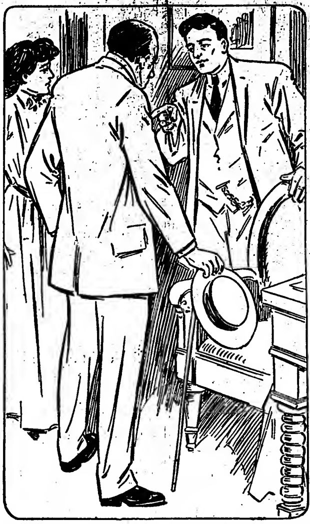
"Is he drunk?" Hegan whispered to Dede at the door.

She shook her head and showed him in.

"Good morning, Larry," was Daylight's greeting. "Sit down and rest your feet. You sure seem to be in a flutter."

"I am," the little Irishman snapped back. "Grimshaw and Hodgkins are going to smash if something isn't done quick. Why didn't you come to the office? What are you going to do about it?"

"Nothing," Daylight drawled lazily. "Except let them smash, I guess. I've had no dealings with Grimshaw and Hodgkins. I don't owe them anything. Besides, I'm going to smash myself. Look here, Larry, you know me. You know when I make up my mind I mean it. Well, I've sure made up my mind. I'm tired of the whole game. I'm letting go of it as fast as I can, and a smash is the quickest way to let go. All you've got to do is to protect yourself and all our friends. Now you listen to me while I tell you what to do. Everything is in good shape to do it. Nobody must get hurt. Everybody that stood by me must come through without damage. All the back



"Use a Different Tone of Voice, or You'll Be Heading for a Hospital."

wages and salaries must be paid pronto. All the money I've switched away from the water company, the street cars, and the ferries must be switched back. And you won't get hurt yourself none. Every company you got stock in will come through—"

"What have you done to him?" Hegan snarled at Dede.

"Hold on there, Larry." For the first time Daylight's voice was sharp, while all the old lines of cruelty in his face stood forth. "Miss Mason is going to be my wife, and while I don't mind your talking to her all you want, you've got to use a different tone of voice or you'll be heading for a hospital, which will sure be an unexpected sort of smash. And let me tell you one other thing. This all is my doing. She says I'm crazy, too."

Dede stepped forward where she confronted the two men.

"Wait," she said. "I want to say something. Elam, if you do this insane thing, I won't marry you. I refuse to marry you."

Hegan, in spite of his misery, gave her a quick, grateful look.

"I'll take my chance on that," Daylight said. "And now, Larry, you'd better be going. I'll be at the hotel in a little while, and since I'm not going to step into the office again, bring all papers to sign and the rest over to my rooms. And you can get me on the 'phone there any time. This smash is going through. Savvee? I'm quit and done."

He turned to Dede as soon as Hegan was gone, and took her by the hand.

"And now, little woman, you needn't come to the office any more. Consider yourself discharged."

"I'd cry, if I thought it would do any good," she threatened.

"In which case I reckon I'd have to hold you in my arms some more and sort of soothe you down," he threatened back.

As he stood at the top of the steps, leaving, she said:—

"You needn't send those men. There will be no packing, because I am not going to marry you."

"I'm not a bit scared," he answered, and went down the steps.

CHAPTER XX.

Three days later, Daylight rode to Berkeley in his red car. It was for the last time, for on the morrow the big machine passed into another's possession. It had been a strenuous three days, for his smash had been the biggest the panic had precipitated in California. The papers had been filled with it, and a great cry of indignation had gone up from the very men who later found that Daylight had fully protected their interests. It was these facts, coming slowly to light, that gave rise to the widely repeated charge that Daylight had gone insane. It was the unanimous conviction among business men that no sane man could possibly behave in such fashion. On the other hand, neither his prolonged steady drinking nor his affair with Dede [illegible] the only conclusion attainable was that the wild financier from Alaska had gone lunatic. And Daylight had grinned and confirmed the suspicion by refusing to see the reporters. He halted the automobile before Dede's door, and met her with his same rushing tactics, enclosing her in his arms before a word could be uttered.

"I've done it," he announced. "You've seen the newspapers, of course. I'm plumb cleaned out, and I've just called around to find out what day you feel like starting for Glen Ellen. It'll have to be soon, for it's real expensive living in Oakland these days. My board at the hotel is only paid to the end of the week, and I can't afford to stay on after that. And beginning with tomorrow I've got to use the street cars, and they sure eat up the nickels."

He paused, and waited, and looked at her. Indecision and trouble showed on her face. Then the smile he knew so well began to grow on her lips and in her eyes, until she threw back her head and laughed in the old forthright boyish way.

"When are those men coming to pack for me?" she asked.

And again she laughed and simulated a vain attempt to escape his bear-like arms.

"Dear Elam," she whispered; "dear Elam." And of herself, for the first time, she kissed him.

"Now, I've got an idea," Daylight said. "We're running away from cities, and you have no kith nor kin, so it don't seem exactly right that we should start off by getting married in a city. So here's the idea: I'll run up to the ranch and get things in shape around the house and give the caretaker his walking-papers. You follow me in a couple of days, coming on the morning train. I'll have the preacher fixed and waiting. And here's another idea. You bring your riding togs in a suit case. And as soon as the ceremony's over, you can go to the hotel and change. Then out you come, and you find me waiting with a couple of horses, and we'll ride over the landscape so as you can see the prettiest parts of the ranch the first thing. And she's sure pretty, that ranch. And now that it's settled, I'll be waiting for you at the morning train day after tomorrow."

Dede blushed as she spoke.

"You are such a hurricane."

"Well, ma'am," he drawled, "I sure hate to burn daylight. And you and I have burned a heap of daylight. We've been scandalously extravagant. We might have been married years ago."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Race Between Man and Horse.

At Dublin yesterday a large crowd witnessed a ten-mile race on a grass track between Michael Horan's trotting mare Kathleen and P. Fagan, the pedestrian.

Fagan received 18 minutes' allowance and covered three miles one furlong in that time. He was caught 78 yards from the tape and beaten by [illegible]

Companions in Misery

By Edmund Moberly

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

The quarrel was short, but decisive.

"I don't want you to think me unduly captious, Fred; but I must say that you have been exhibiting more fondness for Anita Ferguson this evening than is becoming in an engaged man," said Miss Helen Stagg, with as much calmness as she could muster.

"Nonsense, Helen. We've been having a little good-natured fun, but neither of us has for a moment lost sight of the fact that she is engaged to Harry French and I am engaged to you," replied Frederick Drayton.

"Well, if you haven't lost sight of it, you've both managed to keep it pretty well in the background," retorted Miss Stagg. "Your good-natured fun, as you call it, seems to me to be in very poor taste, and I must insist that you, for your part, discontinue it."

"That is unjust, Helen—and, futhermore, I don't concede that your position as my betrothed carries with it the right to make such a demand."

"Oh, you don't!" exclaimed Miss Stagg in angry surprise. "If that is your view, you may enjoy yourself with Miss Fergusan to your heart's content. You need not feel hampered by our engagement; for it has ceased to exist."

"You mean that, Helen?"

"Every word."

A partner claimed Miss Stagg for the next dance. She whirled away on his arm, and Drayton, somewhat bewildered by the suddenness of it all, passed slowly out of the door into the friendly darkness of the club-house veranda.

As he approached a secluded corner at the far end, he observed that someone was already there. In the darkness he could see a dim, white figure reclining disconsolately in the depths of a settee.

"Is that you, Fred?" came from the settee.

"Why, Anita!" he exclaimed. "What are you doing out here alone in the dark?"

"I find the darkness very friendly just now."

"Why?" he asked, seating himself by her side.

"I've just had a blow," she replied wearily.

"Is it something I may know?"

"Yes; it is simply this: I am no longer the future Mrs. French. Harry and I have broken our engagement."

"Whew!" ejaculated Drayton. "It seems to be in the air this evening.

"Oh, You Don't!"

Less than ten minutes ago Helen informed me that ours had ceased to exist."

"She didn't, Fred!"

"Oh, but she did—and all on account of you. She declared that I showed more fondness for you than was becoming in an engaged man, and demanded that I comport myself more in accordance with her ideas of decorum. I questioned her right to make such a demand, and bing!—the engagement was off and Helen was out in the middle of the floor waltzing with Tommy Osborne before I could get my breath."

The girl's listlessness fled, and she suddenly sat erect.

"Our conduct this evening seems to have been dreadfully improper, Fred. It is likewise at the bottom of my trouble. To begin with, Harry has never liked you very much, as you must know."

"I confess I have never been scorched by the warmth of his regard," responded Drayton.

"Well, tonight, when he saw us having a good time, it made him simply rabid. He said a lot of mean, sarcastic things about you, and finally informed me that I was too featherbrained ever to attain the dignity and responsibility fitting in one presiding over a domestic establishment. I retorted that he need give himself no worry, for I would never preside over him—and then I somehow managed to find my way out here."

"And here we are, companions in misery," said Drayton, with forced lightness. "What shall we do—hunt them up and say we're sorry?"

"I will not say I'm sorry," declared Miss Ferguson.

"Well, then, shall we make them say they're sorry?"

"Do you think we could?" she asked eagerly.

"Surely. They'll both say they're sorry inside of a month, if we carry out a little plan I have."

"Explain, please."

"It's simply this: You and I must become temporarily engaged. Beginning with this evening—right now, I will devote myself to you assiduously. In a week or two we will allow it to become rumored that we are engaged. That will do the trick. I know already how French will act. At first he will run around in circles and emit loud cries, but finally he will come to you and ask forgiveness for the sins of the past."

"And I know just how Helen will act," said the girl with a laugh. "She will at first retire into a shell of icy disdain, but in the end she will feel that it is her duty to rescue you from my clutches, and then she will unbend sufficiently to admit that she was a trifle hasty, perhaps. It's a fine plan, Fred; let's try it."

"Then we are temporarily engaged," he said, extending his hand.

"Yes," she replied, giving it a warm clasp.

During the remainder of the evening, the conduct of Anita and Fred evoked much comment. The manner in which he monopolized her, and her apparent enjoyment of it, was a near-scandal to those who knew them well.

In the days that followed Fred gave a perfect imitation of a devoted lover, and Anita enacted the role of a happy fiance with splendid realism. It was rumored they were engaged. Their friends gasped.

And then their prophecies were fulfilled.

"Well, Harry has come to time," said Anita one evening when Fred was calling on her. "He did precisely what you said he'd do. He was here this afternoon, pleaded guilty to high crimes and misdemeanors, and asked to be forgiven for the same."

"And you?" he asked eagerly.

"I told him I must have time to consider."

"Helen also has deigned to admit that her anger might have been unjust," said Drayton. "I had a note from her yesterday. I haven't answered yet. I suppose that our sham engagement, now that it has served its purpose, is at an end."

"I suppose so."

"I suppose there is nothing left but to overlook their past transgressions and receive them with open arms," he continued.

"I suppose so," she answered dully. "Are you glad?"

"No; I'm not!" he exclaimed. "To be truthful, 'Nita, there isn't going to be any reconciliation between Helen and me."

"Fred, you can't mean it!"

"I do, though," he said, rising and pacing the floor. "After the last few weeks with you, 'Nita, returning to Helen would be like going into cold-storage for the balance of my life. I know there is no chance for me; but before I go out of your life and French comes back in, I want to tell you that I love you. That's why I haven't answered Helen's note."

The girl rose and advanced until she stood before him. She colored warmly, but smiled bravely into his eyes.

"There is a chance for you, Fred—a big chance," she said slowly. "Harry can never come back into my life, if you wish to remain."

"You mean our sham betrothal may become real?" he demanded, almost roughly, as he caught her to him.

"It is real, Fred, dear," she whispered, hiding her face upon his shoulder.

HIS ONE GREAT ADVANTAGE

Bachelor Is Free to Get Married at Any Time if He Wants To!

The advantages of being a bachelor are so many that their mere number is confusing. While one is lolling around in the midst of them, so to speak, this confusion may be disastrous, for it is just in these moments that one is most likely to fall in love with some one. Let us, therefore, dwell on only one advantage as being paramount to all of the others.

This advantage then, is that a bachelor is always free to marry if he wants to. Think of it! There is no other condition like it!

For example, if you are once married, you are then not free to marry again when you want to. To do this you must first go to your wife and explain the matter and get her consent. You can do nothing without her co-operation. Now, it is by no means easy in these days to get an appointment with one's wife. The object must first be fully explained beforehand or she will have none of you.

With a bachelor, however, no difficulty presents itself. At any moment he has only to say to himself, "I believe I will get married," and the thing is as good as done.

Not that he is compelled to avail himself of the opportunity. Of course not! The idea of any kind of freedom is never to avail one's self of it. The great advantage is that it is always there. We never draw upon it. It does us no intrinsic good. It is just there.

And so for a bachelor, "being married" is always "just there." He contemplates it with satisfaction. He can do it if he wants to. Therein lies his supreme strength. To avail himself of the opportunity is, of course, to take away his own freedom.—Life.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3.1879.

MINNESOTA'S SPECIAL SESSION.

The Minnesota legislature will convene in extra session in June. Governor Eberhart called it in response to insistent demands of the people for a just reapportionment more comprehensive primaries, and other progressive legislation.

There is no excuse for this legislature to fiddle away time. A good clear majority of both houses know to a reasonable certainty that the people demand:

1. A reapportionment based on population, in which the larger centers are given the same treatment exactly as other sections the state. The man working in the factory has just as much right to be represented on a per capita basis as the man working on the farm.
2. A statewide primary which includes all state offices.
3. A presidential preference primary.
4. Ratification of the amendment to the Federal Constitution providing for the direct election of United States senators.

While there is other legislation needed, we believe the legislature would do well to confine its efforts to the above, which includes what the people are demanding insistently.

There will be some who will insist on some railroad rate legislation. While there is no question but what the people of this state are being robbed by the present unjust passenger rates, any attempt to deal with railroad rates will cause a ruction, and until the United States supreme court has rendered a decision in the Minnesota case, as otherwise there will be all manner of excuses to offer, and a vast number of remedies discussed, and the result might be nothing done and a vast amount of time wasted.

We would like to see the legislature get right down to business and pass the more important legislation demanded, and as the regular session convenes in but a few months, other legislation can be taken up at that time, thus avoiding too much of a mixture at the extra session.—Crookston Times.

Polk county are certainly not short of sheriff timber as there is now seven in the field.

Cuba has again started a war, just to keep Mexico company, and it may be necessary for the United States to intervene to establish peace. The American people are getting tired of this continual warfare so near our borders and may demand that Uncle Sam takes time to give them both a spanking and learn them to behave themselves.

Calling a special session of the legislature at this late date to pass a state primary law, is a move that will take the nominating of state officers out of the hands of the farmers and turn it over to the ward heelers of the cities. It takes a certain length of time to get the farmers aroused to the necessity of turning out to election to protect their interests, and when this primary election law is sprung on them suddenly, they will be more than likely to stay at home that day and allow the city fellows to do the nominating which was another one of them smooth moves made by our smooth Governor.

Again has Pennington County demonstrated that they are lively infants by getting the first state road under law passed by the last legislature [illegible]. The road runs 18 miles east of Thief River Falls, on the telephone line, and will open up a section of country that are badly in need of a public highway that will be passable at all seasons of the year. We can not depend on the continued dry weather, of the past two seasons, and as soon as any floods come there will be no passible road from the eastern part of the country into Thief River Falls. In fact the roads will be more impassible than they used to be in the Pioneer days as the travel must now follow section lines, and can not go around the bad places in the road.

A Big Fight On Tap.

About the second day of that special session of the legislature some of the fellows who failed to make themselves famous, at the last session, will make an attempt to redeem themselves and all the old fighting bills and a few new ones will be introduced, among which will be county option, with a strong lobby of Brewers on one side and County Optionists on the other side, and the fighting and "log rolling" will continue until the governor may have to call on the state militia to drive them out of St.Paul.

We very much doubt that the present legislature will pass any reapportionment law, or even a primary law but will get a chance to scratch some of the old scabs off from the sores made in the last session. Then governor Eberhart can say: "I told you so." "I knew it was no use to call them together, but I did it to please the people, and now they can see that it was a useless expense to call a special session of the present legislature."

The Demons Of The Swamps

are mosquitoes. As they sting they put deadly malaria germs in the blood. Then follow the icy chills and the fire of fever. The appetite flies and the strength fails; also malaria often paves the way for deadly typhoid. But Electric Bitters kill and cast out the malaria germs from the blood; give you a fine appetite and renew your strength. "After long suffering," wrote Wm. Fretwell, of Lucama, N.C., "three bottles drove all the malaria from my system, and I've had good health ever since." Best for all stomach, liver and kidney ills. 50 cents At all Druggists.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

I am a candidate for the office of Register of Deeds of Pennington county, and solicit the support of the voters at the Republican primaries to be held September 17th 1912. Nels J. Anderson.

Looking Ahead.

"If we quarrel like this now, what will we do after marriage?"

"Well, if you think I'm going to rush blindly into marriage without finding out who's boss you're mistaken."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Hemsilka.

Mamma—Why are you hiding from your little brother, Lizzie? Lizzie—Oh, we are just playing. I'm the lady of the house, and Tommy is the butcher come with his bill.—Chicago News.

Woman's Intuition.

Mrs. Crabshaw—I can't understand why I didn't see those faults in you before we were married. Mr. Crabshaw—It's quite plain, my dear. I didn't possess them.—Judge.

Property has its duties as well as its rights.—Thomas Drummond.

[illegible] Justice Eli Cherry, of Gillis Mills, Tenn., was plainly worried. A bad sore on his leg had baffled several doctors and long resisted all remedies. "I thought it was a cancer," he wrote. "At last I used Bucklen's Arnica Salve and was completely cured." Cures burns, boils, ulcers, cuts, bruises and piles. 25 cents at All Druggists.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam May 10, 1912.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 4th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Fred A. Lane of Kratka Minnesota, who on June 24th, 1904, made Homestead Entry No. 261, Serial No. 04103; for Lots 2, 3, 4, [illegible] & 6, Section 24 Township 153 N. Range 42 W, and Lot 3, Section 19, Township 153 N. Range 41 W.5th. Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make final five year proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for the District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minnesota on the 18th day of June 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Ole M. Pederson, Lewis Stenseth, Osmund Swansen, Ola Christoferson, all of Kratka Minn.

Arthur P. Tonpin, Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam May 10th, 1912.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 4th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Ole Christoferson, of Kratka Minn. who on June 28th, 1904, made Homestead Entry No. 390, Serial No. 04120, for Lots 9, 13 & S.W.¼ S.E.¼ Section 18 Township 153 N. Range 41 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Five Year Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 18th day of June 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Ole M. Pederson, Krist Larson, Hans Johnson. Fred A. Lane, all of Kratka Minn.

Arthur P. Tourin, Register.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. The Sunbeam May 10, 1912.

Department of the Interior U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 4th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that William Parsow, of Kratka Minn. who on June 29th, 1904 made Homested Entry No. 451, Serial No. 04161, for Lot 1, N ½ S.E.¼ & S.E. ¼ S.E.¼ Section 28 Township 153 N. Range 41 W. Fifth Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Five year Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U.S.Commissioner, for District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 18th. day of June 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Halvor Wold, Ole Waale, Stiser Johnson, John I. Johnson, all of Kratka Minn.

Arthur P. Tourin, Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Jan. 26, 1912.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 16th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Charles D. Henry, of Kratka Minnesota, who on June 25th, 1904, made Homestead Entry No. 407, Serial No. 04143, for Lots 10, 12, & E. ½ N. W. ¼ Section 31 Township 153 N. Range 41 W. Fifth principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Final five year proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 25th, day of June 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Dave Ross, Peter Lindeboja, Jacob R. Hasby, Peter Paulson, all of Kratka Minn.

Arthur P. Tourin, Register.

A Cold Welcome.

A clergyman in a small town was deploring the fact that none of the couples that came in from the country to be married stopped at his house for the purpose.

"Well, brother," said the man addressed, "what can you expect with that big sign on the tree there, 'Five Dollars Fine For Hitching Here?'"—Youth's Companion.

Bigness of Texas.

The state of Texas is bigger than France, bigger than the whole German empire, bigger than Austria-Hungary, bigger twice over than the United Kingdom. It is rich in natural resources, and if settled as thickly as little Belgium it would have a population of 205,000,000, or nearly three times the present population of the entire United States.

Imitation Tortoise Shell.

In Japan the hones of sharks and skates are used in making imitation tortoise shell.

Canning Season.

"Hello, Bob!"

"Hello!"

"Where's mother?"

"Canning peaches."

"Where's grannie?"

"Canning tomatoes."

"Where's Bess?"

"Canning Jack."

ROOSEVELT HOLDS THE NATION'S HEART

His Compelling Strength Among Those for "All the People."

HUMAN INTEREST IS DOMINANT

As Private Citizen and Public Official He Always Has Worn Upon His Sleeve the Colors of "the Public" —Why He is Comparable to Lincoln, Who, Too, Emphasized the Human Note.

Washington, April 20.—After all is said and done, the human note is dominant in politics; the human interest is the determining interest. Right here is brought home the compelling strength of Theodore Roosevelt with those who believe, as the editor of the Detroit News says, that: "Politics in the large sense is the endeavor to provide for opportunity, justice, comfort and the means of development among all the people."

The same writer, in an appreciation of the man who is battling for social justice for all the people as against control by big interests, special privileges and political bosses, says:

"The human element has never been lacking from Theodore Roosevelt's public endeavors. He has always believed that man was not made for the government, but the government for man. And 'the public' to him is not an abstract noun; it is something he has lived with, knows, and loves. As a boy in precarious health he played about the farmers turning up the new soil, whose aroma he breathed for its vitalizing qualities. As a young man he herded cattle with the men of the plains. As a police commissioner he walked the night beats with policemen and helped them in their dangerous work. As a soldier he slept in open fields with his Rough Riders. As a hunter he has taken his turn at the fires to keep them blazing the long night through. As a president he has met the people of every state, and a man with a family or a woman with a baby never escaped his eye. It was no mere campaign cleverness, but the deep conviction of his heart, when he said that the American was a mighty good fellow, but his wife was a better fellow. And now as private citizen he has played and tumbled with the tenement children of New York, has lunched with the workingmen of many factories, has gone out to examine for himself the problem of abandoned farms, and has gone home with the newsboy to see how things were at the house. With one of the greater ancients he could well say, 'I am a man; therefore, nothing human is alien to me.'

"And his official acts—what were they? The conservation of the people's mines and forests, the purity of the people's foods; the inspection of the people's meat; stopping the slaughter of Russian mujiks and Japanese soldiers; prosecution of various robbers of the housewife's pocketbook or rifler of the people's savings banks; sending 16 battleships around the world to warn off disturbers of the world's peace. Everywhere and always working for that which affected most closely every citizen of the republic, great or humble.

"Theodore Roosevelt was born with a silver spoon in his mouth, but he never used it. He was born with another quality far more precious, which was a wide range of human sympathy. He knows the long hours of the working girl, and her many trials—and he knows the cause of it, too. He knows the risk of the man in hazardous employment and the accidents which so tragically cut short his usefulness—and all of us remember how he blazed forth in wrath when the supreme court of his state said that those maimed workers or their orphaned families had no claim against society on account of such loss. In the last campaign he went to another state and campaigned against a judge who had ruled that the maimed workingman was not entitled to automatic compensation. Theodore Roosevelt is so intensely patriotic that he will bare his head to an empty sleeve of blue; but he is so intensely and practically human that he will go out and do battle for the man who lost a limb or a life on the field of industry, and for his family. And he will throw the whole weight of his influence and reputation and ability against the system which wears women down to wan, white ghosts in the struggle for subsistence. Theodore Roosevelt is a lover of his kind; a man stirred from the heart and reinforced by the head; a man with courage of tongue and courage of fist to attack the common enemy—the enemy of a happy humanity.

"Many have tried to draw comparisons between Roosevelt and other great men. It is significant that no small man will serve to compare with him. It is more significant that no great man with a dominating streak of badness running through him will serve to compare with him. You remember how they tried it with Napoleon—'The Man on Horseback'—but the comparison was a caricature and the people laughed. He is, however, comparable to Lincoln, who more than any president before or since, until Roosevelt came, emphasized the human note. Lincoln lived in, and loved the people. He loved the black man in [illegible] chains. Back of all he did was that human note. Though he was statesman enough to see that he could not immediately put into operation the humane impulse which stirred him, there came a day when the doors of opportunity opened wide just for a moment—a moment during which a hesitant or less humane man would have debated while they closed again. But Lincoln, reinforced by all his vital relation to the people, thrust in his hand and drew forth a new liberty for his country. His humanity, deep, sincere and vital, was the mainspring of emancipation.

"Likewise Mr. Roosevelt is well armed with this human quality. Roosevelt is for men. The measures he will fight for will be for men. Of honors he has had all his country and the world can give him, and now he seeks to repay them fourfold by a service which shall be unto the whole people, for the girl in the factory and the man at the forge and the little children playing about the streets. He comes into the arena wearing upon his sleeve the people's colors."

Genius and Eccentricity.

"You can't have genius without eccentricity."

"That may be so, but I've noticed that it's possible to have a good deal of eccentricity without much genius."—Chicago Record-Herald.

An Old Saw, With A New Set.

We have now a large and complete stock of new goods at our Kratka store, and would be pleased to have all our old customers call and see us at the new store and post Office.

A FINE LINE OF BOTH HEAVY AND LIGHT SHOES.

Ask to look at our stock of Shoes. No trouble to show GOODS.

Higest market price paid for butter and eggs.

Singer Bros, Kratka minn.

RHODA STORE

NEW GOODS, NEW PRICES.

A trial order will convince you, that this is the best Store to buy your goods.

I HAVE A FINE LINE OF gROCERIES.

BOOTS, SHOES, & COMPLET STOCK OF SUMMER FOOT WARE.

give me a call and get prices.

GEORGE SINGER. Prop. Rhoda Minn.

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 10.00 a. m. on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m

Wm.G. Hunt, p.m.

FARM LOANS.

Made Without Delay, at reasonable rates of interest.

Be sure and see me before you place your loan.

GEORGE ELDER.
McGinn Block,
Thief River Falls.

McCall's Magazine and McCall Patterns

For Women

Have More Friends than any other magazine or patterns. McCall's is the reliable Fashion Guide monthly in one million one hundred thousand homes. Besides showing all the latest designs of McCall Patterns, each issue is brimful of sparkling short stories and helpful information for women.

Save Money and Keep in Style by subscribing for McCall's Magazine at once. Costs only 50 cents a year, including any one of the celebrated McCall Patterns free.

McCall Patterns Lead all others in style, fit, simplicity, economy and number sold. More dealers sell McCall Patterns than any other two makes combined. None higher than 15 cents. Buy from your dealer, or by mail from

McCALL'S MAGAZINE
236-246 W. 37th St., New York City

Note—Sample C[illegible] Premium Catalogue and Pattern Catalogue free, on request.

CORN-SEEDS TREES

Our 29th Annual Catalog is now ready and free for the asking. It is a work of art and full of good things.

See King Corn on front cover.

WILL'S PIONEER SEED HOUSE and NURSERY
OSCAR H. WILL & CO.
BISMARCK, NO. DAKOTA

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. Handbook on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Call and see us, when you are ready to make your final proof.

It is getting to be time that the flax was in the ground.

Wanted: To let 40 or 50 acres of breaking at once.
George Leimers, Sec. 11 Town of Deer Park.

Oscar Lill is breaking with a gasoline plow on his Deer Park farm this week.

We hope the eleven townships flax will not glut the market this fall, for there will certainly be a lot of it.

Mr. and Mrs. W.G. Hunt and daughter made Mr. and Mrs. Kretzer a pleasant call Sunday afternoon.

K. Kratzer is doing some finishing carpenter work on the farm residence of Walter McAndress this week.

Mr. Edward Singer and Miss Gunderson on their way to Rhoda yesterday stopped in, and made this office a pleasant call.

A young peoples meeting will be held at the home of Mr. Wm Swanson Sunday afternoon. All are cordially invited to attend.

Confirmation services were held at the Luthern church near Tobias Olsons last Sunday, which drew a larger crowd than the church could hold, but as the weather was fine the services was held in the grove.

Mr. Shedd and family are expected to arrive here from Wisconsin next week. They have rented the Dengerfield farm and will buy land later and make their future home here.

Grain is growing slowly and we are in need of a good heavy rain storm, as the light showers that we have been haying does not wet and warm up the ground enough to give the grain and grass a good start.

Owing to the Kolskie hall being out of Commission the wedding intertainment that was to have been given there on June 8th, has been postponed to a later date, but it will be given later when the 4th, of July bowerys are built.

It seems funny to see some strangers coming into this country looking for homestead land. The homestead lands are all taken, but good land in both eastern Red Lake and Pennington counties can still be bought for about one fourth its value.

Every effort that can be made should be made by the people of Thief River Falls to get that state road east of the city in a good passable condition, before it is time to market the grain this fall, as it will be the main road to market from eastern Pennington County.

Experience has taught that flax sown after the 10th of June is not a very sure crop in this locality, and we would advise all the farmers to close down and stop breaking in time to get all the land they have ready sown by that date. This is from our own observation of a seven years residence in this locality.

How long since you paid any subscription to THE SUNBEAM! Remember that it takes money to run a newspaper and every issue received by you is so much cash from our pocket. If you have been receiving it for a number of years without paying a cent, remit a few dollars which will be credited to your account with our thanks.

Vaughn Bros & Co. are doing a large amount of clearing and breaking on their farm west of Highlanding, which is quite expensive as this land was at one time timber land and although it is now called prairie land a large number of the old stumps are still doing business at the old stand. But money invested in improving northern Minnesota lands is only loaned and will be returned with interest and a good big bonus.

The wheat and oats are stooling nicely and the prospects for a bumper crop were never better.

The Citizens of Oklee had ought to rush that farmers Elevator along, so as to get it ready for this falls crop.

P.H. Thoreson has a gasoline plow which is doing very successful work and he will have about eighty acres of flax on new breaking this year. He is also breaking a lot of land for P P. Palmer, which will be sown to flax.

Knut Sannes has taken an extensive job of grubbing for Simon Solberg, which he will have broken to put into wheat next year. Mr. Solberg has to good an idea of business to allow land like this to lie idle instead of rolling the dollars into his pocket.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam May 31, 1912.
Department of the Interior. U.S. Land Office at Crookston, Minn. May 28th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Theodor P. Vigenstad, of Austad Minn, who on Nov. 29th, 1904, made Homestead Entry No. 968 Serial No. 01237, for S. E.¼ Section 9 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Final Commutation proof, to establish claim to the land above described before Wilhum Michlein U. S. Commissioner, for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn, on the 10th. day of July 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:
Petr Brevik, Peter Kolstad, of Austad Minn. Gunder L. Steenerson, Thomas Kjervestad, of Thief River Falls Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Escapes An Awful Fate.

A thousand tongues could not express the gratitude of Mrs. J. E. Cox, of Joliet Ills., for her wonderful deliverance from an awful fate. "Typhoid pneumonia had left me with a dreadful cough," she writes. "Sometimes I had such awful coughing spells I thought I would die. I could get no help from doctor's treatment or other medicine till I used Dr. Kings New Discovery. But I owe my life to this wonderful remedy for I scarsely cough at all now." Quick and safe, its the most reliable of all throat and lung medicine. Every bottle guaranteed. 50c and $1,00. Trial bottle free at All Druggists.

What Texans Admire.

is hearty, vigorous life, according to Hugh Tallman, of San Antonio. "We find" he writes, "that Dr. King's New Life Pills surely put new life and energy into a person. Wife and I believe they are the best made." Excellent for stomach, liver or kidney troubles 25 cts. at All Druggists.

FARM FOR SALE.

The N. E. ¼ Section 14 Township 152 N. Range 40, Town of Deer Park. Price $16,00 per acre.

Henry Rovoold,
Alsask, Sask. Canada.

DRESS MAKING.

For plain and Fancy sewing apply to Mrs. Sam McMahon Student of the America College of dress making.

Kuebnei, Minn.

Notice To Farmers.

I have an a No. Jack, nine years old which will stand for service during the season of 1912, at my farm on section 8 town of Deer Park.

M. E. Hyland.

The Puzzle of Living.

Religionists who do not agree might point out that they differ only in incidentals and not essentials, whereas the scientists differ on everything. Take the science of living. A week ago you would have "died if you drank water with your meals." Now they say it doesn't do any harm at all. One variety says, "Eat meat, lots of it, to build good, rich blood." Another says meat is poison: that vegetables are the only food. A third declares meat and vegetables both increase debility and that you will live twice as long on raw fruits and nuts. Some say: "Talk with your meals, laugh. It makes the food digest." Others insist silence is never so golden as at table.—Pittsburgh Press.

A Deduction.

Bixby—Who was that lady who sat beside you at the theater the other evening? Smith—Why, that was my wife. Bixby—Oh, I don't mean the [illegible] on your right, I mean the [illegible]

"For Sale"

By Rosalie G. Mendel.

"Maybe, while you are away, our house in the suburbs will get sold," said Mrs. Morse to her husband as she helped pack his new wardrobe trunk.

"Well, by jinks, I hope it will," emphatically answered Mr. Morse. "It has been on the market long enough, goodness knows. Yesterday I put it in the hands of a new agent. Maybe he will do something with it."

"I just have a feeling, somehow, that he will," said the wife.

"Just keep that feeling, dear, and maybe it will help matters along," laughed Mr. Morse; "and on the strength of it I'll make an agreement with you. If that blankety blank house is sold before my return, you have permission to order for yourself as handsome a l'avalier as your dear little heart desires."

"Oh, you angel man. I've just been dying for one for ages," exclaimed Mrs. Morse, throwing her arms around her husband's neck.

"Don't count your l'avalier before it's ordered!" warned Mr. Morse.

A few days later Marjory, Mrs. Morse's sister, came rushing into the house, saying, "Sis, I think your suburban house is going to be sold! Congratulations!"

"What makes you have such an idea?" eagerly asked Mrs. Morse.

"I slept at Dorothy's last night. On my way home I passed the house and saw three ladies, a man, a child and a dog standing on the porch. The man was busily engaged writing something on a piece of paper. And it all looked pretty business-like to me. Aren't you glad that at last you are going to get rid of that elephant of a house?"

"I should think I am. Simply delighted. It's too good to be true. Marjory, where did Dorothy purchase her new l'avalier?"

Early the next morning Mrs. Morse telephoned to her friend that it would be impossible to keep the luncheon date with her, owing to a most important engagement. Then she told the maid to attend to all the household duties, as an unforseen errand called her away in great haste. Her concert ticket for that afternoon she sent to a neighbor. Then Mrs. Morse ordered a taxi to take her to the depot. As she boarded the suburban train which was to take her to the "old" house she said to herself:

"If that husband of mine had a grain of sense he would have told me the new agent's name. Then I could have telephoned instead of taking this unnecessary trip. Men are so careless."

Her long trip was rewarded, however, when on arriving at the house she discovered that the "For Sale" sign had been removed.

"Goody! Goody!" she exclaimed. "Didn't I tell Dick that I had a feeling it would be sold while he was gone? He'll be so glad. I'll wire the news at once. Then for downtown to order my long-wished for l'avalier."

The next morning Mrs. Morse received an answer from her husband, stating: "Order l'avalier! I celebrated the sale last night with Bob. Love. Dick."

The following day the new agent telephoned to Mrs. Morse. He said: "I just received a letter from your husband that is quite puzzling to me. Maybe you can put some light on it. He thanks me for selling your house with such dispatch. I don't understand."

"You sold it, didn't you?"

"Not that I know of," answered the surprised man.

"Why, my sister Marjory said she saw some people looking at it. The next day the 'For Sale' was down. Consequently, I thought it was sold. It was a perfectly natural deduction, I am sure, so I telegraphed at once to Mr. Morse."

"Madame," replied the voice over the phone, "the party that was looking at the house intends to build in the vicinity and they were studying your porch structure. The 'For Sale' sign had been pressed into use as a snow shovel by some boys. Later, it was found a few blocks from the house. Up to the present date, as far as I know, the house is not sold. Good-by."

"Oh! Oh!" cried Mrs. Morse; "then the house is not sold, after all. Well, that makes me feel kind of foolish. But I've ordered my l'avalier, and Dick will think it such a joke on me that he won't care. 'Studied our porch structure,' indeed! And 'pressed it into use as a snow shovel.' Absurd! Mine was a logical conclusion, anyway. And I'm going to have my l'avalier!"

Not Hollering Now.

Church—What's become of that fellow who started in business and who was continually hollering that he was in business to stay?

Gotham—Oh, the sheriff shut him up.

Resentful Recollections.

"Did they make you recite 'Little drops of water' when you were a child?"

"Yes," replied Colonel Stillwell. "And it didn't stop there. When I grew up they tried [illegible] as a beverage."

"Dr. Miles' Nervine Completely Cured Our Little Boy of Fits."

A family can suffer no greater affliction than to have a child subject to fits or epilepsy. Many a father or mother would give their all to restore such a child to health.

"I am heartily glad to tell you of our little boy who was completely cured of fits. He commenced having them at 10 years of age and had them for four years. I tried three doctors and one specialist but all of them said he could not be cured, but Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills made a complete cure. He is now hale, hearty and gay. It has been three years since he had the last spell. I shall give Dr. Miles' medicines praise wherever I go. You are at liberty to use this letter as you see fit and anyone writing to me I will gladly answer if they enclose stamp for reply."
F. M. BOGUE, Windfall, Ind.

Dr. Miles' Nervine

is just what it is represented to be, a medicine compounded especially for nervous diseases, such as fits, spasms, St. Vitus' dance, convulsions and epilepsy. These diseases frequently lead to insanity or cause weak minds. Dr. Miles' Nervine has proven most effective in relieving these dreaded maladies.

Sold by all druggists. If the first bottle fails to benefit your money is returned.
MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

The Famous Ride.

Paul Revere had finished his famous ride and given the alarm which sounded the downfall of British power in this country.

"Ha!" he said, with the prophetic instinct of all great men. "Where would this country have been if I had been arrested for exceeding the speed limit?"—Baltimore American.

Thomas Parr.

Among the extraordinary cases of longevity on record and well attested is that of the Englishman, Thomas Parr, who lived happily in Shropshire at the age of 152. The celebrated Harvey, who dissected him after death, found his body in excellent condition and stated that had it not been for his intemperance he might have lived much longer.

Boiling Potatoes.

There is a simple way to prevent potatoes from burning and sticking to the bottom of the pot. An inverted pie pan placed in the bottom of the pot avoids scorching potatoes. The water and empty space beneath the pan save the potatoes. This also makes the work of cleaning pots easier, as no adhering parts of potatoes are left to be scoured out.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

LUNG DISEASE

"After four in our family had died of consumption I was taken with a frightful cough and lung trouble, but my life was saved and I gained 87 pounds through using

DR. KING'S NEW DISCOVERY

W. R. Patterson, Wellington, Tex.
PRICE 50c and $1.00 AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

His Part.

"Who is the responsible person in this firm?" asked the brusque caller of the office boy.

"Can't tell you, sir," replied the pert lad, "but I'm the one who gets all the blame."

LUMBER FOR SALE.

I will have about 50,000 ft. of lumber for sale this winter at $15.00 per thousand, Will take cattle in exchange.

Andrew Nilson.

W. G. Hunt.

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN.

It is not necessary to make one trip to the County seat as I can do the business by mail for you. Special attention given to [illegible] County Work.

NEW BANK.

FIRST STATE BANK,

OF OKLEE Lambert Post Office Minn.

NEW STATION ON DULUTH SOO LINE.

Your Business solicited.

Directors: A. P. Toupin, Pres. Samul Giteau Vic. Prs.
Larry O'Niel, Abrham Parquize, T. L. Cruzon.
J. A. Duffy, Cashier. T. L. Cruzon, Assist. Cashier.

Let Us Tell You Something!

This Season we are offering the best line of Dry Goods that ever came into this Section of the Country.

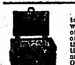
Don't Buy Elswhare, Until You Have Seen What We Have To Offer.

No Matter What Price you pay, WE Will please YOU.

VAUGHAN BROS. & CO.

Highlanding Minn.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's $50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day



Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were piloting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory? We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.

Our New Home. Capacity 20,000 Safes Annually.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars, it will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Ask for Catalogue 16 T.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.

CINCINNATI, OHIO

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT

IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost.

BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the regular retail prices.

$10.00 Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof Self-healing Tires A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks, or Glass will not let the air out. A hundred thousand pairs sold last year.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented. [illegible]

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D" also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

[illegible]

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

J. L. MEAD CYCLE COMPANY, CHICAGO, ILL.

CANADA'S PROSPERITY.

The New York Times of March [illegible], 1912, in an article dealing with Canada's progress, says:

"At the present moment eight shiploads of European immigrants are afloat for Canada, while there are signs that the outward movement which is customary with us during labor troubles will be marked this year. There is no such startling record of our loss to Canada. Our citizens quietly slip over the border in groups or trainloads, but their going is not advertised.

"There is no mystery why Canada is the 'good thing' the United States used to be. It is because Canada is following in its neighbor's footsteps that it is repeating the fortunate experience which its neighbor is envying, even while deliberately turning its back on the teachings of the past. A fortnight ago the Dominion budget speech reported the unprecedented surplus of $39,000,000, and on Thursday the Government passed through the Committee on Supply credits of $38,000,000 for railways and canals. With this assistance the railways themselves are both enabled and compelled to increase their facilities. Accordingly we find a single road allotting two millions for work of its own. Naturally the Canadian newspapers contain announcements calling for fifty thousand men for construction work. This influx is apart from those Americans who go with money in their pockets obtained by cashing in their high-priced American lands.

"A St. Paul dispatch says that within a fortnight two thousand carloads of farm animals and machinery have passed toward Canada, the property of men who expect to pay for their farms with the first crop."

Substitute for Third Degree.

A New York dentist advocates laughing gas as a substitute for the police third degree. He believes that this, the least dangerous of anesthetics, lays open what already is in the mind, unconscious of the search for its secrets. He believes that if a man who has committed a serious crime should be questioned about it during a certain stage of recovery from nitrous oxide, or laughing gas anesthesia, he would not only reply and truthfully, but half a minute later he would realize fully what he had said.

Nothing Doing.

The Cat—Come on down and I'll show you a beautiful road.

The Bird—A dark one, I suppose, and colored red.

Garfield Tea is admittedly the simplest and best remedy for constipation.

Fourteen per cent. of the egg is albumen.

WOMEN SHOULD BE PROTECTED

Against So Many Surgical Operations. How Mrs. Bethune and Mrs. Moore Escaped.

Sikeston, Mo.—"For seven years I suffered everything. I was in bed for four or five days at a time every month, and so weak I could hardly walk. I cramped and had backache and headache, and was so nervous and weak that I dreaded to see anyone or have anyone move in the room. The doctors gave me medicine to ease me at those times, and said that I ought to have an operation. I would not listen to that, and when a friend of my husband told him about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for his wife, I was willing to take it. Now I look the picture of health and feel like it, too. I can do my own housework, hoe my garden, and milk a cow. I can entertain company and enjoy them. I can visit when I choose, and walk as far as any ordinary woman, any day in the month. I wish I could talk to every suffering woman and girl."—Mrs. DEMA BETHUNE, Sikeston, Mo.

Murrayville, Ill.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a very bad case of female trouble and it made me a well woman. My health was all broken down, the doctors said I must have an operation, and I was ready to go to the hospital, but dreaded it so that I began taking your Compound. I got along so well that I gave up the doctors and was saved from the operation."—Mrs. CHARLES MOORE, R. R. No. 3, Murrayville, Ill.

The Army of Constipation

Is Growing Smaller Every Day.

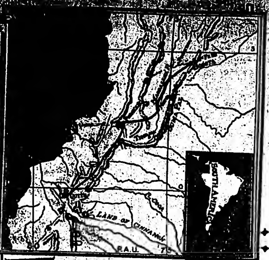
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS are responsible—they not only give relief—they permanently cure Constipation. Millions use them for Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Sallow Skin.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

The QUEST of EL DORADO



ROUTE FOLLOWED BY SEBASTIAN DE BELALCAZAR IN QUEST OF EL DORADO

INDIAN SEATED, WITH GOLD OBJECT ON HIS BREAST

LAKE GUATAVITA

GOLD FIGURE OF A WOMAN WITH A BIRD AND NEST, FOUND IN GUATAVITA

AN ELIZABETHAN GALLEON

DURING a year's wanderings in Andean lands and in the valleys of the Amazon and the Orinoco I was frequently reminded of the numerous expeditions that centuries ago went in quest of that extraordinary will-o'-wisp, usually known as El Dorado, writes J. A. Manso in the Pan-American Bulletin. Whether gliding down a Peruvian river in a dugout or traversing in the saddle the llanos of Venezuela and the lofty table lands of Colombia, I found myself following the courses pursued by those intrepid adventurers who, while seeking a phantom, did so much toward exploring that vast region of mountain and plain which lies between the equator and the Caribbean. At one time I was in the footsteps of Gonzalo Pizarro and Von Hutten, at another in the wake of Ursua and Orellana. Now I was following the course taken by Belalcazar and his eager band, as they hurried across the Cordilleras in pursuit of the Gilded King; anon I was pushing my way through the dense and tangled forests which had been traversed by Jiminez de Quesada and his sturdy men, when in search of the great and peerless capital of the Omaguas; and still again I was sailing on the tawny waters of the Casanare and the Orinoco, which had witnessed the mad race of the fleets of Antonio de Berrio and Sir Walter Raleigh for the golden city of Manoa; for that—

> "Imperial El Dorado, roofed with gold;
> Shadows to which, despite all shocks of change,
> All onset of capricious accident,
> Men clung with yearning hope which would not die."

And yet, strange as it may seem, little is known about these expeditions that at one time commanded such universal attention in both the New and the Old World, and which for the historian still constitute the most romantic episode of the conquest of South America. One reason for this lies in the fact that the most authentic and elaborate accounts of these stirring enterprises are to be found only in the old Spanish chronicles, some of which are comparatively rare, while others, forgotten or unknown, have for centuries been buried in the dusty archives of Spain and Peru and have only recently been given to the press.

Among the most important of these chronicles are the "Noticias Historiales" of Fray Pedro Simon, a learned Franciscan monk, who wrote nearly three centuries ago, while some of the conquistadores were still living and while the memory of the events connected with the first expeditions in quest of El Dorado was still fresh in the minds of many of the survivors. Of scarcely less value are the "Elegias de Varones Ilustres de Indias" and the "Historia del Nuevo Reino de Granada," by Juan de Castellanos, the poet-priest and historian of the conquest, who had served with distinction under Jiminez de Quesada in his celebrated campaign against the Muiscas and who knew personally many of the most celebrated of the adventurers who had taken part in the search for the Gilded King on the plateau of Cundinamarca and in the sultry lowlands of the Meta and the Guaviare.

But although these and similar invaluable works bearing on the expeditions in quest of the Gilded King have appeared in Spanish, comparatively little of the information contained in them has yet made its way into English. This explains the numerous errors that are found in what has hitherto been written on the subject and why many adventurers like Antonio Sedeno, Diego de Ordaz, Nicolas Federmann and others of their contemporaries are classed among those who sought for El Dorado when, as a matter of fact, during their time no one had even heard of this mythical personage.

It is a pity that those who love the curious and romantic phases of history have not given more attention to the interesting episode of El Dorado. An exhaustive and authoritative work on the subject, one which shall embody the results of the most recent researches in Spain and Latin America, is certainly a desideratum in the history of the conquest and of the exploration of the northern portion of our sister continent. For the years devoted to the quest of the Gilded King were not only "years crowded with incident, streaked with tragedy, stained by crime, darkened by intrigue," but they were also years during which the amazing audacity, the matchless prowess and the thrilling heroism of the conquistadores were seen at their best. And the study of these years will show that the prime mover of the Spaniards in their extraordinary adventures was not only a thirst for gold, as is so often asserted, but that behind it all was a love of glory and a sense of patriotism which impelled them to make sacrifices and to undertake enterprises before which even the bravest men of our degenerate age would recoil with horror.

It was in 1535 that a roving Indian first told the Spaniards the story of the gilded chieftain to whom they forthwith gave the name of El Dorado—the Gilded Man or King—a name which was subsequently applied not only to the gilded chief himself, but also to the city wherein he was supposed to reside, and to the province over which he bore rule, and to the lake on which his capital was said to be located. At that time Sebastián Belalcazar, the lieutenant of Francisco Pizarro, was in Quito, whither he had gone after his victorious campaign against the generals of Atahualpa, and here it was, according to Castellanos, where—

> An alien Indian, hailing from afar,
> Who in the town of Quito did abide,
> And neighbor to be of Bogota,
> There having come, I know not by what way,
> Did with him speak and solemnly announce
> A country rich in emeralds and gold.
>
> Also, among the things which them engaged,
> A certain king he told of who, disrobed,
> Upon a lake was wont, aboard a raft,
> To make oblations, as himself had seen,
> His regal form o'erspread with fragrant oil
> On which was laid a coat of powdered gold
> From sole of foot unto his highest brow,
> Resplendent as the beaming of the sun.
>
> Arrivals without end, he further said,
> Were there to make rich votive offerings;
> Of golden trinkets and of emeralds rare
> And divers other of their ornaments;
> And worthy credence these things he affirmed;
> The soldiers, light of heart and well content,
> Then dubbed him El Dorado, and the name
> By countless ways was spread throughout the world.

According to the chronicler, Juan Rodriguez Fresle, who was a son of one of the conquistadores of New Granada, the lake on which were made these offerings of gold and emeralds was Guatavita, a short distance to the northeast of Bogota. And the source of his information respecting the nature of the ceremonies connected with these offerings was, he assures us, no less than one Don Juan, the cacique of Guatavita, who was the nephew of the chief who bore sway at the time of the arrival of the Spaniards under Jiminez de Quesada, and who was even then preparing himself by a six years' fast to succeed his uncle as cacique of Guatavita. After this long fast, which was made under the most trying conditions, the successor to the caciqueship was obliged to go to the lake of Gustavita and offer sacrifice to the devil, who, Fresle informs us, was regarded by the aborigines as their god and master. After being stripped, he was anointed with a viscous earth, which was then overspread with powdered gold in such wise that the chief was covered with this metal from head to foot. He was then placed on a balso provided with a great quantity of gold and emeralds, which he was to offer to his god. Arriving at the middle of the lake, which was surrounded by a vast multitude of men and women, shouting and playing on musical instruments of various kinds, he made his offering by throwing into the lake all the treasure which he had at his feet. After this ceremony was over he returned to the shore, where, amid acclimation, music and rejoicing, he was received as their legitimate lord and prince.

From this ceremony, our author continues, "was derived that name, so celebrated, of 'El Dorado,' which has cost so many lives and so much treasure. It was in Peru that this name Dorado was first heard. Sebastian Belalcazar, having met near Quito an Indian from Bogota, who told him about the Gilded Man just described, exclaimed: 'Let us go in search of that gilded Indian.'" Hence the report of El Dorado was spread throughout Castile and the Indies, and Belalcazar was moved to go in quest of him as he did, and hence also the cause of that celebrated meeting with Quesada and Federmann, which constitutes one of the most thrilling and dramatic chapters in the history of the conquest of New Granada.

The fact that only a few years after the arrival of Belalcazar at Bogota the Spaniards began to make efforts to secure the gold and precious stones which, according to tradition, were cast into the sacred lake of Guatavita by the Gilded King, is evidence that the statements of Fresle and other contemporary writers regarding the connection between this lake and El Dorado are substantially true. For more than three centuries attempts were made to drain the lake, with a view of securing the priceless treasures which were supposed to be spread over its bottom; but the success which attended the efforts of those who had the matter in charge was only partial. There were never sufficient funds available to complete the work of drainage until a few years ago, when the attempt was again made by some Englishmen, who are still engaged in the undertaking. But a number of gold objects were found, among them some interesting figurines, which confirmed many people in the belief they had before entertained regarding the existence of untold amounts of gold and precious stones at the bottom of the lake, the offerings of El Dorado to his god before the Spanish conquest, and convinced them of the accuracy of the accounts of the early chroniclers regarding the ceremonies performed here centuries ago, in which the Gilded Man was the chief actor.

At the time of the arrival of the conquistadores in South America three different reports were in circulation among the Indians regarding the mysterious personage whom the Spaniards, from the descriptions given of him by their informants, agreed in calling El Dorado, an abbreviation for el hombre o rey dorado—the Gilded Man or King. That they should have heard of him in different places widely separated from one another is not surprising when we remember that the Indians of Darien and Costa Rica, long before Francisco Pizarro's advent in Peru, were aware of the wealth and the power of the Incas in the remote south. And that there should have been different accounts regarding the character and place of abode of this marvelous savage is what might have been expected by one who knows how prone Indians are to exaggerate or to modify what they have heard, so as to suit their own fancy. The same may in a measure be said of the Spaniards also. After the successes achieved by their countrymen in Mexico and Peru, and after the millions of treasure which had been found in the lands of the Aztecs, Chibchas and Incas, they were prepared for anything. Nothing seemed impossible, and no tale about gilded man or golden palaces was so extravagant as to be rejected as false. They were ready to give full credence to even greater fictions than the Golden Fleece or the Apples of the Hesperides, and would not have been surprised to find Ophir or Tarshish in the valleys of the Orinoco or the Amazon. The spirit of adventure and romance dominated everyone not only in the Indies but in the mother country as well. "For all this Spanish nation," writes an old chronicler, "is so desirous of novelties that what way soever they bee called with a becke only, or soft whispering voyce, to anything arising above water, they speedily prepare themselves to flie and forsake certainties, under hope of an higher degree, to follow incertainties, which we may gather by that which is past."

It was a vague and fantastic rumor like this that lured Belalcazar from Quito to the Sabana of distant Bogota, where he met Quesada and Federmann. According to the Indian from whom the Spanish chieftain received his information, the province of El Dorado was called Cundirumarca, and was not more than twelve days distant from Quito. This distance, if the Indian's statement was true, would preclude the plain of Bogota as the home of the Gilded Man, for it was impossible to reach this place in such a limited time. Besides, Cundirumarca is a Quichua word, and could not, it is asserted, have been the name of a province in New Granada, where the language of the Incas was unknown. Despite, therefore, the positive statement of Piedrahita that the motive of Belalcazar's expedition to the north was the discovery of El Dorado and the House of the Sun, it may be that the real reason was the desire on the part of Pizarro's lieutenant to cut loose from his chief and find a country of which he himself might become the adelantado. Subsequent events and the realization of his desire to be appointed governor of Popayan give color to this surmise.

Whether, however, Belalcazar misunderstood his informant regarding the location of the province of Cundirumarca, or whether he was merely looking for a pretext for escaping from Peru, where he was overshadowed by Pizarro, it is certain that the next expedition in search of El Dorado, by some considered the first genuine expedition in quest of the Gilded King, was headed for the eastern slopes of the Andes instead of for the northern plateau of New Granada. The country of the Gilded King, it was now thought, was in the vicinity of the "Land of Cinnamon," and preparations were forthwith made to add these rich lands to the possessions of the Spanish crown.

Taking to the Tall Timber.

"Sisteren and bretheren," exhorted Uncle Abraham, a recent promotion from the plow to the pulpit, "on de one side er dis here meetin'-house is a road leading to destruction, on de udder is a road gwine to hell and damnation. Which you gwine pursoo? Dar is de internal question: Which is you gwine pursoo?"

"Law, Brer Aberham," spoke sister Eliza from the back pew, "I speck I'm gwine home troo de woods!"—Lippincott's Monthly.

Demonstrated Efficiency.

"So you think your wife is qualified to help reform politics?"

"Well," replied Mr. Meekton thoughtfully, "she has made a success of home rule all right."

Keep Your Eye on that Can

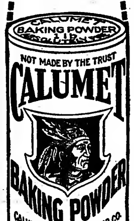
When Buying Baking Powder

For this is the baking powder that "makes the baking better."

It leavens the food evenly throughout; puffs it up to airy lightness, makes it delightfully appetizing and wholesome.

Remember, Calumet is moderate in price—highest in quality.

Ask your grocer for Calumet. Don't take a substitute.



Antidrudgery Club.

Six women in Chicago have organized a club to lessen household cares. The club is the possessor of an electric vacuum cleaner, one electric washing machine, two electric irons and a fan for drying the washing.

The only dues are those required for the upkeep of these labor savers, and this amount has been estimated to be about three cents a week. The initiation fee consists of the price of the apparatus divided into six equal parts.

The members arrange their work so that a small boy may take the apparatus around to each in turn. They live in one neighborhood, so the affair is easily arranged. How practical; how easily the idea could be explained to take in any number of housekeepers. What a help it would be in solving the servant problem.—American Club Women.

Genuine Maple Sugar.

There are few people outside the maple sugar making districts, says a writer in the Country Gentleman, who really know what the genuine article tastes like. The superior flavor thus spoken of is probably due in a degree to the same causes that make strawberries eaten off the vine and cherries consumed on the tree so delectable. The writer quoted, however, puts some of the blame for the poor flavor of commercial maple sugar on the "wily wholesale dealer and mixer."

In Pompeii.

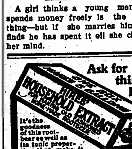
"Look at all this smashed earthenware!" exclaimed the tourist.

"Things were pretty generally shattered," replied the guide.

"I should say so! A volcanic eruption is worse than a hired girl."

A girl thinks a young man who spends money freely is the whole thing—but if she marries him and finds he has spent it all she changes her mind.

Ask for this Box



It's the goodness of this root-beer as well as its tonic properties that make it so great a favorite.

FOUNDER IS PRESENT

DR. ERICK NORELIUS SPEAKS AT SEMI-CENTENNIAL OF GUSTAVUS ADOLPHUS COLLEGE.

EBERHART AND VINCENT

Governor and University of Minnesota President on Program of Exercises at St. Peter.

St. Peter.—Gustavus Adolphus college is celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of its founding. Nearly a thousand visitors were in St. Peter to attend the semi-centennial ceremonies and prominent educators from all parts of the country are present.

Gustavus Adolphus college stands as a monument to the thrift and industry of the Scandinavians of the Northwest. Started as a parochial school at Red Wing in 1862 it has grown and prospered until it ranks among the leading sectarian educational institutions of the state.

Dr. Norelius Speaks.

Observance of the semi-centennial began when the founder, Rev. Erick Norelius of Vasa, Minn., delivered a reminiscent address in the Swedish Lutheran church. He said, in part:

"Looking back today, we are reminded that fifty years ago, counted from November, 1862, our college had its origin in a small, nameless school started at Red Wing by myself in compliance with a resolution of the Minnesota conference. Many thought that time the most unpropitious in which a school could be founded. It was a gloomy and dreadful period for all the inhabitants of our land, and particularly so for the people of Minnesota. We were then in the midst of the great Civil war. None could see how this fearfully bloody struggle was to end. And this was not all. Our poor immigrants and settlers, who had been making their homes on the western borders of our state, were in a still greater plight. Many of them had enlisted in the army as volunteers, and more had been drafted in order to meet the enemy in the South.

St. Peter a Shelter From Indians.

"But in the fall of 1862 those that remained were savagely attacked by the Sioux Indians, who rose in rebellion, burned their houses, drove away their stock and killed scores of them. The savages extended their brutal invasion far down into the county in which we are now assembled. St. Peter became a haven, and sheltered hundreds of the distracted settlers.

"Under such adverse circumstances there seemed small prospect of establishing a successful institution of learning. And yet, in that same year, a school was started from which Gustavus Adolphus college has sprung. That primitive school had no endowments, no real estate, no buildings, no name. The Swedish Lutheran church at Red Wing opened its school gratuitously, and I was its principal, its only teacher, and its treasurer. The duties of the latter were not enormous.

Immigrant Fathers Missed Schools.

"Our immigrant fathers, who left their old homes and settled in this western wilderness, could not easily forget the privileges and educational advantages to which they had been accustomed, they did not feel contented. They were, therefore, quick to realize the necessity of organizing congregations and establishing schools. At their meeting in West Union they sanctioned my undertaking, and today we have a great and prosperous institution. Its success has been due to the fact that it was placed on a sound foundation, that foundation which is described in the verse: 'The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom'."

Rev. J. A. Krantz, president of the Minnesota conference, also delivered an address at the morning service, and in the afternoon Governor A. O. Eberhart and Dr. George E. Vincent will speak. At night the members of the Lyric male chorus held their reunion.

MOVING A SCHOOL

Arrest of Priest and Five Others Does Not End Gilman Work.

St. Cloud.—Though a priest and six other men appeared before Justice Charles Bell at Sauk Rapids and, through their attorney, waived examination on the charge of unlawfully moving the schoolhouse at Gilman, Benton county, the work on this structure is progressing, a new gang having started where the old left off. The warrants were issued for Andrew Jedecka, Robert Feselt, Frank Skibu, Peter Sigmund, Rev. Joseph Dudek, Harry Spitzacki and Walter Wajeschuki. The warrants were served, but hardly had the men stopped when a new force appeared and picked up the work. The men were bound over to the grand jury under $200 bonds each.

VINCENT TO NEW ULM

"U" President Will Address High School Graduates.

New Ulm.—President George E. Vincent of the State University will deliver the principal address at the graduating exercises of the New Ulm High school, May 30. His subject will be "Playing the Game." The class honors [illegible] O. [illegible] tory, while [illegible]

U. OF M. WINS SHAM BATTLE

MINNESOTA'S "SOLDIERS" DEFEAT ST. THOMAS YOUTHS.

Wireless Brought Into Service by College Boys at Fort Snelling.

Minneapolis.—In a pitched battle where musketry roared, wireless messages flashed, and the days of Indian warfare were recalled at Fort Snelling, the University of Minnesota cadets beat back their old rivals, the St. Thomas college cadets, and assumed a position that would allow them to shell and take Fort Snelling. The chief of the real military umpires, Major Lindsay from Fort Snelling, gathered the dusty, perspiring cadet chiefs about him after the battle, complimented the St. Thomas men upon their alignment, but gave the victory, hands down, to the University of Minnesota warriors. The university men were commanded by "Colonel" Ray W. Whittier and the St. Thomas men by "Colonel" R. Scaller.

Evenly matched, with about 500 to a side, the cadets battled in a mimic warfare on grounds where a diagram similar to a letter "A" and a sunken road, which wasn't very much sunken after all, figured much as they did at the battle of Waterloo. The first thing that the regular soldiers had to do was to keep the citizenry of Minneapolis and St. Paul off the battlefield. For a time it looked as though the battle would be prevented by the onlookers who had massed themselves on the old Fort Snelling road and swarmed over the field at every opportunity.

The battle between the university men, who flew a red flag, and the St. Thomas men, who unfurled a blue flag, was one of the bitterest ever fought. For three years the two forces have contested annually on the field of battle and sought to outdo each other by the latest military tactics. The university won one year and the St. Thomas won the next. This year the "rubber" was played and the university men won.

MINNEAPOLIS MAN KILLED

By Fall From Aeroplane at Wright Brothers School.

Xenia, Ohio.—Fred J. Southard, of Minneapolis, an aviation student, fell 100 feet at the Wright aviation field near Osborn, and was killed instantly. Southard, who was 40 years old, had just bought the aeroplane from the Wright brothers.

He obtained the keys to the hangar after he had been refused permission to take the aeroplane out without further experience. He fell just six minutes after he had begun the first flight alone. His body was badly crushed.

Fred J. Southard was the head of the firm of F. J. Southard and Co., dealers in farm mortgages. He had been in business in Minneapolis for about a year. He expected to become an efficient aviator, and go into the flying business. Mr. Southard move to Minneapolis from Williston, N. D., where he had conducted a real estate office for a number of years.

Martyr to Aviation Project.

Minneapolis.—Frederick J. Southard's death was the result of a plan to establish a big aviation field and aeroplane factory in Minneapolis and to make the city an aviation center. Mrs. Southard became hysterical when informed of her husband's tragic death and a physician and two nurses were called. She later recovered her composure and told of her husband's life and of the development of his interest in aerial navigation. She had always had a premonition, she said, that he would be injured or killed making flights and had extracted repeated promises from him that he would take no unnecessary risks.

The amateur aviator who was killed owned property worth more than $100,000, and was president of the Farmers' State Bank, at West Concord, Minn.

COLD HURTS HOPPERS

State Entomologist's Representative Investigates in Otter Tail County.

Fergus Falls.—M. P. Somes, representing state entomologist's office, is looking over the country in this vicinity with a view to ascertaining whether there is going to be much damage done by grasshoppers this year. Mr. Somes says that the cold, wet weather has been unfavorable to their development, but it would have had more effect in destroying them if it had come on after they were hatched out. As it is, only a few of them are thus far hatched, and the others will come on in due season, if the summer is dry and hot. Thus far he has received only one report of the hoppers appearing in great numbers, and that was in the vicinity of Wadena. He says that arsenate of sodium sprayed on the fields will be the remedy generally adopted to get rid of them this year.

GRAIN IS MOVING.

Only 3,000,000 Bushels of Canadian Crop Left in Duluth.

Duluth.—Of the 15,000,000 bushels of bonded Canadian grain handled by local elevators this spring there is but 3,000,000 bushels left. This means that the business in Canadian grain is well cleaned up. All the grain was for export and it is being shipped out to Buffalo rapidly. It is said the [illegible] grain will be [illegible]

LINDBERGH ANNOUNCES

CHARLES A. LINDBERGH.
Congressman from Sixth District of Minnesota.

Washington.—Congressman C. A. Lindbergh of Little Falls announces his candidacy for Senator Knute Nelson's seat. United States Marshal W. H. Grimshaw says Senator Nelson will announce candidacy for re-election immediately after Chicago convention.

MEMORIAL DAY PLANS

Anoka and Champlin Prepare Attractive Joint Program.

Anoka.—Captain William H. Harris, commandant of the Soldier's home, will be the orator on Memorial day here and will be introduced by Past Department Commander P. G. Woodward. Judge A. E. Giddings will read Lincoln's Gettysburg address and Matthew F. Taylor will extend the welcome. A boys' chorus under the direction of Miss Carlotte Gilbert, will furnish music. There will be usual procession of societies, school children city official, G. A. R. ladies, J. S. Cady post and Company B, headed by the city band. Graves will be decorated, both in Champlin and Anoka and flowers strewn on the waters of the Mississippi in honor of the sailors and soldiers who sleep beneath the waters. Services will be held in Champlin in the forenoon with Rev. A. J. Oliver as orator and in the afternoon at the armory in Anoka.

CREAMERY PROFITABLE

Co-operative at St. James Adds to Equipment.

St. James.—The farmers' co-operative creamery of this city has put in an adding machine to facilitate the work of the accountant. Business has increased every year since the creamery was organized, and has now reached large proportions. The product ranks at the front of the Eastern markets.

The dairy business of this section is rapidly growing. The county has twelve co-operative creameries, all enjoying a good patronage, and it was this industry that kept the country in good shape in the wet years from 1902 to 1908, when field crops were poor.

The farmers are becoming convinced that in their golden butter they have a richer mine of wealth than is to be found in the wilds of Alaska.

NEW ULM MAN SUICIDES

Indian Siege Veteran, Aged 79 Years Ends Life by Shooting.

New Ulm.—John Fraas, a veteran of the Civil war and one of the defenders of the New Ulm in the attack by the Indians in 1862, committed suicide by shooting himself in the right temple with a revolver while sitting on the porch of his home. It is believed he was despondent. He was a widower, aged seventy-nine years.

ROB COOK POSTOFFICE.

Posse on Trail of Men Suspected of Blowing safe and Taking $1,800.

Duluth.—Armed with repeating rifles, a squad of officers from Duluth headquarters went to Adolph, a small station on the Duluth, Missabe & Northern, a few miles above Proctor, in search of two men who robbed the postoffice at Cook, Minn. The entire front of the safe was blown out with nitro glycerine. The thieves made their escape with $1,800 in cash and stamps.

Strike Held in Abeyance.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The report of the Freight Handlers' union of the Twin Cities, maintain the utmost secrecy regarding the possibility of a strike in the Twin Cities. P. J. Flannery of Chicago, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Freight Handlers, said that the order calling out the union men of Minneapolis and St. Paul in sympathy with the men in Chicago was being held in abeyance temporarily. It was reported that the action withholding the order to strike was taken so as to learn the sentiment that prevailed here.

"Lumber Trust" Suit Begun.

Chicago, Ill.—The taking of evidence was begun in the prosecution of the Northwestern Association of Retail Lumber Dealers, the lumber trust. Suit for injunction was filed by the government, accusing the organization of alleged restraint of trade. Government counsel first took up the examination of correspondence between secretaries. The government is represented by Clark McKercher and Frank H. Watson, special counsel [illegible]

VENICE A CITY OF DREAMS

Many Charms for the Tourist in This Picturesque City of Italy.

To the wanderer in Italy, Venice has a peculiar attraction. Arrive there at sunset, or better still by moonlight, and you will fancy yourself transplanted to some city of dreams. With daylight this feeling may wear off to some extent, although there is never, at any time, as much bustle and stir in Venice as in other towns. Morning, noon or night, Venice has a fascination all her own. This is partly due to the fact that she is a city built on the water.

To explore Venice and to become intimately acquainted with her, a gondola is not a necessity, rather it is a luxury for sunset evenings and moonlight nights. It is a delightful experience, and not a difficult one, to find one's way about Venice on foot; quaint, old world corners are discovered, bits of ancient architecture, carved doorways and little bridges, with a feast of color here, there and everywhere. Apart from all the beauty of scenery, there is the enthralling interest evoked by her history and traditions.

Among the traditions we read that St. Theodore was the first patron saint of Venice, to be superseded later on by St. Mark. The wanderer in Venice becomes familiar with the Lion of St. Mark. More prominently than anywhere is it to be seen on one of the columns on the Piazzetta, whilst on the other is St. Theodoro. These columns of beautiful red and gray granite are supposed to have come originally from Syria. They were erected by a Lombard engineer.—Christian Science Monitor.

"Silent Actors" Not Silent.

Ten-cent grand opera is fast nearing a reality.

A patent was granted last week to C. Milton of London, Eng., for combining a phonograph and a moving picture machine, so that they will operate in absolute harmony.

As soon as this patent is placed on the market, it will in all probability mean that moving picture shows will soon have phonographs in their houses, and will reproduce the words or songs of the now "silent actors" at the same time that the film is being projected on the screen.

To Revive House Plants.

Charcoal and a small quantity of potash mixed to a fine powder and fed to the roots twice a week for a few weeks will revive a drooping or dying house plant. This seems to act as a tonic and has been tried several times with good effect. In less than a month's time the plant will take on new life and flourish vigorously if all the necessary elements are not out of the soil.

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

In Use For Over 30 Years.

Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

As to Coping.

"Drink is the worst evil with which we have to cope."

"Yes, and isn't it remarkable that so many people insist on coping with it regularly?"

The Flat That Failed.

Howell—How do you like your new home?

Powell—It is a flat failure.

Taught by Experience.

Okes—Is there a green grocer near here?

Owens—No; they're all "wise."

Beware of Spring's sudden changes; keep Garfield Tea at hand. Drink hot on retiring.

A man never complains of his wife's relations—if she hasn't any.

Beauty—real beauty—is more than skin deep. No cosmetic in the world can give the wholesome color, the bright eyes, the clear, transparent skin that is the natural result of pure blood, proper diet and hygienic habits of daily life.

It sounds easy and it is easy for a woman to have the beauty which health alone can give. A safe and efficient tonic if the blood is weak, thin or impure (Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are especially recommended), the avoidance of foods which will cause eruptions, and regular bathing of the skin. That is all and it is the only way. Most ladies, and especially young mothers, will be interested in the following statement:

"After my baby was born," says Mrs. Etta Estes, of No. 333 South Lawndale street, Kansas City, Mo., "I did not gain in strength as I should have. I did not have any color and kept losing in flesh until I was almost a skeleton. I had severe headaches and pains in the side, arms and shoulders. I finally gave up the doctor's treatment in order to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They helped me immediately and I became stronger each day, soon got a better color and am now in the best of health. I am convinced that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do all that is claimed for them and advise any woman who is suffering as I did to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at once and not wait another day."

Write to the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Box 176, Schenectady, N. Y., for a free booklet, "Plain Talks to Women." It is an outspoken but perfectly proper little book and should be read by every woman and growing girl. A free sample of the new laxative "Pinklets" will also be sent you. Should you be unable to obtain Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in your locality they will be sent postpaid on receipt of price, fifty cents per box, six boxes for $2.50.

Best Business Creator.

As a business creator, what is there better than advertising? Have you ever asked that question of yourself? The millions that advertising has made for merchants are uncountable, yet there are business men who even now don't believe in advertising, just as there are people who still think it is safer and more convenient to travel in a prairie schooner behind a pair of slow oxen than in a Pullman palace car. Yet this type of business man is seldom rated in commercial rating books.—Exchange.

Their Happiness.

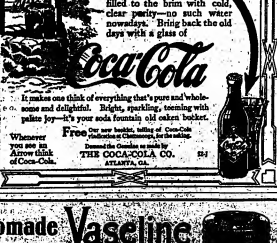
"How about that newly-married deaf mute couple next door to you? Do they seem happy?" "Unspeakably."—Boston Transcript.

The most stubborn costiveness yields, gently and naturally, to the persuasive action of Garfield Tea.

Perseverance may be the mother of success, but the offspring isn't always just what it should be.

DO YOU HAVE CREAM TO SELL? Write MIDSVOLD CREAMERY CO., Minneapolis, for prices and tags. They guarantee return of cans and satisfaction to you for every shipment.

But a man who leads a double life never does two men's work.



The Old Oaken Bucket filled to the brim with cold, clear purity—no such water nowadays. Bring back the old days with a glass of Coca-Cola

It makes one think of everything that's pure and wholesome and delightful. Bright, sparkling, teeming with palate joy—it's your soda fountain old oaken bucket.

Free Our new booklet, telling of Coca-Cola vindication at Chattanooga, for the asking.

Whenever you see an Arrow think of Coca-Cola.

Demand the Genuine as made by THE COCA-COLA CO. ATLANTA, GA. 52-J

Pomade Vaseline

A choice dressing and preservative for the hair. Highly refined, delicately perfumed.

Checks dandruff and keeps scalp in healthy condition.

Pomade Vaseline is put up in attractive bottles and in collapsible tubes. Insist on Pomade VASELINE.

[illegible]

Chesebrough Manufacturing Company

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

The Farmer's Son's Great Opportunity

Why wait for the old farm to become your inheritance? Begin now to prepare for your future prosperity and independence. A great opportunity awaits you in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, where you can secure a Free Homestead or buy land at reasonable prices.

Now's the Time —not a year from now, when land will be higher. The profits secured from the abundant crops of Wheat, Oats and Barley, as well as cattle raising, are causing a steady advance in price. Government returns show that the number of settlers in Western Canada from the U. S. was 50 per cent larger in 1910 than the previous year.

Many farmers have paid for their land out of the proceeds of one crop.

Free Homesteads of 160 acres and pre-emptions of 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. Fine climate, good schools, excellent railway facilities, low freight rates; wood, water and lumber easily obtained.

For pamphlet "Last Best West," particulars as to suitable location and low settlers' rate, apply to Sup't of Immigration, Ottawa, Can., or to Canadian Gov't Agent.

Chas. Pilling, Clifford Blk, Grand Forks, N.D.
J. M. MacLachlan, Box 197, Watertown, S.D.
E. T. Holmes, 315 Jackson St., St. Paul, Minn.
Geo. A. Hall, 125 2d St., Milwaukee, Wis.

LIVE STOCK AND MISCELLANEOUS

Electrotypes

IN GREAT VARIETY FOR SALE AT THE LOWEST PRICES BY WESTERN NEWSPAPER UNION

521-531 W. Adams St., Chicago

DAISY FLY KILLER placed anywhere, attracts and kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts all season. Made of metal, can't spill or tip over; will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Sold by dealers or 6 sent prepaid for $1.

HAROLD SOMERS, 150 DeKalb Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

THE NEW FRENCH REMEDY. No.1, No.2, No.3. THERAPION Used in French Hospitals with GREAT SUCCESS, CURES KIDNEY, BLADDER DISEASES, PILES, CHRONIC ULCERS, SKIN ERUPTIONS—EITHER SEX. Send address envelope for FREE booklet to DR. LE CLERC MED. CO., HAVERSTOCK RD., HAMPSTEAD, LONDON, ENG.

UNIFORMS as made by us represent the highest standard in the art of uniform making. Don't place your order until you have received our catalogue and samples, state kind wanted. GEORGE EVANS & CO., Dept. X, 132 N. 5th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

640 A. IN SASK., CAN., NEAR CARLYLE; 250 a. cult.; excellent prairie farm; all conveniences; will sacrifice. Ad. HEWITT, Box 319, Chicago.

359 A. NR. WESTBOURNE, MAN., CAN.; 300 a. cult.; new 8 r. dwell., 2 gran., stock, mech., etc.; everything complete. Buck, Box 319, Chicago.

160 A. IN STUTSMAN CO., N. D., NR. JAMESTOWN; all cult. [illegible] barn, outbldgs., stove, etc. will [illegible] Box 319, Chicago.

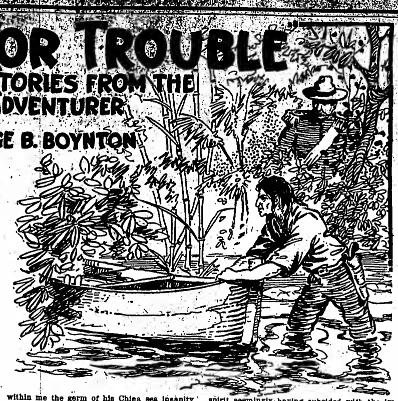
PATENTS [illegible] Washington, D.C.

LOOKING FOR TROUBLE

BEING SOME REAL STORIES FROM THE LIFE OF A MASTER ADVENTURER

By CAPTAIN GEORGE B. BOYNTON

Captain George B. Boynton



DURING the Franco-Prussian war, which ended in the capitulation of the French at Sedan, September 1, 1870, I had three ships busy with honest cargoes, but I did not get a chance to do any contraband running until just before its close. Under fire of the guns at Trieste I ran out a cargo of guns, which I delivered to the committee of safety at Bordeaux only a few days before the battle of Sedan. Shortly after this I placed the Leckwith and my other ships in the hands of Nickell & Co. for charter and sailed for New York.

The first word that reached me on my arrival was that my wife, who had sailed ahead of me, was seriously ill at her old home in Illinois. I went to her at once and remained at her side until the end, three weeks later.

When I returned to New York after the funeral I was greatly depressed and was in a mood for anything that offered excitement. A few days later I met Frank (Francis Lay) Norton. Knowing each other by reputation, we soon became friends. Later we became partners in some of the most gloriously exciting exploits in which I have been fortunate enough to participate. Norton was a natural born pirate, and he looked the part.

When I first met him he was wild about the China sea, where he had spent several thrilling years and made several fortunes, but I heard so much of Venezuela and of Guzman Blanco that my heart was set on going there before I undertook to explore any other strange lands. The upshot of our many discussions was that I sent Norton to London to take command of the Leckwith until I was ready to join him, when it was agreed we should go out in the yacht to his beloved China sea.

After Norton's departure I bought the small fore-and-aft schooner-yacht Juliette, fitted her out at New London, Conn., for a six months' cruise and started for Bermuda to test her seaworthiness, with Lars Lorensen as sailing master, formerly of the Leckwith, and a brave and loyal Norseman. Guzman Blanco was not at St. Thomas, so we went on to Curacao, always a revolutionary rendezvous, and there, in the latter part of December, I met Guzman and General Pulgar, his chief of staff. Guzman, after many exciting political and military ups and downs, was planning an invasion of Venezuela against the Monagas faction, then in power.

After he had studied me, asked all sorts of questions and apparently satisfied himself that I could be relied on, Guzman told me, in a general way, of his plans and asked me to secure for him 3,000 old Remington rifles and 500,000 cartridges and deliver them as quickly as possible at Curacao.

Some two months later I arrived at Curacao, where, instead of Guzman Blanco, I found General Ortega, who was with Guzman when I first met him and seemed to be fully in his confidence. Ortega handed me a note, bearing what purported to be the signature of Guzman, which directed me to deliver the cargo at a place to be indicated by Ortega, and stated that payment for it would be made on my cabin table. I showed the signature to two men who knew Guzman well, and both pronounced it genuine. I had no suspicion that anything was wrong and took this precaution simply as a matter of ordinary business sense.

Ortega directed me to deliver the cargo at Tucacas point, about one hundred miles west of La Guayra, and, on arriving, Ortega went ashore and returned with a request that I order off the hatches and start the unloading of the cargo in my boats and then go ashore with him and get my money. This was not in accord with my contract with Guzman or with the note Ortega had handed me, but I had great confidence in Guzman and did not wish to offend him. As soon as the unloading was well under way I went ashore with Ortega. We climbed the bluff and walked half a mile inland to a mud-thatched hut before which a sentry was pacing. Ortega gave the countersign and we stepped inside, to find General Pulgar, who was chief of staff for Guzman when I was introduced to him, wrapped in a chinchora and smoking in a hammock. He explained evasively that he was there instead of Guzman, but when I asked him for my money he smiled and straightened up.

"I told Ortega to deliver that message to you," he said, "but there is no use mincing words and I may as well tell you that you are my prisoner. Your cargo is being taken care of and will be put to a very different purpose from that which you expected. As I have said, you are my prisoner, but I have an offer to make you. It can't make much difference to you whether you serve Guzman or me. If you will join my forces I will make you a colonel and give you command of a battalion, and when the revolution is over I will pay you for your rifles, just as Guzman agreed to do."

I again inquired where Guzman was, but a shrug of the shoulders was the only answer I could get to questioning along that line. Not knowing so much about Venezuelan revolutions then as I did later, I could not fathom this strange situation to my entire satisfaction, but it was my guess that in some way Pulgar had become arrayed against Guzman, and it turned out that I was right.

I told Pulgar that I would give him an answer in the morning and spent the night with Ortega, under guard. I tried to draw him out, but, evidently according to orders, he would not even talk about the weather.

At sunrise we went to see Pulgar. When asked for my decision I inquired what the result would be if his revolution failed.

"Then I am sorry, my dear captain, but you will lose your cargo, while I will lose my life, which is of infinitely more importance to me. But the revolution will not fail!" he vehemently declared.

As though impressed by his confidence, I announced that I would accept his offer, with a mental reservation to escape at the first opportunity, for I did not propose to fight against Guzman.

"That is excellent," he said, with the suggestion of a bow. After coffee I went with him to inspect his troops. I was formally given command of a battalion of 300 men, and an Indian servant, who, I afterward found, had orders to shoot me if I attempted to escape, was assigned to me. I accompanied Pulgar back to his headquarters, where I was given an old sword and the tarnished shoulder straps of a colonel, these constituting my uniform.

"Now that you have allied yourself with my forces," he then said, "you will have no use for your ship. You will therefore write a note to the officer in charge, directing him to proceed to Curacao and await orders. She will be safe there and," with a quizzical smile, "you will be safe here."

As there was nothing else for me to do, I complied with it at once.

I had been trying for about a week to whip my lazy, ignorant troops into some sort of shape, when word was brought in one morning that "the enemy" was approaching.

Instead of allowing me to lead my battalion, Pulgar ordered me to remain with him on a little knoll in the rear, from which he made a pretense of directing his forces.

I will say for them, though, that they fought hard and stubbornly, but they were gradually driven back, and Pulgar, who had a terrible temper, was furious. All at once the opposing troops were largely reinforced and came with a rush which quickly converted our orderly retreat into a rout. Pulgar, cursing like a madman, dashed into the disorganized mass of his liberty-loving louts, with Ortega and the rest of his staff at his heels.

I was left alone and was hesitating as to what I should do, when my Indian servant tugged at my trousers-leg.

"Follow me, colonel!" he said. "I know where there is a boat."

He started off at a run and covered ground so fast that I had to gallop my horse to keep up with him. He led the way to the beach near where my cargo had been landed and pushed a native boat from under a clump of mangrove trees. We jumped in and shoved off in a hurry, for Ortega and several of his men had just appeared on the bluff above and were making for us.

We drifted around for three days and nights without so much as a glimpse of a distant sail and without an ounce of food or a mouthful of water, save only such as we were able to suck out of our clothes after a providential rain the second night. On the morning of the fourth day a fog lifted, and close to us was a fleet of fishermen from the island of Oruba, twenty miles to the westward of Curacao. They took us to their island, and after we had rested and eaten for two days a fishing boat took us to Curacao.

There I learned from Consul Faxon what had happened in Venezuela. Guzman's plans had worked out more rapidly than he anticipated, and he landed in Venezuela early in February at the head of a small force, but with a large army waiting for him. With only slight resistance he entered Caracas and proclaimed himself dictator. His victory was so easily achieved and was so largely a personal one that he did not give to Pulgar the reward to which he considered himself entitled, and Pulgar immediately started a new revolution.

When I told Faxon how I had been imposed on and impressed into Pulgar's service he advised me to tell Guzman the whole story. I went on the next steamer, which also carried a letter from Faxon, in which he told Guzman the precautions I had taken to verify the signature to the order Ortega had given me.

I called on Guzman after I knew he had received Faxon's letter and was welcomed with marked cordiality. "Tell me your whole story," he said, "but let me assure you it is believed before it is told." His face took on an ugly look when I told him how Ortega had tricked me with the forged order, and he interrupted me to say that he had sent an officer to Curacao to await the Juliette and direct me to deliver the arms at La Guayra. This officer's failure to get to me in advance of Ortega had not been satisfactorily explained and had, Guzman said, been severely punished. It was evident that he suspected collusion between his agent and Ortega.

When I had finished Guzman told me he was surrounded by men whom he either suspected or hesitated to trust. He wanted a man whom he could rely on implicitly to watch for evidences of treachery among those around him, and he was kind enough to say he thought I was the man he had been looking for. He asked me to remain in Caracas for an indefinite time, to mix freely with his followers and ascertain who could be trusted.

I had been with Guzman Blanco for about a year after he proclaimed himself dictator of Venezuela, February 14, 1871, when I began to grow restless again. This was in no sense due to any fault I had to find with Guzman. He had treated me with every mark of friendship and had proved, time and again, that I possessed his entire confidence. But under his strong hand things were settling down to a humdrum, and with my whole nature clamoring for a change to more strenuous scenes I put the situation up to Guzman and secured his permission to go away, on the promise that I would return within six months. I summoned the Juliette from Curacao and set sail for England, for the double purpose of securing a cargo of arms with which to add to the joy of [illegible] in Central America and of [illegible] within me the germ of his China sea insanity that it was taking root.

We stopped at St. Thomas, that haven of thieves, blacklegs and revolutionists, and there I met General Baez, brother and minister of war to Buenaventura Baez, the president of Santo Domingo, and one of the most interesting characters the romantic West Indies have produced.

He knew of my association with Guzman Blanco and at once approached me with a proposition that I go to Santo Domingo to aid his brother in the troubles he foresaw. I told him that, if I could get an extension of leave from Guzman I would consider any practical plan that promised excitement.

We went on to London, where I learned that Norton was in the Mediterranean with the Leckwith, impatiently carrying general cargoes. I left word for him with Nickell & Son that I expected soon to be ready to go out east with him, took on a cargo of arms and headed for Costa Rica, where I had information that a revolution was hatching against General Tomaso Guardia.

We ran into bad weather in the Caribbean and were forced to put in at Kingston, after all, leaking badly.

When the repairs were completed the governor of the island refused to allow us to reload our cargo, as he had an intimation that the ship was not what she pretended to be. This hint, it developed later, came from Jimmy Donovan, a "sea lawyer," whom I had shipped at the last minute in the hurry of getting away from London. He made what is known on the sea as a "pier-head jump." On the fourth day I prevailed on the governor to allow us to take our cargo, but he insisted that the ship must be held, with both anchors down, until further orders. I decided that we would go out that night. Knowing me as well as he did, Lorensen laughed incredulously, thinking I was joking, for the channel through the harbor was shaped like the letter S and commanded by a fort which could, as he said, blow us out of the water without half trying.

"Just the same," I said, "we are going to sea or to hell tonight."

During the evening he greased all of the blocks so we could start on our problematical journey without any noise. The moon went down at midnight, and before it was out of sight we had one anchor up, with a muffled capstan. We were getting up the other when the harbor policeman came along. A few Bank of England notes blinded him and we got under way, with two of the ship's boats towing us and the tide helping us along. Evidently the fort had orders to look out for us, but we caught them napping, apparently, for we were almost past it when we were hailed and ordered to stop.

The next instant, without giving us a decent chance to heave to, even had we been so inclined, they whanged away at us. The second shot went clear through us, just below the waterway, and Lorensen, who was with me at the wheel, exclaimed grimly, "Here we go, captain!"

But he was mistaken, for in the darkness their gunnery was not up to the standard of British marksmanship.

We were soon under cover of the Myrtle Bank hotel and after that two ships protected us until we were far enough away so that only a chance shot could reach us.

The arms we carried were sold to the revolutionists in Costa Rica, being paid for partly in cash and partly in coffee, which I sold at Curacao. From there I returned to Venezuela and reported to Guzman Blanco, after having been away only about four months.

After Guzman's successful campaign against the rebel, Pulido, in which I served on the staff, I received another letter from Baez, urging me to come to Santo Domingo. The same mail brought a letter from Baez to Guzman, asking him to grant me leave of absence for a few months to enter his service. Guzman was flattered by this request and with his permission I went to Santo Domingo City in the spring of 1873, on the Juliette.

President Baez of Santo Domingo was short and thin and had a washed-out look, as though his skin had been faded by chemicals instead of by a three-quarters admixture of white blood. I had heard of him only as a good fighter, but that reputation I became convinced, soon after my first visit to the "palace," had been earned for him by his former friends and supporters and was in no sense the work of his own sword, at least so far as recent years were concerned.

The "army" was, in reality, not much more than an unorganized body of densely ignorant natives, who, as practically the only compensation for their supposed loyalty, were allowed to carry guns which they did not know how to use. I taught them how to march without getting in each other's way, how to handle their arms without shooting themselves, and as much discipline as they were amenable to, but I fear my efforts did not go [illegible] that even though they did [illegible] the revolutionary spirit seemingly having subsided with the improvement in the army, I took the Juliette to Halifax, N. S., in the summer of 1875, to have her decks strengthened and mounted with rapid-fire guns. We returned early in the fall to find that the smoldering revolution had burst into flame and that a large force was marching on Santo Domingo City. The president and his brother were vehemently but vainly advising each other to be brave when I reached the palace.

"What shall we do? What shall we do?" demanded the president as I entered the door.

"It strikes me that it might be a good scheme to fight," I replied, with no attempt to conceal my disgust at their attitude.

They told me there were about 3,000 men in the attacking force. We had more than 4,000 men under arms. The city had no defenses worthy the name, and I insisted that the thing to do was to go outside and fight it out in the open. The president, who had apparently regained a little of his nerve, agreed with me and, against the continued objections of his brother, we went out to meet the attacking army.

General Baez commanded our center and right, while I commanded our left flank. With the firing of the first gun he began to give way before a force that was inferior in both numbers and discipline, and fell back so rapidly that before I realized it my command was flanked and almost cut off, with the sea on one side of us and the enemy on two others and rapidly closing up the fourth.

In a few minutes I was captured, along with about a hundred men who were so numbed by fear that they could neither run nor fight and had not enough discretion to join the enemy. I was furious over the cowardice of Baez and put up the hardest fight I was capable of, with the satisfaction of putting six or eight blacks on a permanent peace basis, but, with my revolver empty and my sword broken, I was overwhelmed by the inky cloud. General Baez galloped back to the city, and he and his bewildered brother, the president, had barely time to board a small schooner and sail for Curacao before the capital was in the hands of the rebels. General Ganier d'Atoa, a tool of Pimental and Cabral, was at once proclaimed president and hailed by the populace with the customary acclaim.

Instead of being killed at once, as I had expected, I was taken to a small fort on a hill near the town, where, on the altogether false charge that I had fomented trouble and brought on civil war, I was tried by drumhead court martial and sentenced to be shot at sunrise. The verdict was, of course, dictated by revenge, and execution of it was delayed because they wished to gloat over me for a while.

This was a little the most serious predicament I had ever been in and, with the idea of taking every chance that was open to me, rather than with any distinct hope that it would be answered, I gave the grand hailing sign of a powerful secret order which I had joined while in Caracas. I thought I saw a sergeant raise his eyes, but, as he gave no further sign, I concluded that if there had been any movement it had been one of surprise and not of recognition.

I was placed in a large cell with windows opening on the courtyard, and blank walls on the three other sides.

Along about three o'clock, just as I had about made up my mind that in a couple of hours I should be due to start on an indefinite exploration, I heard a short scuffle at each end of the path the sentries were patrolling, and a gurgling noise as though a man were choking. The next moment Lorensen's voice came softly through the door:

"Are you in there, captain?"

I assured him that I was.

"Stand away from the door!" he said, and I obeyed the order with pleasurable alacrity.

Three blows with a log of crutch mahogany, taken from a pile in the courtyard, smashed in the door. Lorensen seized my arm and, led by the sergeant who had, after all, recognized the sign I had made, we climbed down a declivity back of the fort and made our way to the shore, where two boats were waiting for us.

As soon as it was day I sailed close in and bombarded the fort where my execution was to have taken place.

At Caracas I found Guzman had been elected president. He was inaugurating public improvements, and induced me to go upon a wonderful journey of exploration up the Orinoco through the unmapped interior of Venezuela. After a six months' river journey of 2,000 miles, we reached Manaos, Brazil, on the Amazon, that great river and the Orinoco having a common source. From Manaos we sailed to Rio Janeiro and from there to England on the Elbe, commanded by Captain Moir, commander of the Trent when Mason and Slidell were taken off. On the way I wrote a full report to Guzman, promising to return within a few years. At London I joined Frank Norton to start for the China sea.

SCENES IN JERICHO

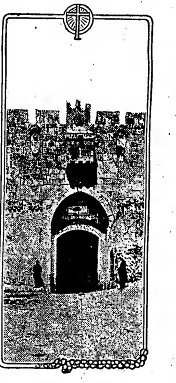
Writer Tells of Wonders in the Holy Land.

Declares Arabs, Riding on Their Camels in Quiet of Dawn, Passed Like Phantoms—Visited Grave of Lazarus.

Jerusalem.—We had come down from Jerusalem the previous morning with a correspondent, a carriage ride of four hours, and had stopped for luncheon at Jericho, or, more correctly speaking, at Riha, a little to the east of the site of the ancient city. What memories of brilliant events in Biblical history cling about this spot! Jericho, the city of palm trees; the scene of Joshua's victories; the place where the last days of Elijah were spent, and whence he went forth with Elisha to cross the waters of the Jordan, to be taken up to heaven in a chariot of fire; the spot where the two blind men were healed; the place where our Lord paid a visit to the house of Yachees. Here, too, were the long celebrated and beautiful groves and gardens given to Cleopatra by Mark Antony. Jericho now consists of a large Russian church, a house for Russian pilgrims, two hotels and the mud huts of Bedouin Arabs.

As we descended the 700 feet below Jerusalem the heat increased until we arrived in the tropical plain of Jericho under a blinding sun. First, we visited the pool of Elisha, the waters of which he had healed; then tramped through the ruins of the Jericho of the Israelites, where we saw part of the city walls around which Joshua and his army marched seven times. After its capitulation Joshua pronounced a curse on the city, which was fulfilled. Very recently excavations have been made here by the Germans and the Austrians.

The only sound we heard as we rolled along the sandy soil past clusters of thorn bushes was the tinkle of the sleighbells around the horses' necks. Straight ahead, at intervals, we could discern a dark moving mass on the road, and as we approached a party of Arabs would step aside, all wrapped closely in their cloaks, with staffs in their hands. At another time the dark moving mass would prove to be a caravan of camels moving noiselessly along with their heavy burdens. Daylight came slowly, for the morning was misty. The outlines of the hills were slowly being defined by the rising sun with a deep purple over their western slopes. Then did I realize why artists so often paint them shrouded in that color; and why the Psalmist would utter the hope and the longing of nations, "I will lift up mine eyes to the everlasting hills whence my hope cometh."



St. Stephen's Gate.

Arabs, riding on their camels along the mountain roads in the all-pervading quiet of the dawn, with the gorgeous purple hills and the deep blue sky for a background, passed like phantoms, like dream-pictures one used to imagine when stories were told in childhood.

Since that day the whole Scripture narrative has been wonderfully vivified; the abiding peace and beauty of the hills have a sense of sheltering presence over man and beast.

About half way back to Jerusalem we stopped to rest the horses at a khan where once stood the inn of Good Samaritan fame. Nearer to Jerusalem we alighted at Bethany and went down into the grave of Lazarus, carrying lighted candles. The ruins of the house of Simon, the leper, are near by; as is a part of a wall of the house of Martha and Mary. Passing strange it seems that Mohammedans should have the custody of these places, as well as of a few in Jerusalem itself.

Yes, "go to Jericho," but be sure to come back again.

THE SUNBEAM.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

VOL. XII. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, JUNE 7, 1912. NO. 11.

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

Sarsfield Aboo Heard Call of Wild

NEW YORK.—To the unspeakable amazement of James Ford, a veteran cab driver, his veteran horse, Sarsfield Aboo, nineteen years old, ran away the other afternoon. The amazement of Ford was shared by his fares, Mr. and Mrs. William Haynes and Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Jones of Slatington, Pa., who had engaged Ford and his rig at the Liberty street ferry because of the demure appearance and deliberate gait of the aforesaid Sarsfield Aboo.

Incidental to the runaway the visitors from Slatington, Pa., were the cynosure of all eyes and the assailants of all ears along Fifth avenue from Eighth street to Fourteenth street. At the latter point Policemen Delehenty and Herrington leaped upon Sarsfield Aboo and bore him to the pavement to the utter destruction of their new uniforms and the accumulation of bruises, sprains and contusions which gained them the unsolicited sick leave of a department surgeon.

James Ford was sitting on the box of his weatherbeaten cab at the Liberty street ferry when the Slatington visitors approached him and evinced a desire to be transferred to the Grand Central station in time to catch a train for Millwood, N. Y.

"Clack-clack-clack," sounded the ample hoofs of Sarsfield Aboo on the wet and shiny pavements until Eighth street and Fifth avenue was reached. At that crossing Jehu Ford endeavored to urge Sarsfield Aboo across the car tracks ahead of an automobile proceeding from east to west.

The automobile struck the rear right wheel of the cab and swung it about so violently that Ford was jarred from his seat and fell sprawling to the street. With a loud honk of the horn the automobile sped west and Sarsfield Aboo, elevating his head and tail, sped north.

Feeling the call of the wild or something, Sarsfield Aboo extended himself with every jump, until stopped by the aforesaid guardians.

David Harum "Out Harumed" in Chicago

CHICAGO.—When Samuel Baker, 1106 South Wood street, had to knock down part of his barn and rebuild it to get back on its feet a horse which he had recently purchased he decided that he had been swindled by one Harry Goldstein, 1024 South Robey street, and brought suit against him.

How David Harum was out-Harumed was shown at the hearing before Municipal Judge Dolan. The horse had been guaranteed to be able "to lie down and get up." According to Baker, the animal could lie down, all right, but getting it back on its feet again was like moving the Alps.

Baker testified that he had tried the horse for one day, but had neglected to test it on the "lying down" proposition. He said he returned the horse to Goldstein and, after some dickering, in which the purchase price was reduced from $125 to $80, the deal was closed.

When he placed the animal in his stable for the night, the horse lay down. It still was lying down when Baker went to the stable the next morning. Baker pulled and tugged and tugged and pulled at the halter, but in vain. Assistance was summoned, props were placed under the prostrate animal and impromptu derricks were tried. It was of no use. Every time the horse was raised a few inches it fell back harder and was imbedded deeper in the straw.

"I couldn't budge him," Baker told the court. "The horse lay there sort of helpless. Finally we had to knock out part of the barn and drag him out."

Sells Flies, Dodges Boxcar for a Bed

CLEVELAND, O.—The 10 cents a hundred that the city pays for dead flies enabled Harry Carmine, a Chicago tinner, to pay for a bed in a "flop house" the other night, instead of sleeping in a box car, as he had done the night before.

Carmine called at the municipal fly bureau at the city hall shortly before it closed and inquired if it were true that the city paid 10 cents a hundred for dead flies. Being assured that was the truth, he departed and returned in a short time.

"This isn't any kid, is it?" he inquired.

"We pay 10 cents a hundred for the bodies of flies," Miss Florence Dueringer, in charge of the bureau, replied.

"Well, here is a bunch then," said Carmine. "I'll be back tomorrow with a cigar box full."

"I got in here from Chicago Wednesday night in a box car. It was mighty cold, too.

"I came down town early and started out in hunt of work. There was nothing doing, and at noon I sat down to rest in one of the shelter houses on the square. I picked up a paper and read where they was paying 10 cents a hundred for dead flies.

"I said to myself. 'Here is where Harry sleeps between the sheets this evening.'

"I went to a saloon and asked if they would allow me to catch flies in the front window. They told me to get out, and I tried a butcher shop with the same result.

"I then went to two or three of the market houses. Luck was better, and I had a whole handful of flies when I hunted up the city hall. It was hard work, though."

Boy Five Years Old is Heavy Weight

YOU BET
SOON BE AS BIG AS YOUR POP, WONT YOU BILL?

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—"Bill Coulter, aged five years, weight 110 pounds, was at the Union depot here on his way from his home at Springdale, Ark., to St. Joseph, Mo., to enter a hospital. Bill was accompanied by his father, R. R. Coulter, a farmer in Arkansas. The boy is troubled with softening of the bones, and his legs have bent under his weight to such an extent that he can hardly walk.

"How do you feel this morning, Bill?" his father asked him.

"Pop, I feel big enough to whip a man," he answered. And "Bill" doubled up his fist in "white hope" style.

"How much did Bill weigh when he was born?" was the question put to the father.

"Only nine pounds," he said, "and he didn't grow much until he was six months old. Then, when he was a little over a year old he weighed 37 pounds; when he was two and a half he weighed 67. In the last three years he has gained 43 pounds. Bill is a heavyweight all right, arn't you, Bill?"

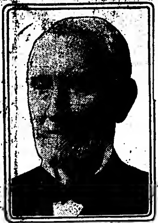
"You bet," "Bill" said.

"Bill" was born and reared in Grand Junction, Colo. He has lived in Arkansas for nine months. It took him five months to get acclimated, and in the time since he has gained ten pounds—and is still growing.

"Bill's weight was so great that his legs couldn't support him," his father said, "and we had to put braces on him when he was three years old. He wore them out and for the last eight months he hasn't had any. That is the reason his legs are bowed so now. We are going to a hospital to have them straightened."

In the PUBLIC EYE

UNCLE JOE, 76, STILL YOUNG



"Uncle Joe" Cannon celebrated his seventy-sixth birthday at Washington the other day under a cloud of grief.

The night before he exultantly announced that he was going to observe the day by dissipating wildly. A circus was in town and he was going to take the afternoon and, if necessary, the evening off and go to see the lions and tigers and the hippograffe and the beautiful lady acrobats and the hair-raising trapezists.

Instead of that he went meekly up to the home of Congressman Weeks, of Massachusetts, with his daughter and spent the evening decorously there.

"Thought you were going to the circus," a reporter said to him.

"I was," said Uncle Joe, "but it rained. And in the course of seventy-five—I mean seventy-six—years of quiet and irreproachable life I have found that whenever it rains and I go to a circus I always get wet."

"I suppose you got a lot of congratulations?"

"Yes," said the ex-speaker, reflectively. "Quite a number of people came up to me and congratulated me on being a year nearer the grave. Funny thing to congratulate a man on. Don't you think so? But they meant it kindly."

SULTAN A MEDIATIZED RULER

On March 30, France inaugurated a change in her political dealings with Morocco, by the signing of a treaty with the Sultan, Mulai-Abd-el-Hafid, establishing a French protectorate. France has had much experience in the government of the North African countries, which line the Mediterranean from Tripoli to the Atlantic ocean, and the decision to leave the government nominally in native hands is a wise one. It is evidently based on the success of her peaceful conquest of Tunis where the externals of Arab rule have been preserved. In Algeria, on the other hand, where the administration is directly and openly French, her domination aroused the bitter jealousy and hostility of the natives who saw in the elimination of their native rulers a threatened subversion of the Mahommedan religion, with the result that France has had to maintain her footing by rigorous military rule. Mulai Hafid, the present Sultan and nominal ruler of Morocco, is known to his subjects as the Prince of True Believers and is the thirty-sixth lineal descendant of Ali, uncle and son-in-law of the Prophet Mahomet.

GOV. WEST TRUSTS CONVICTS

"The only honor lacking in the average criminal is that which is wrenched from him by incivility, distrust and inhumanity. Extend to a convict the courtesy, confidence and trust due him as a man and he will respond with more honor than the average person who has never seen the bars, the dungeon or the dismal gray walls of a penitentiary."

Basing his action on this bit of philosophy, Gov. Oswald West of Oregon recently threw open the barred doors of the Oregon state penitentiary and turned more than 200 convicts out into the inviting forests and fields to serve the remainder of their terms without guards, stripes, chains or stockades.

With one sweep the dungeon, the dark cell, the striped suits, the ball and chain and the gallows were wiped out as unnecessary parts of the institution and in their stead was established a unique and revolutionary honor system. Since the first wholesale liberation convicts have been added to the list as they have proven eligible until the total number today is about 500. Honor is the only guard over fifteen convict camps which are maintained permanently in various parts of the state.

The men are engaged in building roads, operating rock quarries and clearing land.

VICE-PRESIDENT OF BIG SHOW

Reuben B. Hale, the vice-president of the Panama-Pacific International exposition, to be held in San Francisco in 1915, celebrating the completion of the Panama Canal, was one of a special commission appointed to make a trip abroad to lay before ministers of foreign affairs and army and navy authorities, the details and scope of the enterprise. The commission sailed on the Mauretania April 24th. Mr. Hale is a well-known merchant of San Francisco, who was the first person to suggest the holding of an exposition to celebrate the completion of the Panama Canal. The commission consists of Mr. John Hays Hammond, president; Mr. Reuben B. Hale, vice-president of the Panama-Pacific International exposition; Brigadier-General Clarence R. Edwards, U. S. A.; Mr. William T. Sesnon, vice-president of the San Francisco chamber of commerce; Mr. Theodore Hardee, executive officer; Mr. Charles F. Wilson, diplomatic officer, and Mr. Archibald C. Emery, secretary. General Edwards and Admiral Staunton were detailed by President Taft to represent the army and navy.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

Real Utopia at Capital's Front Door

THIS IS THE REAL UTOPIA HALL

WASHINGTON.—It has been claimed that one can find about anything desired in Washington, from armadillos to zithers, but what resident of this fair city ever suspected that there is, almost in its very midst, a peaceful farming community, the residents of which have perfectly fresh eggs for breakfast every day in the week with never a care whether the market price is 50 cents a dozen or not?

And who ever thought, that within the shadow of the dome of the capitol, there is a community of 2,000 souls, to which even the omnipresent moving picture theater has never percolated? Who would believe that in a locality not far removed from Washington, and peopled by Washingtonians, the romantic straw ride still exists, and the historic town hall is the center of social activity? And that the quilting bee is still an accepted method of passing the long winter evenings? Where is the Utopia, where taffy pulls and lantern parties are still an accepted means of entertainment, is asked.

Well, it's easy to get there. Just get on a Columbia line car marked "District line," and ask the conductor to let you off at Sixty-first street northeast. Then follow your nose, according to the directions.

The first thing you know you are right in the heart of Utopia, town hall and all. It is Capitol Heights, Md. By all rights it should be a part of the District, for it is populated by Washingtonians, and its citizens for the most part have their business in this city.

They have real chickens in Capitol Heights, hens that lay eggs, and roosters that crow like all get out at daybreak every morning.

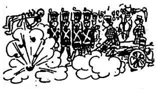
Midnight Suppers at "Manor House"

IF the "Manor House" at Randle Highlands retains its new and sudden popularity Randle Highlands will come to mean to Washington what Versailles and St. Cloud were to Paris in its palmiest days. Some of the gayest festivities of the season have taken place there, and quite the most novel and brilliant so far was that at which the naval attache of the French embassy and Viscountess d'Azy were hosts the other night. The entertainment was a dinner dance to about 300 of the most exclusive circles of the capital, and the quaint, old-fashioned manor was transformed for the night into a veritable Petite Trianon. Venetian, Japanese and Chinese lanterns formed the illumination throughout the house and on the lawns and piazzas. Cabinet officers laid aside their graver mien, diplomats exchanged the wiles of state for those of politest gallantry, and statesmen forgot their weighty burdens in order that they might be present.

At midnight supper was served—a Maryland supper of the sort partaken in the days when dancers wore knee breeches.

It is chagrin at being left out of such delightful parties as this, perchance, that has occasioned the prevalent custom in certain circles of Washington society of boldly requesting a bid of the hostess, when it becomes noised abroad that a festivity of some sort is pending. In the very beginning, perhaps, it originated with the cheerful acquiescence of the mistress of the White House to the numerous requests for an extra card for house guests to the state functions at the executive mansion. Of late, however, it has spread beyond official circles to a deplorable degree, until nowadays the hostess who is planning any private entertainment of any sort must exercise the utmost tact and diplomacy to keep her invitation list within the bounds of her limitations.

Mrs. Edward B. McLean's $50,000 Fete



A FUSILLADE of rapidly exploding dynamite mines and the sudden transformation of a miniature battlefield set with platoons of manikin soldiers into "a field of carnage," with a fully equipped corps of Red Cross nurses rushing to do service among the "wounded" was the crowning feature in a series of surprises which made the $50,000 fete Mr. and Mrs. Edward Beale McLean gave the other night one of the most astonishing and spectacular affairs ever given in Washington. Small fortresses dotted the gardens, and cavalry and cannon added to the realism of the martial picture.

Red Cross ambulances and Red Cross nurses arranged on wires charged with electricity whirled rapidly to the scenes of the several explosions, and within twenty minutes after the firing of the first mine the Italian gardens set with fifty battalions of soldiers in battle array looked like a Red Cross hospital camp in the full tide of a bloody fray.

The occasion marked the climax of a week's entertaining planned in honor of the delegates to the international Red Cross conference.

Eight hundred guests, including notables from every country in the civilized world, attended the reception, which was marked by the elegance of a court function.

Mrs. Edward Beale McLean, wearing a robe of cloth of gold, embroidered in pearls and having among her jewels the famous Hope diamond, received with Mme. Bakhmeteff, wife of the Russian ambassador and an aunt of the host. The gorgeousness of the floral decorations surpassed anything Washington has witnessed in a decade, while in the gold banquet hall stood a board set with the magnificent gold service presented to the late Thomas Walsh by the late Leopold, king of Belgium.

Try to Sing in Senate, Hustled Out

A SENSATIONAL campaign demonstration was narrowly averted in the senate the other day. Sergeant-at-Arms Ransdell received warning in time to prevent a quartet of robust voices from bursting into song in one of the public galleries.

The press agent of a music publishing house conceived the idea that it would be great advertising to have the story telegraphed into every hamlet that the august senators had listened attentively to a campaign song and then applauded it, resuming their proceedings where the tuneful voices of his quartet had interrupted them. He experienced no difficulty in gaining admission with his quartet to one of the galleries. When the leader took from his pocket a tuning fork and sounded it for the key and the singers in suppressed tones hummed preparatory to bursting into song, a senate attache warned the sergeant-at-arms that an attack was about to be made on the dignity of the senate.

Capitol policemen and detectives hastened to the gallery. A confederate of the press agent, suspecting something was about to happen, gave his associates a signal from a doorway and the singers quickly withdrew from the gallery. Employes of the sergeant-at-arms escorted the singers out of the capitol grounds.

Carrie Nation attempted to address the senate from one of the galleries several years ago, but since then there has been no encroachment on the rules of the senate, which prohibit demonstrations of any kind in the galleries.

Never give a house party when painters and decorators are at work in the house.

THE SUNBEAM.

W. G. HUNT, Publisher.

SUNBEAM. - - MINN.

MISTAKES AND MOTIVES.

The world is freer to criticise a mistake than to consider a motive. It is working the fiddle-strings of popular applause for all they are worth. The man who, refusing to play to the galleries, goes on doing the best he knows how, acting from a sincere motive, suffers some disparagement. He does not succeed often in getting the world to examine the whys and wherefores of his action, because it is not in line with what at the time the world regards as proper, says the Omaha Bee. The truth is, words are overvalued in the mart of public discussion and deeds pay the penalty of the shorts. There is too much watered stock in one and too little attention to the intrinsic value of the other. "Words are good and only so when backed by deeds." That is the maxim of the man with a motive to hinge his "mistake" upon, however unfairly some of the old friends of this truism may be treating it. An ancient wise man phrased the same principle another way: "For as he thinketh in his heart, so is he." He who moves from the standpoint of stern conviction may make mistakes, but he is a much safer man to follow than the one who trains his wireless to catch the currents of popular thought.

You can buy an almanac now for a penny or less, and a tradesman will send you one with his compliments for nothing, but the first printed specimen published at Nuremberg, in 1475, was thought such a wonderful thing that it was sold at ten golden crowns a copy—more than its weight in gold. The first English printed almanac was the "Shepheards' Kalendar," translated from the French, and printed by Richard Pynson in 1497, and the first popular almanac of the "Old Moore" type was the "Pronostycacyon of Mayster John Thybault, medycyner and astronomer of the Emperyall Majestie of tho yeare of our Lorde MCCCCCXXXIJ." Besides prophesying "wars, revolutions and the death of kings," that early almanac told you the proper day to take physic. Monday was the day for ailments of the legs, Tuesday for affections of the head, etc. But what the unfortunate sufferer was to do who had a pain on the wrong day it does not state, says the London Chronicle. You must take pains at the proper time.

That some of the men who were rescued from the Titanic were less heroic than those who went down with the ship is a moderate way of putting an unpleasant truth. Mrs. Hippech of Chicago, one of the women survivors, said that the boat in which she and her daughter was saved contained 31 women and two men, one of the latter being a Spaniard who carried a poodle dog in his arms. The women, who were rowing, asked him to take an oar and help, but he said he couldn't as he had to mind his dog.

For the first time in the history of the world, airships have been used as war machines. The Italian dirigibles which wiped out a Turkish camp by bombs dropped from above, themselves out of range, indicate what a terrible thing the war of the near future will be with all the engines of destruction made possible by new inventions and new resources.

One little German town alone does an annual business in toys aggregating $4,000,000 in value. Amusing the little ones is more of a serious business enterprise than many think. In fact, it ranks among the trades of vast proportions. And it is safe to say that its products give more solid satisfaction in the world than those of most any other manufacture.

The Swiss plumber at Zurich who has been sentenced to a year's imprisonment for fraud, because he was found to be engaged to 16 girls at the same time, apparently needed a helper if ever a plumber did. It is only natural that he should feel relieved at being sent to jail, as all the girls still want to marry him.

A Pennsylvania man lost his life in the effort to win the proud record of drinking 15 glasses of gin in one sitting. And the wits of the press find themselves deadlocked over the question whether he died in good or bad spirits.

A star boarder in Philadelphia poured hot water over his landlady when she demanded pay for his board. The remonstrance was rather novel, but naturally, the law proceeded to pour cold water on the form of his objection to pay.

We shouldn't be at all surprised to hear that the man in Portland, Ore., who has been fined $100 and sent to jail for six months for swearing over the telephone is swearing softly to himself.

SUCCESSFUL TRIAL OF BIG AIRSHIP

MELVIN VANIMAN SAILS OVER ATLANTIC CITY IN THE "AKRON."

TO CROSS THE ATLANTIC

Slight Accident Occurs, Due to Unfamiliarity of the Crew With the Guide Rope Drag.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 3.—Melvin Vaniman floated his airship Akron, in which he hopes to cross the Atlantic ocean, out of the hangar, and after circling over the meadows and bay for nearly an hour made a safe landing. After he had the great gas bag again safely stowed away in the shed he expressed himself as satisfied with the test.

Aboard, besides Vaniman were his brother, Calvin, Chief Engineer Fred Almas, Assistant George Bourritilon, Assistant Navigator Walter Guest, a mechanician, and Ralph Upsom of Akron, one of the constructors of the ship.

Vaniman had been out half an hour when an accident occurred. The dirigible performed splendidly, answering the guiding hand of the navigator instantly. Then he tried out a new guide rope experiment. A long hawser with a 100-pound weight attached was lowered and permitted to drag in the water. In some manner Calvin Vaniman made a wrong move with the propellers. The middle blade in the string of three caught in the rope. The huge craft listed and came down in a wobbly descent like a bird with a broken wing. It struck the water and a portion of the understructure went under water, damaging one of the side planes. When temporary repairs had been made the baloon went aloft once more.

Vaniman, after circling over the bay for a short time, pointed the ship toward the hangar and made a landing.

DOCTORS' CONVENTION.

Annual Meeting of American Medical Association at Atlantic City.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 3. — The sixty-third annual meeting of the American Medical association began this morning with a session of the house of delegates which President John B. Murphy of Chicago opened with a report and address. The reports of other officers and a committee followed.

Tomorrow the first session of the association will be held in the Baptist auditorium, and this is the only time the whole convention will assemble in one place. Dr. Murphy will preside and Mayor Harry Bacharach and Governor Wilson will welcome the doctors. Then the new president, Dr. Abraham Jacobi of New York, will be installed and will deliver his address. During the four days of the meeting the visitors will be entertained with banquets, smokers, vaudevilles and reunions, special events having been arranged for the ladies.

Alaska Claims Invalid.

Washington, June 3. — Secretary Fisher testified before the senate committee on public lands that not a single existing claim for mineral lands in Alaska could, under the present showing of facts, be allowed by the interior department.

Shoots Wife, Mother-in-Law and Himself.

Buffalo, N. Y., June 3.—C. E. Staples a well-to-do farmer of Angola, 20 miles west of this city, shot his wife, his mother-in-law, Mrs. M. Fillmore Brown, and then shot himself. Mrs. Brown and the murderer died instantly.

Lorimer Will Not Resign.

Chicago, June 3.—Senator William Lorimer left for Washington. Senator Lorimer reiterated the statement that he positively will not resign. The senator declined to discuss any phase of his case.

King Alfonso Condoles.

Madrid, June 3.—King Alfonso has telegraphed his condolences to Orville Wright in the death of his brother, Wilbur Wright.

Depot Looted; $125 Taken.

Clear Lake, Ia., June 3.—The Wheeler Wood depot was broken into in the night and robbed of $125.

Kansas Needs Help.

Topeka, Kan., June 3. — Kansas needs 3,000 men from outside the state to help harvest the wheat crop.

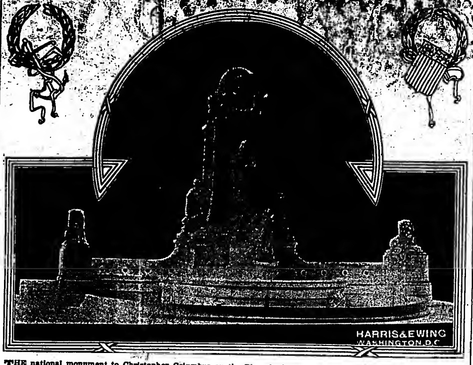
Cotton Bill Reintroduced.

Washington, June 3.—Representative Underwood, at the direction of democratic members of the ways and means committee, reintroduced the cotton tariff revision bill which was passed by the house and senate at the extra session and vetoed by President Taft.

American Teachers to Philippines.

Washington, June 3.—More than 100 American teachers have been selected by the war department for service in the Philippine islands to advance the American public school system there.

NATIONAL COLUMBUS MEMORIAL COMPLETED



THE national monument to Christopher Columbus on the Plaza in front of the Union Station at Washington is completed and will be unveiled on June 8. Ten thousand soldiers and sailors, 50,000 Knights of Columbus and 30,000 other persons are expected to take part in the parade, and President Taft and many other eminent men will participate in the ceremonies. The memorial cost $100,000, and its erection was brought about by the Knights of Columbus.

SAYS DARROW PAID

SLEUTH FRANKLIN TELLS COURT ATTORNEY GAVE HIM $5,000 TO BRIBE JUROR.

MONEY PROVIDED FOR BAIN

Declares His Agreement Was Made With Defendant Himself—Lockwood Sticks to Story on Cross-Examination—Foster in Court.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 30.—Bert H. Franklin, former chief detective for the McNamara defense, and now star witness for the prosecution in the trial of Clarence S. Darrow for alleged jury bribery, took the witness stand on Tuesday and gave his account of the alleged manner in which Darrow, then chief counsel for the McNamara brothers, and he himself attempted to bribe jurors in the trial of James H. McNamara.

Franklin explained, in answer to questions, that he had talked to Darrow about Bain on several occasions, and that Darrow knew he had been acquainted with Bain for many years.

"Tell us what was said between you and Clarence Darrow on the sixth day of October in reference to this matter," the prosecutor requested.

"I came to the office," answered Franklin, "before 12 o'clock. Mr. Darrow said: 'We have been talking the matter over and have decided that $5,000 would be a proper amount to pay the jury, for jurymen—$4,000 to go to the juror and $1,000 to myself.'

"I asked him if he wished me to see Mr. Bain along that line, and he said: 'Yes.' He asked me if I thought I could get him. I told him I thought I could."

Franklin claimed that he deposited this $1,000 to his credit at the First National bank and drew out the $500 which was paid to Mrs. Bain as the first payment for her husband's vote for acquittal. Franklin identified the deposit slip of the bank.

Earl Rogers, chief counsel for Darrow, cross-examined George N. Lockwood, the state's witness, for two hours and a half. Lockwood stood the ordeal with coolness and the attorney was not able to confuse him nor lead him into the slightest contradiction of his direct testimony.

Robert I. Foster, the detective of the National Erectors' association, appeared in court on the citation for contempt for having given an interview concerning the use of the dictagraph for gathering evidence against Darrow. Judge Hutton transferred the case to the presiding judge of the superior court for assignment to another department for trial.

GEN. BOOTH IN DARKNESS

Head of Salvation Army Probably Hopelessly Blind According to Attending Surgeons.

London, May 31.—Gen. William Booth, venerable head of the Salvation Army, is probably hopelessly blind. This was admitted by the surgeons in attendance. Both eyes are inflamed as the result of the recent operation for the removal of a cataract from his left eye, and the inflammation has affected the optic nerve.

Heads American Academy at Rome.

Princeton, N. J., June 1.—Prof. Jesse Benedict Carter, formerly of Princeton, has been appointed director of the American academy at Rome in succession to F. D. Millet, the artist who lost his life on the Titanic.

Film Makers to Combine.

New York, June 1.—A combine of 49 "independent" moving picture manufacturers and film exchanges will be incorporated here under the title of "The Universal Film Manufacturing company."

CUBAN REVOLT GROWS

GUANTANAMO IS SAVED BY 1,000 U. S. MARINES.

Men Landed From Transport Prairie As Negro Rebels Threaten Destruction of Naval Station.

Washington, May 29.—Ten thousand negroes, 3,000 of them under arms, are swarming over the eastern end of Cuba, tearing up railroads, burning plantations and threatening to massacre the white inhabitants.

The alarming spread and menacing character of the insurrection, which is now a war of races, is described in dispatches received by the state department on Tuesday.

Only the timely arrival of the transport Prairie, bearing 1,000 marines, saved the United States naval station at Guantanamo from capture and destruction by the rebels.

Against this force of 10,000 negroes is an untrained and timid Cuban force of 4,000 ill-armed men, whose inactivity is the source of bitter criticism by the department of state.

It is the intention of the United States to establish a camp of 2,400 marines at Guantanamo and to operate against the insurrection in Guantanamo province from there.

The department of state estimates the amount of American capital in peril in the eastern district of Cuba at more than $100,000,000.

NEWS FROM FAR AND NEAR

Washington, May 29.—Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, the noted authority on pure foods, is threatened with pneumonia at his residence in this city. The doctor was taken ill at his model dairy and produce farm at Bluemont, Va., on Saturday.

Des Moines, Ia., May 29.—Henry Bond, a leading manufacturer of Brattleboro, Vt., and a prominent layman in the Baptist church, was elected president of the Northern Baptist convention on Monday.

Washington, May 28.—Vice-President Sherman returned from a trip to Chicago Sunday bearing with him Senator Lorimer's refusal to tender his resignation from the senate before the coming vote to unseat him.

San Diego, Cal., May 28.—C. H. Toliver of San Francisco, dirigible airship inventor and builder, and his wife were murdered Sunday by Bert H. Lewis, former secretary to Toliver. Lewis was arrested and confessed to the crime.

Martinsville, Ind., May 28.—Four persons were killed Sunday at Centerton, near here, when their automobile went dead on the tracks of the Martinsville division of the Indianapolis, Terre Haute & Eastern Traction company and was hit by a car. The automobile was thrown into a ditch and wrecked.

Mrs. Astor Honors Capt. Rostron.

New York, June 1.—Capt. A. H. Rostron, commander of the Carpathia, upon which were rescued the 705 survivors of the Titanic, was entertained at luncheon Friday afternoon by Mrs. John Jacob Astor.

Six Hundred Freight Handlers Strike.

Minneapolis, Minn., May 30.—Acting on an order from executive committee of the International Freight Handlers' union, freight men in the Twin Cities have left work in sympathetic strike with the Chicago men.

Famous Southern Soldier Dead.

Chattanooga, Tenn., May 30.—Dr. R. S. Sloan, who was a scout in the confederate army under General Braxton Bragg, died here last Tuesday morning. He was eighty-one years old at time of death.

JOE DAWSON WINS

500-MILE AUTO RACE WON BY NATIONAL DRIVER IN 6:21:06—A WORLD'S RECORD.

BRINGS HIM OVER $30,000

Eighty Thousand Witness Event—Ralph de Palma, in a Mercedes, Lost Out by a Break-down of His Machine—Led Up to 496th Mile.

Indianapolis, June 1.—Driving a National car Joe Dawson won the 500-mile race on the speedway here Thursday. His time was 6 hours, 21 minutes, 6 seconds, and he averaged 78.72 miles an hour. A world's record for the distance on any kind of road or track. The former speedway record was 74.5 miles.

Fifty thousand of the home folks and 30,000 visitors from other cities and towns cheered the victory of the Indianapolis boy and the Indianapolis car.

Luck had something to do with the victory, for Ralph de Palma in a Mercedes was ten miles ahead of Dawson in the 496th mile. De Palma had led the parade from the tenth mile and seemed sure of victory. In fact he seemed not to have a chance to lose. But automobile racing is uncertain and with the race almost in his grasp the Mercedes car developed trouble and limped at a snail pace around the track.

Meanwhile Dawson saw his chance for glory and opulance, and drove fast but carefully. The victory meant a fortune for the boy as his winning brought him more than $30,000, including the extras. Second place with its $10,000 prize and some extras fell to Tetzloff in a Fiat.

Third place was won by Hughes in a Mercer. Much glory and $7,500 goes with this position.

Bill Endicott, assisted by his brother, won fifth place with a Schacht, another new proposition which performed remarkably well. Sixth position was taken by Fengle's Stutz.

The White car, driven by Jenkins, took seventh place after a well-run race which surprised thousands of the visitors. A Lozier, driven by Horan, took eighth place just in front of a National driven by Wilcox, which was ninth, with the Knox, driven by Mulford, in tenth position.

WILBUR WRIGHT IS DEAD

Pioneer Aviator Passes Away After a Long, Hard Struggle Against Typhoid Fever.

Dayton, O., June 1.—Wilbur Wright, the noted aviator, died Thursday of typhoid fever. Death came after an illness of about three weeks.

Wright had been lingering on the border for many days and though his condition from time to time gave some hopes to members of his family, the attending physicians, Drs. D. B. Conklin and Levi Spitler, maintained throughout the latter part of his sickness that he could not recover.

The most alarming symptoms in Wright's sickness developed Wednesday shortly before noon, when his fever suddenly mounted from 104 to 106 and then quickly subsided to its former stage.

Storm Hits New York.

New York, June 1.—A storm descended on New York at the height of the Memorial day celebration, scattering holiday crowds, breaking up ball games, spoiling Memorial services and sending water craft to cover.

Miners Fail to Agree on Scale.

Wheeling, W. Va., June 1.—The subscale committee of the miners and operators of the eastern Ohio district, affecting many thousand miners, reported to the conference Thursday that they are unable to agree.

ROOSEVELT WINS ALL

CAPTURES 28 DELEGATES IN NEW JERSEY PRIMARY.

Former President's Preference Vote Was 15,000—Wilson Leads Democrats.

Newark, N. J., May 30.—One of the most sweeping victories Theodore Roosevelt has won in the primaries since he began his campaign for the Republican nomination, was recorded Tuesday by the Republican voters of New Jersey. Complete returns show that the colonel carried every congressional district in the state, as well as the state at large, and that all the 28 delegates New Jersey will send to Chicago will be Roosevelt men.

Colonel Roosevelt's victory was one of the most crushing blows he has dealt the president since they began their contest to win state delegations through speechmaking tours.

Roosevelt's plurality over President Taft and Senator La Follette was 15,000.

On the Democratic side Governor Wilson was an easy victor, winning 24 of the 28 delegates. He had apparently lost two districts in Essex county, where he was bitterly fought by ex-State Chairman Nugent, who wanted the state delegation uninstructed. Returns from the Democratic balloting indicated that Wilson would have a majority of at least 30,000.

GENERAL WALKOUT IS FEARED

One Hundred Thousand Workmen Parade Streets of London, Making Record Labor Demonstration.

London, May 28.—The greatest labor demonstration that London ever experienced took place here on Sunday when 150,000 strikers paraded the streets of the city without coming into conflict with the police.

The parade of the men was their way of announcing that they will carry the fight of transport workers and dockers for better conditions to the bitter end and to try to blockade all the ports of England.

The Amalgamated Society of Watermen, Lightermen and Bargemen, joined by the Amalgamated Trades Labor unions and Labor Protection League, held the largest demonstration ever seen in Trafalgar square and passed resolutions in favor of a national stoppage of work.

The glut of ships in the Thames is constantly increasing.

NOTABLE DINNER IN GOTHAM

Pan-American Society Entertains Ambassadors and Ministers of All Our Sister Republics.

New York, May 29.—The first dinner of the Pan-American Society of the United States took place at the Waldorf-Astoria Monday evening.

All of the 21 independent American nations were represented at the table by their highest diplomatic officers in Washington.

Ambassador de Gama of Brazil followed Secretary Knox, and was hardly on his feet before he plunged into an attack on the United States for its action in seizing nearly a million bags of coffee belonging to the Brazilian coffee trust.

CONGRESS THANKS ROSTRON

House Passes Naval Appropriation Bill—Battleship Provision Lost—Measure Carries $119,000,000.

Washington, May 30.—Resolutions were passed by the senate conveying the thanks of congress to Captain Rostron and the officers of the Carpathia for the rescue of the Titanic survivors, and requesting the president to have a gold medal presented to Captain Rostron.

The naval appropriation bill was passed by the house.

SECRETARY J. A. ROSE DEAD

Prominent Official of Illinois Passes Away Suddenly at His Home in Springfield.

Springfield, Ill., May 30.—Secretary of State James A. Rose is dead at his home in this city. He had been ill but one day and the suddenness of his death came as a great shock to the residents of Springfield, which city has been his home for the last fifteen years.

Engineer Burned to Death.

Chicago, May 29.—In a wreck of passenger train from Elroy, Wis., within sight of the new Chicago & Northwestern station here Monday, John Fellows, engineer, was buried beneath his locomotive and burned to death.

Morgan Aids Naval Training.

London, May 23.—J. Pierpont Morgan has given $250 toward fitting out the ship which is being loaned by the admiralty for training working boys in London for the royal navy and the mercantile marine.

One Killed; Fifteen Hurt.

Seattle, Wash., June 1.—Aviator Clifford Turpin, in his initial flight at the Memorial day meet on the Meadows race course, crashed into the grand stand, killed an unknown man and injured 15 other persons seriously.

Pitcher Russell Goes to Atlanta.

New York, June 1.—Manager Mack of the Philadelphia Athletics announced Thursday that he had sold Pitcher "Lefty" Russell to Atlanta, Ga. Mack is said to have paid $12,000 to the Baltimore club for Russell.

AFTER THE GRIP PURIFY THE BLOOD

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Are the Best Blood Builder and Will Cure You as They Cured This Woman.

It is of the utmost importance to your health, if you have suffered from the grip, that you cleanse the blood of the lingering germs and put it in condition to resist disease.

After the acute attack the sufferer is left with a debilitated system, is short of breath upon the slightest exertion and is affected by every change of weather. The system is in such a weakened condition that it is powerless to resist the attack of such diseases as pneumonia and bronchitis.

This is a condition which emphatically calls for a tonic for the blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the best medicine for this purpose for they act directly on the blood which they cleanse of all impurities. They tone up the nerves and give health and strength to the debilitated system.

The debility which follows an attack of the grip can only be cured by making the blood rich and red. This Dr. Williams' Pink Pills never fail to do promptly and it explains how they cured Mrs. F. R. Boyd, of No. 607 South Ninth street, Minneapolis, Minn. She says:

"I was never well after an attack of the grip a few years ago until I took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before this I had found nothing that helped me. I was all run down, pale and thin. My appetite was poor and my head ached continually. I didn't feel like myself at all.

"Someone finally recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to me and I found them just the medicine for my case. They gave me a hearty appetite and a good, clear color. I got back my vitality and was soon a well woman. I can safely say that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do all that is claimed for them. I heartily recommend them."

If you are suffering from after-effects of the grip or other wasting disease, try the remedy that has cured so many stubborn cases, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent, postpaid, upon receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. A copy of our booklet, "Diseases of the Blood," is free on request.

ETHEL'S MARRIED.

Virginie—I'm glad Ethel's married.

Philomene—Yet you refrained from congratulation, she tells me.

Virginie—Yes; I pitied the bridegroom.

CUTICURA OINTMENT HEALED BAD SORE ON LIMB

"Some time ago I was coming up some steps when the board crushed under me like an egg shell, and my right limb went through to the knee, and scraped the flesh off the bone just inside and below the knee. I neglected it for a day or two, then it began to hurt me pretty badly. I put balsam fir on to draw out the poison, but when I had used it a week, it hurt so badly that I changed to —— ointment. That made it smart and burn so badly that I couldn't use it any more, and that was the fourth week after I was hurt.

"Then I began to use Cuticura Ointment for the sore. It stopped hurting immediately and began healing right away. It was a bad-looking sore before Cuticura Ointment healed it, and I suffered so I couldn't sleep from two days after I fell until I began using Cuticura Ointment.

"Cuticura Soap is the best soap I ever saw. I have used all kinds of soap for washing my face, and always it would leave my face smarting. I had to keep a lotion to stop the smart, no matter how expensive a soap I used. I find at last in Cuticura Soap a soap that will clean my face and leave no smarting, and I do not have to use any lotion or anything else to ease it. I believe Cuticura Soap is the best soap made." (Signed) Mrs. M. E. Fairchild, 805 Lafayette St., Wichita, Kan., May 8, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

His Pose.

"Mrs. Hewligus, what is your husband's attitude on the woman suffrage question?"

"One foot in the air, of course. He's one of the chronic kickers."

A woman is proud of the virtues that she practices because she has to.

Which wins? Garfield Tea always wins on its merits as the best of herb catharties.

The man who makes light of others seldom sets the world on fire.

BURNING DAYLIGHT

By JACK LONDON

AUTHOR OF "THE CALL OF THE WILD," "WHITE FANG," "MARTIN EDEN," ETC.

[illegible] 1910, by the New York Herald Company.)
[illegible] 1910, by the MacMillan Company.

SYNOPSIS.

Elam Harnish, known all through Alaska as "Burning Daylight," celebrates his 30th birthday with a crowd of miners at the Circle City Tivoli. The dance leads to heavy gambling, in which over $100,000 is staked. Harnish loses his money and his mine but wins the mail contract. He starts on his mail trip with dogs and sledge, telling his friends that he will be in the big Yukon gold strike at the start. Burning Daylight makes a sensationally rapid run across country with the mail, appears at the Tivoli and is now ready to join his friends in a dash to the new gold fields. Deciding that gold will be found in the up-river district Harnish buys two tons of flour, which he declares will be worth its weight in gold, but when he arrives with his flour he finds the big flat desolate. A comrade discovers gold and Daylight reaps a rich harvest. He goes to Dawson, becomes the most prominent figure in the Klondike and defeats a combination of capitalists in a vast mining deal. He returns to civilization, and, amid the bewildering complications of high finance, Daylight finds that he has been led to invest his eleven millions in a manipulated scheme. He goes to New York, and confronting his disloyal partners with a revolver, he threatens to kill them if his money is not returned. They are cowed, return their stealings and Harnish goes back to San Francisco where he meets his fate in Dede Mason, a pretty stenographer. He makes large investments and gets into the political ring. For a rest he goes to the country. Daylight gets deeper into high finance in San Francisco, but often the longing for the simple life nearly overcomes him. Dede Mason buys a horse and Daylight meets her in her saddle trips. One day he asks Dede to go with him on one more ride, his purpose being to ask her to marry him and they canter away, she trying to analyze her feelings. Dede tells Daylight that her happiness could not lie with a money manipulator. Daylight undertakes to build up a great industrial community. He is insistent that she marry him and yet hopes to win her. Daylight falls back into his old drinking ways. There is a flurry in the money market, but Daylight tells Dede that he is going to work on a ranch and prove to her that he has reformed.

CHAPTER XX.—Continued.

Two days later, Daylight stood waiting outside the little Glen Ellen hotel. The ceremony was over, and he had left Dede to go inside and change into her riding-habit while he brought the horses. He held them now, Bob and Mab, and in the shadow of the watering-trough Wolf lay and looked on. Already two days of ardent California sun and touched with new fires the ancient bronze in Daylight's face. But warmer still was the glow that came into his cheeks and burned in his eyes as he saw Dede coming out the door, riding-whip in hand, clad in the familiar corduroy skirt and leggings of the old Piedmont days. There was warmth and glow in her own face as she answered his gaze and glanced on past him to the horses. Then she saw Mab. But her gaze leaped back to the man.

"Oh, Elam!" she breathed.

• • • • • • • •

Many persons, themselves city-bred, and city reared, have fled to the soil and succeeded in winning great happiness. In such cases they have succeeded only by going through a process of savage disillusionment. But with Dede and Daylight it was different. They had both been born on the soil, and they knew its naked simplicities and rawer ways. They were like two persons, after far wandering, who had merely come home again. There was less of the unexpected in their dealings with nature, while theirs was all the delight of reminiscence. What might appear sordid and squalid to the fastidiously reared, was to them eminently wholesome and natural. The commerce of nature was to them no unknown and untried trade. They made fewer mistakes. They already knew, and it was a joy to remember what they had forgotten.

And another thing they learned was that it was easier for one who has gorged at the flesh-pots to content himself with the meagreness of a crust, than for one who has known only the crust. Not that their life was meagre. It was that they found keener delights and deeper satisfactions in little things. Daylight, who had played the game in its biggest and most fantastic aspects, found that here, on the slopes of Sonoma Mountain, it was still the same old game. Man had still work to perform, forces to combat, obstacles to overcome. When he experimented in a small way at raising a few pigeons for market, he found no less zest in calculating in squabs than formerly when he had calculated in millions. Achievement was no less achievement, while the process of it seemed more rational and received the sanction of his reason.

The domestic cat that had gone wild and that preyed on his pigeons, he found, by the comparative standard, to be of no less paramount menace than a Charles Klinkner in the field of finance, trying to raid him for several millions. The hawks and weasels and 'coons were so many Dowsetts, Lettons, and Guggenhammers that struck at him secretly. The sea of wild vegetation that tossed its surf against the boundaries of all his clearings and that sometimes crept in and flooded in a single week was no mean enemy to contend with and subdue. His fat-soiled vegetable-garden in the nook of hills that failed of its best was a problem of engrossing fascination, and when he had solved it by putting in draintile, the joy of the achievement was ever with him. He never worked in it and found the soil unpacked and tractable without experiencing the thrill of accomplishment.

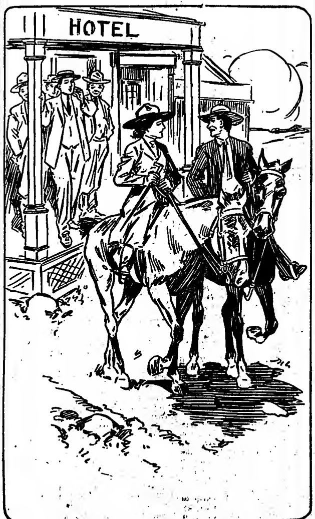
There was the matter of the plumbing. He was enabled to purchase the materials through a lucky sale of a number of his hair bridles. The work he did himself, though more than once he was forced to call in Dede to hold tight with a pipe-wrench. And in the end, when the bath-tub and the stationary tubs were installed and in working order, he could scarcely tear himself away from the contemplation of what his hands had wrought. The first evening, missing him, Dede sought and found him, lamp in hand, staring with silent glee at the tubs. He rubbed his hand over their smooth wooden lips and laughed aloud, and was as shame-faced as any boy when she caught him thus secretly exulting in his own prowess.

It was this adventure in wood-working and plumbing that brought about the building of the little workshop, where he slowly gathered a collection of loved tools. And he, who in the old days, out of his millions, could purchase immediately whatever he might desire, learned the new joy of the possession that follows upon rigid economy and desire long delayed. He waited three months before daring the extravagance of a Yankee screw-driver, and his glee in the marvelous little mechanism was so keen that Dede conceived forthright a great idea. For six months she saved her egg-money, which was hers by right of allotment, and on his birthday presented him with a turning-lathe of wonderful simplicity and multifarious efficiencies. And their mutual delight in the lathe, which was his, was only equalled by their delight in Mab's first foal, which was Dede's special private property.

Daylight had made no assertion of total abstinence, though he had not taken a drink for months after the day he resolved to let his business go to smash. Soon he proved himself strong enough to dare to take a drink without taking a second. On the other hand, with his coming to live in the country, had passed all desire and need for drink. He felt no yearning for it, and even forgot that it existed. Yet he refused to be afraid of it, and in town, on occasion, when invited by the storekeeper, would reply: "All right, son. If my taking a drink will make you happy, here goes. Whisky for mine."

But such a drink begat no desire for a second. It made no impression. He was too profoundly strong to be affected by a thimbleful. As he had prophesied to Dede, Burning Daylight, the city financier, had died a quick death on the ranch, and his [illegible] [illegible] the Daylight from Alaska, [illegible] his place. The threatened [illegible] of fat had subsided, and [illegible] old-time Indian leanness and [illegible] of muscle had returned. So, [illegible] did the old slight hollows in [illegible] come back. For him they [illegible] the pink of physical condition. He became the acknowledged [illegible] man of Sonoma Valley, the heaviest lifter and hardiest winded among a husky race of farmer folk.

At first, when in need of ready cash, he had followed Ferguson's example of working at day's labor; but he was not long in gravitating to a form of work that was more stimulating and more satisfying, and that allowed him even more time for Dede and the ranch and the perpetual riding through the hills. Having been challenged by the blacksmith, in a spirit of banter, to attempt the breaking of a certain incorrigible colt, he succeeded so signally as to earn quite a reputation as a horse-breaker. And soon he was able to earn whatever money he desired at this, to him, agreeable work. His life was eminently wholesome and natural. Early to bed, he slept like an infant and was up with the dawn. Always with something to do, and with a thousand little things that enticed but did not clamor, he was himself never overdone. Nevertheless, there were times when both he and Dede was not above confessing tiredness at bedtime after seventy or eighty miles in the saddle. Sometimes, when he had accumulated a little money, and when the season favored, they would mount their horses, with saddle-bags behind, and ride away over the wall of the valley and down into the other valleys.



"Say," He Called Out, "I'd Like to Tackle You Again."

One day, stopping to mail a letter at the Glen Ellen postoffice, they were hailed by the blacksmith.

"Say, Daylight," he said, "a young fellow named Slosson sends you his regards. He came through in an auto on the way to Santa Rosa. He wanted to know if you didn't live hereabouts, but the crowd with him was in a hurry. So he sent you his regards and said to tell you he'd taken your advice and was still going on breaking his own record."

Daylight had long since told Dede of the incident.

"Slosson?" he meditated, "Slosson? That must be the hammer-thrower. He put my hand down twice, the young scamp." He turned suddenly to Dede. "Say, it's only twelve miles to Santa Rosa, and the horses are fresh."

She divined what was in his mind, of which his twinkling eyes and sheepish, boyish grin gave sufficient advertisement, and she smiled and nodded acquiescence.

"We'll cut across by Bennett Valley," he said. "It's nearer that way."

There was little difficulty, once in Santa Rosa, of finding Slosson. He and his party had registered at the Oberlin Hotel, and Daylight encountered the young hammer-thrower himself in the office.

"Look here, son," Daylight announced as soon as he had introduced Dede, "I've come to go you another flutter at that hand game. Here's a likely place."

Slosson smiled and accepted. The two men faced each other, the elbows of their right arms on the counter, the hands clasped. Slosson's hand quickly forced backward and down.

"You're the first man that ever succeeded in doing it," he said. "Let's try it again."

"Sure," Daylight answered. "And don't forget, son, that you're the first man that put mine down. That's why I lit out after you today."

Again they clasped hands, and again Slosson's hand went down. He was a broad-shouldered, heavy-muscled young giant, at least half a head taller than Daylight, and he frankly expressed his chagrin and asked for a third trial. This time he steeled himself to the effort, and for a moment the issue was in doubt. With flushed face and set teeth he met the other's strength till his crackling muscles failed him. The air exploded sharply from his tensed lungs, as he relaxed in surrender, and the hand dropped limply down.

"You're too many for me," he confessed. "I only hope you'll keep out of the hammer-throwing game."

Daylight laughed and shook his head.

"We might compromise, and each stay in his own class. You stick to hammer-throwing, and I'll go on turning down hands."

But Slosson refused to accept defeat.

"Say," he called out, as Daylight and Dede, astride their horses, were preparing to depart. "Say—do you mind if I look you up next year? I'd like to tackle you again."

"Sure, son. You're welcome to a flutter any time. Though I give you fair warning that you'll have to go some. You'll have to train up, for I'm plowing and chopping wood and breaking colts these days."

Now and again, on the way home, Dede could hear her big boy-husband chuckling gleefully. As they halted their horses on the top of the divide out of Bennett Valley, in order to watch the sunset, he ranged alongside and slipped his arm around her waist.

"Little woman," he said, "you're sure responsible for it all. And I leave it to you, if all the money in creation is worth as much as one arm like that when it's got a sweet little woman like this to go around."

Daylight's steadfast contention was that his wife should not become cook, waitress, and chambermaid because she did not happen to possess a household of servants. On the other hand, chafing-dish suppers in the big living-room for their camping guests were a common happening, at which times Daylight allotted them their chores and saw that they were performed. For one who stopped only for the night it was different. Likewise it was different with her brother, back from Germany, and again able to sit a horse. On his vacations he became the third in the family, and to him was given the building of the fires, the sweeping, and the washing of the dishes.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

MUSIC AS CURATIVE AGENT

Singing Teaches Correct Breathing and Lively Waltzes Have Good Effects on Melancholic Patients.

Two English physicians of prominence have recently asserted that the exercise given to the lungs in singing is valuable in the prevention and cure of diseases of those organs. They consider that increased professional recognition should be extended to this special therapeutic agency, as advisable in cases where pulmonary consumption is feared.

Singing involves correct nasal breathing, and this means that the air admitted to the lungs is practically germ free, and also the adequate development of the upper portions of the respiratory passages. Another effect is the maintenance of the elasticity and proper expansion of the chest. The necessary breathing exercises mean increased functional activity of the lungs. Then, there is the improved oxygenation of the blood, which singing necessarily promotes.

As we know, most singers and also those musicians who perform on wind instruments are a healthy looking lot. Not many years from now music will be recognized as a most valuable curative agent, especially in cases of insanity or morbidity. What tired, overwrought, distressed man or woman does not know the value of music? How many beautiful stories could be told of the power of music to sustain and restrain?

One of the greatest scientists living has testified that he was once kept from thoughts of despair and suicide by suddenly hearing in the next house someone playing Rubenstein's Melody in F.

In the Croydon Mental hospital, London, waltz music—particularly the bright, musical comedy pieces—is used in effecting a cure for melancholia patients.

A vain woman would rather [illegible] her complexion praised than her taste.

THE SAFE LAXATIVE FOR ELDERLY PEOPLE

Most elderly people are more or less troubled with a chronic, persistent constipation, due largely to lack of sufficient exercise. They experience difficulty in digesting even light food, with a consequent belching of stomach gases, drowsiness after eating, headache and a feeling of lassitude and general discomfort.

Doctors advise against cathartics and violent purgatives of every kind, recommending a mild, gentle laxative tonic, like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, to effect relief without disturbing the entire system.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the perfect laxative, easy in action, certain in effect and, withal, pleasant to the taste. It possesses tonic properties that strengthen the stomach, liver and bowels and is a remedy that has been for years the great standby in thousands of families, and should be in every family medicine chest. It is equally as valuable for children as for older people.

Druggists everywhere sell Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in 50c and $1.00 bottles. If you have never tried it send your name and address to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., and he will be very glad to send a sample bottle for trial.

NOT AT ALL STYLISH.

"They are an extremely fashionable couple, are they not?"

"Gracious, no! Why, they have several children."

GOT TO THE CAUSE.

And Then All Symptoms of Kidney Trouble Vanished.

C. J. Hammonds, 1115 E. First St., Fort Scott, Kans., says: "I was operated on for stone in the kidney but not cured and some time after, was feeling so bad, I knew there must be another stone that would have to be cut out. I decided to try Doan's Kidney Pills and the kidney action improved right away. Large quantities of sediment and stone particles passed from me and finally the stone itself, partly dissolved, but still as big as a pea. With it disappeared all symptoms of dizziness, rheumatism and headache. I have gained about 50 pounds since and feel well and hearty."

"When Your Back Is Lame, Remember the Name—DOAN'S." 50c. all stores. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

What is really best for us lies always within our reach, though often often overlooked.—Longfellow.

WIFE'S HEALTH RESTORED

Husband Declared Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Would Restore Her Health, And It Did.

Ashland, Ky. — "Four years ago I seemed to have everything the matter with me. I had female and kidney trouble and was so bad off I could hardly rest day or night. I doctored with all the best doctors in town and took many kinds of medicine but nothing did any good until I tried your wonderful remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My husband said it would restore my health and it has."—Mrs. MAY WYATT, Ashland, Ky.

There are probably hundreds of thousands of women in the United States who have been benefitted by this famous old remedy, which was produced from roots and herbs over thirty years ago by a woman to relieve woman's suffering.

Read What Another Woman says:

Camden, N. J.—"I had female trouble and a serious displacement and was tired and discouraged and unable to do my work. My doctors told me I never could be cured without an operation, but thanks to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I am cured of that affliction and have recommended it to more than one of my friends with the best results." —Mrs. ELLA JOHNSTON, 324 Vine St.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

It don't make any difference whether the state primary law is passed or not, the people are out gunning after the scalp of Eberhart, and they are going to get it. If the nomination barral misses fire, they will shoot the other one loaded with slugs in November.

It is doubtful if the present legislature can pass the state primary law, as there is sure to be a big difference in the opinions of the different members about what kind of a primary law to pass. They have one big bone of contention already, and that is a clause in the law to give the people a chance to express first and second choice.

It now looks as if the ditching "hoodoo" that has been haunting the south side of Red Lake River for the past three years was about to be routed. The Griffith dredge is now working night and day on ditch no. 55, and the other dredge on 53 will be ready to start next week. Now if the boys that are working these dredges will be careful to not sleep in any No. 13 rooms when they go to town the south side may have some ditches to show next fall.

M. C. Conter of the Thief River Falls News has bought the Press of E. L. Quist, and consolidated the two papers under the name of "Thief River Falls News Press." We regret to see Mr. Quist retire from Journalism, as he had some good ideas on public questions, but found it most to expensive to express them in public print, as The Press was a financial loadstone to him. The new proprietor of the News Press is a man who has lots of newspaper experience in city journalism but how he will "hook up" with farmer subscribers remains to be seen.

The Eleven Towns contained a very creditable write up of the log jam in the Red Lake River in their last weeks issue with cuts showing how the logs are piled into the river. They also dish up a good hot roast on Major Shunk. But what is the use? That Engineer's office at St. Paul took the job of seeing the lumber companies through in this dirty job and they have filled the bill and delivered the goods, but their old Taft that appointed the tools of the corporations went over the dump proper when the people of Minnesota got a chance to speak and they will send his old friend "Sorry" Eberhart tumbling after him when they get a chance to get a crack at him. Eberharts game and fish Commission appointed to represent the interests of the corporations certified last winter that this river was unobstructed for the passage of fish from Thief River Falls to the outlet of Red Lake. We don't blame the poor tools of Taft and Eberhart for doing the bidding of their masters by looking after the interests of corporations, but where the cheeky part comes in, is Taft and Eberhart asking the people for their votes to continue this "pot gang" of corporation tools in power.

Known Before.

I was a man of straw; but I have been a man of straw long enough; every man who has blood in his body, and who has been misrepresented as I have been, is forced to fight.—From a speech of the President to Massachusetts voters.

The president is late in discovering a fact which a great many persons discovered to their surprise all the great some time ago. He has finally found out one reason why they are endeavoring to put into the white house somebody who has proved conclusively that there is nothing in his make-up.—Baltimore News.

[illegible]

After a frightful coughing spell a man in Neenah, Wis., felt terrible pains in his side and his doctor found two ribs had been broken. What agony Dr. King's New Discovery would have saved him. A few teaspoonful ends a late cough, while persistent use routs obstinate coughs, expels stubborn colds or heals weak, sore lungs. "I feel sure its a God-send to humanity," writes Mrs. Effie Morton, Columbia Mo. "for I believe I would have consumption to-day, if I had not used this great remedy." Its guaranteed to satisfy, and you can get a free trial bottle or 50-cent or $1.00 size at all Druggists.

NOTICE: If you want the people of eastern Pennington and Red Lake Countie's to know that you are a candidate for office and desire to have their votes, publish your announcement in this column. Of course if you have got votes enough to nominate and elect you in town this will not be necessary.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

I am a candidate for the office of Register of Deeds of Pennington county, and solicit the support of the voters at the Republican primaries to be held September 17th 1912. Nels J. Anderson

How's This?

We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligations made by his firm.

NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE,
Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75 cents per bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

LUNG DISEASE

"After four in our family had died of consumption I was taken with a frightful cough and lung trouble, but my life was saved and I gained 87 pounds through using

DR. KING'S NEW DISCOVERY

W. R. Patterson, Wellington, Tex.

PRICE 50c and $1.00 AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

"I Suffered Years With My Back."

Backache resulting from weak kidneys, a bad cold or other cause, usually renders the sufferer unfit for work and often results in permanent disability.

"I suffered for years with my back, or kidney trouble, and have tried a number of remedies from different physicians. More than a year ago, one of our local druggists induced me to try and after using them some three months I found a decided improvement in my kidneys, and I am glad to say that I hope soon to be fully restored to health." J. P. ALLEN, Ex-Judge City Court, Glasgow, Ky.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills

As long as pain is present in any part of the body rest is impossible and the system becoming weakened is exposed to any form of disease to which the sufferer may be inclined.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills

by steadying the irritated nerve centers, make refreshing sleep possible, thereby enabling the body to recover lost strength. As a remedy for pain of any description Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are unsurpassed.

Sold by all druggists under a guarantee assuring the return of the price of the first box if no benefit results.

MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

Stale Bread Day.

A traveler says that a curious weakness of [illegible] the [illegible] eating newly baked bread [illegible] that old bread [illegible]

[illegible] Bucklen's Arnica Salve [illegible] who suffered from burns, [illegible] bruises, bullet wounds or explosions. Its the quick healer of boils, ulcers, eczema, sore lips or piles. 25 cents at all Druggists.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam May 10, 1912.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston, Minn. May 4th 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Fred A. Lane of Kratka Minnesota, who on June 24th, 1904, made Homestead Entry No. 391, Serial No. 04102, for Lots 2, 3, 4, 5, & 6, Section 24 Township 153 N. Range 42 W. and Lot 3, Section 19, Township 153 N. Range 41 W. 5th. Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make final five year proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for the District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minnesota on the 15th day of June 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Ole M. Pederson, Lewis Stenseth, Osmund Swenson, Ole Christoferson, all at Kratka Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam May 10th, 1912.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 4th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Ole Christoferson, of Kratka Minn. who on June 28th, 1904, made Homestead Entry No. 399, Serial No. 04130, for Lots 9, 13 & S.W. ¼ S.E. ¼ Section 18 Township 153 N. Range 41 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Five Year Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 15th day of June 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Ole M. Pederson, Krist Larson, Hans Johnson, Fred A. Lane, all of Kratka Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin,
Register.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. The Sunbeam May 10, 1912.

Department of the Interior U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 4th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that William Parnow of Kratka Minn. who on June 29th, 1904 made Homestead Entry No. 451, Serial No. 04161, for Lots N ½ S.E. ¼ & E ½ S.E. ¼ Section 23 Township 153 N. Range 41 W. Fifth Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Five year Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U.S. Commissioner, for District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 15th. day of June 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Halvor Wold, Ole Waale, Stiner Johnson, John L. Johnson, all of Kratka Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Jan. 26, 1912.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 16th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Charles D. Henry, of Kratka Minnesota, who on June 28th, 1904, made Homestead Entry No. 407, Serial No. 04148, for Lots 10, 12, & E. ½ N. W. ¼ Section 21 Township 153 N. Range 41 W Fifth principal Meridian has filed notice of Intention to make Final five year proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 25th. day of June 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Dave Ross, Peter Lindeboja, Jacob R Jesby, Peter Paulson, all of Kratka Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam June 7th, 1912.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn, May 31st, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Halvor K. Homme, of Wanka Minn., who on Nov. 30th, 1909, made Homestead Application No. 04987, for S. E. ¼ S. E. ¼ Section 17 Towship 151 N. Range 39 W. 5th. Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before The Register and Receiver of the U. S. Land office at Crookston Minn., on the 15th day of July 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Knut K. Haugen, Halvor Haugen, Knut J. Knutson, Tallef Haugen, all of Wanka Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin.
Register.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam May 31, 1912.

Department of the Interior. U.S. Land Office at Crookston, Minn. May 28th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Theodor P. Vigenstad, of Austad Minn, who on Nov. 30th, 1904, made Homestead Entry No. 968 Serial No. 01267, for S. E. ¼ Section 9 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. 5th Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Final Commutation proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U.S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn. on the [illegible] day of July 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

[illegible] Bivek, Peter [illegible], [illegible] L. Stenseth, [illegible] of Thief River Falls Minn.

[illegible]

[illegible] Where He Stands

[illegible] Recent Utterances [illegible] the Man Who Made Him President [illegible] Social and Industrial Conditions as "T. R." Sees Them.

"Mr. Taft has announced that I am trying to stir up class hatred and excite discontent. I ask you to look for yourselves.

"I ask you to see if you can find anywhere in that speech any appeal to class hatred, except hatred of the class of crooks—political and financial alike. See if you can find any stirring up of discontent in it excepting of discontent with trickery, with political chicanery, with cheating, with oppression.

"I have preached abhorrence of Mr. Lorimer and of all that for which Mr. Lorimer stands, and of the kind of crooked politics and crooked finance which, in combination, are responsible for the production of Mr. Lorimer. But as regards most, even of the bosses whom I oppose, I have not preached hatred of them; I do not hate them; I merely wish them to retire to private life and quit misgoverning us.

"Mr. Taft says that I preach class hatred and excite discontent. Does Mr. Taft regard me as stirring up class hatred because I ask for a law in New York to prevent women from being worked for excessive hours in factories?

"Does Mr. Taft regard me as stirring up class hatred because I stand for a workmen's compensation act? Does he regard me as stirring up class hatred because I demand that the state and the nation co-operate to make the conditions of life and labor better for wageworkers; because I demand that state and nation co-operate to help the farmer?"

"I am advocating action which will be the most effective kind of antidote to class hatred; whereas, if Mr. Taft's policy of flabby indecision and helpless acquiescence in the wrongdoing of the crooked boss and the crooked financier is permitted to continue, there will really grow up class hatred in this country. There will grow up a very uncomfortable and very ugly feeling of discontent with political, social and industrial conditions."

"If it is any comfort to Mr. Taft to call Messrs. Lorimer, Cox, Penrose, Guggenheim, Calhoun, Gallinger and the rest patriotic leaders, instead of bosses, let him do so; but I earnestly hope that the plain people will vote against that particular type of patriotic leader."

"If you don't rule yourselves, be sure someone else will rule you. The boss will do it."

"I believe in a protective tariff, but I want to see the benefits get past the office into the pay envelopes. It is all right to have a reasonable share stop in the office, but not too much. I would like to see a national bureau whose business it would be to see that where protection is given to any industry, the wage-earners get a reasonable share."

"Law and order is but a means to justice, and unless it tends toward justice, law and order must come first, justice second."

"Every standpatter loves a progressive who is dead."

"We want to apply Lincoln's principles to labor problems."

"I am against any attempt to revive the reciprocity treaty, and I will be against any similar treaty that improperly sacrifices the interests of our farmers and fishermen."

"This is a line-up between the plain people and the great moneyed interests. We have against us the solid Republican machine, the money power and every newspaper that could be subsidized. There is no one with us but the plain people."

"Everything on the level and treat everyone on the square!"

"The man who incites the laboring man to overstep the law is the laboring man's enemy. Every other question must be held in abeyance until law and order are restored; then justice must be obtained. The country cannot permanently succeed unless more than a mere living wage is granted."

"The permanent prosperity of our country can only be assured by orderly liberty under the law. A man is an enemy who incites the workers to disorder. But we cannot succeed in [illegible]

An Old Saw With A New Set.

We have now a large and complete stock of new goods at our Kratka store, and would be pleased to have all our old customers call and see us at the new store and post Office.

A FINE LINE OF BOTH HEAVY AND LIGHT SHOES.

Ask to look at our stock of Shoes. No trouble to show GOODS.

Higest market price paid for butter and eggs.

Singer Bros. Kratka minn.

RHODA STORE

NEW GOODS, NEW PRICES.

A trial order will convince you, that this is the best Store to buy your goods.

I HAVE A FINE LINE OF gROCERIES.

BOOTS, SHOES, & COMPLETE STOCK OF SUMMER FOOT WEAR.

give me a call and get prices.

GEORGE SINGER. Prop. Rhoda Minn.

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 10.00 a. m. on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m

Wm. G. Hunt, p.m.

FARM LOANS.

Made Without Delay, at reasonable rates of interest.

Be sure and see me before you place your loan.

GEORGE ELDER.
McGinn Block,
Thief River Falls.

Notice For Publication.

First Publication in The Sunbeam June 7th, Department of the Interior. U. S. Land office at Crookston Minn. June 3rd, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Peter E. Kvikstad, of Germantown Minn., who on May 15th, 1912, made Homestead Entry Serial No. 06182 for S. E. ¼ Section 7 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Commutation Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before the Register and Receiver of the U. S. Land Office, at Crookston Minn on the 17th, day of July 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Christopher Vad, T. Hegtvedt, Kittel Jordeshaugen, Leif Jordeshaugen, all of Germantown Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Power of the Eye.

A eye can threaten like a loaded and leveled gun or can insult like hissing or kicking, or, in its altered mood, by beams of kindness it can make the heart dance with joy.—Emerson's "Conduct of Life."

Dangerous Rights.

The Theorist—A man has a right to insist upon being the head of his own household.

The Pessimist—Yes, and a man also has a right to slap a tiger on the nose [illegible]

McCall's Magazine and McCall Patterns
For Women

Have More Friends than any other magazine or patterns. McCall's is the reliable Fashion Guide monthly in one million one hundred thousand homes. Besides showing all the latest designs of McCall Patterns, each issue is brimful of sparkling short stories and helpful information for women.

Save Money and Keep in Style by subscribing for McCall's Magazine at once. Costs only 50 cents a year, including any one of the celebrated McCall Patterns free.

McCall Patterns Lead all others in style, fit, simplicity, economy and number sold. More dealers sell McCall Patterns than any other two makes combined. None higher than 15 cents. Buy from your dealer, or by mail from

McCALL'S MAGAZINE
236-246 W. 37th St., New York City

Note—Sample Copy, Premium Catalogue and Pattern Catalogue free, on request.

CORN-SEEDS TREES

Our 29th Annual Catalog is now ready and free for the asking. It is a work of art and full of good things.

See King Corn on front cover.

WILL'S PIONEER SEED HOUSE and NURSERY
OSCAR H. WILL & CO.
BISMARCK, NO. DAKOTA

W. G. Hunt.

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to [illegible]

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE LOCAL NEWS.

It is getting to be time that the flax was in the ground.

Wanted: To let 40 or 50 acres of breaking at once.
George Leimers, Sec. 11 Town of Deer Park.

Walter McAndress drove down to Oklee yesterday after a load of finishing tumber for his house.

There will not be any dance given at Kolsties Saturday evening, but a free dance will be given later in a bowery.

A drive through the town of Deer Park Wednesday afternoon surprised us to see the large amount of new land that is being broken up, in fact the acreage in this Township will be doubled this year.

C L Clark had the misfortune to loose a valuable horse by accident last Friday. He was leveling the high grade north from Highlanding when in someway one of the horses got tangled up in the harness and fell off of the dump and broke his neck, causing instant death.

It is no wonder that the farmers are encouraged to break up land and put in crops with the fine prospects that is now before them A failure of crops is something unheard of in this locality. All they have to do is to sow and reap and are sure of their reward.

Martain Hyland has bought the Bennie Rustad quarter, which joins his homestead farm on the west on section 8, in Deer Park. Martain and son's are going to make a success of farming in the eleven townships and will raise the price of one farms value in crops this year.

Sheriff LaBree was up this way yesterday looking up delinquent personal property taxes. All he found in this locality was the old "setting" dredge on ditch 47, which he attatched and we hope will remove and bury at public expense as it has sat there as an eye sore long enough.

Think of land selling for $15,00 an acre that you can break up the first year and raise 15 bushel of flax on and the next year get 20 bushels of wheat on an acre Is it any wonder that new settlers are rushing to northern Minnesota? The land that promises and delivers the goods to fulfill the promise ever fall.

The prospects are that by the time they get that walking dredge ready to work on ditch 47, that we will have a heavy rain and the walker will mire in the swamp. Then they will spend the rest of the season looking around and fitting up a floating dredge, and thus will the season of 1912 close for ditch 47.

It is reported that ex-sheriff Nelson is going to "run" this fall, but we did not just understand whether it was for sheriff, or after a bottle of "booze", but he is sure to catch the latter. He ought to get the indorsement of prohibition party, for if he was elected they could have him as a living example to point at to show the evils of intemperance.

Married: At the residence of the brides parents Mr. and Mrs. Knut Syversand, in Deer Park township on Tuesday, June 4th, Mr. Herman O. Vidden and Miss Christina Syversand were united in marriage by Rev. Krosto. A wedding reception was give to a number of invited guests who will join with the SUNBEAM in wishing the happy couple a long and prosperous journey throu life.

We know that you resolved last year, after you got home from the big 4th, of July celebration, that you would never attend another celebration. But as the time rolls around this year you begin to forget and are ready for another celebration. We shall try and get up a celebration at Highlanding July 4th, and will let you know more about it next week after a meeting has been held by the business men of our island city.

REPORT OF HIGLANDING CREAMERY, APRIL 1912.

Pounds of cream recd.	12253.
Butter Fat	2818,3
Pounds of butter made	3427.
Shipped	3348,lb
Sold patrons	43 "
Elswhere	36¾ "
Price paid for butter fat	20¾ c.
Overun	608.2.
Per cent	21¼
RECEIPTS.
Bal. from last month	35,53.
Recid for butter shipped	$950, 23.
Sold patrons	$12, 70.
Elswhare	$10,01.
From othe sourses	$3,00.
Total $1011, 47
DISBURSMENTS.
Paid patrons by check	$821,27
Butter and milk	$15,25
For butter hauling	$6,86
Cream haulers	$3,39
Running expenses	77,03
Incidental	17,03
Paid into sinking fund	23,23
Bal. at end of month	46,44
Total	$1011,47

William Vaughan, Sec.

Call and see us, when you are ready to make your final proof.

Ends Hunt For Rich Girl.

Often the hunt for a rich wife ends when the man meets a woman that uses Electric Bitters. Her strong nerves tell in a bright brain and even temper. Her peach bloom complexion and ruby lips result from her pure blood; her bright eyes from restfull sleep; her elastic step from firm, free muscles, all telling of the health and strength Electric Bitters give a woman, and the freedom from indigestion, backache, headache, fainting and dizzy spells they promote. Everywhere they are woman's favorite remedy. If weak or ailing try them. 50c at all Druggists.

Committed Suicide.

On Saturday last Dr. Clark, of committed suicide by taking an overdose of morphine. He has been located at Plummer as a physician for a number of years and addicted to the excessive use of intoxicating liquors, and took the Keely cure but was tempted and fell again into his old habit. He made the remark to some of his friends the day before his death, "that he would not be with them long." A partly filled bottle of morphine was found in his pocket, by the County Coroner, which explained the manner of his suicide This is not a temperance tale but is taken from real life.

Move On Now!

says a policeman to a street crowd, and whacks heads if they don't. "Move on now," says the big, harsh mineral pills to bowel congestion and suffering follows. Dr. King's New Life Pills don't bulldoze the bowels. They gently persuade them to right action, and health follows. 25c at all Druggists.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam June 7th, 1912

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. June 5th. 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Torjei H. Kolsbus, one of the heirs of Ommund H. Kolsbus, Deceased, of Grisbrok Minn. who on June 6, 1907, made Homestead Entry No. 1363, Serial No. 04675, for S. E. ¼ Section 15 Township 152 N. Range 40 W. 5th. Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn., on the 16th, day of July 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Knut O. Listvet, of Roland Minn. Ommund Listvet, of Roland Minn. Gunder Hofstad, of Charley Oscar Olson, of Rudell Minn.

Aurther P. Toupis, Register.

DRESS MAKING.

For plain and Farcy sewing apply to Mrs. Sam McMahn Student of the America College of dress making.

Kuehnel, Minn.

BROOKE'S PRETTY SISTER

By IZOLA FORRESTER

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

When the 2:55 New York express pulled out of Bel Air it left on the station platform six husky, happy college boys from the north. After one glad yell to rouse the adjacent village, they took counsel together as to where Brooke lived, how to reach where Brooke lived, and what to do when they had found Brooke.

"He said he'd meet us with a trap, or something at the station," Brixton said. "Said his place was down along the Chesapeake shore."

"Tidy little green bungalow, set in a nest of trees," sang Tip, the kid of the lot. "Place where no female of the species ever intrudes her archly lifted nosetip. Place where we may wear our bathing togs all day long, and no man may say us nay. Place where food is cheap and plentiful, and we may hunt the merry piscatorial game by day, or night as the mood seizes us. 'Rah for Brooke!"

"Good old Brooke. Fine old boy!" chanted the rest in chorus, when suddenly by common consent, they ceased and stared at the far side of the station platform. There was a trap, a black and yellow affair, very smart, very practical, a mode of conveyance that bore the hallmark of Brooke all over it. Even the horse bore it, a deep chested bay, with a reaching nose, and impatient feet, neither bobbed nor checked up, just "all horse," as Tip said.

The crowd discussed not the situation. Here was Brooke's equipage. Somewhere on the horizon line was Brooke. They made a rush for the trap, and piled it up with suit cases. A lone pickaninny watched them with attentive curiosity, from the edge of the platform.

"Er-say, boy, do you know where Mr. Brooke is?" called Brixton.

"He didn't come on dis train, sah."

"Oh, he didn't? Then this was sent to meet him. Who drove it?"

"Ah did, sah."

"You shy eyed chocolate drop, watching us elope with your boss' entire turnout. Come and drive us to the place where this trap belongs."

The boy obeyed, and the trap swung around down the side road, over a little bridge, and into the shore country. Finally, when the wheels began to sink in sand, they drew up before a broad low cottage, mostly piazza.

"'Tis a winsome spot, and homelike," said Tip. "Tune up, lads."

Whereupon the long drawn out and sonorous yell of their home college broke on the still, hazy afternoon.

"We will hide a wee until Brooke arrives. Maybe we'll get supper for him. I'm starved now. Let's rustle for supplies."

"The boy's going back with the trap," announced another. "Hi, there, where you going?"

"Have to meet de next train," came back a wavering reply. They stood alone on the curving shore. No signs of life appeared about the cottage. Setting their suit cases on the veranda the boys followed on to the kitchen by a united and harmonious impulse.

"The icebox is jammed with truffles and trifles. Also, one cold roast ham, and some remains of fried chicken, also—"

Brixton stopped, as a center rush swept over him towards the ice box. The feast was spread on the top of the ice box for convenience in handling. "A buffet luncheon," said Tip, blithely. "Isn't Brooke the fine old boy? 'Rah for Brooke once more."

Richly the shout swelled out on the air. As it died away, Brixton held up one finger.

"Anybody hear a sound above?"

Nobody had. There didn't seem to be any above—garret, attic, or otherwise. After the feast, the boys played college melodies on Brooke's guitar and mandolin and lounged around on the couches. Then Tip proposed a swim. Suits were hauled out of the luggage, and arrayed like a line up of animated barber poles they went down to the shore, leaving their clothes at the cottage.

And while they splashed in the beautiful waters of old Chesapeake, suddenly Brixton said cautiously:

"Look at the dormer window."

There were two dormer windows in the cottage. They had not noticed them before. White muslin curtains fluttered from them, and just beyond was a face, a girl's face, looking down at the swimmers with mirth and anxiety, too. Brixton at once stopped his side stroke, and started in shore, but the face vanished. Counsel was held. Tip recalled that Brooke had said he had a pretty sister. In fact, as Tip's memory warmed up to the tax put upon it, he remembered that Brooke had said he had the finest sister in the world, and the best looker, too.

"Blonde or brunette?" queried Farns less, sarcastically.

"Medium," Tip swung back promptly.

"She's probably unprepared for our coming," Brixton said. "Maybe taking a siesta, and wakened to find a bunch of blooming dolphins cavorting in her front aquamarine garden, so to speak. I'm going to apologize."

"Your clothes are on the ice box," Tip put in cruelly. "You're a picture in that green and pink outfit. Try wireless."

"If it were done when it were done, then t'were well it were done quickly," chirped Randy Phelps, the college bard. "Go on, Brix. Don't mind [illegible] You're a poem in that color combination. Go tell her we're awfully sorry we ate up all the salad, ham and chicken, while we sit out here and watch for Brooke to take his young life on sight for not telling us she was here."

"It's the only decent thing to do," Brixton said, resolutely. He strode up the beach, dripping wet, bronzed and stalwart as Hermes new lighted on a heaven kissing hill. "Miss Brooke," he called cheerily, "oh, Miss Brooke."

The girl looked out from the living room window and smiled.

"I'm in here," she said. Brixton gulped and stared at her. She was like some tender, rare southern flower. Her eyes were blue, with wonderful lashes that shadowed them, and her hair was dusky and curly about the most alluring, half shy face in the world.

"We're awfully sorry," he blurted out. "You see, we're Bob's college chums, you know, and he invited us down for the week end, and then he wasn't at the station to meet us, so we just hooked on to the turnout. Bob never mentioned you at all."

"Didn't he?" Her lashes drooped demurely, but there was a smile at the dimpled corners of her mouth. "Wasn't it careless of him? Don't you think you'd better tell the other gentlemen they can get their clothes? I'm busy reading. It gets quite cool along towards evening."

"Now, wasn't that thoughtful of her, boys?" Tip gasped, when the invitation was conveyed. Swiftly they made for the back of the bungalow, but even while they donned their clothes the black and yellow trap appeared again, and therein sat Brooke. The girl went down to greet him, and all at once the boys heard a peal of laughter. Brooke tumbled hastily from the trap, and made for the back of the cottage.

"Hello, boys, when you're ready, we'll drive on to my place. It's the next cottage along the shore."

Five faces stared at him helplessly.

"We thought she was your pretty sister," Brixton said gloomily.

"She is my sister's dearest friend, and a bully girl, fellows," said Bob, heartily. "You'll meet her again. And she's not at all angry. Come and be introduced. Her name is June Sherwood, Commodore Sherwood's daughter."

June was smiling and blushing as Bob led the line up. She listened to all the apologies, and forgave freely even the icebox raid. When they started, Brixton volunteered to walk. There was not room in the trap, he said. As soon as it had rounded the curve of the shore, he went back, and found her still standing on the veranda.

"I came after the bathing suits," he began. "The boys hung them on the back fence, and forgot them."

"The one you called Tip took them," she told him.

Brixton hesitated. A week end is a lone chance to seize love's fluttering wings, and hold him prisoner. Brixton was only twenty-two. He held out his hand for the roses at her belt.

"May I have one, please, Miss June?"

"These are a little withered. I'll get you a fresh one."

"Can't I have one of those?"

Something in his voice compelled her to look down at him as he stood waiting at the foot of the wide steps. It seemed hours, that half minute of silence, of reading each other's thoughts. She handed him the roses from her belt.

"I'm not going back with the rest Monday," Brixton stumbled ahead blindly. "Can you guess why?"

She shook her head, and drew back from the tell-tale eyes. Brixton hesitated. The boys were shouting down the shore. He bent forward and kissed the white slim hand that rested on the veranda rail.

"That's why. Good-bye, princess."

June's chin lifted slightly, but her voice was tender.

"We are very glad to welcome guests here in Bel Air. I—I hope you will stay long."

"Do you ask me to stay?"

"I? Why, I have only known you—"

"We'll never know each other any better than we do this minute." Brixton was famous as a center rush. "Shall I stay?"

She bowed her head, and he strode down the shore to join the others, while June watched him out of sight, her conqueror.

Historic Stove.

In the attic of an old house near Gettysburg stands a rusty, dust-covered, legless kitchen stove. The lids are gone, spiders lurk in the broken grates, cobwebs hang from the hearth, and mice have made their home in the doorless oven for over a quarter of a century. Yet it is celebrated in song and story.

It was Josephine Miller's stove, in which she baked bread for the hungry soldiers while the battle raged all around her. Heedless of her own danger, this heroic girl of eighteen refused to leave her little kitchen or her work of mercy, though right in the line of fire. Fast as the hot, brown loaves came out of the oven she gave them to the men as they passed. Blue and gray alike shared her bounty, and between times she cared for the wounded. When the battle ended several dead were carried out of her door. Her cottage, with its walls pitted with bullets, still stands on the battlefield.

Changing Tactics.

"Well—Harry has such a beautifully masterful way of proposing."

"Bella—I suppose he's getting tired of being turned down on the begging style."

NEW BANK.

FIRST STATE BANK,

OF OKLEE Lambert Post Office Minn.
NEW STATION ON DULUTH SCO LINE.

Your Business Solicited.

Directors: A. P. Tonpin, Pres. Samul Gileau Vic. Prs.
Larry O'Niel, Abrham Paiquire, T. L. Cruzon.
J. A. DUFFY, Cashier. T. L. CRUZON, Assist. Cashier.

Let Us Tell You Something!

This Season we are offering the best line of Dry Goods that ever came into this Section of the Country.

Don't Buy Eleswhere, Until You Have Seen What We Have To Offer.

No Matter What Price you pay, WE Will please YOU.

VAUGHAN BROS. & CO.

Highlanding Minn.

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT

IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost.

BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the regular retail prices.

$10.00 Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof Self-healing Tires A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks, or Glass will not let the air out. A hundred thousand pairs sold last year.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D" also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

J. L. MEAD CYCLE COMPANY, CHICAGO, ILL.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's $50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day

Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 80-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were piloting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why isn't YOU as the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory? We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.

Our New Home, Capacity 20,000 Safes [illegible]

The 26th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our Special Selling Inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars, it will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Ask for Catalogue 16 T.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.

CINCINNATI, OHIO

The Lost Treasures of Europe

by Buffington Phillips

COPYRIGHT BY RIDGWAY CO

ONLY five years ago last Christmas two peasants in the district of Padonolaf, Russia, recovered a treasure of seven million dollars after fifteen minutes' search. It being a holiday and they being free from labor, they sat before the fire after their dinner and fell to talking of staple topics, one being the old tale in that region that in a stony cave was a vast hoard of gold, jewels, plate and so forth, hidden by some barbaric lord in the wild days that are lost to history. No one knew of any stony cave, but one of the peasants opined that a certain old quarry that had been abandoned for hundreds of years might possibly be the spot. Since the pair of them were idling, why not go look at it?

On arrival at the quarry they soon found a recess blocked with earth and stone, and pulling this away with their hands, came upon ancient iron-bound casks by the dozen piled within. Some of these had rotted open and showed the treasure running out.

Great Britain and the continent are thickly dotted with localities in which treasures are reported to lie, treasures offering an equal or better chance of recovery.

Foremost and by all odds the greatest treasure-story of the world is the famous Rouvier quest, which has often stirred all France and remains today the prime mystery of all history. I hope, however, to add a strong hint that may be of aid in the next furor of search.

Louis the Pious was an abstemious and unprofligate man and had absolute control of the coffers of France in one of her richest periods. He had so much money that he did not know what to do with it other than lavish it on churches and sacred works. His greatest gift was the set of gigantic statues of the Twelve Apostles placed in Sainte Chapelle. To avoid public condemnation it was given out that they were merely gilded, but the private archives of the church show abundantly that they were of solid gold. Even a conservative estimate of their value makes a staggering figure.

Generation after generation passed away and still the great golden saints stood in Sainte Chapelle, classed among the art wonders of the world. Then came dark days for royalty in France. Rebellious mobs were sacking other churches and the high dignitaries called some noted royalist gentlemen into council. It was decided to remove and hide the statues. This was done with complete secrecy. The rising wave rolled higher and nobility and clergy were wiped out or dispersed. The guillotine or exile claimed them. When quiet came again twelve gilded wooden figures were placed in Sainte Chapelle and there they stand today. There was no announcement of the loss of the huge bulk of gold; there could be no announcement, considering the previous deception.

At last, some forty years ago, an imperial recorder, nosing around in the Tower of London cataloging rummage there, came across a small casket hidden away in a corner among a lot of stuff captured by the Duke of Wellington after Waterloo and brought by his commissaries to England.

The casket was secured by twelve seals and one of these the imperial recorder recognized as that of the Marquis de Rouvier then at the French embassy to the court of St. James. The young marquis said that the other seals were those of great families in France prior to the Revolution but that many had been wiped out in the Reign of Terror. Securing permission, he took the casket and its custodians to France, assembled the heads of any of the families with a living representative and the seals were broken. Within was found the true history of the golden saints' figures written out in detail, signed by the archbishops and by the twelve royalist noblemen. The document stated that twelve statues had been interred by workmen who were ignorant of their character in a spot in France "where the lines of latitude and longitude cross."

The British government transferred the casket to the Louvre and the whole affair was put on an official basis. The young marquis and his friends of the other families joined in an association sworn to return the golden figures and fulfill the obligations of their grandfathers and great grandfathers. The young marquis and two of his friends journeyed to the district near Neuilly and by the aid of scientific instruments located the crossing of the lines of latitude and longitude in a great open field. To their surprise they discovered that the field belonged to an estate that was one of the former properties of the Marquises de Rouvier. A peasant was plowing in the field and the searching party noticed that he and his predecessors had left in the center an oval spot now grown up with trees and brush. As there was no pile of stones there, no marsh, the young marquis said to him:

"Why do you leave that spot of fine ground uncultivated?"

"Because, sir, my father and grandfather both bade me never to plow over or disturb that spot as long as I held this land and to so instruct my sons or those who should come after me, because in that soil there is a great holiness."

The joy of the searching party can be imagined. There was no question in their minds but that they had found the chosen hiding-place with very little effort. Arrangements were at once made with the proper authorities to begin excavation, and a force of picked men and guards was assembled. To the terror of the peasants, the trees and undergrowth were cut away and the first layer of soil removed. When the excavation had reached the depth of three feet the experts with the party announced that they were working in soil which had never been disturbed since it was deposited by nature, but the Marquis de Rouvier insisted that the excavation continue.

It was sent down to a depth of twenty feet and broadened in all directions for a large area. But wherever spade was struck even the untrained eye could see that the strata had never been touched by instrument of man. It lay as it had lain since paleozoic times. At last, when funds were gone and the hole was an enormous affair, a law was passed forbidding further operations in that locality.

Since that time the papers found in the casket and the privy letters and documents in the hands of the dignitaries of the church have been gone over and over. It is certain that the treasure never was recovered, and it is certain that it was buried at a point where the twelve Royalist gentlemen believed the lines of latitude and longitude crossed. The most puzzling feature of the mystery had been the tradition of the peasants to keep that one particular spot from being disturbed. At the present time the great Ronvier quest is at a standstill.

However, the hint promised in a foregoing paragraph may give new life to the search. In going over some old records recently I found that there was considerable confusion arising out of a mixture of meridians, and that at the time of the burial of the treasure some observations in France were taken by the meridian of Greenwich and others by the abandoned meridian of Paris, while it is barely possible that the observations were made by the old meridian of Rome. It is impossible to take the time and space here to figure out the number of other points where main lines of latitude and longitude would cross in territory that was then strictly French. By one rough calculation I find that one of these would be in the province of Lorraine, now German territory, and oddly enough formerly the property of the brother of the Marquis de Ronvier.

Just such a speculation as this resulted in the recovery of another of a great French treasure. The exact facts are not now obtainable, for the French government has impounded all the papers and records pertaining to the same, and the incident, so far as it is concerned, is closed. The loose tale is that previous to the battle of Waterloo, Napoleon Bonaparte, at the request of some intimate friend who had a premonition of disaster, took a great quantity of treasure and buried it in the garden of the Tuilleries, marking it down by counting a certain number of elms from the end of a great row that stood in the inclosure. When time brought the Bonaparte family the opportunity of recovering the treasure, they could not find it, and all of the private searches that were made resulted in the disclosure of not so much as a sou.

At one time, after the Franco-Prussian war, some gardeners at work in the park dug a ditch and were working late in the gloom, one winter day, laying some pipes. The surplus soil was taken away in barrels, and in the pile the morning light showed the corner of a leaden casket and some scattered gold-pieces. Immediately the entire trench was opened up once more, but the remainder of the casket could not be found, though far more extensive excavations were conducted.

Again the treasure was forgotten, and then a newspaper writer chanced to mention in a New York paper that the cutting down of some of the elms in the row to make a new roadway during the Second Republic might have thrown the searchers off in their calculations. The suggestion was reprinted in a French weekly paper and shortly thereafter the government built a barrier around a section of the Tuilleries park, a large force of sappers was put to work, and after about two weeks' time the work was abandoned, while the word went forth that the great treasure had been found.

King Stanislas, during the famous siege of Nancy, believing one time that the city was to fall, buried a treasure that comprised both the royal wealth and the combined wealth of the citizens of the town. He chose a spot outside the city but so close to the gate that the diggers could not be seen by the besieging army, his theory being that when the enemy came to loot the town they would not expect to find its treasures anywhere but within the walls. The royal unfortunate had no opportunity of recovering the treasure and the entire matter was neglected for three hundred years.

Only very slight efforts have been made to find it. The site of the gate has become a matter of some uncertainty, but from such plans and descriptions as I have been able to find it seems to me that a little careful search would enable some intelligent investigator to reconstruct the line of the city's wall, pick out the proper gate and, deducing from the contour of the enemies' trenches, figure out just where King Stanislas' treasure lies.

During the reign of Innocent VII., when the popes were alienated from Rome and established in the great chateau at Avignon in southern France there were numbers of free companies or mercenaries roaming the northern portions of that country, and some of them penetrated to the southern district. In the year 1367 one of these bands, undoubtedly the White company, appeared in the valleys to the north of the chateau and moved in the direction of the affrighted papal court.

It had been the fixed policy of the popes during their stay at Avignon to keep a large store of gold and convertible valuables on hand, looking to an emergency such as might be presented to them at any time. One night, when the fires of the advancing band of marauders could be seen from the tops of the towers, the pope directed two of his secretaries and the captain of his guard to detail a body of men and inter the hoard in some safe spot outside the walls. This was done, and with the dawn the castle was surrounded by the bands of the free company.

It was over three years, according to the papal records, before it was deemed wise to dig up the hidden wealth and bring it within the walls, and then, to the consternation of the pope and his court, it could not be found! When the return of the holy see to Rome was effected, the treasure was left behind, and there it remains today.

There has lived one man in France who has surpassed all others in his interest and effort in the search for buried and sunken treasures, and that was M. Du Casse. Night and day, over a period of some thirty years, he followed the mad pursuit and though he found much gold he spent it all in the search of others, dying poor, but content with the wonderfully interesting life that he had lived. His cousin, known as M. Ormond, though he had a number of other names at various times, due to the peculiar life he led, was a man of inferior intellectual equipment, compared to the great master-searcher. But M. Ormond inherited the records and notes of Du Casse and the bulk of them are now in the hands of Ormond's heirs, a family living in the French portion of Quebec, Canada.

Among the most interesting of these records is the story of the little known trove in the ruined Abbey of St. Bavon, in Ghent. In 1758, a French Jew, by the name of Broisel, fled from Guadaloupe, in the West Indies, to Amsterdam, taking with him a large quantity of gold, jewels and plate, which he had obtained in the West Indies by some illicit means, just what the records do not show. His peculiar conduct caused him to be questioned as a spy and, being a cowardly sort of man, he fled to Ghent, taking with him a big, black West Indian negro, who accompanied him as a man-servant. The night of his arrival he left the inn in which he had quartered himself, he and the negro, bearing each a large sack of gold and jewels. It is known that they hid these somewhere in the ruined portion of the abbey.

The next day Broisel was rearrested as a spy and was deported. A wealthy man of Ghent protected the negro and made plans to return the unfortunate black to his home in the islands of the Caribbean. The ship on which Broisel was placed was one crossing to Hull, and on board were a number of ruffians who, finding that Broisel was a Jew, maltreated him so severely that he died. On being informed of his death, the negro told his benefactor of the existence of the trove and of its burial in the ruins.

With a party of peasants the two went there in daylight and the negro tried to point out where his late master had hidden the sacks. He was unable to do so, owing to his first visits having been made in the dark, and to his superstitious fears having obscured the accuracy of his perceptions. Further search was terminated by the abbe, who scoffed at the whole proposition and forbade any more digging. This injunction was made permanent and while it is reasonably certain that any man who succeeds in getting permission to go through the ruins of St. Bavon will unearth enough wealth to buy a score of such estates, no one has yet made the attempt.

It is impossible in this consideration to enter into details concerning some two or three hundred other treasures on the Continent and only a few of the more interesting can be mentioned and that very briefly.

Somewhere in the morasses in the hinterland of Vierlande, the queer little lowland tract above Hamburg, there is concealed in a tanked barge a great store of gold ornaments, jewels and gold-pieces hidden by the Lowlanders fleeing before the Spaniards in the sixteenth century.

The most enticing of the ancient quests is the one concerning which there has been so much speculation and on which no work whatsoever has been done. In the years before his death Attila the Hun became acquisitive and assembled a treasure so vast as to stagger the imagination. This he hid in a cave in Hungary not far from the spot where he died. All the traditions say that he was buried at the mouth of the narrow tunnel leading to the cave, for he believed he would come to life again and would need the treasure to regain his power. Who will do the necessary delving among the old records and locate the grave of Attila and the enormous wealth concealed near it?

In conclusion let me cite a great mass of sunken wealth concerning the location and existence of which there is no speculation whatsoever. In the harbor of Vigo, Spain, lay forty galleons, one fair day some centuries ago, many of them freshly arrived from Mexico and South America, several known to have several million dollars each in gold and silver bars, dust and coin aboard, and others, destined for other ports, that had put into Vigo to escape the common enemy, the English sea-rovers. Admiral Sir Francis Drake appeared and gave battle. Now a Frenchman or Spaniard would have had a keen eye to the treasure, but Drake did not, for he sank everything in sight.

On the bottom of the harbor, the greatest depth of which is sixty fathoms, these rich old hulks lie awaiting delivery of their wealth. Cavalier de Pina of Genoa has invented a circular steel tower which could be sunk over them and then floated with an observation chamber from which grappling-hooks and shovels could be directed, but his project is at a standstill. I discussed this situation in Vigo Bay with a superintendent of a large American wrecking company. He looked over the chart of the harbor and his hard blue eyes shone as he said:

"I wish somebody would sic me on that job! It is a cinch for us Americans—a holy cinch."

Satisfies

There never was a thirst that Coca-Cola couldn't satisfy. It goes, straight as an arrow, to the dry spot. And besides this, satisfies to a T the call for something purely delicious and deliciously pure—and wholesome.

Coca-Cola

Delicious
Refreshing
Thirst-Quenching

Whenever you see an Arrow think of Coca-Cola.

Demand the Genuine as made by
THE COCA-COLA CO., ATLANTA, GA.

Free Our new booklet, telling of Coca-Cola vindication at Chattanooga, for the asking.

ECONOMICAL SOUL WAS THIS

Hebrew's Attempt to Save Fare Probably Went Astray, but the Idea Was a Brilliant One.

Arthur W. Marks of Washington tells this story to illustrate the talent of the Hebrew race for economy.

A little Hebrew got on a train in New York to go to Philadelphia, but had no ticket. In the car with him were the members of several theatrical companies and he noticed that, when the conductor asked them for their tickets they would reply:

"Company."

"What company?" the conductor would ask; and the actors would reply by announcing the title of the theatrical company under whose name all their transportation had been paid for.

"Give me your ticket," the conductor finally reached the Hebrew.

"Comp'ny," said the little fellow, looking carelessly out of the window.

"What company?" asked the conductor.

Said the Hebrew: "The Pittsburgh Cloding company."—Popular Magazine.

Babies at Half Price.

Little Bessie and her momma were doing the sights of the town. Soon they came to a show where a ticket announced "Children half price."

"Oh, do let us go in, mammy," said the little one, "and buy a baby, now they're so cheap!"

Got a New Wife.

"Wombat is working like a horse. He used to be rather lazy. Why the change?"

"He's under a new management. His latest wife needs a lot of expensive things."

Goodness does not certainly make men happy than happiness makes them good.—Lander.

Patience is but lying to and riding out of the gale.—Beecher.

DIFFERENT NOW.

Since the Slugger, Coffee, Was Abandoned.

Coffee probably causes more biliousness and so-called malaria than any one other thing—even bad climate. (Tea is just as harmful as coffee because it contains caffeine, the drug in coffee).

A Ft. Worth man says:

"I have always been of a bilious temperament, subject to malaria and up to one year ago a perfect slave to coffee. At times I would be covered with boils and full of malarial poison, was very nervous and had swimming in the head.

